The many hair tonics fool you into softening the hair, but shamefully neglect the great evil, dandruff.

You won't get rid of dandruff, until you use "Dandrocide." It is lasting in its benefits, and is best in its results when economically applied. One bottle will heal the scalp, and start a rejuvenating growth of hair.

MILFORD QUARRIES

In Hands of A Receiver Who Probably Will sell

A Milford news item in the Globe under date of Dec. 31 says: The close of today witnessed the end of the operation of the local quarries by the Milford stone company and the reversion of the property to the custody of the courts pending the settlement of the claims of New York creditors of the Milford pink quarries corporation in which was included the quarry property of the Norcross company, the Milford pink granite company, the Cutting company and several small quarries that had been acqdired. The property in litigation includes practically all the granite companies in Milford, except the Webb pink granite company.

The Milford quarries company was formed by the union of the Norcross, Cutting and Milford pink interests here and was forced into the courts by equity proceedings in the interests of the Franklin trust company of New York, which had become interested in the new company's bond issue. An injunction was issued by the Massachusetts superior court to preserve the property intact until the claims of the petitioners should be determined and protected.

Among the business assets was a contract with the Pennsylvania railroad to furnish granite for the road's new central station in New York city, and the profits and the penalties devolving on the completion of it were so vital a part of the financial status of the company, and therefore of its creditors, that with the consent of the court and the receiver, Ralph A. Stewart, a special company, the Milford stone company, was formed to complete the contract, the receiver and the litigants on both sides being interested in its management.

This lease to the Milford stone company expired today by the completion of its purpose, and the property reverts to the possession of the receiver, whose purpose as to disposal is not yet indicated to the public by himself or the court. The sale may be necessary to legally wind up the skein of litigation.

The present condition of the company and the new bill of the granite cutters, presented tomorrow to the manufacturers, have thrown much uncertainty on the status of the industry here.

—Somebody has announced that the fundamental principle of success is the funds.

Gentlemen's Night Of Whist Club

Monday night was gentlemen's night of the Ladies Afternoon Whist club of Wollaston, and Mrs. James B. Geddes of Standish avenue was hostess. There were eight tables at whist, which was played from 8.30 until 11.30, during which a collation was served. Prizes were won by Mrs. Powers, Mrs. Geddes, Mrs. W. Baker, Miss Howard, Mr. Allen, Mr. Coffin, Mr. Geddes and Mr. Howard.

The remainder of the evening was devoted to music, contributed to the enjoyment of the guests by Messrs. Hopkins, Allen, Howard and Peck.

The evening was delightfully informal and the gracious hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Geddes was thoroughly appreciated. Many Happy New Year wishes were expressed before the party left for their homes.

The guests were: Mr. and Mrs. Otis Allen, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Brooks, Mr. and Mrs. Clifton Baker, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Baker, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Coffin, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dickenson, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Emerson, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Hopkins, Mr. Wm. Howard, Miss Winnie Howard, Mr. and Mrs. Fred T. Nelson, Mr. and Mrs. Albert T. Kingsbury, Mr. and Mrs. William Pick, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Powers, Mr. and Mrs. Horace Richmond, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Severance and Mrs. William Boyce.

Watch Meetings In The Churches

The watch meeting at the Quincy Point church was divided into two sections a song service from 9 to 11, and a religious service from 11 until after midnight. At the song service there were selections by Evangelist Munroe, Mrs. Page, James Davis, Mr. MacBeth and Ermide Caine; also readings, the installation of C. E. officers and refreshments.

At the religious service, the pastor was assisted by Evangelist Munroe and Rev. N. J. Sproul, pastor of the First Presbyterian church.

Services will be held every night for the balance of the week at 7.30 o'clock, the speaker on Thursday evening to be Rev. Leon H. Austin, a former pastor.

Firemen Get Their Increase

Mayor Thompson has signed the order increasing the pay of the permanent firemen. Under the order there are fifteen men who get an increase in salary of one dollar per week.

Captain at Central station, $19 per week.

Lieutenant at Central station, $18 per week.

Superintendent of fire alarm, $18 per week.

All other permanent men $17 per week.

This places all permanent men of the department outside of the officers, on an equal basis, and will enable the chief to transfer the men from one station to another at pleasure.

Horse Case

Dennis W. Donegal was arrested by Lieut. McKay on Monday for the larceny of a horse from the estate of Charles A. Stanley. It is alleged that parties in Boston had a claim on one of the horses belonging to the estate, and that Donegal came out on Monday after him. Instead of taking one horse he took two, and the arrest followed. In court the case was continued.

Annual Concert Clan McGregor

The 26th annual concert and dance of Clan McGregor, O. S. C., was held Monday evening at Music hall. The weather in no way seemed to interfere with the attendance. The concert was one of the best ever given under the auspices of this society, including solos by James White, John J. Quigley, Miss Lottie T. Baker, and Miss Jessie K. Blair Stirling assisted by Dudley Prescott, the humorist.

The program opened with brief introductory remarks by Chief David T. Drummond and a selection of Scotch airs by the Granite City orchestra.

Mr. White's selections were "The Battle of Stirling" and "The Auld Scotch Songs."

Miss Baker sang "I love and the world is mine," and "The Hills of Skye." Mr. Quigley's numbers were: "I love a Lassie," and "Safest of the family," and Miss Stirling rendered "The Scottish Blue Bells" and "The March of the Cameron Men." Mrs. Thomas Milne was accompanist.

It is hardly necessary to say that the rendering of the familiar Scotch airs called for rounds of applause and responses to the encores.

Dudley Prescott, as usual, was good, and his "A Melange of Musical and Laughable Imitations" and original and surprising exploits in ventriloquism and a screaming finale brought down the house.

The encores were so frequent that it was 10.30 before the concert was concluded.

Dancing was then in order until 3 A. M., music for dancing being furnished by the Granite City orchestra. Refreshments were served in the banquet hall.

The Winter Term

On Thursday a new term will be opened in the Y. M. C. A. evening school. In most respects this date affords a good starting place for students as the beginning of the fall term. Men may begin at the beginning in the following subjects, and will be carried through as rapidly as possible in ten weeks.

Mechanical drawing, elementary or advanced.

Free hand, monumental drawing and clay modeling.

First Aid to the Injured.

The cost for the balance of the year will be $2.00 in addition to the limited membership fee of $3.00 which covers a full year. Call at the building and inquire about the courses. The teachers are practical men, who are successfully employed daily in the lines they are teaching. The courses are comprehensive and reach the desired goal in the shortest possible time.

MANY MORE

Employed in Granite Yards Of City Than In Previous Year

The year that has just closed has been one of the busiest that the local granite industry has had for many years. More men have been employed and the shipments have been larger.

There were a number of large jobs cut in Quincy, although the major portion have been of the medium size. There has also been several large building jobs quarried.

Through the courtesy of James Duncan, secretary-treasurer of the National Granite Cutters' Union, the Daily Ledger is enabled to give the number of Union men employed each month during the past year. These are given in comparison with the years 1905, 1904 and 1903. It will be seen by these figures that the average number of men employed each month has been 1,164 or 250 more than in 1905:

January,	1036	881	700	750
February,	1025	895	750	750
March,	1040	836	800	800
April,	1132	841	900	850
May,	1194	913	900	950
June,	1183	960	800	950
July,	1174	980	900	950
August,	1216	959	900	900
September,	1237	927	875	900
October,	1256	927	800	800
November,	1250	919	725	700
December,	1219	931	675	600
Average,	1164	914	810	611

These figures do not include the polishers and quarrymen. Adding these and also the teamsters, lumpers and bosses, and the grand total of the men employed in this industry will not be far from 1,800.

The busiest months of the year were August, September, October, November and December, but every month was better than the best month of 1905, 1904 or 1903.

C. F. Knowlton Makes a Change

Charles F. Knowlton, formerly Commissioner of Public Works of Quincy, but at present superintendent of streets at Marlboro, has tendered his resignation as such to take effect as soon as his successor has been appointed.

According to the Marlboro Daily Enterprise, Mr. Knowlton resigns to accept a position at the head of the paving department of Simpson Bros. corporation, makers and dealers in artificial stone work.

The citizens of Marlboro hoped to retain Mr. Knowlton as head of its street department for another year, but the increase in salary in the new position was tempting bait.

Chain Prayer Not Authorized

Editor of Quincy Ledger:

There is being circulated in Quincy a chain letter containing a prayer ascribed to Bishop Lawrence. Will you give the greatest publicity of the fact that the letter and a prayer did not eminate from Bishop Lawrence, and where his name is thus used it is an absolute fabrication. All persons receiving one of these letters will confer a favor by destroying the same.

Factory Doctor.

There was established at the Douglas shoe factory at Brockton today an emergency room under the care of S. J. Gruver, M. D., whose services will be at the command of employes at the factory four hours of each working day from 8 until 10 A. M., and 3 until 5 P. M. The physician may also be consulted at his office in the Home Bank building, or he will call at the home of any employe residing in Brockton when required. In all cases, he will supply the patient with pure drugs and medicines free of charge. In addition, there will be, during working hours, a trained nurse in the emergency room to assist the doctor and those needing her services in the factory or at their homes. The company evidently has the interests of its employes at heart.

GOOD AFTERNOON.

Prosperity and happiness for all the readers of the Daily Ledger is our wish for the New Year.

The remnant of the Kansas Populist organization has announced that he will not be disbanded.

What's this we hear about a shortage of coal! Please don't attempt to scare the people. Fortunately Quincy is on tide water.

It may turn out that Stuyvesant Fish the deposed railroad president has been kicked "upstairs" into a life insurance presidency.

The U. S. Senate is not an idle body. When it has no other business to attract attention, it can always fall back on the Smoot case.

French waiters, it seems, receive $75,000,000 a year in tips. Is it any wonder then, that when they come here, they are often mistaken for the nobility?

Panama canal workers, the President announces, are to be given badges. Too bad the contractors cannot be knighted, but perhaps that will follow the institution of the order.

Only two questions in the negro disbandment matter—(1) Whether being commander-in-chief means anything, and (2) whether Colonel Roosevelt or Captain Foraker is commander-in-chief.

A friend of the editor has drawn his check on the Bank of Prosperity, and ordered 365 days of happiness this year for us. What better wish could one desire? With happiness and health the battle of life should be successful.

Mark Twain says he is a good Presbyterian and does not know the meaning of the term a "bob-tailed flush." Our education in that line has been something neglected, too, but we understand the article is something like a bucket with the bottom out, rather hard to fill.

The Quincy City Council was quick to act and order all dogs muzzled but the matter should not stop there for owners of dogs should be notified to comply with the order within a certain limit, the sooner the better.

When the limit of notification has expired then the police should faithfully perform their part, and without fear or favor shoot every dog without a muzzle. This would be a good thing for our city, scare or no scare, as there are altogether too many unlicensed and mongrel dogs at large. It may seem like harsh treatment of the dog, especially in the case of a small pet dog but it is for the dog's good, and what is more important is for man's good.

If your dog is muzzled and your neighbor's is unmuzzled, then there is no safety for your dog or human beings, so all should with good common sense fall into line and do their duty.

Muzzling dogs will not prevent the spread of hydrophobia unless the muzzling is done in a business-like manner, and the muzzle be in every sense a muzzle, and not a head harness, which will allow of eating bones and biting.

Dog owners do your duty, for the next case may be your dog with consequent risk to your family and the public at large. If each does his duty the danger will be over in a few months.

UNCLE SAM'S CASH

Receipts Greatly Exceeded Expenditures In 1906

DUE TO TRADE ACTIVITY

Secretary Shaw Says There Is No Occasion For Alarm and That We Should Be Conservative In All but Thankfulness.

Washington, Jan. 1.—"There is no occasion for alarm. Our only anxiety need be lest we fail of facilities to properly garner, store, transport and market our multiplied blessings. Let every man be of good cheer and try to be conservative in everything, except thankfulness."

Secretary Shaw thus concludes a resume of the year's financial record which he says has been prepared in response to multiplied requests. In round numbers he places the receipts for the calendar year 1906 at $625,000,000 and the expenditures at $566,000,000, or an excess of receipts over expenditures of $59,000,000. As there has been no change in the tariff laws or the laws relating to internal revenue, Shaw says the large increase in receipts is due solely to the extraordinary trade activity. The total expenditure, however, for 1906, as compared with 1905, he says, shows a decrease of but $5,000,000.

Discussing the finances of the government for the six months of the present fiscal year just closed, the secretary says that the books of the treasury show surplus receipts over expenditures of $25,000,000, as compared with a deficit of $8,000,000 for the corresponding months of the previous fiscal year. The cash in the treasury is $190,000,000, as compared with $171,000,000 a year ago, an increase of $19,000,000.

During the last 12 months the money in actual circulation, exclusive of the amount in the treasury vaults, has increased over $200,000,000. Of this increase $145,000,000 is avilable for bank reserve and $60,000,000 is in national bank circulation.

"This," says Shaw, "seems to be a complete answer to the oft-repeated and ill-advised criticism that the independent treasury system necessarily results in contraction when money is most needed." He maintains, therefore, that the existing money stringency, world-wide in its extent, is traceable in no respect and in no degree to the independent treasury system of the United States. He says the manifest and admitted shortage has been caused by the unprecedented prosperity in this country and reasonable prosperity everywhere.

As to the currency system of the United States, Secretary Shaw says that in his judgment it permits adequate expansion, but that its weakness is its failure to produce contraction. The volume of money, he contends, does not respond to the volume of our business. The annual increase, he adds, may be sufficient, but there is no annual contraction during the dull summer months.

Betting Favors Gans

Tonopah, Nev., Jan. 1.—Joe Gans of Baltimore, lightweight champion of the world, and Herman Langfield, better known in the ring as Kid Herman, will meet this afternoon for the championship title. That the promoters of the fight will incur a financial loss seems certain, as sales have fallen below all calculations. But few sporting men of national reputation are here. The ruling odds are 10 to 4 in favor of Gans. Straight Marquis of Queensberry rules will govern the contest, which is for a $20,000 purse, 60 percent to the winner and 40 percent to the loser.

Desperate Flood Situation

Imperial, Cal., Jan. 1.—A heavy rain is falling and the flood waters of the Gila and the Salt rivers are pouring into the Colorado river, which last night washed away 10 bents on the new trestle from which it was expected to begin dumping rock in a day or two to stop the flooding of the Salton sea. This will delay work for a week or 10 days. There is no menace to lives, but unless the Colorado river is conquered the country must become untenable for the 10,000 inhabitants.

Police Had Not Forgotten Him

Boston, Jan. 1.—By keeping constantly on board coasting vessels for 15 months, Patrick Thornton, who escaped from Deer island in October, 1905, by swimming Shirley gut, was able to remain a free man until yesterday, when he ventured ashore and was almost immediately picked up by the police. Thornton had served two weeks of his two years' sentence for larceny when he escaped.

CHOKED TO DEATH

Two Men Throw Some Light on Boston Girl's Mysterious Death

Boston, Jan. 1.—Pending a further examination into the death of Nellie Murray, whose body was found in the Massachusetts General hospital yard, the Boston police have in custody Edward Nason and Michael Bell, while in the relief hospital they are guarding Nellie Powers, all of whom admit being with the girl the night before her death, though they all claim they know nothing of the disposition of her body.

Nason, in whose room at 36 Blossom street the girl died, and Bell, who was also present at the time of her death, state that they became frightened when the girl died and they, with the Powers girl, fled, the two men going to New York, while they did not know where the girl went.

Their story was to the effect that the girl took a large quantity of morphine on Wednesday night, after which she went to the room of Nason at the Blossom street lodging house, where she subsequently died.

They declared to the police that they were so frightened at the situation that they dared not face the circumstances, and so fled, leaving the dead body of the girl on the bed in Nason's room. They described vividly the last struggles of the girl as she choked to death.

Nellie Powers, who was the third member of the party, came to light yesterday morning, when she caused a scare by taking morphine in a room at the Merrimac house. She will probably recover, the hospital authorities state.

Too Poor to Bury Baby

New York, Jan. 1.—Charged with being suspicious persons, Charles A. Gassert and his wife were arrested. The prisoners are said to be the parents of the 6-months-old baby whose body was found in a baby carriage on a street here several hours after death had occurred. The police say that the Gasserts admit being the parents of the child, who, they said, had died of pneumonia. Too poor to pay for its burial, the body was abandoned.

Signing of Algeciras Treaty

Madrid, Jan. 1.—The formal signing of the Algeciras convention took place here in the presence of representatives of all the nations who took part in the conference. The ratification of the United States contains the reservation setting forth that it does not accept the obligation of responsibility with regard to the measures necessary to carry out the provisions of the protocol.

Wreck of Glidden Automobile

Mexico City, Jan. 1.—After having driven his automobile from Boston to within a few miles of Mexico City, Charles J. Glidden was forced to abandon a wrecked auto and finish his trip to Mexico City aboard a train. Neither he nor any member of his party was injured, but the automobile is lying in a ditch 50 miles from Mexico City.

DR. TRUE'S ELIXIR

As a reliable family tonic, in all complaints of the stomach, liver or bowels, especially constipation, Dr. True's Elixir stands without an equal; it is a pure vegetable compound with a wonderfully successful record since 1857. Adults as well as children are troubled with worms. The symptoms are: Indigestion, with a variable appetite; foul tongue, offensive breath, hard and full belly, with occasional gripings and pains about the naval; eyes heavy and dull, itching of the nose, short, dry cough; grinding of the teeth, starting during sleep; slow fever, and often in children, convulsions and bed wetting.

A few doses of Dr. True's Elixir will expel the worms if there are any; if not it acts as a gentle laxative tonic, clearing the stomach and bowels of all waste matter, leaving these organs sweet and clean—it increases the appetite, causing pure life-giving blood to flow through the body, thus invigorating the whole system with rugged, robust health. If taken regularly it will prevent coughs, colds, fevers and worms.

WAGES FOR 1907

A General Advance Throughout New England States

AFFECTS MANY CLASSES

About 175,000 Mill Operatives Will Be Benefited--Railway and United States Government Employes Get More Pay

Boston, Jan. 1.—With the new year the wage schedules of many New England corporations employing thousands of persons disappear and give place to pay lists which provide for substantial advances. In numerous cotton mills in northern New England an advance of about 5 percent went into effect yesterday, while in other manufacturing plants the increased rate becomes operative today. At the same time the Boston Elevated Railway company, Boston and Worcester Street Railway company, the Portland Street Railway system and other lines will give a general advance to their thousands of employes.

The United States government will also take a hand in the general movement now in progress in all parts of the United States. Today practically every civilian employe at the Charlestown navy yard will begin to earn higher pay. The advance ranges from 50 cents to $3 a week. Several hundred mechanics will be affected. The movement to advance wages now in progress in many industries is almost wholly due to the increased cost of living.

Among the cotton manufacturing establishments which advanced wages yesterday were: Naumkeag mills, Salem, Mass., 1500 operatives; Pacific, Everett; Pemberton and Atlantic mills, Lawrence, and Methuen mills, Methuen, 10,000 operatives; Exeter mill, Exeter, and Pittsfield mills, Pittsfield, N. H., 700 operatives; Avon, Androscoggin, Bates, Continental and Hill mills, Lewiston, and Barker mills, Auburn, Me., 7000 employes; Lockwood mills, Waterville, Me., 600 hands; Pepperell, Biddeford, 2500 operatives. With the exception of the mills in Lawrence and Methuen, the advance is about 5 percent and is the second made within six months. In Lawrence, where the Arlington mills advanced pay 7½ percent Dec. 24, the other establishments will probably pay 7½.

Today's advance will become effective in the Amoskeag mills, Manchester, N. H., employing 13,000 persons; Great Falls mills, Somersworth, and Salmon Falls Manufacturing company's plant at Salmon Falls, and in other New Hampshire mills. The Lyman mills of Holyoke, Lancaster mills, Clinton, and several other mills in this state will also begin paying the increase today. During the past two months practically every cotton mill in the New England states has advanced wages from 5 to 10 percent. The general advance effects about 175,000 operatives.

The advance which will become effective on the Boston Elevated system, which controls the street car lines of Boston and vicinity, will benefit 5300 men. The advance averages 10 cents a day and will amount to $160 a year. The wages of conductors and motormen will range from $2.30 to $2.50 a day, according to the length of service. Among other employes of railroads who receive increases in pay are the engineers of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad and the freight clerks of the Boston and Maine system. The engineers of the New Haven road receive from 35 to 40 cents a day more than the amount paid under the old schedule.

Steady Workers to Be Rewarded

Woonsocket, R. I., Jan. 1.—Notices were posted at the works of the Woonsocket Press and Machine company to the effect that, beginning today, the operatives will receive an advance of 5 percent in wages. About 1000 operatives are employed in the works. The notices contained the additional information that on June 1 the employes who are at work every working day between now and next June, except because of illness, will receive 2 percent of their wages for the six months as a reward.

Deportation May Result

San Francisco, Jan. 1.—Acting under orders from Washington, Secret Service Agent Moffatt has begun an investigation of the so-called Japanese social organization, whose organ is the "Revolution," published at Berkeley. According to the definition of the immigration law, the Japanese of Berkeley, who issue the revolutionary paper containing a veiled threat against the president, are anarchists, and as such are subject to deportation.

President's Outing Ended

Washington, Jan. 1.—President and Mrs. Roosevelt and party returned here last night at 9 o'clock after their short sojourn at "Pine Knot," Mrs. Roosevelt's country place. The special train on which they traveled was half an hour ahead of the scheduled time. The Roosevelts were driven immediately to the White House.

LARGE DEATH LIST

Fifty-Three Persons Probably Killed In Train Wreck

OPERATOR NOT TO BLAME

Appears to Have Set Danger Signal Which Was Ignored by Engineer of Extra Train Which Crashed Into Local Express

Washington, Jan. 1.—The Baltimore and Ohio wreck at Terra Cotta Sunday night grows in magnitude as the hours pass. The most conservative estimate of the dead is 53, with 60 suffering from wounds and fractures sustained in the rear-end collision which completely demolished the two day coaches and the smoker attached to the local Frederick, Md., express No. 66. Several of the most seriously injured are expected to die and the death list may yet reach 60 or more.

Heartrending and pitiful were the scenes at the city morgue yesterday, where hundreds of persons had flocked to assist the police in the identification of the dead. Women, girls and even men with iron nerves shrieked, sobbed and fainted as their relatives or friends were found among the 32 corpses strewn about the floor. Coffins, wicker baskets and winding sheets were found on all sides.

Officials of the railroad are conducting an investigation of the wreck in Baltimore for the purpose of placing the responsibility for the disaster. General Superintendent Todd exonerated Milton Phillips, the operator at the Takoma block station, the last signal station that the equipment train passed before crashing into the passenger train at Terra Cotta. Todd declared that Phillips was obeying the instructions when he went home at 6:30 o'clock, leaving the "double green" signal burning.

While making no positive charge, Todd intimated that the burden of the blame would fall upon the engineer and crew of the extra. The five members of the crew, who were arrested shortly after the accident, are now being held to await the result of the official investigation. They are Harry H. Hildebrand, engineer; I. C. McClelland, fireman, F. F. Hoffmeir, conductor; Ralph Rutter, brakeman, and W. A. Norris, baggage master.

Gazing vacantly between the bars of his cell at the police station, Hildebrand is too full of emotion to make any definite statement. "It will all come out at the investigation," he said. "I don't believe that there is anything for me to say, and I could not say it if there was." Before he was arrested the engineer made a statement in which he declared that if the danger signal light was displayed at Takoma he failed to see it on account of the dense fog.

Milton W. Phillips, the operator, who is also held a prisoner, said that the equipment train ran past his danger signal at a speed of from 50 to 60 miles an hour. He says there was a heavy fog, but not enough to hide a red light. He declares that he immediately notified the operator at University station that the train had taken the block against orders. His statement is corroborated by the University operator, who says that he received the message. Policeman Kennedy, stationed at the Takoma park, will testify that he saw the signal light in its proper place and that Hildebrand drove past the signal. Fred Lemkum, gatekeeper at Takoma, makes a similar statement.

C. W. Galloway, general superintendent of transportation of the Baltimore and Ohio, exonerated the company from all blame, and put the responsibility on the engineer of the equipment train or the operator at Takoma park block.

Chairman Knapp of the interstate commerce commission says that the commission has considered the advisability of making a special investigation into the causes of the wreck. No decision has been reached, he says, as to when this investigation will be made.

J. W. Kelley, trainmaster of the Baltimore and Ohio for this division, declares that to locate the responsibility for the disaster at this time is an utter impossibility. "The police have all of he trainmen locked up," he explained, "and until we can get at them, ask questions and compare stories, it will be impossible to determine anything. Meanwhile I could not make a statement, simply because I have not the facts."

As a manifestation of sorrow and sympathy for all afflicted by the disaster at Terra Cotta, the district commissioners ordered that flags on the public buildings in the district be displayed at half mast until after the funerals of the victims.

O'Brien May Reveal Secrets

London, Jan. 1.—Speaking at Cork last night, after the unopposed re-election of Daniel D. Sheehan as member of the house of commons, William O'Brien, Nationalist, threatened revelations of the financial methods of the "Redmondites" which he said would be of greater national interest than anything that has occurred in Ireland since the Parnell commission.

Bandits Roaming Around Cuba

Havana, Jan. 1.—Governor Sobrano of Pinar del Rio province reports that an armed band is committing depredations in the country between Guanes and Cape San Antonio. The movement is not believed to have any political significance. Rural guardsmen are in active pursuit of the band.

MANY SUDDEN DEATHS

From Poisonous Rheumatism.

The Disease Has Its Dangers—Should Be Taken in Time.

Rheumatism has long been regarded as a trouble which, while it might be painful, was not necessarily dangerous. Very few persons, it was thought, ever died from Rheumatism. Recent investigation among scientists has proved, however, the utter fallacy of such a belief. Three-fourths to seven-eighths of the sudden deaths, heart failures, etc., are due primarily to neglected rheumatism. The Rheumatic Acid Poison is allowed to stay in the system until suddenly one day it grips the muscles of the heart and all is over.

Rheumatism is curable if the proper treatment is used. Liniments, plasters and all local applications may relieve the pain for a short time, but no one ever heard of their permanently curing a case of rheumatism. The only way to cure Rheumatism is the Uric-O way. Neutralize the Rheumatic acid and drive it from the system. That is what Uric-O does. No matter what is the kind or character of the Rheumatism, it is all caused by the same Rheumatic poison. Lumbago, Muscular or Articular Rheumatism yields at once to Uric-O. The store of E. J. Murphy is the home of Uric-O in Quincy, and he can tell you all about its wonderful virtues and the many cures it has made right here in your own city. It sells for 75c. and $1.00 a bottle. If you wish to test Uric-O before purchasing, a letter to the Smith Drug Co., Syracuse, N. Y., will bring you a trial bottle free of all charges.

ICE CROP THREATENED

Harvesting Is Checked by Warm Weather and Rain

Boston, Jan. 1.—A warm and unusually heavy rain, coming after 10 days of open weather, cleared the ice from nearly all the ponds in southern New England and left the conditions for harvesting next year's supply in practically the same shape as this time last winter, when the crop was a failure.

The frigid weather of the first two weeks of the month resulted in the formation of nearly a foot of ice on the ponds about this city and to the southward, while further north the ice averaged nearly 18 inches. The harvesting along the Merrimac river and to the north had already begun, but was stopped by yesterday's rain, and it is expected that the ice men will be obliged to wait for another freeze.

While there is sufficient time for another crop to form, still the clearing of the ponds is discouraging to the icemen, and the coming few weeks will be anxious ones.

Decrease In Maine Deer

Augusta, Me., Jan. 1.—That the supply of deer in Maine will not meet the demand of the constantly increasing number of hunters is the opinion of the state commissioners of inland fisheries and game given in their annual report. The most reliable figures obtainable give the number of deer killed this year as 18,000, which is a decrease of one-third from last year. The decrease in the number of moose also is noticeable. There are no indications of any caribou in the state. The number of guides registered is 2083, who, at the rate of $4 a day, earned $360,000 this year.

Portland Against Annexation

Portland, Me., Jan. 1.—For the second time, the city of Portland, at a special election, voted in the negative on the question of the annexation of the city of South Portland. Under an act passed by the legislature in 1902 three elections may be held in an effort to secure an affirmative vote on the proposition, so that there is still an opportunity left for endorsement of the act. The city of South Portland has already voted to accept the act.

Flood In Boston Highlands

Boston, Jan. 1.—A continuous downpour of rain last night overflowed Stony brook, a narrow stream in the highland section of the city, and many houses were flooded. Repairs were in progress on the Stony brook reservation last Saturday and it is claimed that the vigorous enforcement of the Sunday laws prevented the completion of the work. In 1884 Stony brook overflowed and washed away dozens of homes.

Awaiting Report of Autopsy

Boston, Jan. 1.—Until the district attorney makes public the result of the autopsy, the cause of the death of William Hartnett, president of the Teamsters' union, who died under suspicious circumstances, will not be definitely known. Pending the result of the autopsy, the police held the son of the dead man, William J. Hartnett, although no definite charge was made against him.

Gallioni's Departure Delayed

Barre, Vt., Jan. 1.—Luigi Gallioni, the editor of a weekly Italian paper in this city, who was arrested on an indictment warrant charging him with being concerned in the silk dyers' riots in Paterson, N. J., in 1902, will probably be taken back to Paterson tomorrow. It is expected that the delay is in order to secure sufficient bail for Gallioni upon his arrival in Paterson on Thursday.

Railroads File Explanations

Boston, Jan. 1.—The reports of the three principal railroads in this state on the causes of delays in running of passenger trains are now on file with the railroad commissioners, but owing to their voluminous character it will be some days before the commissioners will make public the results of their investigation of the train service.

Police Kill Twelve Dogs

Wakefield, Mass., Jan. 1.—Since the mad dog scare started in this town a week ago the local police have killed 12 canines which were bitten by the dog supposed to have had rabies. In some cases the police have had to persuade the owners to dispose of the animals, but the majority of them have asked that their dogs be shot.

Charged With Killing Husband

Greenwich, Conn., Jan. 1.—Mrs. Catherine Neil, who is charged with having caused the death of her husband at a local hotel, was brought to this place last night from New York, where she had been pending the completion of extradition proceedings. She was lodged in the Greenwich jail.

Wagon Fell Upon Boy

Holyoke, Mass., Jan. 1.—A heavy oil delivery wagon slewed in going around an icy street corner and toppled over and fell down a 20-foot embankment, crushing and killing Ora Brueckment, aged 14, who had been riding on the seat with the driver. The latter escaped with slight injuries.

Open Switch Caused Accident

South Framingham, Mass., Jan. 1.—Four trainmen were injured, one of them, Fred Colombia, perhaps fatally, in the derailing of a freight train here last night. The train struck an open switch, ran onto a siding and then plunged off the ends of the track into a swamp.

Boston Dogs to Be Muzzled

Boston, Jan. 1.—As a result of the excitement last week over a mad dog in adjacent cities and towns, the board of aldermen has ordered all dogs in the city to be muzzled for a period of 90 days.

ISSUED 105 SUMMONSES

Judge Hears of Hundreds of Alleged Violators of "Blue Laws"

Boston, Jan. 1.—One of the largest crowds in the annals of the Boston police court congregated about the court yesterday as a result of the crusade against the violators of the Sunday laws, and up to the time of adjournment Judge Bennett had heard over 500 complaints from the police, and out of that number had issued 105 summonses.

A small number of complaints were disregarded by the judge, as he considered the persons justified in doing as they did.

For one hour and a half the police stood in line, and one by one presented the various complaints, frequently the names of several persons being charged with practically the same offense, and in these cases Judge Bennett issued a summons against one of the persons and held up the remainder until a test case had been made.

All the summonses issued yesterday will be served today and the cases will be tried during the latter part of the week. The first case will come up for trial Thursday.

Complaints of all descriptions were made yesterday, and persons were accused of everything, from working in the subway to carrying a floral wreath to a funeral. The latter was perhaps the most unique and novel complaint made.

To Cheer Would-Be Suicides

London, Jan. 1.—General William Booth, commander-in-chief of the Salvation Army, has opened a bureau in the headquarters of the army in London with the avowed object of checking the spread of suicide. Booth explains that suicides generally might be dissuaded by a little sensible and sympathetic advice and this the bureau will offer without any inquiry concerning the applicants' antecedents or circumstances and at the same time their confidences will be rigidly respected and their secrets inviolably preserved.

Four Million Chinese Starving

Pekin, Jan. 1.—The famine in Anhui province, in the east of Honan and in the whole north of Kiang Su is worse than at any time during the last 40 years. It is estimated that 4,000,000 persons are starving. Tens of thousands are utterly destitute and are wandering over the country. The danger is increased by the activity of the secret societies, as the wanderers are gladly joining them in order to obtain rice. The authorities are unable to cope with the situation.

Successor of Paper Trust

Appleton, Wis., Jan. 1.—A print paper mill syndicate, capitalized at several million dollars, and including every newspaper mill in Wisconsin, Michigan and Minnesota, is in process of formation. The syndicate is said to have been decided upon to take the place of the General Paper company, which was ordered out of existence several months ago by the federal courts, its operations having been contrary to the Sherman anti-trust law.

Flinn's Recovery Doubtful

Pawtucket, R. I., Jan. 1.—The condition of Thomas Flinn, who was found in his home after lying there for six days in an unconscious condition from the effect of gas poisoning, is less favorable. Although the man was weak from gas poisoning and from lack of nourishment, he seemed to revive readily under the influence of stimulants and it was thought that he would recover speedily, but now his recovery is uncertain.

Business Failure Hastened Death

New York, Jan. 1.—Samuel W. Martin, proprietor of a all-night Broadway restaurant, died suddenly from heart disease. Martin had failed rapidly since he was obliged to make an assignment for the benefit of his creditors a few weeks ago. The restaurant, popularly known as "Sam Martin's," was for many years one of the most widely known of the many eating houses along the "great white way."

Teller Used Bank's Funds

Baltimore, Jan. 1.—Charged with defaulting to the amount of $5800, William H. White, 30 years old, paying teller of the Canton National bank, was given a preliminary hearing before Commissioner Rogers and was held in $10,000 bail to answer the charge before the federal grand jury. It is said that White admitted a shortage, saying that he had spent the money in beautifying his home.

Confucius' Rank Is Raised

Pekin, Jan. 1.—An imperial edict published yesterday raises Confucius to the same rank as Heaven and the Earth, which are worshipped by the emperor alone. This action is in deference to the religious scruples of the Christian students in the government colleges, who object to "kow-tow," as required by immemorial custom before the tablet of Confucius.

Latest News About the City

Farewell, old year, the rustle of whose garments,
Fragrant with memory, I can still hear;
For all thy tender kindness and thy bounty
I drop my thankful tribute on thy bier.
—Julia B. Cady.

Not a particle of snow remains.

Masses were sung in all the Catholic churches of Quincy this morning.

Mr. G. Hillman Eggleton of Cleveland Ohio, formerly of Quincy, is in town renewing acquaintances.

The bell on the Swedish Lutheran church pealed forth a greetiug for the New Year at midnight. It was rung for five minutes without setting.

West Quincy people are wondering when the new boulevard is to be lighted. The lamp posts have been in position for some time but none have been lighted.

Rev. Gertrude Earle and Miss Ruth Earle of Dover, Maine, daughters of Prof. S. Chandler Earle of Tuft's college are visiting Mrs. Charles Cherrington of Clive street.

The Elks club kept open house Monday night. During the evening John J. Quigley rendered some Scotch songs. Refreshments were served and many saw the dawn of the New Year.

Mrs. Geo. Spooner of Revere road will open her house this evening, for a candy sale, for the benefit of the Universalist Dorcas society. There will be home made candy for sale and a pleasing entertainment will be given.

The New Years card of the Folsom Tea Company is not a souvenir postal, but may be as popular. Their china and Japanese ware is very attractive, and may be obtained with tea and coffee as a present, or may be purchased without the tea and coffee.

The Legislature will assemble tomorrow at 11 A. M. In the House from Quincy for a second term will be Eugene C. Hultman and Edward J. Sandberg. In the Senate from the this district, Hon. Charles F. Jenney of Hyde Park.

Rev. E. W. Virgin paid the Daily Ledger a compliment when he said at the funeral of Mr. Jonas Shackley: Not a word is necessary more than the pastor has spoken, and the Daily Ledger said so completely in its column article of Saturday.

Everybody is invited to attend the annual New Year's reception tonight at the Y. M. C. A. Music, refreshments and athletic work in the gymnasium will be among the most prominent features of the occasion. Everything is informal and every one is welcome.

Christmas at Day Nursery

The Day Nursery had its annual Christmas tree and festival at West Quincy on Saturday afternoon and the true holiday spirit entered into every heart, for the elders were as eager and happy at the prospect of giving as the little ones were delighted to receive.

The committee for tree decorations and entertainment were: chairman, Mrs. E. Granville Pratt; Mrs. N. S. Hunting; Mrs. Thomas Addison and Miss Elmira Simmons.

Mrs. Charles Safford of Atlantic opened the meeting by reading aloud The Nativity, and the beautiful selection from the Bible was exquisitely rendered as Mrs. Safford is a pleasing elocutionist. A friend of the Nursery children then rendered three entertaining readings, after which Misses Esther Dasha, Elsie Burrell and Esther Beckford of Quincy and Miss Marion Harley of Pawtucket, R. I., recited appropriate poems and sang several juvenile songs.

The Day Nursery is indebted to Mrs. Perry Lawton's Sunday school class of the Unitarian church for the Christmas tree and its decorations which resplendently voiced the generousity of the donors.

Contributions were received from Mrs. N. S. Hunting, Mrs. R. W. Allen, Mrs. Thomas Addison, Mrs. Dexter Wadsworth Mrs. Eldridge Cross, Miss Prescott, Mrs. Walter Blanchard and Mrs. Granville Pratt. Dolls, games and scores of poultry toys were given by the Sunshine Band of Quincy, Mrs. Henry Faxon and Mrs. G. E. Lark.

Pop-corn and candy-bags were given and made by Mrs. Charles Safford and Mrs. N. S. Hunting.

Altogether it was one of the most successful festivals that has ever been given for the Day Nursery, and the most pleasing feature was the large increase in popular interest in behalf of the little ones.

New Destroyers To be Larger

Reliability in maintained speed rather than capacity for great speed for short distances is the question now before the the Board of Construction of the Navy in relation to torpedo boat destroyers, bids for whose construction will be asked about March 1. It is probable that a sustained speed of twenty-eight knots will be recommended instead of the thirty knots first proposed.

Williams, the Washington correspondent of the Transcript writes: The new destroyers will have a tonnage displacement of about seven hundred tons. The largest of our destroyers today, the vessels of the Truxtum class, have a displacement of 433 tons. As the size of torpedo boats has increased it is of course desirable that the vessels built for their destruction should also be larger. Great Britain is said to have under construction a destroyer which will displace eighteen hundred tons; the efficiency of this size of boat has not been demonstrated and American designers are inclined to favor the building of destroyers of less than one thousand tons displacement.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Throat Coughs

Ask your doctor about these throat coughs. He will tell you how deceptive they are. A tickling in the throat often means serious trouble ahead. Better explain your case carefully to your doctor, and ask him about your taking Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. Then do as he says. Get the best medicine, always.

VALUE OF OLIVE OIL.

It is Good Either Taken Internally or Used Externally.

Various forms and kinds of oils form a large stone in the foundation of beauty culture. Only the thoughtful observer realizes their importance and that they were indispensable to the belles of old time—to the Greeks and Romans and eastern beauties of ancient days.

Olive oil was the most luxurious, as well as the most common. It was taken internally and externally; they rubbed with it, bathed in it, drank it and used it in a hundred ways. Olive oil is still olive oil, though not so many people recognize its value except as an ingredient of salad dressing.

It is excellent for the digestion and may be taken in doses of from one to nine or more teaspoonfuls a day. Some people find it is distasteful taken clear. In that case it may be disguised in wine or lemonade or some pleasant drink, which of itself should agree with the individual's system.

Olive oil is a good flesh builder. If rubbed into the skin, it not only accomplishes this with faithful applications, but makes the skin soft and velvety. Being a vegetable oil, it has absolutely no tendency to stimulate a growth of hair.

Olive oil is used in a hundred other ways, but the sum of its virtues lies simply in this—it is gentle in its action, soothing, nourishing and strengthening.

THE ALFALFA PLANT.

It Was Cultivated In Asia Long Before the Christian Era.

Alfalfa is a native of southwestern Asia and five centuries prior to the Christian era had been carried to and cultivated in southern Europe. The Romans used and appreciated it as a feed for their chariot and war horses before the birth of Christ. From Italy, in which country its growth has been maintained continuously to the present day, it found its way into Spain and France.

The Spaniards during the Spanish invasion carried it into South America and Mexico. During the middle of the nineteenth century it was introduced into this country through California by the Chileans. Since then it has gradually spread eastward until today there is probably not a state or territory in the Union in which this oldest of cultivated forage plants is not grown to some extent. Where this plant has come to us from Spain, directly or indirectly, it is known as alfalfa, while if brought from other countries of Europe (and it is in isolated instances here and there) it is generally called lucerne, from a valley in Switzerland by the same name in which it grows well and in large quantities.—St. Louis Republic.

Pretty Names For Books.

The following are some of the curious titles of old English books:

"A Most Delectable Sweet Perfumed Nosegay For God's Saints to Smell At."

"Biscuit Baked In the Oven of Charity, Carefully Conserved For the Chickens of the Church, the Sparrows of the Spirit and the Sweet Swallows of Salvation."

"A Sigh of Sorrow For the Sinners of Zion Breathed Out of a Hole In the Wall of an Earthly Vessel Known Among Men by the Name of Samuel Fish" (a Quaker who had been imprisoned).

"Eggs of Charity Layed For the Chickens of the Covenant and Boiled With the Water of Divine Love. Take Ye Out and Eat."

"The Spiritual Mustard Pot to Make the Soul Sneeze With Devotion."

Most of these were published in the time of Cromwell.

Lawyers at Westminster.

Of the professions and trades represented in the house of commons the law holds first place, but in early days no class of men gave greater trouble than the lawyers, and many were the attempts made to keep them out of the house. James I., when the parliament of 1624-25 was to be chosen, advised electors "not to choose curious and wrangling lawyers, who may seek reputation by stirring needless questions." This and other antagonistic counsel in the past and present has, however, done little to stem the tide of lawyers which flows at each election into the house.—Strand Magazine.

The Ideal Life.

To live content with small means, to seek elegance rather than luxury and refinement rather than fashion, to be worthy, not respectable, and wealthy, not rich; to study hard, think quickly, talk gently, act frankly; to listen to stars, babes and sages with open heart; to bear all cheerfully, do all bravely, await occasions, hurry never—in a word, to let the spiritual, unbidden and unconscious grow up through the common.—William Henry Channing.

Those Good Old Days.

"Dear, I wish you would lay down your novel and come and button my shirt for me."

"Dear me, I never saw such a helpless man! I'd like to know how you buttoned your shirts before you were married."

"My shirts had buttons on them in those days."—Indianapolis Star.

Modest.

"Is that all the work you can do in a day?" asked the discontented employer.

"Well, suh," answered Erastus Pinkley, "I s'pose I could do mo', but I never was much of a hand foh showin' off."—Washington Star.

Less Crime In December

Probation Officer Francis A. Spear reports the total number of criminal cases before the district court in December to have been 111, against 140 for December, 1905.

Of the new cases, 61 were for drunkenness, assault 6, violation game laws 6, bastardy, idle and disorderly, and quarantine law 3 each, liquor cases 9.

Of the warrants issued 7 were not served, 5 were continued for further hearing, 2 on probation, 2 appealed and 14 continued to pay fines.

The annual New Year's reception with its open house and other features offers a good opportunity to all who desire to inspect the Y. M. C. A. building and its up-to-date equipment. All adult residents of Quincy are cordially invited to attend this reception which is to be entirely informal.

LONGER VACATION

High School Pupils Who Reported Today Told to Come Tomorrow

For the past few days it has been a case of hustle at the new High school house, to get a portion of the building ready so that it could be occupied for school purposes.

An enormous amount of work has been done in a few days and nights which only goes to show what might have been accomplished had a little more energy been used from the start.

For several days men have been at work long before 7 o'clock, and painters have been at work late in the evening.

This morning, Commissioner Burke, Architect Gould, and several city teams and workmen were on hand bright and early. Shavings and rubbish were cleaned up and carted off, so that in the old part everything could be in readiness for school at 8 o'clock.

A larger part of the rooms of the building have been completed with the exception of painting, furnishings and minor details. This morning, however, there were only nine rooms ready for occupancy.

Those pupils who have attended school in the Woodward building reported at the new building at 8.15 A. M., but as they could not be accommodated they were promptly dismissed and told to report tomorrow.

The pupils from the old building who reported at 11 A. M. received similar instructions.

One of these nine rooms was on the street floor, and eight on the second floor. This is not enough to accommodate the 700 pupils, so that for a time two sections will be necessary. New rooms will be added every week so that many days will not pass probably before all of the pupils can report at one time.

It will be sometime however before the typewriting, the chemical and physical rooms, the assembly hall and gymnasium are ready for use.

Head Master Harper and his corps of teachers were on hand bright and early this morning but were disappointed.

Had no day been set by the school authorities for occupancy of the building, it is doubtful if any rooms would have been ready before February or later. Having been requested, however, to vacate the Woodward building it was imperative to do something, and it was good thing to push along the new building.

Vacancies on Police Force

It is probable that Mayor Thompson will have four vacancies to fill in the permanent police force, instead of two. By a recent amendment to the police ordinance two permanent men were added.

Now it is reported that Chief Burrell is to tender his resignation as a member of the permanent force, which position has been filled by a special officer since he was appointed chief. It is rumored that Officer Golden will also tender his resignation.

Officer Golden has been incapacitated from performing regular duty for several months owing to illness.

The appointments to the permanent force will have to be made from the reserve force, and will be in the nature of promotions.

Alumni Defeated.

The Thayer Academy and Alumni basket ball teams played a close game on Tuesday which the former won 13 to 1. Richmonds shooting from fouls was a feature, W. Remick and Knight played a good game.

The entertainment was under the direction of Miss Ella Mahoney and the teachers of the Sunday school, to whom much credit was given.

After the entertainment Santa distributed one thousand boxes of candy to the children. At this time also Santa presented to Rev. F. C. Mitchell, who has charge of the Sunday school, a purse of $50.00 from children and teachers. Father Mitchell responded by thanking all for their appreciation of his work and wishing all a most Happy New Year.

The first annual New Year's reception of the Quincy Y. M. C. A. was held Tuesday evening. it was very largely attended and was an unqualified success. The building was lighted from basement to dormitories, and all of the rooms were open for public inspection.

The reception was given jointly by the Association and the Ladies' Auxiliary. There were no decorations, and in fact none were needed, as the rooms themselves are very attractive.

The guests of the evening began to arrive before 8 o'clock, and at 8.30 there was a crush. After being presented to the receiving party they inspected the rooms.

In the receiving party in the parlor were: President Richard D. Chase; Mrs. J. E. Meyer, president of the auxiliary; Mrs. F. S. Barry, Dr. William Gallagher of Thayer Academy; Secretary and Mrs. E. Chase of the Wollasion Congregational church; Rev. W. J. Heath of the Wollaston M. E. church; and Rev. Dr. E. N. Hardy of Bethany Congregational church.

The ushers were Joseph A. Sedgwick, William F. Cummings, Charles H. Hardwick, A. T. Leavitt, Ernest D. Gould, Charles Goodspeed, Charles Bailey, Wilson Marsh and S. A. Kay.

The Association Mandolin, Banjo and Guitar club furnished music throughout the evening and added much to the festivities.

Punch was served in the reading room by Miss Emily Wild, and tea in the memorial room by Mrs. J. H. Welch and Mrs. Hazen E. Ricker.

During the evening light refreshments were served by a committee of the auxiliary. They were Mrs. Wilson Marsh, Mrs. A. G. Coffin, Mrs. John W. Sanborn, Mrs. A. H. Gilson, Mrs. E. N. Hardy, Mrs. F. S. Barry, Mrs. Edward Tenney. They were assisted by a corps of young ladies of the junior auxiliary, among whom were: Miss Mabel E. Lovejoy, Miss Irene M. Bradbury, Miss Helen F. LOSS TO LIBRARY

Miss Bumpus Resigns as Librarian After 36 Years Service

At the December meeting of the Trustees of the Library, and much to their surprise, Miss Amelia L. Bumpus tendered her resignation. At a meeting this week the resignation was accepted, to take effect Feb. 1. The Trustees also passed the following vote, which was entered on the records and was placed in the hands of Miss Bumpus:

"That the Board of Trustees of the Thomas Crane Public Library have received with great regret the resignation of Miss Amelia L. Bumpus. They assure her that her faithfulness and unfailing urbanity have received the approval of the Trustees and also of the patrons of the library. Her service has covered the unusually long period of thirty-five years, beginning with the establishment of the library, and she is to be congratulated on her approaching relief from her daily work.

The position of desk attendant will be filled for the present by Mr. H. H. Schnmacher.

It was at the annual town meeting in 1871 that the town voted to establish a Public Library and appropriated $2,500 and the dog tax. The sum of $2,694.87 was also raised by subscription, making the aggregate $7,236.37.

The first librarian was Miss Abbie I. Hails, with Miss Bumpus as assistant. Miss Hails resigned because of ill health in 1873 and was succeeded by Miss Cora L Young. Miss Mary I. Brooks of Boston assumed the position in 1897, but remained only a year. It was in 1876, over thirty years ago, that Miss Bumpus was placed at the head of the library, and the vote of the trustees shows that she has faithfully performed the duties all these years.

She was with the library first in the Adams Academy building, then in the building now known as Hancock hall, and in 1882 moved to the Crane Memorial hall now occupied.

GOOD AFTERNOON.

That was a good showing for the Quincy granite industry of 1906, which showed almost twice as many cutters at work as in 1903.

Really Mr. Carnegie need not worry because an income tax will make liars. All taxes seem to have a tendency to do that.

How shall the Saville street crossing be abolished, is a subject which will admit of considerable discussion. The Daily Ledger would like to print your plan.

There will be no danger in Haverhill from mad dogs. The aldermen, at a special meeting on Monday evening ordered all dogs to be muzzled for one whole week.

Where Quincy requires five school physicians at a salary of $100 each, Salem a larger city adds the work to the duties of the city physician and allows him $275 additional compensation.

A writer in the Outing Magazine, says that boxing develops the lungs more than any other exercise. The lung development however, takes place between boxing matches.

A happy New Year to Gov. Guild! The people of Massachusetts by their reelection have endorsed his administration of 1906, and they will find him a safe and progressive executive in 1907.

It was claimed by the State that the Metropolitan sewers with outlets off Squantum and Nut Island were no damage to Quincy, but now a State board has forbidden the digging of clams on the shores of Quincy bay, which was a source of revenue to many, and most everybody enjoys a clam chowder. A valuable privilege is taken away.

As a result of the concrete tests on the foundation of the new Daniells school in Malden the entire foundation will have to be replaced and about two months will be lost in consequence. The lost to Contractor Robert Wilson is estimated at between $3,000 and $4,000. Concrete supposed to have a strength of 1,600 to 2,000 pound per square inch crumbled at 750. Nothing like the old Quincy granite for foundations.

There will be a total eclipse of the sun Jan. 13-14, but it will be invisible in New England.

More delightful weather for New Years could not be desired than that of Tuesday.

The mornings will begin to lengthen next week. The afternoons have already increased ten minutes.

Little Mabel Jilbert of Baxter street who has been confined in the house the past six weeks with whooping cough is improving slowly.

TITLE IS RETAINED

Joe Gans Easily Puts Kid Herman Out of Business

AN EIGHT-ROUND BATTLE

Negro Had Things Practically His Own Way, Finally Drawing Opponent's Fire and Wading In and Finishing the Mill

Tonopah, Nev., Jan. 2.—Joe Gans fought true to the belief of the bettors After playing with "Kid" Herman for eight rounds, he landed a full swing on the point of Herman's jaw and Gans retained the lightweight championship. It was apparent from the start that Herman had little chance of winning. Gans blocked his blows with ease, and at no time was he in the least worried.

In the first round Gans started to feel out his man. Herman was willing to fight, but the champion stalled him off. In the second round Gans began to open up. Herman's attempts to land ended mostly in failures. Gans blocked Herman's leads with glove and elbow and when the opportunity presented itself planted right and left jolts to his face.

The third and fourth rounds were repetitions of the second. It was plainly seen that Herman was the favorite with the crowd. When he landed the crowd cheered wildly. Gans only drew applause when he fought his cleverest.

In the fifth round Gans, having measured his man, slowed down. This was the only round where Herman made any showing. He waded in and swung hard rights and lefts at the champion. Gans appeared careless and a number of the blows landed. The crowd cheered madly for Herman.

The sixth and seventh rounds were both in favor of Gans. In the eighth he started out by feinting and drawing Herman's fire. They fiddled around the ring until Gans worked his opponent into a corner. Here Gans feinted with his left and Herman swung wildly with his left and gave the negro an opening. Like a flash Gans whipped a left and then a swinging right flush on the point of the jaw. Herman dropped like a log, with his face buried in his hands. He lay motionless at the edge of the ring. Gans walked away; it was all over.

Nate Lewis ran around the ring to where Herman lay and begged him to rise, but Herman was senseless. At the count of ten Lewis and Adam Ryan carried their protege to his corner, where three minutes elapsed before he came to.

In the second the men were milling fiercely when the gong sounded. Herman stepped back from a clinch. Gans, not hearing the bell, landed a hard right on the neck. The crowd hissed and hooted. Gans faced the crowd and made a public apology. Not content with it, Gans went to Herman's corner and explained that he had not heard the gong. Hisses changed to cheers as Gans returned to his seat.

After the fight Herman said: "There is no getting away from it, the best man won. I made the best fight that was in me against a superior man. I cannot deny that he is the best man, and I do not begrudge him his victory."

Gans bore his easily won honors with the best of grace. "It was just as I expected," said the champion. "I had Herman outclassed. He was game, but he never had a chance to win."

Straight Marquis of Queensberry rules governed the contest, which was for a $20,000 purse, 60 percent to the winner and 40 percent to the loser.

Two hours before the fight the betting was 2 to 1, with Gans favorite. Bets of 100 to 75 that the fight would not go 20 rounds were made.

It was not until after 1:30 o'clock that holders of general admission tickets began to wend their way through the snowdrifts toward the pavilion, which is about a quarter of a mile from the business section.

The big arena was like a refrigerator and those already within doors were compelled to wear heavy gloves and overcoats. Holders of the cheaper tickets huddled together closely and stamped their feet with force in an effort to keep warm.

The heat thrown out by the many invisible ovens throughout the building was scarcely felt. The newspaper men were compelled to do their work with their hands encased in huge goatskin gloves, and every once in a while desert their seats and walk around the pavilion with their overcoats tightly buttoned.

Headed Off by Fire

New York, Jan. 2.—Five persons were rescued with difficulty from a burning tenement house on west Forty-Ninth street. Three women who had been overcome by smoke were carried over the roofs of adjoining houses to a place of safety. Six families had been penned in the building by the burning of the stairway. The monetary loss was $15,000.

Arthur Mills' Sudden Death

MORAN TO GOVERNOR

Requests That Police Commissioner O'Meara Resign

Boston, Jan. 2.—The special incident yesterday in the long controversy between District Attorney Moran and Police Commissioner O'Meara over the enforcement of the laws, especially those relating to the observance of Sunday, was the letter which Moran sent to Governor Guild suggesting that O'Meara's resignation be requested. In his letter Moran declares that the police commissioner is ignorant of the law and that this ignorance has been emphasized by his orders to the police and the subsequent annoyance of many persons innocent of violations of the Sunday observance laws.

The municipal court has approved 25 more applications for summonses for alleged violations of the Sunday laws, bringing the total to 130, and involving nearly 200 defendants. The majority of the summonses granted yesterday were against bakers, but the number also included members of one of the hotel orchestras, the court selecting one orchestra out of a number whose names were taken, in order to have a test case.

On Lookout For Jail Breaker

Boston, Jan. 2.—Boston police are keeping a sharp lookout in the hope of capturing the unidentified forged check operator known as E. C. Smith, who broke jail at Bennington, Vt., yesterday morning by using false keys made from a broom handle, and got away scot free, though compelled to desert the woman regarded as his wife, who had occupied the cell with him, and whose ruse deceived the officials and permitted his escape. The Boston officers are of the opinion that the man may work his way to this city, where he is undoubtedly well acquainted.

Clams Will Increase and Multiply

Boston, Jan. 2.—The order of the fish and game commission, prohibiting the taking of shellfish from the greater part of Boston harbor, went into effect yesterday and for the first time in centuries the digging of clams on the flats in the upper harbor will cease. The new order does not apply to lobsters. It is claimed by the state board of health that clams taken within certain limits contain considerable quantities of bacteria of a harmful nature. Clams were being dug by Indians when the first white settlers arrived in Boston harbor.

Hair Braids In His Pocket

Boston, Jan. 2.—The police believe that in Frank Gallo they have "Jack the Slasher." Three girls have identified the man as the one who cut their locks. After narrowly escaping lynching in Scollay square yesterday afternoon, Gallo, who gave his age as 19, was arrested, after a struggle, on the charge of slashing the hair of Margaret Quinlan, aged 15, while she stood in front of the Theatre Comique. He was identified by the girl, and in his pockets were found no less than six braids of hair.

Inauguration of Higgins

Providence, Jan. 2.—In the presence of one of the largest gatherings that ever attended an inauguration in this state, James H. Higgins of Pawtucket was inducted into office as governor. The oath of office was administered to Higgins by his predecessor, George H. Utter. Governor Higgins then administered the oaths to the several other officers-elect. The election was next proclaimed from the outside balcony of the state house and a salute of 17 guns fired by the state militia.

Larceny Charge Against Doctor

Boston, Jan. 2.—Dr. William A. Wilson was arrested last night on a charge of larceny of jewelers' supplies and his office at 44 State street, in the heart of the financial district, which he has occupied for 15 years, was raided and three wagonloads of merchandise valued at several thousand dollars were taken by the police. The goods which were taken by the police consisted mostly of surgical tools of considerable value. Wilson denied the charge of larceny.

"Hostile to State's Interests"

Boston, Jan. 2.—Senator-elect Vahey of Watertown will present a bill in the Massachusetts senate to cancel the Boston and Albany lease to the New York Central. Accompanying the bill of Vahey is a brief petition declaring that the New York Central in control of the Albany is hostile to the interests of Massachusetts, and giving as another reason for the cancellation of the lease that the state can then purchase the stock of the Albany.

Mill Property Changes Hands

Providence, Jan. 2.—The transfer of the Gregory mills at Wickford, R. I., from Albert Gregory, son of the late Governor Gregory, to Rhode Island mill men for the manufacture of the finest grades of worsted yarns, has been made. Changes are to be made in the plant and operations resumed in the early spring.

Accused of Murder of Husband

Greenwich, Conn., Jan. 2.—Mrs. Catherine Neil, who is charged with the murder of her husband, Joseph Neil, who had a blacksmith shop here, was held without bail for the next term of the superior court, after a hearing in the local court. It is charged that the man was killed with a nail file.

New Steamship Organization

Portland, Me., Jan. 2.—The Consolidated Steamship Lines company, with an authorized capitalization of $60,000,000, was organized here to conduct a general steamship business. The company will control the steamship lines owned by Charles W. Morse. The par value of the stock is $100.

Fourteen Lawyers In Senate and Fifty In Lower Branch--Organization Completed With Several Officers of Last Year

Boston, Jan. 2.—The Massachusetts legislature of 1907 convened today. The senate was called to order at 11 a. m., by Senator Frank M. Chace of Fall River, the oldest senior member-elect. Prayer was offered by Rev. D. V. Bowen, pastor of the Church of the New Jerusalem (Swedenborgian) of Fall River.

The senate organized with the choice of William D. Chapple of Salem as president. Otherwise, last year's officers were re-elected, as follows: Clerk, H. D. Coolidge of Concord; assistant clerk, W. H. Sanger of Boston; sergeant-at-arms, D. T. Remington of Somerville; chaplain, Rev. E. A. Horton of Boston.

The house was called to order by Representative Allen of Brockton, dean of the lower branch. Rev. M. S. Nash of North Hanover offered the opening prayer.

The senate notified the house that it had perfected its organization, the lower branch returned the compliment, and then both branches informed the governor and the latter congratulated them.

The house re-elected all of last year's officers without a contest, as follows: Speaker, John N. Cole of Andover; clerk, J. W. Kimball of Lynn; assistant clerk, F. E. Bridgman of Boston; sergeant-at-arms, D. T. Remington of Somerville; chaplain, Rev. D. T. Waldron of Boston.

The principal occupations of the senators are as follows: Lawyers, 14; manufacturers, 5; physicians, 2; retired, 2; newspaper, 2; contractor, 1; clothing cutter, 1; promoter, 1; mariner, 1; florist, 1; insurance, 1; car manufacturer, 1; druggist, 1; no business, 1. Fifteen members of last year's senate are re-elected, which leaves 25 new members.

The house of representatives stands: Republicans, 174; Democrats, 62; Republican Independents, 2; Independent Citizen and Democrat, 1; Democratic Independent, 1; total, 240. The house of 1906 was composed of 165 Republicans, 69 Democrats, 3 Republican Citizens, 1 Democratic Citizen and 2 Republican Independents. There were several districts where the Democrats made no nominations this year, owing to the chaos caused by Moran's gubernatorial candidacy.

Of the 240 members of the house, 120 or just one-half, are brand new men, as against 107 in that class last year Out of the remaining 120, all but 12, or 108, were in the house last year, and those 12 have been members of some previous house. Last year there were 17 such.

The principal occupations of the representatives are as follows: Lawyers, 50; merchants, 36; clerks, 18; real estate, 17; farmers, 13; retired, 12; contractors and builders, 12; manufacturers, 13; publishers, 9; barbers, 4; druggists, 4; superintendents, 3; commercial travelers, 4; undertaker, 1; clergymen, 3; physicians, 4; railroad, 2; hotel, 2; printers, 2; tax collector, 1; dentist, 1; engraver, 1; teacher, 1; theatre, 1; broker, 1; student, 1; restaurateur, 1; banker, 1.

The house, though largely an unknown quantity, has experienced members to give it a good start. It looks like a "good house"; in fact, on paper at least, it promises better than the senate. Speaker Cole returned and had the chair without a contest.

McClellan's Election Questioned

Albany, Jan. 2.—William R. Hearst was prompt in accepting the offer of Attorney General Jackson to consider an application for a rehearing of arguments on Hearst's petition for leave to begin quo warranto proceedings to test the title of Mr. McClellan to the office of mayor of New York city. Jackson had just assumed office when Hearst's counsel served upon him an application for reargument. The attorney general will give a hearing on Jan. 7.

FAIR PLAY THE KEYNOTE

Question Not as to Quantity but as to Quality of Present and Proposed Laws--Betterment of Conditions Now the Demand

Albany, Jan. 2.—Charles E. Hughes yesterday took the oath of office as governor of the state of New York and with his Democratic colleagues began the two years' term for which they were chosen by the people in the state election of November.

The retiring governor, Frank W. Higgins, formally surrendered the reins of government to his successor and left last evening for his home at Olean, a private citizen for the first time since 1893, when he was first elected senator.

In his inaugural address, accepting the powers and responsibilities of the great office, Governor Hughes paid a marked tribute to Governor Higgins, commending his public services and conscientious devotion to the interests of the state. Both the retiring and the incoming governors were received along the line of the parade and in the assembly chamber with cordial applause.

The inauguration ceremonies were unusually brilliant and the attendance almost unprecedented. Following the inaugural ceremonies the new governor held a reception in the executive chamber and later he and Mrs. Hughes received a cordial welcome from a very large number of people in the usual public reception at the executive mansion.

Governor Hughes, in his inaugural address, addressed himself to his "fellow citizens," saying in part:

"We have reason to congratulate ourselves that coincident with our prosperity there is an emphatic assertion of popular rights and a keen resentment of public wrongs. There is no panacea in executive or legislative action for all the ills of society which spring from the frailties and defects of the human nature of its members. But this furnishes no excuse for complacent inactivity and no reason for the toleration of wrongs made possible by defective or inadequate legislation or by administrative partiality or inefficiency. Whether or not we have laws enough of ill-considered legislation, and the question is not as to the quantity but as to the quality of our present and our proposed enactments.

"The demand of this hour, and of all hours, is not allegiance to phrases, but sympathy with every aspiration for the betterment of conditions and a sincere and patient effort to understand every need and to ascertain in the light of experience the means best adapted to meet it.

"It must freely be recognized that many of the evils of which we complain have their source in the law itself, in privileges carelessly granted, in opportunities for private aggrandizement at the expense of the people recklessly created, in failure to safeguard our public interests by providing means for just regulation of those enterprises which depend upon the use of public franchises.

"Wherever the law gives unjust advantage, wherever it fails by suitable prohibition or regulation to protect the interests of the people, wherever the power derived from the state is turned against the state, there is not only room, but urgent necessity for the assertion of the authority of the state to enforce the common right.

"We are a government of laws and not of men. We subordinate individual caprice to defined duty. The essentials of our liberties are expressed in constitutional enactments removed from the risk of temporary agitation. But the security of our government, despite its constitutional guaranties, is found in the intelligence and public spirit of its citizens and in its ability to call to the work of administration men of single-minded devotion to the public interests, who make unselfish service to the state a point of knightly honor.

"If in administration we make the standard efficiency and not partisan advantage, if in executing the laws we deal impartially, if in making the laws there is fair and intelligent action with reference to each exigency, we shall disarm reckless and selfish agitators and take from the enemies of our peace their vantage ground of attack.

"It is my intention to employ my constitutional powers to this end. I believe in the sincerity and good sense of the people. I believe that they are intent in having government which recognizes no favored interests and which is not conducted in any part for selfish ends. They will not be, and they should not be, content with less."

YOUNG HARTNETT FREE

The Police Think Someone Else Caused Death of His Father

Boston, Jan. 2.—Although the report of the autopsy on the body of William J. Hartnett, a local labor leader, who was found dying in his home under suspicious circumstances, showed that death was due to violence, the police released the son, William A. Hartnett, who had been held, and the investigation continued along other lines.

The elder Hartnett was found in a room at his home early Monday alive, but unconscious, and died before a physician reached the scene. Dr. McDonald, who performed the autopsy, stated that he found that the dead man had a fractured skull, a broken nose, a deep cut over the left eye and another cut on the upper lip. It was the opinion of the medical examiner that none of these wounds could have been caused by a fall.

The police are working on the theory that the elder Hartnett was assaulted while on his way home Sunday night and died as a result of his injuries.

Bottled Message of Shipwreck

London, Jan. 2.—There has been washed up on the beach at Castle Rock, in the north of Ireland, a bottle containing a message from several members of the crew of the steamship Huronian, which disappeared in the spring of 1902, to the effect that she was sinking fast. The message, however, gives no location. This is the second time the Huronian has been heard from since she sailed from Glasgow on Feb. 11, 1902, for St. Johns. On June 2 a bottle was picked up 45 miles east of Halifax, containing the following note, written on a scrap of paper: "Steamer Huronian turned over Sunday night in Atlantic. In small boat, 14 of us."

Postmaster Badly Beaten

New York, Jan. 2.—George Ripperger, postmaster of Long Island City, was attacked by three men as he was returning from a new year's party and beaten into insensibility. His head was cut open in three places by blackjacks and his body is a mass of bruises from kicks. His watch, jewelry and pocketbook, in which was a large sum of money, were not taken. Ripperger was assaulted in Astoria in 1905. He will not discuss the possible reason for the assault.

Choked Herself to Death

New York, Jan. 2.—Mrs. Elizabeth Richter of Brooklyn, aged 48, took a discarded leather belt and wound it three times tightly around her throat, and then, slipping the end through the buckle, pulled and fastened it, strangling herself. A note was left by the suicide, saying that the new year contained no prospects for her. Mrs. Richter's home life was happy, but recently her mind became affected through illness.

Deserted Their Dead Baby

New York, Jan. 2.—Confessing that they were the couple who abandoned their dead infant in a baby carriage on Ninety-Sixth street on the night of Dec. 1, Charles A. Gassert and his wife were arraigned in court and later remanded to the coroner. The autopsy showed that the child's death was due to pneumonia. "We didn't have a cent," Gassert said. "I had lost my work and did not know how I could bury the baby."

Cubans Ask Protection

Havana, Jan. 2.—Partisans of the protectionist movement declare that a petition signed by 200 property owners is to be sent shortly to Secretary of War Taft, asking for the establishment of a protectorate. Alfred M. Aguayo, a professor in Havana university, says: "I think there is no other security for Cuba than for the country to adapt itself to the conditions of a United States protectorate."

Wint Relieves Bell In Cuba

Havana, Jan. 2.—General Bell has turned over the command of the American forces in Cuba to Brigadier General Wint. Bell left here yesterday afternoon on board steamer Olivette for Tampa. In the absence of Rodriguez the command of the rural guard will devolve upon Colonel Avales.

War Will Follow Castro's Death

Caracas, Jan. 2.—The condition of President Castro is generally believed to be very serious. The country is generally quiet just now, but a revolutionary outbreak undoubtedly will follow Castro's death, and therefore misleading bulletins regarding Castro's health are issued frequently.

Big Concerns to Amalgamate

Bridgeport, Conn., Jan. 2.—The Bridgeport Telegram publishes a story, based upon information from St. Louis, that the Winchester Repeating Arms company of New Haven will soon take over the Union Metallic Cartridge company of Bridgeport, forming one large corporation.

Teheran Without a Bank

Teheran, Jan. 2.—The negotiations for the promotion of a national bank have been thus far unsuccessful, and in the meanwhile the biggest bankers and merchants are absolutely without funds, owing to the stoppage of credit by the two European banks.

JOSTLED NEGROES

New Haven Incident Results In Murder of a Young Man

New Haven, Jan. 2.—Frederick McGann of this city was fatally shot late last night by Samuel Knox, a negro, at the corner of Church and Crown streets and died about an hour afterwards. Knox is 35 years old and McGann was 21. Knox was arrested a few moments after the shooting a short distance from the scene and as he was being taken to police headquarters scattering cries of "lynch him" came from the crowd, but no attempt was made to molest him or to take him from the officers.

According to the police McGann and two companions were passing a restaurant when Knox, in company with a woman and two other negro men, came out of the restaurant. The young men, it is said, jostled the negroes and McGann became involved in a quarrel with them, during which one of the negroes, said to be Knox, drew a revolver and shot McGann in the side.

Coolie Deserters Caught

Bayonne, N. J., Jan. 2.—At one of piers of the Standard Oil company lies the steamship Desonze, loading with oil for China ports. The crew consists largely of Chinese coolies and last night 22 of them deserted the steamship. The police found the long file of Chinamen hurrying along a back path and they were arrested. The federal statutes provide a penalty of $1000 against a marine company which permits a Chinaman in its employ to effect a permanent landing in this country.

Supreme Court Is Criticised

Oklahoma City, Okla., Jan. 2.—Condemning the action of the supreme court of the United States in severest terms, the state convention of Socialists called upon all members of the party to spread the "true meaning" of the decision of the court in refusing to permit the release of Moyer, Haywood and Pettibone of the Western Federation of Miners from the Idaho penitentiary, where they are held on the charge of complicity in the murder of former Governor Steunenberg.

Jews' Great Expectations

New York, Jan. 2.—With bands playing and flags flying, 500 Jewish families of the lower East Side took cars for Nassau county and dedicated the "Jewish colony of Wollkofstown." The object of the colony is to have a town of its own, and the plan includes a synagogue, hospital, school and market. An attempt will also be made to do away with courts and lawyers, leaving all disagreements to the rabbi to adjust.

Turkish Immigrants Held Up

Halifax, Jan. 2.—Thirty-six Turks, bound to the United States, are detained here by the American immigration officials. The men arrived here on steamer Parisian from Liverpool, and the American immigration officials here had a suspicion that the Turks were violating the United States alien labor laws. The officials are communicating with Washington on the detention of the Turks.

Political Murder Explained

St. Petersburg, Jan. 2.—The mystery surrounding the murder of ex-Deputy Hertzenstein has, after months of investigation, finally been unravelled. Hertzenstein, who was a member of the lower house of parliament from Moscow, was murdered at his country home on July 31, 1906. There is definite proof that the deed was the work of the League of Russian People.

Knife Between Steward's Ribs

New York, Jan. 2.—John Anderson, steward of steamship Carmalina, was found with a table-knife sticking between his ribs and the point in the left lung. The messboy, Ineston Oberh, 16 years old, a Portuguese, is locked up, and Anderson, who is said to be fatally wounded, was sent to a hospital. There had been a dispute between the steward and the messboy.

Great Steam Pipe Burst

Pittsburg, Jan. 2.—William Foulds and Peter Nist were killed and two others were fatally injured by the bursting of a steam pipe at the Pressed Steel Car company's plant at Schoenville. The four men were repairing a 12-inch steam pipe, which bore a pressure of 140 pounds direct from 16 large boilers, when the pipe burst.

Vatican Monopolizing Wires

Rome, Jan. 2.—La Vita complains of the congestion of business on the telegraph wires, which it attributes to the enormous number of telegrams sent by the pope in answer to greetings. The Vatican uses the wires free of charge, the expense being borne by the government.

Car Landed Right Side Up

Fulton, W. Va., Jan. 2.—Forty-eight passengers on a suburban traction car were bruised, two seriously, when the car jumped the track and plunged down over a four-foot embankment. The car remained in an upright position, which prevented a serious accident.

Mrs. Marie C. Blake and Mrs. Lydia P. Inauguration Day At State House

The Opportunity Is Ours, Says Governor Guild In His Address

Inauguration day at the State House is always a gala one, but greater interest than usual was shown this year when Curtis Guild, Jr., took the office for a second year. The invited guests began to assemble in the Governor's suite at 10 A. M., and there was considerable life about the building before noon.

The Senate and House assembled at 11 o'clock and met in joint session at 11.30. At 11.45 Gov. Guild was ushered in, followed by State officials and guests, several of the latter being from Quincy.

President Chapple of the Senate administered the oath of office to the Governor elect, and at 12.15 he began the reading of his inaugural address, as follows:

Gentlemen of the Great and General Court of Massachusetts:

With high appreciation of the trust imposed upon me by the citizens of Massachusetts, it is my high honor and privilege to again invite your attention to such legislation as shall give to a Commonwealth already prosperous and progressive an even greater measure of leadership along the paths of equity, humanity and civilization.

At the root of most modern problems of legislation is not the absence of opportunity for all, but the absence of equal opportunity for all. We have to consider, in short, not so much the acquisition of wealth as the distribution of wealth.

Never has wealth been made with more spectacular rapidity than in the last decade. The minority who have prospered far beyond their fellows must appreciate that the very fact that they have so prospered demands that unusual wealth should bear unusual burdens; that unusual opportunities for the acquisition of wealth imply unusual obligations to the less fortunate and to the public. The envy of the poor for the rich is a sinister influence, but so is the condescension of the rich for the poor. We need stout resistance to all attempts to array class against class and a better understanding among all men as fellow citizens.

The possession of wealth does not in itself provoke hostility. The vague unrest that is everywhere prevalent is due not so much to envy of the possession of wealth as to resentment against its unfair acquisition and indignation at its arrogant abuse.

The commuter does not so much envy the railroad king his millions. He does rebel if he feels that those millions are accumulated by excessive fares or by scrimping in train service. The farmer does not hate the millionaire because he owns a motor car, but because some millionaires who do own motor cars defy not only the canons of courtesy and decency but the law itself in the pursuit of mere selfish pleasure and excitement, at the expense of the property, the safety, the lives of their less fortunate fellow citizens.

It is a somewhat tragic foot-note to the history of civilization that wealth, the fine old Saxon word meaning happiness, should have become in modern English a mere synonym for material riches,—that wealth should no longer mean well-being. It is our happy privilege to restore in part this ancient and nobler meaning of happiness to the word wealth, that the Commonwealth of Massachusetts may signify indeed not a mere abiding place of riches, but a State whose chief concern is for the common happiness of all within her borders.

UNIFORMITY OF LEGISLATION.

The ever closer bond between the States is daily giving greater force to the demand for uniformity in laws concerning such matters as cannot be constitutionally controlled by the national government. If escape from taxation on personal property is to be checked, we must have more uniformity in our State laws of taxtion. If vice in one section is not to become virtue in another, we must have greater uniformity in our State laws in regard to divorce. If bad insurance methods are really not desired by the American people, they must be discountenanced in every State. If the public mean what they say they mean in regard to the so called "trusts," their attention should be concentrated on the laws of those States which permit the creation of trusts. In this great general movement Massachusetts should not merely accept but should suggest progressive legislation.

I renew my recommendation of last year relative to the extension of the corrupt practices act.

STATE FINANCE.

The fiscal year now ends on November 30. The gross debt of the Commonwealth, actual and contingent, Dec. 1, 1906, was $101,528,162. Of this amount, $32,569,750 is represented by loans which have been issued for State purposes exclusively, and $68,-968,412, the total contingent debt, by loans which have been issued for the benefit of cities and towns, and which will be repaid ultimately by them to the Commonwealth. Applicable to the loans issued for strictly State purposes there are accumulations in sinking funds amounting to $18,163,977.30, making the net actual State debt $14,-405,772.70. For the redemption of the loans included in the contingent debt there are accumulations in sinking funds amounting to $8,452,528.08, which amount, applied to the principal of the loans, makes the net contingent debt $60,515,883.92. Of the net contingent debt, $1,428,067.44 falls upon certain cities and towns in which armories have been built, and the remainder, $59,087,816.48, upon the cities and towns in the metropolitan water, sewerage and parks districts. The net actual State debt for five years is as follows:

Jan. 1, 1903	$13,472,628.09
Jan. 1, 1904	14,782,640.97
Jan. 1, 1905	15,576,595.11
Jan. 1, 1906	14,215,765.27
Dec. 1, 1906	14,405,772.70

The Commonwealth has been steadily deprived of its legitimate revenue for the benefit of local purposes. The whole corporation tax, both by theory and precedent, belongs to the State. Nearly the whole is now returned to cities and towns, and it is a well-known fact that in many instances the revenue received by certain localities from the Commonwealth on this account actually exceeds the amount paid by these localities towards the expenses of the Commonwealth as their proportion of the direct State tax. As long as any of this tax is diverted from the State treasury, where it belongs, to town and city treasuries, there will be local disputes as to the method of distribution.

Again, Masachusetts, though put to serious expense by the liquor traffic, receives but one-quarter of the license

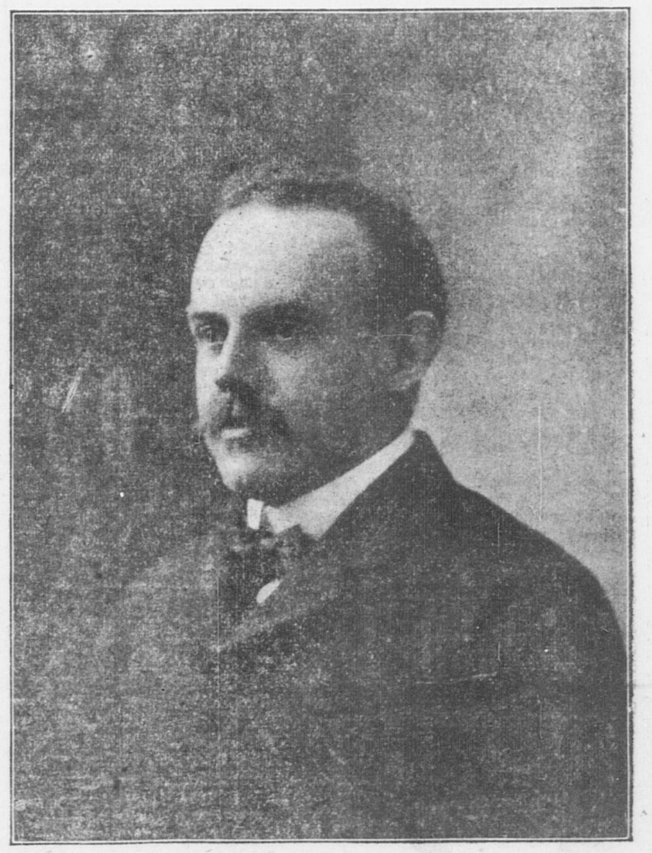
GOVERNOR GUILD.

REPRESENTATIVE SANDBERG.

I believe that better understanding is coming. In the new industrial conditions, brought about by the substitution of machinery for human hands, labor faced capital first with uncovered head, then with clinched fist; but there are not wanting signs that the clasped hands of brotherhood are in the future more truly to symbolize their relation.

I am happy to say that there was a reduction this last year in the direct State tax of 12 1-2 per cent., or half a million dollars. It is extremely doubtful if this direct tax can be lowered or indeed maintained at the present level if means are not taken to secure additional sources of revenue.



REPRESENTATIVE HULTMAN.

fees. Th precedent in other States is that one-half at least of these fees should go to the State.

Moreover, while pressure to supply funds for extravagant municipal expenditure has in years gone by diverted from the State treasury more than enough natural revenue to pay the entire direct State tax, the steady, logical development of the Commonwealth is annually adding new expenses.

The State House is overcrowded. There is now paid in rental for offices of various boards and commissions outside the State House over $30,000 annually. Business sense and sound economy alike require the immediate construction of a modern office building for the accommodation of our public servants. The natural site of such a building would be in the rear of the State House. If this building is not erected, not only must those boards and commissions already occupying quarters outside remain there, but more such accommodations must be furnished at steadily increasing expense for State departments that have quite outgrown their present quarters.

The assumption of the care of the insane by the Commonwealth added a million a year to the expenses of the Commonwealth. The scourge of the insect pests must necessarily cost hundreds of thousands of dollars in the immediate future, unless we would sacrifice millions by abandoning the work against them. To the gypsy and the brown-tail is now added the Japanese moth. The substitution of State highways for county roads adds nearly half a million annually to the State's expenses, and the destruction of the surface of these roads by automobiles amounts to a loss of fifty thousand dollars a year. The increasing demand for investigation and publicity renders the Bureau of Statistics of Labor a constantly and properly increasing source of expense. The appropriation for the new free employment bureaus is quite inadequate for the maintenance of more than one such bureau. The new eight-hour law means an extra expense in one State department alone of $75,000 this year.

These plain facts suggest, in the first place, that when the time comes—as humanity, science and economy alike show the time must come—for the Commonwealth to assume general charge of all paupers and general charge also of those suffering from tuberculosis, the expense of their maintenance should not be a charge upon the State treasury, but should be assessed back proportionately upon those cities and towns that will thus rid themselves of the task of supporting these unfortunates at a much greater expense.

The inevitable growth of expenditure which cannot in this manner be avoided demands, in the second place, that further curtailment of legitimate sources of State revenue should be resisted, whether the presure comes on the one side from city or town governments, or on the other from the government of the United States.

We already have a tax on collateral inheritances. I believe the time has come when the increasing needs of our treasury demand a graduated tax on direct inheritances. This means of raising revenue is too familiar to need description here. It has worked no hardship in the States where it is now law. It could be so adjusted as to be little felt by those least able to bear it, and those who would be the heaviest contributors are the very ones whose larger share of the fruits of prosperity make it just that they should bear the greater burden.

Another principle of taxation that I believe to be equitable is this: that he who is especially responsible for the waste and damage of public property should pay for any unusual damage that he causes. The suction of the automobile tire, for instance, is the cause of exceptional damage to the roads of the Commonwealth. I recommend a tax on all motor cars proportionate to horse-power, the entire proceeds to be devoted to the maintenance of State highways. I firmly believe that such a tax would alike remove much of the present complaint against this mode of locomotion, and would vastly add to the comfort of all who use the highways for any purpose.

Finally, if it is impracticable entirely to reverse the established State policy of distributing the larger part of the corporation tax to the cities and towns, it is not, I trust, too late to prevent any further encroachment on legitimate State revenue.

POWERS AND DUTIES OF THE AUDITOR.

It is the duty of the Auditor of Accounts to examine and audit claims against the Commonwealth; but he has neither the authority, nor is it his duty, to examine into the accounts of State officials, boards and institutions which receive State funds which they are required to deposit with the Treasurer and Receiver-General. During the last fiscal year these receipts amounted to nearly $1,500,000. Manifestly, operations involving so large an amount should receive such examination as will insure acuracy in accounting. I recommend that the laws relating to the powers and duties of the Auditor be so amended as to give him authority and require him to audit the accounts of all officials, boards and institutions which receive moneys to be turned into the treasury of the Commonwealth.

INSURANCE.

Many excellent suggestions will be laid before you for insurance reform. I would particularly urge upon you two, in which I trust you will agree that Massachusetts should lead the way, as she has ever led the way in insurance legislation. The experiments are, I admit, radical, but no more radical than the original suggestion of insurance itself.

The expense of life insurance largely consists in the cost of solicitors and collectors. If neither were necessary, the insured could secure protection at greatly less expense. To the poor, the expense of so-called industrial insurance is very severe; to be very poor, it is prohibitive. I suggest for your earnest thought and careful consideration the subject of insurance of the lives of those able to pay but a very small premium, but whose honorable pride is now in too many cases urging them to pay what they can ill afford if they would avoid a pauper's burial. Life insurance without agents or collectors is an experiment in which the demands of the people are supplemented by practical plans. I commend for your consideration the study of plans to be submited to you for cheaper industrial insurance that may rob death of half his terrors for the worthy poor.

The mortality tables on which ordinary life insurance is based are half a century old. Civilization has materially lenthened the duration of human life in the last fifty years. The same principle that from time to time calls for the readjustment of laws regulating insurance methods in accordance with changing conditions demands no less examination and reconstruction of the very basis on which all life insurance rests.

The insurance department of the Commonwealth has the records of hundreds of thousands of lives from which just and moderen mortality tables can be constructed. I recommend that the Insurance Commissioner be authorized to prepare an official mortality table for Massachusetts, for the information of the profession and the people.

BOILER INSPECTION.

The deplorable disaster in Lynn, following upon the still more serious one in Brockton, is a warning that Massachusetts should no longer entirely trust the inspection of insured steam boilers to the agents of insurance companies. In spite of the existence of fire insurance companies, all buildings must submit to some kind of official inspection. Logic and the public safety demand that, in spite of the existence of boiler insurance companies, all steam boilers should at least once a year be submitted to inspection under at least the direct control and supervision of the Commonwealth.

Under the present law boilers that are insured are exempt from State inspection and cannot be inspected by a State inspector even if the owner so desires. This very objectionable feature of the law should be amended so as to give all citizens of the Commonwealth the right to have State inspecion as well as inspection by an insurance company. The law should also include a provision for enforcing the keeping by every engineer of daily records of the running conditions of every steam plant on forms to be supplied by the Commonwealth's boiler inspectors.

The number of boiler inspectors now in the employ of the Commonwealth is insufficient even for the thorough inspection of boilers not insured. I recommend their increase. Ultimately the Commonwealth must face the responsibility of examining every steam boiler within our borders by inspectors selected after careful examination, as at present, by the Commonwealth. Such a policy would involve the employment of at least a hundred trained men. The State cannot afford to have official inspection conducted by any but the best, and only the practical difficulty of securing at once so large a number of men, specially trained, prevents my urging the adoption of this policy at this time.

REGULATION OF HIGHWAYS AND WIRES.

The justification of State supervision of telephones and telegraphs, a policy in which by the law of 1906 Massachusetts is a pioneer, has already been amply demonstrated. I suggest for your consideration whether even greater powers of regulation should not be given.

It is evident that in another direction this commission must be given ampler powers.

The abuse of automobiles is not decreasing, it is increasing. No engineer can take charge of a steam boiler without an examination. A locomotive engineer must serve a long apprenticeship before he is put at the throttle, though he moves only over set rails, on a line where every vehicle but one like his own is a trespasser. The automobile chauffeur, without any examination, sometimes an over-confident young man, sometimes an inexperienced girl, is turned loose on the public highways in control of an engine nearly if not quite as dangerous as a locomotive. Not even a law as to right of way checks collisions with other vehicles.

I recommend that, as the sailing vessel has the right of way over the steamer on the high seas, so the horse and pedestrian shall for like cause be given, as the weaker, the right of way over the automobile on crossroad and highway.

I further recommend the establishment of a board of expert examiners for chauffeurs, acting under the Highway Commission. I recommend that no person, owner or chauffeur, without a certificate of examination in reasonable practical tests in motor management, shall be longer permitted to experiment with dangerous engines on the roads of Massachusetts, at the risk of the lives of the citizens of this Commonwealth.

LABOR.

The General Court of 1906 was especially progressive in labor legislation. It is apparent that, to be effective, the law establishing the eight-hour day needs amendment. It is also apparent that further legislation is necessary, that womanhood may be better fitted for motherhood and childhood for citizenship. It is further evident that legislation is necessary providing that any employee of the Commonwealth becoming cognizant in his official capacity of a violation of the factory laws or of any laws of the Commonwealth should be permitted to report such violation to the District Police.

European nations, not only from religious motives but from motives of social economy and of common humanity, have found it necessary to provide at least one day's rest in seven. If women and children are to be forbidden night work, all workers of all ages and sexes should be given, as far as possible, the one day's rest in seven especially demanded for a people of strenuous application and high-strung nervous activity. Where work of necessity and emergency enforces employment on Sunday, an opportunity should be given the Sunday toiler for some other day of rest.

The medical examination of minors engaged in industrial pursuits is working well in England and other countries. I suggest for your consideration whether minors with weak lungs or hearts or eyes or joints should longer invite premature deformity or death in occupations dangerous to their physical development. Town after town already is reporting the beneficial effect of medical inspection of children in the schools. Shall not Massachusetts lead also in medical inspection of the children in our factories?

The boy with weak lungs should not be exposed to the flying lint of the cotton mills, though hearty labor in the open air might be not only permissible, but remedial. Let us take those with weak hearts from the treadles, the incipient epileptic from the elevator shaft, that the labor of the young may not become, as it too often does, drudgery that actually hastens the approach of death, but may be such as to promote not livelihood alone but life itself.

I am aware that all these suggestions for more thorough inspection of boilers and for factory legislation mean an enlargement and to some extent a reorganization of the District Police. Such a suggested reorganization is no reflection on the present force. They are overworked by the swiftly increasing calls for their activity, and cannot now perform as adequately as they should even those duties already devolving upon them. Not only an enlarged force but a more definite division into departments is needed.

REGULATION OF CORPORATIONS.

The development of the transportation facilities of the Commonwealth demands your serious consideration. The increase of freight traffic on Massachusetts steam roads has been so swift as actually to embarrass the facilities of existing railroads, even with increased rolling stock and locomotives. There does not seem to have been trackage enough nor rolling stock enough nor power enough provided by these public-service corporations to handle our swiftly increasing business.

Corporations deserve fair play as well as individuals; and it cannot be honestly said that the present highly unsatisfactory service in certain directions is wholly due to corporations and their management. It is notoriously difficult, for example, to get locomotives built fast enough to keep up with the demand.

These facts, however, do not absolve us from hunting down causes of poor passenger service and freight congestion, and seeking a remedy. The results of the investigations by the Railroad Commission will shortly be open to you. The railroads themselves have it in their power materially to relieve congestion, and in cases where they have shown no disposition to exert such power, they should be compelled to do so.

I would suggest, further, that we should encourage adequate appropriations from the national government for harbor approaches to Boston, by moving for the improvement of freight terminals that shall supplement deep water at the docks and in the channels of the harbor.

The New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad has succeeded in Rhode Island and Connecticut in absorbing many street railways. This tendency has been checked in Massachusetts. Legal proceedings brought by the Attorney-General are to decide whether existing law does or does not permit any steam railroad company to absorb one street railway after another, till all are under one board of directors. Pending action of the courts, I merely desire at present to call your attention to the fact that the question at stake is, whether the control of every express package, every freight shipment, every passenger by through lines or by trolley lines can be vested in one huge corporation.

In the proceedings now pending, the Commonwealth has taken the position that such a complete monopoly of transportation is not possible even under existing law.

The regulation of railroads naturally suggests other regulation. The agitation of years has at last culminated in a national law for the regulation of freight rates on merchandise affected by interstate commerce. It is the business of the State to see to it in other respects that unjust discrimination does not prevail within its own borders.

I commend to your study the laws of other States against unfair local discrimination against certain sections in the retail prices charged by great corporations for commodities in general use.

JUDICIARY.

I urge upon you the necessity of jury reform. When the bench itself in public utterance gives evidence as to the appearance even of the intoxicated, the criminal and the insane on Suffolk juries; when pressure is notoriously exerted to secure places especially on these juries as a compensation for political favors; when men high in social and commercial life similarly exert pressure to be excused from jury service, it is certainly time that the authorities designated by law to prepare the jury lists should be safeguarded from such improper influences. Absolute justice should be forwarded by remedial amendments to the laws affecting the selection of juries, to the end that the corruptionist who seeks jury service and the citizen who evades service may no longer alike hamper the administration of justice and the law.

BANKS, BANKING AND STOCK-BROKING.

The reorganization of the Bank Commission and the banking reform laws of 1906 leave but little to be suggested on this subject. Certain department stores have, however, found a means of evading the spirit of the law, and, under the guise of private bankers, are soliciting deposits by offering rates of interest thereon which are likely to prove tempting to small depositors of the class that habitually use the savings banks. Such depositors do not appreciate that they are in reality lending their money to merchants, at a rather low rate of interest, and that the failure of the department store would wipe their savings out of existence. I recommend the safeguarding of these small depositors against this practice.

Chapter 377 of the Acts of 1906, relative to unauthorized banking, exempted foreign banks from its prohibitions; and they are therefore permitted to do a savings bank business in this Commonwealth in competition with our savings banks, without any restrictions on the investment of their savings deposits, as in the case of the Massachusetts saving banks, and without any requirement of stockholders' liability, as in the case of the Massachusetts trust companies.

Savings deposited with foreign banking corporations, then, are not subject to the safeguards thrown about savings deposited with Massachusetts savings banks or trust companies; and the Bank Commissioner has no power to take steps to protect depositors until it appears that the corporation is insolvent, its capital impaired or its condition hazardous. The adequate protection of savings deposited with foreign banking corporations should be one of the first acts of your honorable body.

Closely allied to banking is the exchange of financial securities. I commend to your attention the abolition of the so-called bucket shop, or, in other words, of the misuse of market quotations as a basis for public gambling. Any statute on this subject needs to be framed with conservatism and care. Means can, however, and should at once be found, as means have been found in other States, to discriminate between legitimate and honorable trading in securities and a form of mere gambling whose existence is a fruitful source of embezzlement and larceny.

The bucket shop appeals primarily to those who expect and take a gambler's risk. As great, if not a greater, evil is the swindling not of speculators, but of small investors, by advertisement of bogus enterprises, notably of questionable mining schemes. We prohibit the sale of poisonous patent medicines and of impure foods. We check by laws against stock watering the inflation of values of genuine property that does exist. I suggest to you the propriety of legislation against the attempted sale through misleading advertising of properties which in some cases are known to be worthless by the promoters and which in some cases do not exist at all. Experience has shown that there are methods by which the bogus promoter can be made to feel the strong arm of the law. He should not longer be permitted to seek his prey unchecked in Massachusetts.

POWERS OF COMMISSIONS.

Local differnces as to which city or town is in this or that particular year to receive attention in the improvement of harbors occupy a nedless amount of time of the General Court. Various State boards are granted an annual appropriation for carrying into effect the purpose for which they are created. I suggest a similar general appropriation for the Harbor and Land commission, and that all questions as to which harbor needs attention in any given year be referred to this commission, that the time of the General Court may be reserved for weightier matters affecting the entire Commonwealth.

Members of he Harbor and Land Commission, like members of the Railroad Commission and of similar commissions, are permitted to engage in other occupations neither directly nor indirectly connected with their official work. I recommend the repeal of chapter 503, Acts of 1894,—a piece of special legislation, by which this privilege, so great an aid in the securing of competent and efficient men to serve on commissions of a judicial character which do not necessarily occupy the whole of the time of their members, was taken from the Gas and Electric Light Commission.

THE VOLUNTEER MILITIA.

To its already long and honorable record the organized militia of the Commonwealth adds another year marked by a faithful performance of ordered duty and by an appreciable advance in discipline and efficiency. Detachments from the Sixth and Ninth Infantry were actively on duty at the time of the disaster at Framingham in July, and from the Second Infantry at the fire at Holyoke in December last. In each instance the service rendered was most creditable, receiving ample acknowledgment from the local civil authorities at whose call the troops responded. To maintain a proper esprit de corps, as well as to stimulate recruiting, the troops should be provided during the present year with a suitable and soldierly full-dress uniform, for which, in compliance with statute, a special appropriation will be required In this, as in all other matters affecting the welfare of the force of upwards of six thousand officers and men whose public spirit prompts them voluntarily to serve the Commonwealth, I earnestly recommend the most liberal action on the part of the Legislature.

STATE FORESTRY.

A Commonwealth that has appealed to the national government to save the forests that guard the sources of our water supply and water power must not neglect her own duties. The scope of the State forestry work cannot be extended with the means at present at our disposal; and I cordially recommended to you a consideration not only of more effective laws in regard to forest fires, in order to save the trees we already possess, but of the laws in regard to forest taxation, that the growing of new forests on lands at present sterile and unproductive may be encouraged.

DIVORCE.

The divorce laws of Massachusetts have for many years been so generally regarded as a model that a suggestion for their amendment may seem superfluous, especially with the improving prospect of national divorce legislation, advocated for years in Massachusetts. But pending such action I suggest an examination of the laws restricting divorce by collusion, adopted by other States. I suggest to you the propriety of giving the power and means of at least investigating all uncontested divorce cases to some public official in each county, that it may be known that Massachusetts regards the marriage vow as something more than a social convention to be lightly assumed and as lightly abandoned.

Senators and Representatives:—We have been entrusted by the people with the task of forging their will into law at a time of a peaceful but very genuine social revolution. In such times of popular upheaval there is the greatest possible opportunity of achievement for the public good, so long as the law-making power cooly discriminates between hysterical clamor and sincere appeal, refusing steadily to substitute deformation for reformation.

The discovery of printing and the ensuing revival of learning created a thirst for knowledge and discovery. It sent alike the Conquestadores to Mexico and Peru and the Adventurers and Pilgrims to Virginia and Massachusetts. It took from a class to give to the people a common opportunity to learn.

The new philosophy born of that learning dispelled the mirage of the divine right of kings. It ended the royal power of veto in England with Queen Anne's action of advisement on the Scotch militia bill. It sped the bullet from the rifle of Buttrick at Concord Bridge. It took from a class to give to the people an increasing opportunity to govern.

The free thought that has followed that free government is in our own day taking from a class to give to the people an increasing opportunity to enjoy a true Commonwealth, a more equitable distribution of the fruits of our prosperity, a more even condition of well-being.

This cannot come by hysterical attacks on the rights of property. Wreck capital, and you annihilate labor.

It cannot come by the unwise insistence that great corporations should be let entirely alone. Reasonable regulation is the antidote for confiscation.

It cannot come from a manipulation of the operation of laws by the executive power. It can come by the passage by the legislative power of only such laws as can be enforced.

It can come only by the recognition that fraternity is the first condition not only of equality but of liberty, and that class hatred and religious prejudice have no place in a free republic.

Just a generation ago the first of American philosophers set down, as the last word of his last esay:—

"I see in all directions the light breaking. Trade and government will not alone be the favored aims of mankind, but every useful, every elegant art, every exercise of imagination, the height of reason, the noblest affection the purest religion, will find their home in our institutions and write our laws for the benefit of men."

The prophecy was Emerson's. The opportunity is ours.

Ancient Warfare.

At the storm of Magdeburg by Tilly in 1631 this noted authority on the art of war laid down the general maxim that after a successful assault the soldiers ought to have three hours of pillage.

The Franks.

Coal.

Coal is comparatively a modern product. History shows that it was first used in England during the ninth century. In 1318 the king prohibited its use on the ground that it was injurious to health, but the high price of wood finally compelled the Londoners to use it again.

WRECK AND FIRE

Thirty-Five Persons Killed In Rock Island Disaster

TRAINS CRASH ON CURVE

Quick Setting of Brakes Threw Passengers to Floor, Where They Were Pinioned Under Seats and Cremated

Topeka, Jan. 3.—Thirty-five persons, all Mexicans but three, were killed, 55 persons were injured, and bodies of 30 Mexicans were incinerated in a head-on collision of two passenger trains of the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific railroad near Volland. The wreck occurred while both trains trains were running slowly on a curve in a cut where the grade was steep.

Most of the injuries were due to the setting of the emergency brakes. Most every passenger in the south-bound train was thrown to the car floor by the quick setting of the brakes. The north-bound train was running ten miles an hour up-grade. The Mexicans were pinioned under the seats and the doors were jammed so they could not get out. In the chair car also many passengers were held down by the seats.

The train caught fire from the gas tanks, which were broken. The passengers in the rear cars escaped in nightclothes and dressed in the mud beside the tracks. Then came the cries for help among the Mexicans in the smoking car and the people pinioned fast in the chair car. Every man and nearly every woman on the train tried to rescue the unfortunates, but the flames soon became too hot to permit of approaching the car.

The injured were removed from the chair cars with less difficulty and apparently all were alive from these cars. However, some of the passengers declare that a woman and a little girl were burned in a chair car.

William Gane, conductor of the south-bound train, has a broken collar-bone and is much bruised about the face. He said:

"The train was just pulling clear of the Volland yards and was traveling about 30 miles an hour. I dropped into the front seat of the smoker and dozed. There were 32 Mexicans, sitting two in a seat, back of me, also Al Link, an interpreter, a foreman, and five paid fares. I was awakened by the setting of the brakes. I jumped head first out of the window and struck on my shoulder. When I turned and looked at the train I saw flames leaping 50 feet high from the smoker."

The foremost tourist sleeping car of the south-bound train was also burned, but all the occupants escaped serious injury.

John Lyons, 19 years old, telegraph operator at Vollant, who let the south-bound train get by his station, where it was to pass the northbound train, gave the following statement before being taken to jail.

"I had been awake all night and sober. At about 4 or 5 o'clock this morning the dispatcher gave me four or five orders. One was for the south-bound train to meet two trains at Vollant instead of at Alta Vista, as previously arranged. The south-bound train headed into a switch and let one train pass, backed out of the switch and headed down the main line without waiting for the other train. I thought it was going to stop to take water, as trains have been doing, but instead it went by at about 10 miles an hour.

"The south-bound board was at 'danger,' according to the lever in the office, but the train did not stop, and I ran out with my lantern, but with two swings across the track it went out. I then ran to the pumphouse, grabbing the pumper's lantern, waved it a few times and it also went out. I also called the pumper, telling him what had happened. I went back and told the dispatcher that the south-bound train was by and we waited to see if it was going to come back or hit the north-bound train. I told the dispatcher that I was coming to Topeka and was trying to get there when arrested."

A Blow to Lumber Trade.

Fredericton, N. B., Jan. 3.—Word has been received here that the state department at Washington has passed an order transferring all the consular business of the American agencies at Fredericton, St. George and Grand Manan, to St. John. Lumbermen say the order will be a severe blow to the lumber trade between here and the United States. A resolution was passed by the city council last night protesting against the abolition of the consulate agency here.

Dunlop Was Drowned.

New York, Jan. 3.—The body of Robert Dunlop, the Scotch professional golfer, was found in Van Courtland lake, Kingsbridge, yesterday. Dunlop had been missing for several weeks. He was engaged as an instructor by the New York Golf club. It is believed that he fell into the lake while walking across the park at night.

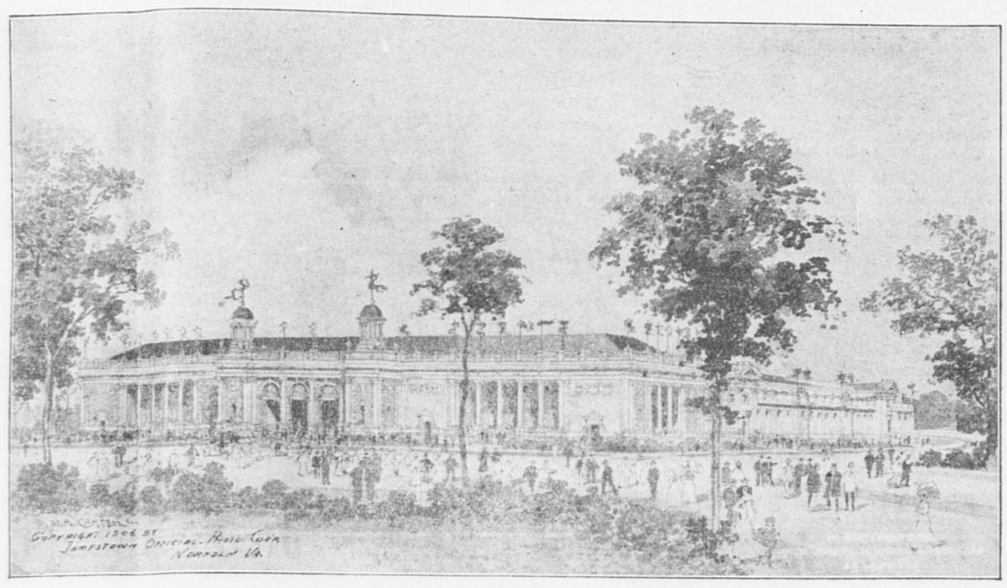
THE JAMESTOWN EXHIBITION

To Be One of the Most Attractive That This Country Has Ever Seen



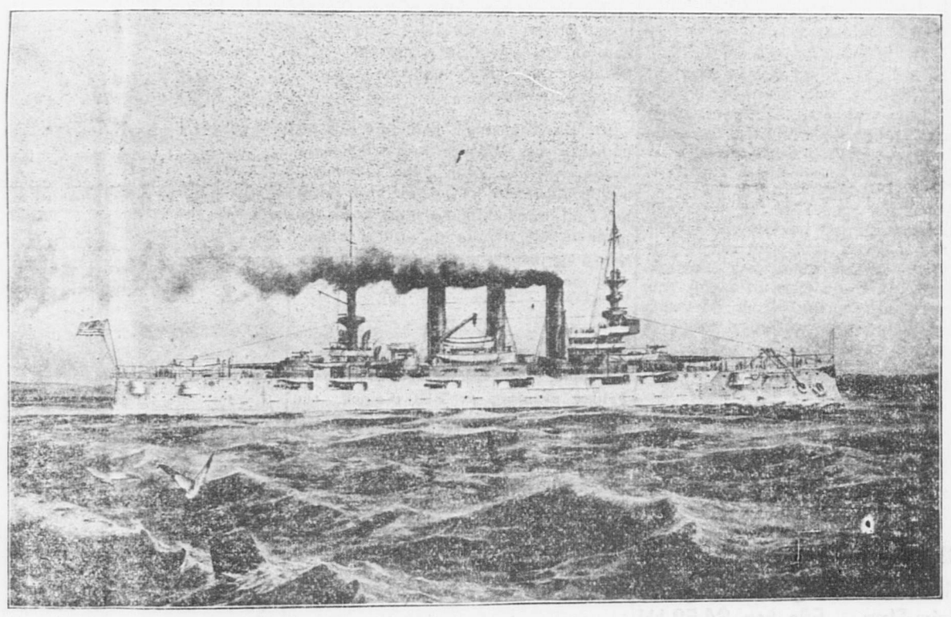
THE STATES EXHIBITS PALACE

Norfolk, Va., Dec. 26, 1906.—Eight miles from the city of Norfolk, on the southern shores of Hampton Roads, there is rising as if by magic, a beautiful Exposition city, that will be introduced to the world on April 26, 1907, as the Jamestown Ter-Centennial Exposition. Push and progress are everywhere in evidence and the big exhibit palaces, State and Government buildings, are all but completed, and the beautiful grounds, one of the features of the exposition have taken on the appearance of a veritable dream city.

No section of the country is so hallowed by history making events as that portion of Virginia on and about the historic waters of Hampton Roads, wherein this exposition, commemorating the three hundredth anniversary of the first English-speaking settlement in America, is to be held. For this reason the celebration will embody, not only an industrial, commercial and educational display, but an elaborate historical review of the growth and progress of the entire country during the 300 years of its existence.

Owing to the fact that the Jamestown Ter-Centennial is the first Exposition ever held in this country, on deep water the United State Government has come forward and invited the nations of the world to participate in the grand naval display to be held in Hampton Roads during the period of the exposition.

The industrial display, while it will compare favorably with those of any of the previous Expositions, will be selective rather than general, including every branch of industry of which the country can boast, but selecting a typical exhibit of each. In this manner; visitors to the Ter-Centennial will have the pleasure of viewing a comprehensive display of the industries of the country without having to wade through an endless labyrinth of similar exhibits.



THE BATTLESHIP VERMONT BUILT AT QUINCY

Every type of fighting craft, from the smallest and most absolete gunboat to the largest and most formidable man-of-war will be anchored off the shores of the exposition, giving a splendid idea of the growth and expansion of naval construction from its earliest stages. The naval pageantry afloat, coupled with the military display ashore, promises to be the largest and most spectacular feature of its kind that the world has ever seen.

The landscape design together with the natural beauties of the grounds and the artistic exposition, Government and state buildings, all of the old colonial style of architecture, grouped along the water front, will go to make up the most attractive exposition that this country has ever seen and the historic shores of Hampton Roads will be the center for all eyes in 1907.

GOOD AFTERNOON.

"If John D. Rockefeller and such captains of industry lived under a monarchy, they would be noblemen or knights," says an admiring contemporary. Mr. Rockefeller would be Grand Commander of the Knights of the Golden Fleece.

It is not surprising that the people of Quincy are becoming buoyant in spirit and that they feel elevated. During the year 1906 over twenty thousand tons of granite from our quarries were freighted out of the city, and the removal of this weight is year by year causing Quincy to ascend heavenward.

Gift to Library.

Lysander S. Richards has sent to the Thomas Crane Public Library the second volume of "Richard's History of Marshfield." This volume treats of the old colonial historic families of that Pilgrim town which stands next to Plymouth in colonial importance. The first volume gives a general account of the history of that Colonial town. This is the first history ever written of Marshfield. All of his publications are in the Quincy library, consisting of the following books: "Vocophy" indicating the calling one is best fitted to follow. "Breaking Up" or the birth, development, death of our planet, in story." "The Uniterse, a description in brief." "New Propositions in Practical and Speculative Philosophy." Richards History of Marshfield in two volumes.

Foot Crushed.

Timothy White, aged 22 years, was severely injured Wednesday afternoon by being run over by a stone team owned by Thomas Carroll. The team was a four-horse stone wagon heavily loaded, and was driven by a man named Sullivan. The team was coming down Quarry street with White walking along side applying the brake. In some manner White got his foot in the way, and one of the wheels passed over it, badly crushing it. The police ambulance was called and White removed to the City Hospital.

Mrs. Deasy.

Mrs. Mary N., wife of Timothy Deasy, one of Quincy's longest residents, passed away on Wednesday at her home, 24 Jackson street, South Quincy, aged 69 years. Mrs. Deasy came to Quincy when 14 years of age, and has resided here ever since. Besides a husband she leaves three sons and a daughter, Rev. William T. Deasy of Randolph, Daniel J. Deasy, exalted ruler of Quincy lodge, B. P. O. E.; John, a prominent member of the Quincy Yacht club and Miss Agnes Deasy.

Funeral services will be held from St. Johns church on Friday.

Bank Officers

The National Mt. Wollaston bank has elected these directors for the ensuing year: Charles A. Howland, Horace B. Spear, Herbert F. Doble, George H. Field, Henry M. Faxon, George W. Morton, Frank S. Patch and Charles A. Howland, Jr. At a subsequent meeting of the directors, Charles A. Howland was elected president.

—A stained glass window is to be erected in St. Mary's Church, Bulphan, Essex, England, to be known as the "Mary" window. It will be subscribed for entirely by women bearing the name of Mary. If they contribute a penny each the world over the amount realized ought to be enough to convert the church into a crystal palace.

CARD OF THANKS.

We wish by this notice to thank all those who, by their sympathy and love, have helped us in our bereavment; especially do we appreciate the presence of the Masonic fraternity and the Grand Army Post, and the floral tributes sent by them and others; also we are grateful to the organist and choir of the West Quincy church.

The Shipment Of Granite From Quincy During Year 1906

Another indication of the volume of granite business done in Quincy last year is the shipments of rough and finished granite. A very large part of this is forwarded from the West Quincy and Quincy Adams station. There is also a considerable amount that goes out of town by teams. Just how much, however, there is no way of telling. Much also goes by water.

The shipments from the two railroad terminal have been published in the Daily Ledger from month to month throughout the year. From these figures the grand total for the year is found to be 169,442,029 pounds, an increase of 41,035,445 pounds over the year 1905. French Fagot Makers.

Nothing goes to waste in France. Even the smallest twigs are carefully gathered by the fagot makers, whose bunches retail in town and city for 5 cents apiece.

Teeth on Edge.

The teeth "on edge" is a very common and most unpleasant state of affairs. Acid fruits, overindulgence in lemonade, etc., may cause it. Sometimes it is brought about by a chill. Chewing cinnamon bark will give relief.

Rhinoceros Horn.

The horn of the rhinoceros does not grow from the bone, but is a mere excrescence of the skin, like the hair and nails. It can be separated from the skin by the use of a sharp knife.

Drum Calls.

About the year 1768 the beats and calls of the drum used in the service were put into a permanent shape. The tattoo, or beat of the drum calling soldiers to their quarters at night, was once called "tap too," from the Dutch word signifying, "No more drink to be tapped or sold."

Sudden Death Thomas F. Temple

Thomas F. Temple, for 35 years the register of deeds for Suffork county, died suddenly at his home 2 Wood street, Dorchester, on Wednesday morning.

Mr. Temple was born in Canton, Mass., May 25 1838. He removed to Dorchester when a child and has resided there ever since.

He married Miss S. Emma Spear, a daughter of Capt. John Spear, formerly of Quincy. He leave a widow, one son and three daughters.

He also served as town clerk and treasurer of Dorchester, was a trial justice of Norfolk county previous to annexation, and was the first judge of the Dorchester district municipal court. He also served one year in the Boston common council, and in 1871 was elected register of deeds of Suffolk county, which position he has held up to Jane 1 of the present year.

—The present is a good time to wipe out all old grudges and start the New Year with a friendly feeling for all. Better try it.

Industrial Insurance

Wollaston citizens will have an opportunity on Tuesday evening next, under the auspices of the Unitarian club, to hear Mr. Louis D. Brandeis present the reasons why, as he believes, citizens of this place should support the movement for permitting Savings Banks of Massachusetts to establish departments of industrial insurance.

This agitation has grown out of Mr. Brandeis' well known investigations into the cost of industrial life insurance as it is now administered by several great insurance companies.

The Massachusetts Savings Insurance League has been organized with headquarters at 2A Park street, Boston, and with a large membership list, admission to which is without expense. A number of bodies of laboring men have unanimously agreed to join the League and to help the movement forward.

Mr. Norman H. White, Representative-elect from Brookline, is to introduce a bill in this Legislature, granting authority to, though not requiring, any of the Savings banks of the State to do industrial insurance business to a limited amount, under proper state supervision.

Mr. Brandeis will explain to the members of Unitarian club and their friends his reason for believing that the Saving Banks of Massachusetts, which now administer considerably more than half a billion of the people's savings without extravagance and without scandal, are competent to undertake such a work.

MANNERS AT TABLE.

An account of hospitality in 1629 gives a good idea of the manner in which a country gentleman of the period lived. Dinner and supper were brought in by the servants with their hats on, a custom which is corroborated by Fynes Moryson, who says that, being at a knight's house who had many servants to attend him, they brought in the meats with their heads covered with blue caps. After washing their hands in a basin they sat down to dinner, and Sir James Pringle said grace. The viands seemed to have been plentiful and excellent—"big pottage, long kale, bowe of white kale," which is cabbage; "brach soppe," powdered beef, roast and boiled mutton, a venison pie in form of an egg, goose. Then they had cheese, cut and uncut, and apples. But the close of the feast was the most curious thing about it.

The tablecloth was removed, and on the table were put a "towel the whole breadth of the table and half the length of it, a basin and ewer to wash, then a green carpet laid on, then one cup of beer set on the carpet, then a little long lawn serviter plaited over the corner of the table and a glass of hot water set down also on the table; then be there three boys to say grace—the first, the thanksgiving; the second, the Pater Noster; the third, prayer for a blessing of God's church. The good man of the house, his parents, kinfolk and the whole company then do drink hot waters, so at supper, then to bed, the collation which (is) a stoupe of all."—Scottish Review.

BRAIN QUALITY.

It Is of Just as Much Importance as the Quantity.

The brain of Daniel Webster weighed fifty-six or fifty-seven ounces, that of Napoleon Bonaparte about the same. This is about three pounds and a half. These were exceeded by the brain of Cuvier, the great French naturalist, which weighed between fifty-nine and sixty ounces, and that of the French surgeon Dupuytren, which weighed fifty-eight ounces. The average weight of the brain of man is about fifty ounces and of women forty-five ounces. The maximum weight of the healthy adult brain is about sixty-four ounces and the minimum thirty-one ounces. Men of great intellectual power have generally if not always possessed large brains. The quality of the brain is, however, quite as important as the quantity, so that a large brain does not of necessity constitute a great man. The size of the brain is not in proportion to the physical development of the body, either in animals or in man. The horse has a brain less in weight than the smallest adult human brain; that of a whale seventy-five feet long was found to weigh not quite twice as much as that of a man. Even in men there is no fixed relation between the size of the body and that of the brain. A small man may have a large brain and a big man a small brain.

Warship Models.

Paraffin wax models of all proposed British battleships are used by the admiralty for tests before the keels of the ships are laid down, the miniatures being tested in a great tank. The models are from twelve to twenty-four feet long, the tank being 400 feet long and twenty feet wide. The models are made of wax because it is a material which does not absorb water or change its weight, so that alterations can be easily made, and the material can be melted up and used again. The American naval authorities also have models of all their hulls constructed, but these are much more elaborate than the British, being formed of white pine and fitted with rudders, false keels, propeller shafts and all et ceteras.

Mixed Metaphors.

Sir Robert Purvis, addressing his old constituents at Peterborough in defense of an act of parliament under whose operation some of them had gone to prison for a week, said: "That, gentlemen, is the marrow of the education act, and it will not be taken out by Dr. Clifford or anybody else. It is founded on a granite foundation, and it speaks in a voice not to be drowned by sectarian clamor." In an address to the Kaiser Wilhelm's father a Rheinlander mayor said, "No Austria, no Prussia, one only Germany. Such were the words the mouth of your imperial majesty has always had in its eye."

London's Fogs.

November is London's worst month for fogs. During a good year the Londoner may have to breathe only fifty fogs. In a very bad year he may have to endure as many as eighty. London's countless coal fires, mingling soot with mist, concoct the Londoner's fog for him. The great majority of fogs in the metropolis begin to form between 7 and 8 in the morning, just when most fires are being lighted.

Changed.

"Hello, Pepper, old chap!" exclaimed a man to another. "You have altered—scarcely knew you."

"My name—haw—is not Pepper," protested the other haughtily.

"Ah," remarked the first speaker, in no way abashed, "then your name has altered too! By-by."—London Mail.

Just His Case.

Bridge Expenses Will Be More

The trustees of the Quincy Point bridge met in the Mayor's office at City Hall Wednesday, when arrangements were adopted for assessing the cost of maintenance of the bridge. Heretofore the towns of Hingham and Weymouth and the city of Quincy maintained the Quincy Point and Hingham bridges.

Under the new order of things, however, all of the parties who were assessed for the construction of the bridge will be assessed a like per cent for the maintenance of the bridge.

Under the old plan where the two towns and city maintained the Quincy and Hingham bridges Quincy's assessment was 5-24th.

Now, however, Quincy must pay 33 per cent of the cost of maintaining the Quincy Point bridge, in addition to an assessment for maintaining the Hingham bridge. This means that Quincy's bill for maintaining bridges will be much larger than in previous years.

In the readjustment of the expenses of date it has been found that since the bridge was accepted that some places have paid more than they should and others less. Quincy is one of the places that has paid less, which means a still further burden on the city this year.

Presentation At K. & L. of H.

Wilson's hall was well filled Wednesday evening with members of the Knights and Ladies of Honor, from Brockton, Boston and other cities, who came to witness the initiation of several candidates, and the installation of its newly elected officers of Maple lodge by D. D. G. P. Lottie Eldridge and suite of Silsby lodge of Brockton.

After the ceremony of initiation and fine work of the degree team, E. B. Langley, in a few well spoken words, in behalf of the members of the degree team and substitutes presented M. Lizzie Furnald, a charter member, who has had charge of the degree team for several years and is an earnest and faithful worker, with a beautiful gold fountain pen. Miss Furnald was taken by surprise, and for a while was lost for words, but after a few moments thanked them, one and all for their beautiful gift.

A social and general good time was enjoyed by all, and each felt that an evening had been well spent and it was pronounced to be a congenial, happy and lively gathering.

FLOYD IN OFFICE

Easily Wins Over His Democratic Opponent

CHOICE OF LEGISLATURE

Other Candidates at Popular Election Were Eliminated--Election of Senator Promises to Be Warmly Contested

Concord, N. H., Jan. 3.—Charles M. Floyd of Manchester was elected governor of New Hampshire by the state legislature at the opening session of that body, and was formally inaugurated today. The choice of a governor by the legislature was made necessary by the failure of any candidate at the November election to secure a majority of votes, Mr. Floyd, who was the leading candidate, lacking upwards of 1.00 of the number needed to elect.

CHARLES M. FLOYD.

In the voting in joint convention of both branches of the legislature Floyd and the Democratic candidate, Nathan C. Jameson, were the only candidates eligible under the constitution to be balloted for, though there were several other candidates at the popular election. The result was as follows: Charles M. Floyd, 263; Nathan C. Jameson, 144.

Aside from the formalities of organizing the two branches for the session, little other business was done yesterday. The senate organized with John Scammon of Exeter as president, while Bertram Ellis of Kent was chosen speaker of the house. The committee appointed to canvass the returns of the November election reported that all the Republican nominees for members of the governor's council had been elected, but that there was no choice for governor. After the two bodies in joint convention had attended to the duty of electing a governor, a committee was appointed to notify Floyd of his election, and that committee will report to the joint convention this afternoon, at which time also Governor Floyd will deliver the annual message.

The election of a United States senator will come up, it is believed, next week. Henry E. Burnham seeks reelection, and his avowed opponents are George B. Leighton of Dublin and Henry M. Baker of Bow, while there is talk among some of the members of advocating Edwin G. Eastman of Exeter, George H. Adams of Plymouth, former Governor John McLane of Milford and Henry B. Quinby of Laconia.

Gans and Britt Matched.

Tonopah, Nev., Jan. 3.—Ben Selig, acting for Joe Gans, and M. M. Riley, on behalf of the Casino Athletic Club, have signed articles for a finish fight between Joe Gans and Jimmy Britt. The purse is to be $25,000, 60 percent to the winner and 40 percent to the loser. The fight is to be at 133 pounds, two hours before the fight.

Italians Take Strikers' Places.

New York, Jan. 3.—About 350 freight handlers employed at the terminals of the Erie railroad at Jersey City went on strike for an increase of wages. The men had been receiving 18 1-2 cents an hour and they demanded 20 cents an hour for a 10-hour day. The Erie soon placed 300 Italians in the strikers' places.

PENOBSCOTS' BALL

Celebration In Honor of Inauguration of Governor Francis

Indian Island, Me., Jan. 3.—To celebrate the inauguration of Joseph Francis as governor of the Penobscot Indian tribe, all of the Indians on this island attended the inaugural ball last night. In addition to the remnant of the descendants of the original proprietors of Maine, many white persons from Old Town and Bangor were present.

The inauguration exercises were impressive and novel. Francis is greatly revered by all his race, regardless of party. He was elected to the governorship last November.

The exercises were conducted in the Penobscot language throughout. In an address to the members of the tribe the new governor promised his fellow tribesmen that it was his ambition to perform the duties of his office conscientiously and for their advantage. He impressed on the Indians the virtue of temperance and gave them much good advice as to the way they should live. Lieutenant Governor Paul also made an address, which was received with much enthusiasm by the usually stoical red men.

No Malicious Intent.

Worcester, Mass., Jan. 3.—District Attorney Moran of Boston has filed his answer in the $50,000 damage suit brought against him by Wilson H. Fairbank. Moran states that whatever was said about Fairbank was made in the heat of a political campaign. He declared that he did not know the plaintiff personally and bore him no malice. During the last state campaign Moran criticized Fairbank, who is a state commissioner to the Jamestown exposition, for storing its property at his home in Warren.

Engineers' Wages Raised.

Springfield, Mass., Jan. 3.—The New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad has granted its freight engineers an increase of 40 cents a day and its passenger engineers an increase of 35 cents, while the wages of engineers of switching engines have also been increased. An agreement has been reached whereby New Haven engineers assigned to electric engines or multiple trains will draw the same wages as steam engineers unless it be found that they are making more than the present steam scale.

General Muzzling of Dogs.

Boston, Jan. 3.—Full powers to muzzle all dogs in the state have been vested in Dr. Austin Peters, chief of the cattle bureau, by a vote of the executive council. Peters is authorized to have dogs muzzled where he deems it necessary to prevent the spread of rabies and in such cities and towns where the local authorities either refuse or neglect to take such action. The Boston board of aldermen have already passed an order for the muzzling of dogs in Boston.

Christian Endeavorers' Growth.

Boston, Jan. 3.—At the meeting of the World's Christian Endeavor union in this city, an invitation was received from the president of the United Society in India, Burma and Ceylon, to hold the next convention in India in 1910. The invitation was accepted. President Clark spoke encouragingly of the work throughout the world. There are now 68,722 societies and there are but few countries in which progress has not been made during the year.

Impure Food Convictions.

Boston, Jan. 3.—The fight against impure food was begun in earnest in the police court when nine merchants in this city paid a $25 fine for selling adulterated food. H. W. Knight was fined for selling hamburg steak containing preservatives. Joseph McLeod and E. C. Johnson for selling mince meat containing preservatives; J. Kinsley, J. T. Powers, Frank Fox, David Marshall, William Hall and C. H. Cass for selling cider containing preservatives.

O'Meara Praises Boston Police.

Boston, Jan. 3.—Police Commissioner O'Meara has sent to Governor Guild his first annual report. The commissioner pays high tribute to the efficiency of the Boston police force, and says that he has discovered "no evidence of that corruption which is the curse of the police department of some other large cities." The commissioner urges the necessity of a clearer and fuller explanation of the meaning of work of "necessity and charity" on Sunday.

Damages In "Rush-Hour" Suit.

Boston, Jan. 3.—The supreme court has decided that the Boston and Northern railroad is liable in damage suits brought by passengers injured in rush hour stampedes. Harriet Kuhler was hurt during a rush in the Scollaw square subway and got a $2000 verdict from a jury. The railroad filed exceptions to the verdict and the supreme court overruled them.

Libelled for Sinking Schooner.

Portland, Me., Jan. 3.—Schooner Ventura of St. John has been libelled in a suit for $3000 by the masters and owners of American schooner Harvest Home, which was sunk in a fog off Cape Cod, and by the Machias Lumber company, owners of the cargo. The Ventura had come into this harbor on her way from New Brunswick to New York with laths.

Frye Satisfies Maine Folks.

Augusta, Me., Jan. 3.—At the Republican joint caucus last night, William P. Frye of Lewiston was renominated for United States Senator by acclamation. At the joint Democratic caucus William M. Pennell of Brunswick was nominated for United States senator over William H. Newell of Lewiston by a vote of 34 to 23.

MISUSE OF MONEY:

Charge Against Redmondites Promises to Create a Sensation

London, Jan. 3.—The matter of the allegations of financial wrongdoing on the part of the Redmondite members of the Irish party, made in Cork by William O'Brien, is promising to become of serious import.

The Irish People, the organ of O'Brien, declares that the records of the alleged wrongful financial methods of the Redmondites, the revelation of which was threatened by O'Brien in his speech at Cork, must be produced before an Irish jury, and that this jury shall hear the whole story, including a recital of the disposition of the immense sums obtained from the United States and Australia, which the paper avers were obtained under false pretenses, and which enabled the bosses of the party to defy the people..

Daniel Sheehan, member of parliament from Mid-Cork, has sent a letter to John Redmond demanding apology or reparation because the party stopped his allowance, which action he attributes to the influence of Redmond, and, failing which, he threatens legal proceedings.

Rumors of Political Wrong Doing.

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 3.—After a 15-minute session, the Republican caucus of state representatives and senators to nominate a candidate for United States senator to succeed Senator Alger adjourned for one week without balloting on any candidates for the office. Governor Warner, who is confined to his bed by a severe attack of influenza, declared that the caucus should adjourn action in order to give time for investigation of rumors of improper methods employed in advancing the candidacy of Arthur Hill of Saginaw. There are four avowed candidates for the senatorship.

The Franco-Vatican Conflict.

Rome, Jan. 3.—The Giornale D'Italia publishes an interview with M. Briand, the French minister of education, in which Briand describes the clergy of France as patriotic men, and says that the very hard trials they are experiencing today, imposed upon them by the pope, are causing discontent. The Vatican is wrong, he adds, if it considers what is merely tolerance in the French government to be weakness. The application of the new law is proceeding satisfactorily, Briand says, without persecution on the part of the government or rebellion from the Catholics.

Capture of Train Robber.

Richmond, Jan. 3.—J. C. Andrews was arrested near here as the robber who held up a train near La Crosse, Va., last Sunday night, and relieved a number of the passengers of their money and other valuables, securing about $1000 worth of booty. He was identified as the highwayman by the conductor and porter of the train. The prisoner was lodged in jail here. The penalty for the offense may be death, under the laws of Virginia, in the discretion of the jury.

Poison on Non-Union Bread.

Chicago, Jan. 3.—Four men, said to be members of the Bakers union, have been arrested on the charge of putting acid and iodoform on hundreds of loaves of bread from a bakery where a strike is on, distributed among Jewish residents. The police have confiscated many baskets of poisoned bread and are holding them for evidence. In the pockets of the four men arrested were found bottles of carbolic acid and packages of powdered iodoform.

Sixty Stiletto Thrusts.

Jersey City, N. J., Jan. 3.—Pasquale Mazzetti is suffering from 60 stab wounds inflicted by stillettos in the hands of three men who lured him to a vacant lot and attacked him, according to the man's story. It is stated at the hospital that Mazzetti has a chance for recovery. The police are in doubt as to whether Mazzetti was the victim of an Italian vendetti or was set upon for purposes of robbery.

Demands of Engineers.

Chicago, Jan. 3.—Demands on all the railroads operating west of Chicago for an increase in wages and an eight-hour day have been made by 57,000 locomotive engineers. The increase in pay is asked by the switching engineers, 40 cents an hour being demanded instead of the present maximum of 35 cents an hour. The shorter workday is asked by freight engineers, who now work 10 hours a day.

Found Wife and Daughter Dead.

New York, Jan. 3.—When Henry Hindenberg returned from his day's work to his home in a tenement house last night, he found his wife, 23 years old, and her 15-months old daughter dead from asphyxiation. Gas was pouring from a tube which had become disconnected, it is thought, accidentally from a gas stove. A month old infant was found in another room, but was revived.

Dix's Captain at Fault.

Washington, Jan. 3.—A report of the steamboat inspection officers who made an investigation of the collision between the steamers Dix and Jeanie on Nov. 18 last, about three miles from Seattle, by which about 50 people lost their lives, places the blame for the disaster on Captain Lemond of the Dix and exonerates from all blame Captain Mason of the Jeanie.

Produce Exchange Seats Come High.

New York, Jan. 3.—The determination of the New York Produce exchange to engage in dealing in mining and industrial stocks has resulted in a marked increase in the value of seats on that exchange. A seat sold yesterday brought $500, an increase of $100 over the last recorded sale.

GIVE NO REASONS

Baltimore and Ohio Officials Testify as to Wreck

"A VIOLATION OF RULES"

Cannot Place Blame, They Claim, Because Witnesses Are Under Arrest--Passenger Train Ran Past Danger Signal

Washington, Jan. 3.—An investigation to ascertain the cause and fix the responsibility for the disastrous train wreck on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad at Terra Cotta, last Sunday night, has begun here before a coroner's jury. The principal witnesses were three officials of the road, none of whom could give any reason for the wreck. Nearly 50 witnesses have been summoned, and the inquiry promises to occupy the entire week.

Engineer Hildebrand and the other members of the train crew of the "dead" train, which telescoped the passenger train, and who are under arrest, were seated in the inquiry room when the inquest began, but were later excluded with other witnesses.

The testimony developed the movements of trains involved from the time they were both at Washington Junction, between 4 and 5 o'clock Sunday afternoon, until the accident took place. No. 66, the passenger train, left Washington Junction for Washington on time. The "dead" train, No. 2120, left a few minutes afterwards.

The passenger train stopped at every station and the special made no stops. No. 66 had passed Takoma Park, when No. 2120 was allowed into the block at Silver Springs. The train record kept by Dispatcher Dent, who had entire control of the trains, shows that he received a message from the operator at Takoma Park that No. 2120 had run by his red signal. This message came seven or eight minutes after the train had run past the danger signal.

Dent immediately called up University station, the next towards Washington, and was told that No. 66 "was not coming." From this, he said, he feared trouble, and in six or seven minutes he got word from the conductor of No. 66 from University station that the wreck had occurred. Dent said there was no cause to apprehend danger from the proximity of the two trains, until the rear train ran by the "stop" signal at Takoma.

Division Superintendent Hobbs said the company had made no effort to investigate the accident. It was impossible to do so, he said, because the members of the train crew were under arrest. Coroner Nevitt informed him that although these men were under arrest they were available as witnesses. Mr. Hobbs ascribed the accident to "a violation of rules," but said without a full inquiry he could not specify what rules.

C. W. Galloway, superintendent of transportation, said he had no doubt that Engineer Hildebrand knew that No. 66 was ahead of him, as both trains were at Washington Junction at the same time. He said there was no requirement that the crew of No. 66 should send out a warning to the crew when it made station stops, as it was running on regular schedule. Hobbs estimated the speed of the "dead" train between Silver Springs and Takoma as 25 miles an hour, while Galloway said it might have been 50 miles an hour.

Dr. Snowden testified that he performed an autopsy on Professor King, who lost his life in the wreck, and Coroner Nevitt explained to the jury that the verdict would be based on this autopsy.

The weather was foggy on the night of the accident, as was testified to from the official records of the weather bureau by Professor Day.

Both Hobbs and Galloway gave Hildebrand an excellent certificate of character. He has been an engineer on that road for 23 years and on the particular division for 12 years. He had run the fast passenger train and worked extra as a passenger engineer, having no regular run.

Consul Complains of Low Salary.

Washington, Jan. 3.—Frederick McMaster, American consul at Zanzibar, has tendered his resignation and proposes to embark in private business. He assigns as his reason for his resignation the impossibility of properly conducting the consulate at Zanzibar on the $2500 salary authorized by law.

New York, Jan. 3.—Thomas Brown, well known as a whistler on the stage, died at Yonkers last night. His wife, an actress, was with him at the time. Brown was 35 years old. Last fall his health failed him and several weeks ago he went to the hospital. He was born in Holyoke, Mass.

FRAUD ORDER ASKED

Charges Preferred Against the New York Cotton Exchange.

Washington, Jan. 3.—Charges of fraud were filed late yesterday with Postmaster General Cortelyou against the officials and the members of the New York Cotton exchange by Representative Livingston of Georgia and Harvie Jordan, president of the Southern Cotton association of Atlanta. On the charges filed, the base a request that the postoffice department issue a fraud order against the officials and members of the New York cotton exchange, in order to bar them from the use of the United States mails in conducting what the charges term fraudulent practices.

The postmaster general, after going over the papers submitted to him, referred his callers to Judge Goodwin, assistant attorney general for the postoffice department. It is likely that a hearing on the charges will be held by Goodwin before a determination of the question is reached.

Would Head Off Fraud Order.

New York, Jan. 3.—President Hubbard of the New York Cotton exchange has asked Postmaster General Cortelyou to send him copies of any complaints which might have been made to him against the New York Cotton exchange. This action was taken upon the publication of reports that an application will be made to the postmaster general in behalf of cotton growing interests in the south for the issuance of a fraud order against the New York Cotton exchange, denying it the use of the United States mails.

Girls Had Close Call

New York, Jan. 3.—Fifteen girls, whose escape from a burning building had been cut off, threw their aprons over their heads and dashed through the flames last night. The fire started in the show window of a millinery store from defective insulation and the entire establishment was soon ablaze. The girls were working in the cellar and they found every avenue of escape blocked by the blaze. One of the young women wrapped her apron about her head and ran through the front entrance, which was enveloped in flames. The other 14 quickly followed.

Evidence Does Not Warrant Arrest.

Washington, Jan. 3.—A request was received from Immigration Commissioner North of San Francisco by the department of commerce and labor for a warrant for the arrest of T. Takeuchi, the publisher of the paper known as the Revolution, on the allegation that he is an anarchist and a dangerous person. North was notified that the case, as it stands before the department at present, would not warrant an arrest.

Paterson Police Have Gallioni.

Paterson, N. J., Jan. 3.—Luggi Gallioni, charged with participation in the silk dyers' riots in this city several years ago, reached here last night in the custody of officers who brought him from Barre, Vt. The prisoner's wife accompanied the party for the first 35 miles of the trip and frequently expressed her indignation at her husband's arrest.

State Railroaders On Strike.

Sofia, Jan. 3.—The employes of the state railroad have gone out on strike because of the refusal of their demand for increased wages. The government, to insure the continuance of traffic, will use military locomotive drivers.

HOW TO SHOW A PROFIT.

Tricky Bookkeeping Puts Losses on the Profit Side.

The printed report of a municipal electric light plant in Indiana has just been received. It shows a profit. There is no question about it. It shows a large profit. The figures are there in black and white, and they show a profit equivalent to 30 per cent of the gross income and 18 per cent on the capital invested. That is what we call a profitable business.

How was this plant able to make so good a showing? In a way so simple that any municipal plant could adopt it with success if its superintendent were good at figures. And the best of it is that it makes competition by private plants impossible because—well, stockholders are too inquisitive.

In the first place the fixed charges for interest on the capital invested and for depreciation were entirely ignored. Then no allowance was made for taxes lost by having municipal instead of private ownership. Next, while full charge was made against the water department and the city offices for lights and supplies, the superintendent conveniently forgot to charge the lighting plant with the water used in its boilers and condensers or with its share of the salaries in the city accounting department. Insurance was also overlooked. Finally, to make assurance of profit doubly sure, a number of items properly pertaining to maintenance were charged to "new construction." At the same time the charge for street and public building lights was quite as high as in surrounding cities served by private companies, which had somehow or other to provide for all these omitted items.

It is perhaps needless to add that except for the judicious way in which the superintendent prepared his report a considerable deficit would have appeared instead of the gratifying profits. Of course the taxpayers will have to provide the money to make good these paper profits, but they may not for some years see the connection between their profitable plant and the higher tax rate, and meanwhile are happy in the contemplation of its profits and will doubtless testify enthusiastically to the benefits of municipal ownership.

From the above we may deduce the following rule for showing a profit: First, omit all items of expense that can without too much danger of detection be saddled upon the general tax list or other departments; second, charge in as vague a way as possible to new construction as many items of maintenance as may be necessary to show a large profit. (N. B.—The profit must be large to provide for the contingency of some carping critic discovering one or more of the concealed items of expense and ruthlessly drawing them forth from their hiding places.)

If the above rule is scrupulously followed there seems to be no reason why every municipal plant should not show a profit.—"Concerning Municipal Ownership."

GONE OUT OF BUSINESS.

Millions Sunk In Unsuccessful Municipal Lighting Plants.

During the past few years at least sixty cities and towns in the United States have sold, leased or abandoned their lighting plants. In a few cases they still retain their distributing system, buying the current from some company, but in most instances they have gone out of the business entirely. A number of other places have made unsuccessful efforts to dispose of their plants.

As with few exceptions municipal lighting plants have been in operation but a short time, this is a remarkable showing of failure and one, it need hardly be said, that is sedulously avoided by those who for ends of their own are urging other cities to make similar experiments.

As it usually takes some years for a city to realize how great a burden it is carrying in its lighting plant, it is probable that the number of admitted failures will increase rapidly from now on, for, as an eminent electrical engineer recently said, "There are already indications that a considerable number of these municipalities which have engaged in improper undertakings are entering upon a period of financial difficulty."

Faults Enough as It Is.

The political machine that dominates New York city is strong because large powers are delegated to it, and the expenditure of $100,000,000 is given absolutely into its keeping. We have faults enough without municipal ownership in most of the cities of this country, and the ordinary business man fails to see the wisdom of making the situation more complex and dubious than it is by adding the problem of municipal ownership with all that it implies.—Binghamton Herald.

"If."

"Municipal ownership," remarks the Winnipeg Free Press, "should not be discredited because of its tendency to increase municipal debt, provided the new enterprises are made to be fully self sustaining." Neither is dynamite dangerous if carefully handled. It is just about as safe to intrust the management of a municipalized service to the average municipal council as it would be to engage a seven-year-old boy to handle dynamite.—Montreal Gazette.

Who Would Fine the City?

An exchange notes the fact that a city council recently fined a water company $1,000 for supplying impure and unwholesome water. That is right. But if the waterworks had been owned by the city—

AMERICAN JUDGE IN CHINA.

L. E. Wilfley to Be First Head of Newly Created Consular Court.

Judge Lebbeus E. Wilfley of St. Louis, who has been appointed by the president to be the first judge of the newly created consular court in China, is preparing to depart upon his mission, says the Boston Transcript.

"I look forward with interest to my work in China," he says. "The necessity for a court for the protection of Americans in China has long been apparent. This court will have jurisdiction over all commercial and civil proceedings and by virtue of a treaty between the United States and China the right to appeal to the higher courts of this country. The personnel of the court will be a judge appointed by the president for ten years, a district attorney, a clerk and a marshal. The court will have jurisdiction over all cases formerly tried by the consul general. The headquarters of the court will be in Shanghai, but sessions will be held in Canton, Hankow and Tientsin at stated periods and in such other treaty ports as the exigencies of the case render practicable.

"In all cases the judge will be the one to try the law and the facts. All trials will be public and will be held in the building of the American consul general. If an American should be found guilty of murder, the marshal has authority to erect a scaffold and hang the offender. Jails will be provided in Shanghai and all cities where the court has jurisdiction. An American need not obey warrant or summons that does not bear the signature of the American consul. There is an appeal from this court to the Ninth judicial district, of which California forms a part. This is a federal court and not under the jurisdiction of any state. One fact that is somewhat out of the ordinary is that the court, instead of being under the department of justice, is under the direct jurisdiction of the department of state."

CANNON IN HURRY FOR SOUP

Speaker Also Demanded Pie of the Capitol's Beefsteak John.

Speaker Cannon recently passed by the luxurious and betableclothed house restaurant for congressmen to the bare floored little alleyway, with little naked tables of the Beefsteak John sort, where the plebeian multitude are unceremoniously fed by hoarse and jostling waiters, says a Washington special dispatch to the New York Times. Every waiter in sight stood transfixed, and three dropped laden plates with sonorous crashes.

The proprietor reached Uncle Joe in three leaps and took him by the arm with intent to steer him into the holy of holies, where the linen napkins are.

"Don't," said Uncle Joe, resisting. "I came here on purpose. I am in a hurry, and I want to get something to eat. I can't get it there."

After vain expostulations the proprietor permitted the speaker to sit at a bare table opposite a fat grocer from Milwaukee. The consternation did not subside. Every waiter in the place dropped his customers and dashed forward to wait on Uncle Joe, who demanded bean soup and apple pie. Three waiters brought him the soup, two conveyed the pie, and the proprietor himself furnished a glass of water.

"No mystery about it," said Uncle Joe, wiping some pie crumbs from himself with a paper napkin. "I want what I want when I want it, that's all, and I wanted to get that soup before sunset."

SKIDDOO "23;" NOW IT'S "37"

NOW37

There is no doubt apparently that the honor of discovering the change in "23" to "37" belongs at Chatham Four Corners, N. Y., and nowhere else, says the New York World. It was demonstrated the other night beyond any question down at Page's grocery, and the credit must go to Bill Shaver, who has been around this neck o' woods longer than Lou Payn.

Bill keeps up with the times and knows that skiddoo means 23, but he has maintained that the change has taken place and that all the jokesmiths must recognize it. "Take my word," he said, getting up from a box of lemons on which he had been seated, "23 is no longer on deck. It is now 37. Take one and see." Bill wrote his declaration on a piece of cardboard and turned it upside down.

Newly Discovered Work of Menander

A highly interesting discovery is announced from Egypt, says the London Athenaeum. M. Lefebvre, one of the inspectors in the service of the Egyptian department of antiquities, has been fortunate enough to disinter a large number of leaves of a papyrus codex of Menander, containing upward of 1,200 lines. The publication of this most welcome discovery should enable modern scholars for the first time to form an independent judgment on the style and genius of the famous comic dramatist.

The Automobile a Rest Cure.

It is a mystery to me that enterprising manufacturers of automobiles have so long failed to exploit the restorative qualities of their machines, says a writer in the Atlantic Monthly. But it will come before long, for in the minds of thinking men there begins to dawn a faint conception of the untold possibilities for good in this restless age of the automobile as a rest cure.

THE LAND OF ROMANCE.

Spain and the Peculiar Temperament of Its People.

If I were asked to sum up the dominant impression that the survival in Spain of the old world mediaevalism makes, I should say that Spain is in the precise and specific sense of the word the home of romance. The special character of the Spanish temperament and of Spanish developments in literature and in art is marked by a quality, rising and sinking with the rise and fall of Gothic, which we call the romantic spirit—a mixture, that is, of the mysterious and grandiose with the grotesquely bizarre of the soaringly ideal with the crudely real, a mixture which to us today has the cunning fascination of art, but was really on both sides the natural outcome of the experiences and feelings of the men who created it. This romantic spirit was once the common possession of all Christendom, but the Spanish temperament peculiarly lent itself to the romantic attitude, and it is in Spain today that we may catch its final vanishing echoes. It is the church, always the most powerful stronghold of tradition among any people, which enables the stranger most vividly to realize how well the romantic spirit has been preserved in Spain. Notwithstanding invasions from without and revolutions from within, especially during the early years of the last century, Spain is still the country where the mediaeval spirit of romantic devotion is most splendidly embodied and preserved.—Havelock Ellis in Atlantic.

THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

A Member May Drink There, but Is Not Allowed to Eat.

The British house of commons has its own code in regard to the partaking of liquid and solid refreshments. A member making a long speech may take a drink, and the house is liberal enough not to care whether the color of the contents of the glass is white or brown or black, whether, in fact, the glass holds water or whisky or beer. Mr. Gladstone's egg flips, which his wife carefully compounded for him and he brought to the house in a bottle, are classic.

But woe betide the man who scorns drink and must have meat. Contemporary recollection only recalls one member rash enough to disregard this rule. It was a number of years ago, in the stormy time of the home rule debates, that an Irish member, in the small hours of the morning, produced from his pocket a paper bag and drew out a bun, which he proceeded calmly to eat. The house was instantly in an uproar. There were loud cries of "Order! Order!" and that bun was never finished.

No member may read a newspaper in the house. If he had the temerity to smoke, the sergeant at arms would quickly place him under lock and key. —Appleton's Magazine.

Mexican Church Legends.

Queretaro was a town before the Spanish conquest and was made a city in 1655. A legend of Queretaro is that an Otomite chief, Fernando de Tapia by name, undertook to convert the city to Christianity in a way that seems novel to us, but was common enough to his day. He came from Tula with a challenge to the people of Queretaro to a fair stand up fight. If he won, the people surviving were to be baptized. The challenge was accepted, but while the fight was in progress a dark cloud came up and the blessed Santiago was seen in the heavens with a fiery cross, whereupon the people of Queretaro gave up and were baptized. They set up a stone cross to commemorate the event on the site of the present church of Santa Cruz. There is scarcely a church in Mexico which has not a legend of this kind attached to it.

Misjudged.

The manager of an office had advertised for an office boy. In consequence he was annoyed for an hour by a straggling line of boys of all sizes, claiming various accomplishments.

"Well," he said to a late applicant, "I suppose you can read anything, and write anything, and figure a little, and use the typewriter a little, and"—

"Naw!" interrupted the boy. "If I could do all them things I'd strike yer fer yer own job. I ain't nothin' but an office boy."

He got the position.—Bohemian.

Remedy For Excess In Eating.

A hint to those who may thoughtlessly at some time or other indulge in excess in eating. If this indiscretion is committed, especially in high seasoned things with rich sauces, a draft of cold water acidulated with lemon juice will take off the sense of weight at the stomach and assist the digestive process by moderating the alimentary fermentation.

Old English Elections.

As an illustration of the violence that was once common during political campaigns in England is a quaint bill from a lawyer after an election at Andover in 1768: "To being thrown out of the George inn, Andover, to my legs being thereby broken, to surgeon's bill and loss of time and business, £500."

A Loophole.

"But, Tommy," said his mother, "didn't your conscience tell you you were doing wong?"

"Yes'm," replied Tommy, "but I don't believe everything I hear."—Philadelphia Press.

The Purchasing Agent.

"Dad," asked Bobby, "what is biology?"

"Go ask your mother," replied dad curtly. "She spends the most money." —Harper's Weekly.

FIRST IN HISTORY

Joint Installation Of Grand Army And Camp of Spanish Veterans

When the young men who enlisted in the Spanish war of 1898 copied the Grand Army a few years ago and organized as Spanish War Veterans, there was some jealousy on the part of the Civil War veterans, and there is today in some quarters, but the two organizations in Quincy have set an example of fraternal spirit by having a joint installation of officers on Thursday evening. It is believed to have been the first joint installation of these two organizations in history.

The installing officer of Paul Revere Post, 88, G. A. R., was Past Commander W. L. Gage of Gen. Sylvanus Thayer Post, 87, of Braintree, assisted by W. O. Pierson as officer of the day. The installing officer of Camp Boyd was Judge Advocate General John F. McGrath of Fitchburg assisted by John A. Buswell of Roger Wolcott camp of Boston. Among the guests were Junior Vice Commander John J. Dwyer of the U. S. W. V., J. Otis Leman of Camp 1 of Boston, Commander James A. Mandeville of Camp 22 of Brockton, Lieut. McKay of the Police force, Dr. C. M. Marstin of Post 87 of Braintree, and John Dubois a veteran of three wars who wears ten stripes for 32 years of continuous service in the navy from 1865 to 1899.

The new officers of Paul Revere Post are:

Commander,—John D. Williams.
Senior Vice Commander,—George Phillips.
Surgeon,—James W. Pierce.
Officer of the Day,—Warren Dunbar.
Quartermaster,—Andrew W. Gardner.
Officer of the Guard,—William M. Bird.
Chaplain,—Henry Chubbuck.
Adjutant,—Franklin Curtis.
Patriotic Instructor,—Henry Chubbuck.
Sergeant Major,—J. H. Webb.
Quartermaster Sergeant,—C. H. F. Stoddard.

Commander,—Henry J. Matthews.
S. V. Commander,—John F. Johnson.
J. V. Commander, — Herbert F. Tucker.
Officer of the Day,—Duncan S. Blakie.
Officer of the Guard,—Paul R. Madison.
Adjutant,— George A. Wardwell.
Quartermaster,—Carl W. Weixler.
Sergeant Major,—John S. Gallagher.
Quartermaster Sergeant,—David G. Smith.
Color Sergeants,—Patrick J. Sheehan and Harry M. Comerford.
Trustees for one year,—Thompson B. Crane.
Trustees for two years,—George F. Phillips.
Trustees for three years,—John R. McGrath.
Delegate to State Encampment,—Carl W. Weixler.
Alternate,—Thomas C. Brown.

Addresses by the installing officers and guests followed the installation ceremonies, the speech by Judge Advocate General McGrath being an eloquent plea for the United Spanish War Veterans and patriotism.

A letter of regret at inability to be present was received from Gov. Guild, who wished the camp and the veterans success.

A fine oyster chowder was then served and there was story telling and reminisences.

Commander Williams of the Post is too well known to need a write up. At present he is one of Uncle Sam's faithful letter carriers. He has been commander of the Post several years.

Commander Matthews has been identified with military circles since the early age of 14. December 10, 1893, he began his military career under the strict discipline of the late Major Walter E. Morrison, then Captain of K Co. 5th Regiment Infantry, Massachusetts Volunteer Militia, enlisting as a private for a period of three years. At the expiration of the three years honorable service, he re-enlisted, this term under Colonel Henry L. Kincaide, then captain. Matthews being a graduate of of Captain Morrison's training, had achieved that soldierly bearing and military etiquette known to all well drilled soldiers and was pronounced a strict disciplinarian, for which he was promoted to a non-commissioned officer, with rank of corporal.

Continuing in the service until the call for volunteers by the late lamented President William McKinley, at the instance of the blowing up of the ill-fated battleship Maine in Havana harbor in 1898, he offered his services to the United States government, enlisting for a period of two years for war service during Spanish-American conflict. Enlisted June 25, 1898, was detailed to K Co. 5th Massachusetts Regiment of Infantry, United States Volunteers, receiving his warrant as senior corporal of his company.

Being of a progressive nature, and desiring to become efficient in hospital work he applied for a transfer from the War Department. The transfer granted, he was transferred to the regular army in September, 1898. He was detailed for duty in the 2d Division, 2d Army Hospital Corps, then under the late General Lawton. Shortly afterward passing a successful examination was promoted to the rank of hospital steward, serving in this capacity until the muster out of his former regiment. While in the hospital corps, considerable knowledge was gained, which proved of exceptionable value.

Receiving honorable discharge from the United States regular army at the expiration of war service, he on July 2, 1900, enlisted in the old K Company, 5th Regiment Infantry, Massachusetts Volunteer Militia, and returned to rank of corporal. Directly promotion followed to sergeantcy. He remained with company until disbandment June 24, 1902. Received an honorable discharge from the State Militia.

August 8, 1904, enlisted in H Co. 5th Regt. Inft, M. V. M., of Charlestown, under Captain George Latimer. Went with regiment to participate in army war maneuvers at Manassas, West Virginia, serving as sharp shooter and scout. Received an honorable discharge at expiration of service. While in the service was commended for efficiency and discipline by Major Francis A. Meredith of Boston.

When the John A. Boyd Camp was instituted May 9, 1899, was one of its organizers. In the year 1901 was elected officer of the day. In 1903 was elected officer of the watch, serving faithfully until 1904, when he became adjutant, serving in that capacity for three successive years.

National headquarters officers noting the efficient work performed, appointed him to a high and honorable position, that of assistant inspector general on the staff of the commander-in-chief. Proficient in duties during the first term of office, was rewarded with a second appointment, which office he now retains. Today will find him wearing the gold embroidered eagle on a velvet collar, the uniform of a national officer.

A NEW COMMODORE

The annual meeting of the Squantum Yacht club was held Thursday evening at the winter quarters of the club under the post office at Wollaston and these officers elected for the coming year:

Commodore,—George F. Sawyer, Jr.
Vice Commodore,—George V. Rogers.
Rear Commodore,—C. E. Sawin.
Secretary and Treasurer,—Walter E. Winlock.
Trustee for three years,—Roger H. Wilde.
Measurer,—William J. Croucher.

COMMODORE SAWYER

Regatta Committee,—Howard Gannett, Jr., Everett Brown, J. B. Atkins and John Hilderbrand.

House Committee,—Charles M. Bryant, William A. Johnson, Sidney F. Copeland, and F. W. Flanders.

Membership Committee,—Charles H. Brown, Ernest M. Tribou and V. J. Emery.

George F. Sawyer, Jr., the new commodore of the club, is one of the most enthusiastic yachtsmen in Massachusetts waters. He is the owner and skipper of the well known prize winner Eleanor, and during the yachting season spends much of his spare time aboard his yacht. He has held the office of vice commodore of the club for several years.

The club has recently consolidated with the Merrymount Club of Wollaston and will use the rooms of the latter club under the Wollaston post office for winter quarters. They are especially adapted for this purpose being centrally located and near the steam and street cars. They are fitted with pool and billiard tables, bowling alleys, reading rooms, piano, etc.

The treasurer reports all bills paid and a good balance on hand, and there is no reason why the club has not a bright future before it, as there are many applications for membership in sight.

Commodore Bryant, who retires this year after five years' active service, has done much to bring the club up to its present position in the yachting world. It was under his administration that the commodious club house on the water front was built and improvements made along the shores of Wollaston beach.

That Commodore Sawyer will keep the club up to its present standing and that it will continue to grow and prosper under his administration there can be no doubt.

PASTOR INSTALLED

New Minister Of the United Presbyterian Church From Nova Scotia

Rev. A. M. Thompson was installed at pastor of the United Presbyterian church, on School street, Thursday evening in the presence of a large gathering of the church people.

The Presbytery met at 4.30 in the afternoon, and organized with Rev. J. McD. Hervey of Providence as chairman and Rev. Dr. E. C. Simpson of Cambridge as secretary.

Rev. Mr. Thompson presented his certificate from the Presbytery at Picto, N. S.

A committee was appointed, who retired, and after examining the candidate, recommended his acceptance to the local presbytery. The report was accepted and Rev. Mr. Thompson was admitted.

The call from the church for him to become the pastor was then received and accepted, which completed the business of the presbytery.

The installation ceremonies were held at 7.30, Rev. Dr. Hervey presiding. The program included the installation sermon by Rev. Dr. J. D. Gibson of Lowell; address to congregation by Rev. Arthur Mitchell of Providence, and charge to pastor by Rev. Dr. E. C. Simpson of Cambridge.

Rev. Dr. A. K. McLellan of Boston was present, but took no part in the exercises. During the installation there was music by the choir, under the direction of Prof. M. McLeod of Boston.

Rev. A. M. Thompson, the new pastor, was born in Hans county, Nova Scotia. He received his education at the schools of his native place, and at the Presbyterian college at Halifax, N. S., from which he was graduated in 1895. In June, 1895, he was ordained to the ministry at Margaree, N. S.

His first charge was at Margaree, where he remained five years. In 1899 he accepted a call to a church in Ferrona, N. S., where he remained until coming to Quincy.

His people at the church in Ferrona desired that he should remain, and at the time of his resignation the papers spoke very highly of his work. Rev. Mr. Thompson is a man of pleasing personality, and will soon make many warm friends in Quincy.

McDonald et al., all of Quincy, to recover $5000 for personal injuries received May 19, 1904, while in the defendant's employ at Quincy, and alleged to be due to insufficient instruction and a defect in machinery.

President Roosevelt had already stated that no considerations of race or color influenced his policy, in dismissing negro soldiers for "shooting up" a town. He would have done the same with any set of men implicated in a conspiracy to protect mutineers and murderers from the consequences of their atrocious crimes, whether white, black, yellow, brown, green, pink or blue. As commander-in-chief of the arms it was his duty to squelch mutiny and treason, and he did it.

Secretary Taft has made a political announcement that clears the atmosphere a good deal. He has been "pestered" a good deal of late to declare his intentions about the Presidential nomination. He has come out plainly and said that he is not a clamorous candidate, but that if the office comes to him he will not turn it down. No sensible man is going to either decline or accept something that has not been offered him and it would therefore be in bad taste for Secretary Taft to declare himself a candidate. There is still fresh in the memory of the public an estimable and innocent admiral who made that sort of announcement.

KILLING OF LAUNITZ

Brought About With Great Ease and Simplicity

A VICTIM OF TERRORISTS

Slayer of Prefect of Police Ended Own Career After Portion of His Skull Had Been Cut Out With a Sabre--Others Marked

St. Petersburg, Jan. 4.—The police have not yet succeeded in identifying the terrorist who shot and killed Major General von der Launitz, prefect of police of St. Petersburg, in the church at the Institute of Experimental Medicine yesterday afternoon, and who coolly turned his revolver against himself while he was falling under the sabres of the prefect's escort.

The authorship of this crime, however, like the recent assassination of Count Ignatieff and the unsuccessful attempt to blow up General Stolypin with a bomb, has been traced to the fighting organization of the Social Revolutionists, who recently resolved to resume full terroristic activity.

The organization last night issued the customary proclamation avowing and justifying the killing of Launitz, which was accomplished with an ease and simplicity that has struck terror into the hearts of all other officials on the revolutionary death list.

The man who committed the crime was about 22 years old and apparently belonged to the intelligent working class. The police affirm he was a Jew. He was provided with a card of admission to the dedication of the church, but this card bore no name. The authorities have not been able to learn how he obtained this invitation to the ceremony, which was purely select, only 150 invitations having been issued.

Prince Peter Alexandrovitch, Duke of Oldenburg, is a patron of the institute. Among the guests present were his wife, Grand Duchess Olga, youngest sister of Emperor Nicholas; Princess Eugenia Emilianova, and a number of other persons prominent at court.

The fact that von der Launitz was to attend the consecration of the church of the institute was not generally known, and the terrorists must have learned of this from sources within the police department. The prefect was accompanied to the church by his usual bodyguard of secret service men, but not one of these had the slightest suspicion of the murderer, although his toil-stained hands were completely out of harmony with his faultless evening clothes, a garb which everybody attending official ceremonies in Russia must don.

The fall of Launitz was followed by a scene of indescribable hysteria and confusion. The Duke of Oldenburg, who was one of the few men who retained their composure, seized the assassin's hand after he had fired twice, and succeeding shots were discharged into the ceiling. But before the duke could disarm him one of the officers who accompanied the prefect drew his sabre and struck the assassin a powerful blow which completely cut out a portion of his skull. As the man was falling he shot himself in the stomach with the last bullet in his revolver. His death was innstantaneous, but several officers continued to hack frenziedly at his prostrate body until the Duke of Oldenburg struck up their swords and forced them to desist.

In addition to two persons arrested within the church, the doors of which were closed after the shooting, several others were taken into custody in a neighboring factory, which is believed to have served as headquarters for the terrorists.

It was during this time that von der Launitz was governor of Tambov that there occurred the terrible repression of the agrarian disorders in Tambov province, and it was in retribution for these repressions that Maria Siridonovo, the Russian Joan of Arc, shot Chief of Police Behenoffsky, one of the subordinates of von der Launitz.

Demented Doctor a Suicide

New York, Jan. 4.—The body of Dr. William M. Weaver, a patient at the state hospital at Central Islip, L. I., was found hanging from a tree in the woods a mile from the hospital. Weaver had suffered from homicidal mania. He wandered away from the hospital some days ago and had evidently hanged himself shortly after he disappeared, as the body showed that death had taken place several days before it was discovered.

Titles to Valuable Mines Cleared

San Francisco, Jan. 4.—Mines in Nevada, valued by the owners at $20,000,000, were awarded to L. A. Montgomery by Judge Seawell, against the claims of C. B. Fleming, who had sued for a half interest because of a dispute in a grubstake agreement. It is now stated that the property will be transferred to Charles M. Schwab, who has awaited a verdict clearing the titles before closing a deal.

Jury Will Hear Tobacco Men

New York, Jan. 4.—In the case of the MacAndrews & Forbes company, the J. S. Young company and Karl Jungbluth and Howard E. Young, charged with violating the Sherman anti-trust law in an attempt to monopolize the sale of licorice paste in this country, Judge Hough sustained the government's contention that the case should go to the jury on all three of the counts specified in the indictment.

REMOVED FROM OFFICE

Medical Examiner Changed His Mind In the Tucker Case

Boston, Jan. 4.—Governor Guild has removed Francis A. Harris, M. D., from the office of medical examiner for Suffolk county for cause, namely, unfitness for and in the performance of the duties of the office.

Governor Guild has for several months been convinced of Harris' unfitness longer to hold the office of medical examiner. This conviction on the part of the governor has been known to Harris himself—the governor's attitude being that he was willing that Harris should resign.

Dr. Harris had been one of the medical examiners of Suffolk county for more than 25 years. He was considered one of the foremost medical experts up to the time of the Tucker trial. At that time he was employed by the government as an expert witness and his examination developed, next to that of the late Dr. Wood, the most important of the medical and surgical testimony which the state introduced. During the long contest to save Tucker from the death sentence Harris changed his mind regarding the statements which he had made at the trial and a new phase in the long contest was introduced. Harris claimed that the change in theory had resulted from experiments which he had made on bodies since his testimony at the trial.

After the public had become wrought up over this change of attitude and when many had come to fear that an injustice had been done at the trial, Harris reverted to his first theory, made at the trial, and again the complexion of evidence which was being weighed changed accordingly. It was after this dual change of mind that Governor Guild, believing that the medical examiner's opinions could no longer be given the weight which they should, sought his resignation.

Deaths From Cold and Hunger

Shanghai, Jan. 4.—Famine relief work has been started at four centres, where there is the greatest distress and the largest refugee camps. In view of the large sums available from Chinese sources, foreign aid shortly will be restricted to donations of food. The latest reports from missionaries describe harrowing scenes of misery in the famine-stricken districts. Hundreds of persons are dying daily from hunger and cold.

Police Force of Nearly 9000 Men

New York, Jan. 4.—An increase of 1400 men, a radical reorganization of the detective bureau, which he describes as "seriously defective," and complete divorce of the police department from all election work, are among the recommendations made by Police Commissioner Bingham in his annual report. The department now has 8817 men available for active duty.

Murdered and Cut Up Woman

Ellsworth, Wis., Jan. 4.—Michael Lio, a member of an Italian railroad crew, who was recently convicted of the murder of John Isaac at Prescott, but who was discharged by the court, confessed here that he murdered Marie Labrizzi in New York on the night of May 27, 1902, and then cut up her body. The New York detectives have taken Lio back with them.

Pushing Child Labor Measure

Washington, Jan. 4.—Senator Beveridge reintroduced his general child labor bill as an amendment to the District of Columbia child labor bill, with a view of securing action during the present session, the district bill having already been reported. The senator says that it is his intention to press the matter to a conclusion if possible.

Won't Rebuild Fort Saint Philip

New Orleans, Jan. 4.—The United States government has abandoned its reconstruction of Fort Saint Philip, near the mouth of the Mississippi river, and contracts amounting to nearly $100,000 will be abrogated. During the gulf hurricane last fall Fort Saint Philip was badly damaged.

Wide Investigation Promised

Albany, Jan. 4.—A sweeping investigation into the question as to the compliance with the new corrupt practices act by candidates and party committees concerned in the November election is promised by Attorney General Jackson, in a statement issued last night.

BROWNSVILLE UP

Culberson Warmly Defends Action of the President

SPEAKS FOR THE SOUTH

Says No Man Can See the End of Negro Problem--Foraker Replies and Pays Respects to Captain McDonald

Washington, Jan. 4.—The feature of the opening session of the senate after the Christmas recess was the discussion of the Brownsville affray. In a carefully prepared speech, Senator Culberson defended the citizens of Brownsville against the charge that they had "shot up" their town and committed the outrages with which the negro soldiers of the Twenty-fifth infantry have been held responsible. Culberson also defended the action of the president in discharging these soldiers without honor.

Mr. Culberson said that the conduct of the negro soldiers had been very irritating to the Brownsville people, and especially to the women. He said that Aug. 4 last, the day before the "shooting up" of the town, a criminal assault had been committed by a soldier on the wife of a citizen, and said that no arrests had been made for this crime. Culberson defended Captain McDonald of the Texas Rangers, to whom Mr. Foraker had referred because of Major Blocksom's reference to him as "a man who was so brave that he would not hesitate to charge hell with a bucket of water."

In defending President Roosevelt for his dismissal of the troops, Culberson said the fact that the troops were negroes had nothing to do with their discharges, for criminal offenses were covered in the articles of war as are also discharges made to effect punishment.

To establish the motive actuating the negro soldiers in creating the alleged disturbance Mr. Culberson read resolutions recently adopted by negro citizens of Boston, which admitted that the soldiers "shot up the town," and said "were determined to do for themselves what the uniform of their country would not do—protect them from insults and punish at the same time the authors of their misery."

After reading much of the testimony taken before the Brownsville grand jury, Mr. Culberson contended that the evidence proved beyond doubt that the shooting was done by the negro soldiers, but failed to identify the guilty ones.

He concluded his speech of an hour and a half by a brief reference to the negro question in general, saying that it still continued to be the most important and the most dangerous question which confronts the American people.

"In spite of the past, with its conflicts and sacrifices," he said, "this problem is still the greatest with which we have to deal. It involves labor, education, suffrage, social order, civil liberty self-government and the integrity of the white race. The end no man can see.

"Speaking in part for the people of Texas—and plainness of speech is best—it is not improper to say that they have dealt fairly and generously with the negro in all essentials. They are opposed to political domination by the ignorant or vicious; they are opposed to social equality with the negro; they are opposed to every tendency which will ultimately be destructive of the purity and integrity of the white race. And above all these, however vital they may be, there is that in the testimony in this case, and which to a degree underlies this trouble, which impels me to declare even in this great chamber that they purpose to protect even with their lives what in their womankind is the immediate jewel of their souls."

Senator Foraker at once took the floor, remarking that he did not propose to discuss the race question or the merits of the Brownsville affair. He wanted his resolution adopted, which would ensure further inquiry, and his present purpose was but to defend himself regarding the criticism charged against him for mentioning Captain McDonald.

Commenting on Culberson's statement that his (Foraker's) speech two weeks ago had offended certain Texans and had reflected particularly upon McDonald, the Ohio senator said he did not know what McDonald resented unless it was the term "gentleman." Foraker said he didn't know why McDonald would 'charge hell with one bucket of water' unless it was that he had no other use for the water.

Mr. Lodge asked that the further discussion be postponed until Monday on account of his inability to speak because of a sore throat. Although Foraker had previously objected to deferring consideration of the resolution he at once consented to the postponement, as Lodge placed his request upon personal grounds. The resolution will be taken up on Monday next and pressed to a conclusion.

Postponement of Court Martial

Washington, Jan. 4.—The war department has been advised that the trial by court martial of Major Penrose and Captain Macklin, on the charge of neglect of duty in connection with the Brownsville affair, which was to have been begun at Fort Sam Houston today, has been postponed until Feb. 4 on account of the disability of Macklin, who recently was shot.

MISSILES THROWN

MARQUISE MAKES DEBUT

Already Unenviable Reputation Not Improved by Her Indecent Performance--Women Driven From the Theatre by Crowd

Paris, Jan. 4.—There was a remarkable scene last night at the notorious Moulin Rouge, when Marquise de Morny, a daughter of the famous Duke de Morny and a niece of Napoleon III, made her debut in an act called "A Dream of Egypt," written by herself in collaboration with Mme. Gauthier-Villars, the author of "Claudine" and other decadent novels.

The marquise, who is the divorced wife of Marquis de Belbeuf, has already achieved an unenviable reputation, and her heralded appearance on the stage brought out a storm of criticism. To this the marquise replied in a letter published yesterday afternoon, denying that her performance was intended to be suggestive and insisting that she meant to give an artistic reproduction of the manners of ancient Egypt. In defending her appearance on the stage, the marquise said:

"This does not constitute a disgrace to the French aristocracy, and a distinguished scion of this aristocracy, Prince de Brogile, has been earning his living for some time past by conducting an orchestra in New York."

In spite of this statement a number of clubmen and Bonapartists got together and went to the Moulin Rouge last night, where they conducted a demonstration the like of which seldom has been seen in this city. For 10 full minutes the curtain could not be raised on the new act, owing to the pandemonium from galleries and boxes.

When the curtain finally went up, disclosing the marquise working out a cryptogram of the charm of life, after the fashion of Galatea, and a beautiful Egyptian mummy in the person of Mme. Willy, the din was redoubled. This was followed by a rain of missiles of every description, the audience even throwing hassocks and boxes at the women on the stage. In spite of this vociferous demonstration the two women persisted in completing their act, which is as disgustingly indecent as anything ever seen on the Parisian stage.

When the curtain was rung down the crowd rushed toward the box occupied by Mme. Gauthier-Villars and Mlle. Polaire, who is starring in a stage adaptation of "Claudine," and literally drove them from the theatre.

Reprieved Murderer Hanged

Mayorsville, Miss., Jan. 4.—Will Harvey, a negro, was hanged here three minutes before notice that his sentence had been commuted reached the sheriff. Harvey's attorney was notified by Governor Vardaman that the negro's sentence had been commuted to imprisonment for life. He hurriedly called up the Issaquena county sheriff, but the latter did not reach the telephone until three minutes after the drop fell. Harvey murdered a negro named Pete Bromo.

Scranton, Pa., Jan. 4.—Scranton's typhoid fever epidemic shows a total of 970 cases since the outbreak six weeks ago. Thus far there have been 72 deaths, six of these occurring within 24 hours. DEATH AT A BANQUET

Former Mayor Stricken In Presence of Fellow Citizens

Boston, Jan. 4.—While attending a banquet to one of his successors at the Quincy house last night, former Mayor John B. Henderson of Everett was stricken with apoplexy and died within a few minutes.

Mr. Henderson, who was the chief executive of Everett in 1897, had been street commissioner of the city since 1900. At the banquet last night to Mayor Boynton, who will begin a third term next Monday, Henderson was the first to respond to a toast. As he was reciting an original poem he staggered and then dropped back into his chair. He was quickly carried to an anteroom, where he expired. The entire assembly remained silent in their seats until the announcement was made that Henderson was dead. Rev. C. E. Spencer of the First Methodist church of Everett offered a brief prayer and the exercises were immediately brought to a close.

Mr. Henderson was 57 years old. He had been prominently identified with the business and political life of the city for many years.

Sunday Workers In Court

Boston, Jan. 4.—It is unlawful for bakers to make bread Sunday night; hot rolls are not a Monday morning necessity. It is unlawful for the Boston Elevated railway to cart sand to its distributing points on the Sabbath, or to haul coal to its pockets from the coal piles; both are works which might be done on Saturday. It is lawful to clean the common and public garden on Sunday, but there is a doubt about working in the public library. These are the interpretations of Judge Duff upon which Police Commissioner O'Meara will base his instructions to the police concerning their cognizance of the law next Sunday.

Discontent Among Weavers

New Bedford, Mass., Jan. 4.—According to the members of the Weavers' union executive committee there is much dissatisfaction among the weavers in some of the cotton mills over the recent advance in wages. In Hathaway mill No. 1 the weavers claim they have been forced to operate an extra loom and that many of them are unable to earn as much as they did before the recent advance of 7½ percent went into effect. The Dartmouth mill weavers report that changes made in the patterns have caused a falling off in wages.

Engine Fireman Disappeared

Providence, Jan. 4.—Shortly after the "Gilt Edge" express left Providence for New York last night the engineer discovered that Fireman Preston was missing from the cab. At the first station word was sent back to Providence and the train waited there until a substitute fireman was sent out from the city. After some search Preston was found wandering in a dazed condition a short distance outside the Providence yard. He said he fell accidentally from the cab.

Boston Must Return Tax Money

Boston, Jan. 4.—The supreme court has decided that a person living in another town cannot be taxed on the amount of business which he may conduct at his regular place of business. The decision was in the case of F. H. Prince, a stock broker in this city, but residing in Wenham, who paid $534 to the city of Boston under a protest. The court ordered the city to return the money, holding that Prince's business is taxable only in Wenham.

Breach of Contract Alleged

Boston, Jan. 4.—Vice President Loring of the Library Bureau Card Indexing company of this city has brought suit against President Davidson and Treasurer Parker for an alleged breach of contract and attached the property of the company to the amount of $350,000. Neither Loring nor his counsel will state the nature of the suit, while the two defendants are away from the city.

Deaf and Dumb For Third Time

Bridgeport, Conn., Jan. 4.—James Wilson, Jr., has again been stricken deaf and dumb. About a month ago he lost the use of his faculties, but recovered. A few days later he again suffered a temporary lapse and now he is stricken with loss of speech and hearing for the third time. Wilson believes his malady is the result of an injury to one of his hands several months ago.

Cracksmen's Second Visit

New Haven, Jan. 4.—Robbers entered the office of the Monarch Laundry company, blew open the safe, broke into the cash register and secured about $200 in money, besides several packets of insurance papers and business records. QUINCY A BANKRUPT

Noted Bay State Politician Is Unable to Pay His Debts

Boston, Jan. 4.—Ex-Mayor Josiah Quincy was yesterday declared bankrupt by M. F. Clarke, C. H. Wooster and George Warner, who hold notes against him aggregating $2700. To the petition filed by C. F. Eldredge asking the court to declare Quincy insolvent is attached a declaration in which Quincy admits that he is unable to meet his debts and is willing to be adjudged a bankrupt upon those grounds.

Josiah Quincy was for four years mayor of Boston and is at present a member of the Boston rapid transit commission. As rapid transit commissioner the city of Boston pays Quincy $5000.

The bankruptcy proceedings caused something of a stir in business and other circles, for Quincy is one of the most prominent men in Massachusetts. Under President Cleveland he was for six months first assistant secretary of state, he served four terms in the Massachusetts legislature, has been a Democratic candidate for governor, and until a few months since was serving as chairman of the Democratic state committee.

Bride May Lose an Arm

Rutland, Vt., Jan. 4.—The hearing of Andrew Farrell, chrged with shooting Mrs. Charles Gilmore and Mrs. Henry Gilmore during a reception following the wedding of the former in the village of Ira, has begun in the local court. Mrs. Charles Gilmore is suffering from a fracture of the right arm and it is still doubtful whether the arm can be saved. Various witnesses testified that a number of men in the crowd which went to the house to assist in celebrating the wedding carried guns and that a number of shots were fired in front of the house.

Textile Workers Want Advance

Philadelphia, Jan. 4.—At a meeting of textile workers in this city last night it was unanimously voted to ask for an increase in wages of from 15 to 25 percent. Delegates representing about 60,000 workers were present. Resolutions were adopted calling attention to the report of the interstate commerce commission, which shows that the commodities of life have increased in price 25 to 50 percent and that the country is experiencing immense prosperity.

Cotton Exchange May Retaliate

New York, Jan. 4.—The board of managers of the New York Cotton exchange prepared to make a counter-attack upon Congressman Livingston of Georgia and President Jordan of the Southern Cotton Growers' association, because of their application to the post-office department for a fraud order against the exchange. The exchange managers agreed to consult counsel as to the advisability of bringing a suit for libel against Livingston and Jordan.

Infernal Machine Failed to Work

New York, Jan. 4.—Dr. Julius A. Gottlieb was arrested on the charge of having sent an infernal machine to his father-in-law, Morris Gluckman, a retired broker. The machine failed to explode when opened because the battery was weak. Gottlieb is said to have acknowledged to the police that he sent the machine, but only as a joke. Gluckman says Gottlieb has threatened him and his family for a year past.

Failed to Make Good

Schenectady, N. Y., Jan. 4.—Jay C. Wemple, treasurer of New Hope lodge of Masons, was arrested on the charge of embezzlement of $2000 of the society's funds. Advance in The Use of Tools

The first meeting of the Mechanical Association of the Boston Gears Works at Norfolk Downs was held Thursday evening, when more than half of the employes were present. The object of the association is for mutual benefit of members in mechanical subjects. Frank Burgess, the president of the works, has been active in organizing the association, as skilful men are required.

The speaker of the evening was Arthur D. Dean, and a stereopticon was used. Mr. Dean illustrated the great advance that had been made since tools were first used by man. Some of the old tools found in museums were compared with the modern tools of today. He emphasized the need of more schools for the hand workers. Where there were 167 schools for 2,000,000 brain workers, there were less than half a hundred schools for 30,000,000 hand workers.

How About the Girls?

Editors Ledger and Patriot:

At the last meeting of the City Council, I noticed an order was introduced for $200 for a skating rink at Ward Six playground. I hope the order will pass at the next meeting. For about eight months of the year the grounds are used exclusively by the boys and young men. Why not let the girls and young women share in its use? This can be done if we have a skating rink. It is central, can be easily reached by electrics, can be easily policed. Let us have it this winter.

Rheumatism Badly Cripp'es A Baldwinsville Farmer

URIC-O Quickly Cured Him.

Treated 2 Years With a High-Priced Physician With No Success.

Mr. Frank Howe, a prominent farmer it the town of Van Buren, says: "I visited the best physician in Syracuse, who treated me for about two years for rheumatism. I spent in that time several hundred dollars and seemed to grow worse instead of better each day. Being on crutches and forced to drive to the train and hobbling to the doctor's office became very discouraging, let alone the sleepless nights and fearful hours of pain. I was advised to quit doctoring and try Smiths' Specific Uric-O. I purchased a seventy-five cent bottle, took it home and used it that day as directed.

"Those fearful sciatic pains left me, my blood seemed to let loose and flow freely. I felt different and knew the next morning I had found a cure, as I slept and rested well all that night, something I had not done before in two years. I used in all six bottles of Uric-O and have never felt a return of the disease, had no use for crutches or cane since the first day's treatment. I know that Uric-O does not contain Alcohol or opiates and that it works in a wonderful way on the blood, bladder, muscles and kidneys and is the only way on earth to cure rheumatism."

Frank Howe.
Baldwinsville, N. Y., R. F. D.

Uric-O is sold at seventy-five cents per bottle, is a liquid internal treatment good for rheumatism only, and will cure each and every case of rheumatism if properly used. Samples and circulars will be cheerfully sent free by addressing The Smith Drug Company, Syracuse, N. Y.

A BOLD PROJECT.

The Scheme by Which Malet Nearly Captured Paris In 1812.

A bold scheme was that engineered by Malet, a Frenchman. Malet had been a republican general, was ruined by the rise of Napoleon, betook himself to plotting, was arrested and finally put in a madhouse. During the emperor's absence in Russia in 1812 Malet escaped one night from his prison, obtained a general's uniform and with an accomplice dressed as an aid-de-camp made his way to the prison of La Force, where the unsuspecting governor released on his command two other ex-republicans, Generals Laborie and Guidal, prisoners on a like charge to his own. Together they proceeded to a neighboring barracks, announced to the commandant that Napoleon was dead and that they were acting by the decree of the senate, ordered the troops to be paraded and dispatched bodies of men upon various duties. Some arrested Savary, the minister of police; others the police prefect. Another battalion seized the Hotel de Ville. Everybody obeyed Malet implicitly, even the prefect of the Seine, and he would undoubtedly have gained possession of Paris had he not been recognized by Laborde, chief of the military police, as an escaped prisoner. He was arrested after a scuffle, the plot was unraveled, and in due course Malet, with twenty-three of his abettors, was shot.

HOW WATER ACTS.

Its Expansion and Contraction and Its Solvent Powers.

Water contracts as it falls from the normal boiling point, 212 degrees, until it reaches 39 degrees. Below that degree it expands, and at 32 degrees, the freezing point, it will expand enough to burst pipes and vessels holding it.

When the pressure of the air is below normal, water boils at a lower temperature than 212 degrees. This is noticed before a rain, when the barometer shows by a falling mercury a decreased air pressure. This also explains why water boils away more rapidly, quickly or at a lower temperature in the mountains, where the pressure of the air is less than on the seacoast or in the valleys. If sugar or salt is added to water the temperature of the boiling point is raised a few degrees. As a rule, as water is heated it will hold a greater amount of a substance in solution. A familiar exception is the fact that ice water will dissolve twice as much lime as boiling water. At the other extreme boiling water will dissolve seventeen times as much saltpeter as will cold water. But water varies in its solvent powers regardless of heat. One pound of water will hold two pounds of sugar in solution, but only two ounces of common salt.

Frankincense.

Frankincense is the purest of all incense. It is a gum resin from an Arabian terebinth. To obtain this a deep incision is made in the trunk and below it a narrow strip of bark peeled off. When the exudation has hardened, the incision is deepened. In about three months the resin has acquired a sufficient degree of consistency. It is gathered in large quantities and packed in goatskins. It was formerly believed that the trees which yielded frankincense were infested by winged serpents, and the only way to be rid of them and to get at the treasure was by burning gum styrax, an odoriferous balsam of aromatic smell. Frankincense was forbidden to be used for embalming, as it was sacred to sacrificial purposes. The Israelites were strictly prohibited from compounding it. Now it is used largely in Roman Catholic and high church ceremonies.

The Lay of the Hen.

Investigation of the capacity of hens to lay eggs results in the discovery that the egg production of hens decreases considerably after the age of four years. Thus a hen lays at the age of one year about 20 eggs; at the age of two years, about 120; at the age of three years, about 135; at the age of four years, about 115; at the age of five years, about 80, and at the age of six years, about 60. These figures go to show that hens should never be kept in the poultry yard more than four years, for after the lapse of this time they do not yield a proper return on the food they consume.

Great Value of Honey.

"Honey, one of the most nutritious and delicate of foods, should be eaten more than it is," writes a cooking expert. "Bought in the comb, it is bound to be unadulterated and will keep one free from sore throat and bronchial troubles. I know a number of ladies who use honey as a cosmetic. They apply it to the skin, rub it in well, then wash it off with hot water. The result is a finer complexion, a glowing color, a young, fresh look."—Birmingham Post.

Reassured.

"Did you hear that noise? What can it be?" demanded the janitor of the fashionable apartment house.

His wife went out into the hall and returned. "It was nothing but a rat," she said.

"Ah," sighed the janitor, greatly relieved, "I thought it was a child."—Bohemian.

A Close Fourth.

"My wife thinks a good deal of me."

"That's nice."

"Yes; next to the baby and the poodle and the rubber plant I'm all to the mustard with her."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

I wish I was as sure of anything as Tom Macaulay is of everything.—Lord Melbourne.

The Social Realm

Friendship's the fairest gem of earth,
Royal and grand, of heav'nly birth;
Intrinsic value naught exceeds,
Emulating all kindly deeds;
Nonpareil worth in it we trace,
Devoted to the human race.
Sweeter its voice than chimes of bells,
Happy the home wherein it dwells;
Inspiring, lifts our hearts above,
Plainly defined, it is true love.
—Mrs. S. W. Durgin.

Inauguration Day Plans

Sketches of the New Councilmen And Other Data Of Interest

The ceremonies attendant to inauguration day next Monday will not differ materially from other years. Promptly at 12 o'clock noon, Mayor Thompson will enter the Council chamber, preceded by City Messenger Harry W. Tirrell, City Clerk Harrison A. Keith and Rev. Ellery C. Butler, the chaplain of the day. By this time the members of the new City Council will have arrived and taken seats inside of the rail.

City Clerk Keith will preside over the Council until an organization is perfected. After prayer by the chaplain, the oath of office will be administered to the Mayor, Hon. James Thompson. A roll call will then be made of the City Council, and the oath of office administered to members.

Mayor Thompson will then be introduced and will deliver his inaugural address.

The City Council will organize by the election of a president, clerk of Council and committees, a city messsenger and city auditor. This will be by roll call. The oath of office will then be administed to the clerk and the Council will proceed to draw seats. It is customary to permit the old members to retain the same seats that they occupied last year. This over regular business will be in order.

There are several things to do. Sometimes they are done at the first meeting and sometimes at other meetings held later. One of these is to elect a member of the Woodward Board of Managers, and the other is to elect two trustees of the City Hospital. Both by ballot.

At the first meeting it is customary to offer orders to have the calendar printed to have rules printed, an order authorizing the City Treasurer to borrow money in anticipation of taxes, authorizing the Mayor to execute deeds of the Adams Temple and School fund, etc.

Some of these are adopted at the first meeting but usually they are referred to a special committee.

The rules of the preceding City Council are usually adopted and rule 21 is then suspended so that the council will not have to meet that evening.

As far as known there will be no opposition to the present officers of the City Council.

WORK ON SUNDAY

Boston Judge Decides What Will Not Be Permitted

NO ICE CREAM DELIVERY

Illegal to Move Scenery, Collect Offal, or Play in Hotel Orchestra-- Question as to Rights of Expressmen and Undertakers

Boston, Jan. 5.—The Sunday activities of the people of Boston will be checked in many important ways under decisions reached in the municipal court in connection with the cases brought under the enforcement of the Sunday laws, commonly known as the Massachusetts "Blue Laws."

Twelve hundred residents of Boston have been summoned into court as a result of the controversy between District Attorney Moran and Police Commissioner O'Meara on the question of violation of the Sunday statutes. The decisions of Special Justice Duff, who has been assigned to try the cases, were many and varied, and if they are sustained by the higher courts will signalize cessation in many directions of work which has been carried on Sundays in the past without interruption.

The court found, for instance, that the transfer of scenery and other theatrical effects from theatres after midnight of Saturday is not a work of necessity, which is permitted under the statutes, and that the moving of scenery, which is carried on by every theatre in Boston, must hereafter be done on some other day than Sunday.

The collection of offal from hotels on Sunday was declared unlawful on the fine distinction that it was collected, not because it was necessary feed for the swine, but because of the probability that it would spoil and become useless as a product if not collected on the Sabbath.

The playing of orchestras in the hotels of Boston on Sunday is likewise unlawful and it must be discontinued under the decision of the court. A fiddler, Gustave Fieder, who played last Sunday at the Hotel Thorndike, with other musicians, was convicted and fined $5 on the ground that his work was not a necessary work, or a charitable work, which is also permitted under the law.

Boston must do without the ice cream that is delivered by caterers on Sundays, as this was held by the court to be outside the law. Justice Duff left for the consideration of the entire municipal bench the far-reaching question of whether or not the transfer of personal baggage by express companies on Sunday is legal, but ruled provisionally that the transfer of a burial casket on the Sabbath was unlawful unless it was intended for the immediate use of the dead. Caskets prepared for deceased persons who were not to be buried until Tuesday should not be transported on the previous Sunday on the ground that it was not a necessary transfer.

The special committee on Sunday laws of the legislature, which has been sitting all summer, will, it is expected, make some drastic change in the present statute so that the present difficulties as to Sunday work will be eliminated.

Thinks Chinese Boycott Not Serious

Washington, Jan. 5.—Sir Chentung Liang Chen, the Chinese minister, had a conference at the state department with Secretary Root, at which the reported attempt to revive the anti-American boycott in China was touched upon. The minister expressed his belief that the agitation is confined to a few persons who always are disaffected and endeavoring to make trouble between China and other nations.

Alleged Poisoner Held

Chicago, Jan. 5.—A coroner's jury held Herman Belek, a fortune teller, who, it is said, in conjunction with Mrs. Vzral, the mother of three girls, poisoned the girls to obtain small sums of money for which their lives were insured. Mrs. Vzral committed suicide when it was made known to her that the deaths of her children were to be investigated.

To Discuss Bible Teachings

New York, Jan. 5.—The Bible teachers' training school of New York has projected an important discussion of the vital questions of Christianity to take place in this city next April. It will include a consideration of the virgin birth of Jesus Christ, the doctrine of the resurrection, and indeed, all of the debated questions respecting the incarnation.

Indiana Lowlands Under Water

Indianapolis, Jan. 5.—Southern Indiana is threatened with floods. From several places come reports of great numbers of persons moving out of the lowlands. Much suffering is already reported. For a hundred miles along the Ohio river the lowlands are under water.

Bribery Charge Against Councilman

Pittsburg, Jan. 5.—William A. Martin, a common councilman, has been placed on trial on a charge of misdemeanor, it being alleged he solicited and received a $70,000 bribe in connection with several ordinances of the Pittsburg and Tube City railway.

Indecent Performance Suppressed

Paris, Jan. 5.—The chief of police has stopped the performance of "A Dream of Egypt" which was given at the Moulin Rouge with the Marquise de Morny in the principal role.

REVOLVING DOOR CHASE.

Representative Gaines' Whirligig Pursuit of a Belligerent Agent.

"Waltz Me Around Again, Willie," has been changed to "Chase Me Around Again, Wesley," as the result of a bloodless but ludicrous affray between Representative John Wesley Gaines of Tennessee and a man in Washington who is known as a publicity agent, says the New York Herald's Washington correspondent.

As the story goes, Gaines and the publicity agent engaged in an altercation in the rotunda of a leading hotel which concluded in an invitation to Gaines to "step out on the sidewalk and take a licking." The alacrity with which the invitation was accepted somewhat discouraged Gaines' would be antagonist, who led the way toward the street.

When a big revolving door leading into Pennsylvania avenue was reached the publicity agent's courage shrunk completely. Instead of passing into the street he calmly followed the door around in a circle, the irate Gaines at his heels. Around and around went the pursued and the pursuer with ever increasing velocity, each in his separate compartment dragging his heels from under the door, following relentlessly upon his footsteps.

As the compartments flew by the open space leading into the hotel and into the street loud words resounded, only to be muffled a moment later as the compartment sped into the "tunnel" on either side of the doorway. Finally Gaines is reported to have become exhausted from the chase, the publicity agent vanished, and when the police arrived Gaines was found alone on the field of battle with a smoking revolving door in both hands.

A TALKING LAMP.

One of Two Unique Inventions For Chicago Electrical Show.

Two unique inventions have been secured by Managing Director Niesz for the electrical show to be held in the Coliseum at Chicago on Jan. 14 to 26. One of these is an incandescent lamp which becomes lighted when it is spoken to, and the other is a talking arc lamp, says the Chicago Post. They are the inventions of Frank Moulan. While there is no practical use to which either may be put, they demonstrate the wonders of electricity. The inventor says that his only hope for them would be as a last resort as a cure for inebriates, basing this on the theory that the individual who could see a lamp become lighted when he spoke to it or hear an arc lamp preach a sermon on intemperance would immediately come to the conclusion that he was bordering on delirium tremens.

The incandescent lamp that lights when spoken to, however, is a reality. The device is simple—just an ordinary telephone transmitter with a highly sensitive diaphragm which vibrates to such an extent when in contact with the human voice that it touches the wire that starts the motor for lights.

The speaking arc lamp also is a reality and simple in device. It is wired from a highly sensitive telephone transmitter into which the voice is injected, the sounds being more than audibly reproduced from the sputtering carbons of the lamp. To the layman the effect is startling, particularly in instances where the transmitter and the person talking are not in view.

BABOON FOR FRANCE.

Beast Too Old to Continue Bell Ringing Willed to Government.

A six foot baboon, twenty-three years old, has been willed to the government of France by Father Estorge of Lafayette, La., says a New Orleans special dispatch to the Chicago Inter Ocean.

The animal was for many years used as the bell ringer in the Catholic church at Lafayette, but as his age advanced he became ferocious and uncontrollable and was brought to New Orleans and placed in the City park zoo.

The park officials could not manage the beast, and under the terms of Father Estorge's orders he was shipped to the French government.

Concerning the New Year.

I do not care so very much about the wondrous string
Of aeroplanes, sun stoves and such the glad New Year may bring;
I'm quite content to walk on land or journey on the sea,
And as for fuel anthracite will do all right for me.
I wish they'd get to work awhile on strapless subway cars.

I'm told before the year is done that one may do the moon
And possibly the planets in a gasoline balloon;
That if a man has any thoughts worth sending out he can
Project them automatic'ly to friends in Hindustan,
But as I have no thoughts like that that I would fain make known
I wish somebody would invent a waitless telephone.

They say that in a month or two our laundries will be run
With power radiated from the spots upon the sun;
That Burbank will graft cheeses on his tubers, so he can Go out in his back yard and dig potatoes au gratin.
But I'll be little gladdened, though all these things come to pass—
What I most want invented is some thirty-five cent gas.

I do not care if some one hitches up a thunderstorm
And sells the heat to farmers to keep incubators warm;
I would not want to see a band in which the kettledrum
Played Mendelssohn cadenzas by the aid of radium.
New things in 1907 do not matter such a lot—
I only wish inventors would improve the things we've got.
—James J. Montague in New York American.

FOUND A HOLE FOR HIM.

Experience of a Fresh Young Man In His Start In Business.

Here is something that should appeal to every young man starting out in business: "When I came to New York," said a bright fellow to me, "I engaged by the year as entry clerk with a large dry goods house. I soon found out I couldn't get along with the superintendent, a dictatorial, domineering man. Being young and brash, I 'sassed' him, which made matters all the worse for me. At last my position became unbearable, and I quietly looked around for another place. The manager of a great grocery house asked where I worked and why I wanted to make a change. I told him in all frankness, and he asked me to come around in a few days. I guess I talked altogether too much. When I called he said, 'I have no place open at present, but I guess I can find a hole for you.' That was enough. I went back to my store and resigned.

"The next morning I presented myself before the manager of the grocery house. 'As I told you,' said he, 'I have no place open at present,' and walked away. 'But,' said I, 'didn't you tell me you would find a hole for me?' 'I did,' he answered back. 'Ain't you in it?' He then added, 'Mr. R., the superintendent of the firm you have been working for is my brother.' I have worked since then with my hands in my pockets, and the lesson took a good deal of the freshness out of me. It taught me to look before I leaped."—New York Press.

WEIGHT FLUCTUATIONS.

A Man May Gain and Lose Five Pounds In the Day.

"A dinner like this increases one's weight two and a half pounds," said a physiologist as he finished his more than generous meal. "An average dinner increases the weight two pounds two ounces. Did you ever consider how the weight fluctuates night and day?

"We lose in bed at night two pounds six ounces. Between breakfast and lunch we lose fourteen ounces. Between lunch and dinner we lose ten ounces more. Total loss, four pounds fourteen ounces. That goes on every day of our lives.

"At breakfast we gain one pound twelve ounces; at lunch, one pound; at dinner, as I said before, two pounds two ounces. Total gain, four pounds fourteen ounces.

"Thus, day by day, gaining nearly five pounds, our weight remains uniform. If we ate but a half or a third what we do, it is logical to suppose that our organs, digestive and so on, would have but half as much work to do and that our brains in consequence would be able to do twice as much. That is the logical supposition, and no doubt it is the correct one, but man is still too nearly animal to eat only what he needs. He insists upon eating till he can hold no more."

Saved by the Apostles' Creed.

The value of a religious education was once experienced by the skeptic Hume. He fell off a temporary bridge connecting old and new Edinburgh and sank in a bog. After many cries for assistance an old woman drew near and began to make preparations for saving him. But as soon as she saw who it was she would save she desisted and bade him stay where he was. "I am no atheist," protested Hume. "I assure you, good woman, you are mistaken." "Well, then, if you are not an atheist," she cried, "you can say your belief, and if you cannot do that I will be no aid to save an infidel." Hume accordingly, embogged in the swamp—de profundis—recited the Apostles' Creed and, having made no mistake in the recital, was duly saved by this severe Samaritan. If he had failed—

Exhibits In Law Cases.

What are known as "exhibits" in law cases range from sheets of paper to boilers and other large articles. At various times an omnibus, a motor car and a cab have been on view in the private roadway by the side of the London law courts, and as they could not be brought into the witness box the judge and jury have had to go out and inspect them in the open. One of the most ponderous "exhibits" of this kind was a large ship's boiler furnace, which was conveyed from Swansea for inspection.—London Standard.

Cool and Thoughtful.

"Yes," said the warden, "he was the coolest and most thoughtful convict who ever broke jail."

"You don't say!" exclaimed the visitor.

"Yes; he left behind him a note to the governor of the state beginning, 'I hope you will pardon me for the liberty I'm taking.'"—Catholic Standard and Times.

The Intention Was Good.

Governess—You're a naughty little girl, Christabel, to kick your cousin like that. Christabel—I didn't kick her. Governess—Oh, hush, dear! I saw you kick her several times. Christabel—I didn't. I missed her every time.—Punch.

Jumping at Conclusions.

"I see that the 'human ostrich' is no more. He's the chap who swallowed nails, needles and hatpins. And he chewed glass too."

"I see. He chewed so much glass that he got a pain."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

APPLE LOVER'S HOBBY

CHICAGOAN'S RECIPE FOR OPTIMISM

Charles E. Tomlinson, Who Is Paying All Expenses of Spreading His Apple Propaganda, Says Apples Are God's Own Medicine and Claims Thousands Have Been Helped by Them—Wants Clubs Founded.

Charles E. Tomlinson, a wealthy young Chicagoan, who for a week expounded the "apple club" idea in New York, left town recently for Boston, where he intended to spring apples and optimism on the Hub. Before departing he declared at his hotel that the literature he has sent out regarding his particular hobby, together with his personal efforts, has already gained 1,000 new members in the New York city "orchard" for the Apple Club of America, which had its inception in the Windy City, where he belongs, says the New York Times.

To be an appleite you must either have or acquire an appetite for apples, for you must first take a solemn oath to assimilate at least one apple a day. You also have to pledge yourself to urge all your friends to join the city or village "orchard" to which you have sworn allegiance.

Tomlinson, leading spirit of the Apple club, is a normal looking man of thirty or so, who wears good clothes and whose present mission in life is to talk apples and the sure benefits to be derived from their consumption. If eating one apple a day will make a person healthy Tomlinson's ruddy cheeks and stalwart frame would indicate that his daily allowance is at least three pippins. When he received interviewers he at once extended to them hospitality in the shape of a Maiden's Blush apiece.

"May I ask, Mr. Tomlinson, if you are in the apple business?" politely inquired one reporter. Mr. Tomlinson smiled.

"Not exactly," said he. "That is, I'm not in the business except to get people to eat apples for their own good, you know. Apples are God's own medicine. You'd be surprised to know how much good there is tied up inside an apple. I have come to realize it, and while traveling over the world on a pleasure trip I am now making I am going to send out thousands of circulars about apples and do all the talking for them I can."

Mr. Tomlinson said he was paying all the expenses of spreading the apple propaganda to the benighted and he had derived a lot of fun out of his apple apostleship.

"People sometimes look at me and listen to me as though they thought me a trifle dippy in the upper story," he observed thoughtfully. "Sometimes, in fact, I almost think so myself, but honestly I'm not. [With great frankness.] I'll only confess to a mania for apples and getting folks to eat them regularly. I'd like to have you chaps become converts and help the good thing along among your friends.

"Apples breed optimism, energy, cheerfulness and ambition. There's no mistaking it. You have an apple analyzed by a chemist some day and find out what it contains. You'll be more interested if you find out for yourself. Ask any physician what he thinks about apples as a food. Ask any member of the Apple Club of America."

"Are dried apples equally good?" interrupted one of the interviewers.

"Naw," said Mr. Tomlinson, with great disgust. "They won't do. You've got to eat the original fruit, one good fresh specimen a day at least, and you've got to stick to it. I want to say, too, that lemons are barred."

"Do you have to have faith in the apple when you eat it?" was inquired.

"Not necessarily," said the apple's advocate, in no wit embarrassed, "although that may possibly help some in the case of a confirmed groucher who wants to get cured. But even without faith I've known of old dyspeptic bachelors, victims of an epicurean existence, who were cured of their tantrums through eating apples regularly. Apples cure the worst cases of pessimism that ever were. It don't matter whether you believe in 'em or not."

Mr. Tomlinson's circulars say:

APPLE CLUB OF AMERICA.
The Rookery, Chicago.

Dear Friend—You are hereby invited to join the Apple Club of America and to share in its many benefits. It will cost you nothing to join, and there are no dues.

Few people apparently know the sovereign virtues of apples. One eaten daily is almost a guarantee of good health to the normal person if he obeys the simple rules of life. One apple eaten daily will positively make you a cheerful optimist. The apple is one of Mother Nature's own medicines. The only requirements for membership in the Apple Club of America are that you solemnly promise yourself to eat at least one fresh, ripe apple every day and that you try to get all your friends to take this pledge.

The apple club idea originated in Chicago and has proved a great success. Branches of the club, known as orchards, have been formed in several western cities. Some of the clubs hold regular meetings, and while apples are eaten and sweet cider drunk at these social gatherings topics of the day are discussed. Apple buttons are now worn by hundreds of people in Chicago.

The Apple Club of America hopes to gain a quarter of a million members in New York city during the coming year. If you will try the apple idea for one week you will take the pledge and become its ardent supporter.

COPPERS RUSH UPWARDS

Record Day of Dealings on the Boston Stock Exchange

Boston, Jan. 5.—As a breaker of records, business on the Boston Stock Exchange yesterday was considered the most extraordinary in the history of speculation in Boston. To begin with, the number of shares of stock dealt in was the greatest in the history of the exchange, a total of 214,531, which was 23,901 shares more than on the previous high record day, Feb. 20, 1899.

The transactions in Trinity copper alone, yesterday, 73,892 shares, were heavier than the average day's trading in the entire list of stocks dealt in on the Boston exchange.

The last sale Thursday afternoon of Trinity was at 29½. Buying orders in brokers' offices accumulated to such an extent that the rush to purchase and the absence of orders to sell carried the opening price to 32. From this it advanced by leaps and bounds until it struck 39 7-8, within two points of the highest price recorded.

Trinity's extraordinary performance, together with the announcement by Mr. Lawson that he would not raid the Boston coppers or suffer any one else to do so if he could help it, led to a broad and general speculation in the copper stocks, and the public fairly took the bit in its teeth and ran away with the market.

Since the close of the Boston stock market last Saturday the increase in capital value of 15 of the active Boston copper stocks is $22,846,549, which seems almost incredible.

Laws Disobeyed at Lynn

Lynn, Mass., Jan. 5.—A move for strict enforcement of the Sunday observance laws and various other statutes was made last night by Mayor Barney when he notified Chief of Police Burckes that last Sunday, while passing through Central square, he noticed 21 retail stores open and doing business in violation of the law. This lax observance of the law, said Barney, must be stopped immediately. The mayor also calls attention to a number of other practices which have been apparently overlooked by the police.

Juryman Received a Bribe

Boston, Jan. 5.—Matthew F. Killion, who was convicted by a jury of accepting a bribe of $100 from William J. Hartnett, now a fugitive from justice, while serving as a juror in the Crocker will case in April, 1904, was sentenced to the house of correction for two years. A bill of exceptions was allowed by Judge Sherman, who stayed the sentence pending the action of the supreme court on the exceptions. Killion was released under bail of $5000.

Grave Charge Is Modified

Rutland, Vt., Jan. 5.—The charge of assault with intent to kill, upon which Andrew Farrell was arraigned as an outcome of the shooting of Mrs. Charles Gilmore during a celebration in Ira following Mrs. Gilmore's wedding, was changed to simple assault, upon which Farrell was bound over to the county court under a bond of $1000. The testimony of the witnesses failed to show that Farrell had intentionally or maliciously fired the shot.

Receivers For Wire Corporation

New Haven, Jan. 5.—H. S. Hotchkiss and F. T. Farnsworth have been appointed permanent receivers of the National Wire corporation. The liabilities of the concern are placed at $3,000,000. By mutual agreement the receivers will carry on the business for at least four months, before which time it is thought a reorganization will be effected.

Rights of Japanese Children

Washington, Jan. 5.—The department of justice will soon file in the United States courts of San Francisco a bill in equity, asking the court to enforce the provisions of the existing treaty between the United States and Japan, which, in effect, it is asserted, guarantees to Japanese children the same rights in the public schools of the United States as are accorded to children of all parents.

Arrest of a Bankrupt

New York, Jan. 5.—A. H. Fleischer, a skirt manufacturer, against whom a petition in bankruptcy was filed last Monday, was arrested and later released under $5000 bail. Information furnished by the Merchants' Protective association alleged that large quantities of merchandise had been removed from Fleischer's place and that Fleischer was preparing to leave the jurisdiction of the court.

Steam Fitters' Demands Granted

Pittsburg, Jan. 5.—A strike of over 1000 steamfitters and their helpers in the Pittsburg district was averted when an advance in wages of 25 cents a day was granted. At the expiration of the 1906 scale the men demanded an increase in wages. Several conferences were held without adjusting the differences and the men had voted to strike.

Disaster Blamed on Operator

Topeka, Jan. 5.—General Superintendent Tinsman and Division Superintendent Rourke of the Rock Island railroad have placed responsibility for the wreck at Volland, where more than 30 persons were killed, on John Lynes, aged 19, telegraph operator at Volland, where the trains were to have passed. Lynes is in custody at Alma.

Vesuvius Mud Avalanches

Naples, Jan. 5.—The recent heavy rains have caused enormous avalanches of mud to start from the top of Mount Vesuvius, which eventually spread out over several miles. Trees in the path were uprooted and farm buildings were totally destroyed. A number of animals were killed, but no people lost their lives.

A BOLD PROJECT.

The Scheme by Which Malet Nearly Captured Paris In 1812.

A bold scheme was that engineered by Malet, a Frenchman. Malet had been a republican general, was ruined by the rise of Napoleon, betook himself to plotting, was arrested and finally put in a madhouse. During the emperor's absence in Russia in 1812 Malet escaped one night from his prison, obtained a general's uniform and with an accomplice dressed as an aid-de-camp made his way to the prison of La Force, where the unsuspecting governor released on his command two other ex-republicans, Generals Laborie and Guidal, prisoners on a like charge to his own. Together they proceeded to a neighboring barracks, announced to the commandant that Napoleon was dead and that they were acting by the decree of the senate, ordered the troops to be paraded and dispatched bodies of men upon various duties. Some arrested Savary, the minister of police; others the police prefect. Another battalion seized the Hotel de Ville. Everybody obeyed Malet implicitly, even the prefect of the Seine, and he would undoubtedly have gained possession of Paris had he not been recognized by Laborde, chief of the military police, as an escaped prisoner. He was arrested after a scuffle, the plot was unraveled, and in due course Malet, with twenty-three of his abettors, was shot.

HOW WATER ACTS.

Its Expansion and Contraction and Its Solvent Powers.

Water contracts as it falls from the normal boiling point, 212 degrees, until it reaches 39 degrees. Below that degree it expands, and at 32 degrees, the freezing point, it will expand enough to burst pipes and vessels holding it.

When the pressure of the air is below normal, water boils at a lower temperature than 212 degrees. This is noticed before a rain, when the barometer shows by a falling mercury a decreased air pressure. This also explains why water boils away more rapidly, quickly or at a lower temperature in the mountains, where the pressure of the air is less than on the seacoast or in the valleys. If sugar or salt is added to water the temperature of the boiling point is raised a few degrees. As a rule, as water is heated it will hold a greater amount of a substance in solution. A familiar exception is the fact that ice water will dissolve twice as much lime as boiling water. At the other extreme boiling water will dissolve seventeen times as much saltpeter as will cold water. But water varies in its solvent powers regardless of heat. One pound of water will hold two pounds of sugar in solution, but only two ounces of common salt.

Frankincense.

Frankincense is the purest of all incense. It is a gum resin from an Arabian terebinth. To obtain this a deep incision is made in the trunk and below it a narrow strip of bark peeled off. When the exudation has hardened, the incision is deepened. In about three months the resin has acquired a sufficient degree of consistency. It is gathered in large quantities and packed in goatskins. It was formerly believed that the trees which yielded frankincense were infested by winged serpents, and the only way to be rid of them and to get at the treasure was by burning gum styrax, an odoriferous balsam of aromatic smell. Frankincense was forbidden to be used for embalming, as it was sacred to sacrificial purposes. The Israelites were strictly prohibited from compounding it. Now it is used largely in Roman Catholic and high church ceremonies.

The Lay of the Hen.

Investigation of the capacity of hens to lay eggs results in the discovery that the egg production of hens decreases considerably after the age of four years. Thus a hen lays at the age of one year about 20 eggs; at the age of two years, about 120; at the age of three years, about 135; at the age of four years, about 115; at the age of five years, about 80, and at the age of six years, about 60. These figures go to show that hens should never be kept in the poultry yard more than four years, for after the lapse of this time they do not yield a proper return on the food they consume.

Great Value of Honey.

"Honey, one of the most nutritious and delicate of foods, should be eaten more than it is," writes a cooking expert. "Bought in the comb, it is bound to be unadulterated and will keep one free from sore throat and bronchial troubles. I know a number of ladies who use honey as a cosmetic. They apply it to the skin, rub it in well, then wash it off with hot water. The result is a finer complexion, a glowing color, a young, fresh look."—Birmingham Post.

Reassured.

"Did you hear that noise? What can it be?" demanded the janitor of the fashionable apartment house.

His wife went out into the hall and returned. "It was nothing but a rat," she said.

"Ah," sighed the janitor, greatly relieved, "I thought it was a child."—Bohemian.

A Close Fourth.

"My wife thinks a good deal of me."

"That's nice."

"Yes; next to the baby and the poodle and the rubber plant I'm all to the mustard with her."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

I wish I was as sure of anything as Tom Macaulay is of everything.—Lord Melbourne.

GOOD AFTERNOON.

Quincy does not have to be forced into doing the right thing, but there are some cities that do. The Governors Council has granted authority to Dr. Austin J. Peters, the State cattle commissioner, to order the dogs muzzled or restrained in any town or city of the Commonwealth where such action, in his opinion is necessary, and where the local authorities refuse or fail to take action in the matter.

Verdict Stands.

Chief Justice Aiken of the Norfolk Superior court has denied the motion of defendant for a new trial in the case of Benedict Benson vs. Frank E. Hall. The jury gave a verdict of $910, which included $85 for extras. The chief justice lopped off the extras after reading the testimony, but the verdict stands.

Exceptions Filed.

John T. Cavanagh has filed exceptions to the finding made against him last month in the Superior court in favor of Henry L. Kincaide, in an action to recover a balance for furniture, and the case will probably go to the Supreme court on questions of law raised at the trial, one of them being the right of plaintiff's attorney to summon the defendant's wife as a witness to prove delivery of the furniture.

"Biblical Beginning."

Dr. Hardy begins tomorrow a series of sermons on "Biblical Beginnings" at Bethany Church which ought to attract wide attention. He will discuss the beginnings of the world, of man, of sin, and of the universal hersey, themes dealing with fundamental problems of life. The International Sunday School lessons on Genesis are arousing intense interest in biblical criticism and the relation of the Bible to science and philosophy. Dr. Hardy's acquaintance with the latest phases of theistic and philosophical thought well qualify him for the task he has undertaken.

Important Meeting.

A Juvenile Court Day will be held at Potter hall, New Century building, 177 Huntington avenue, Boston, on Saturday afternoon, January 12, at 2.30 o'clock, under the auspices of the Boston Section, Council of Jewish Women; the Civics Department of the Massachusetts State Federation of Women's clubs; and the Fathers and Mothers club of Boston. Mr. Joseph Lee president of the Massachusetts Civic league, and Mr. Warren F. Spaulding of the Massachusetts Prison association, will speak on "Juvenile Court Conditions," in Boston and Massachusetts. All persons interested in this work, are invited to be present.

Large Real Estate Sales.

C. H. Johnson, the well known real estate broker, reports the following sales:

A portion of the triangular lot corner of School and Granite street, property of Mrs. A. W. Wood, to Balfour & Sons of Boston, who will erect upon the same at once a large factory for the manufacture of women's garments, giving employment to a number of people.

The large estate on Washington street near Union street, known as the Charles Newcomb estate, comprising 1 1-2 acres of land, 10-room house and stable, to Freeman W. Grant of Quincy, who will develop the same.

Lot of about 10,000 feet on Brook road, South Quincy, to Francis Clinton of Quincy.

Two-apartment house and about 8,000 feet of land on Granite street, corner of Milton street, Dorchester, to Carrie F. Levis of Quincy, who buys for investment.

—Ex-Mayor Josiah Quincy says he cannot pay his debts and has gone into bankruptcy. He declares that his total liabilities are about $150,000.

—Edwin Upton Curtis, former mayor of Boston, was nominated on Thursday by President Roosevelt to be United States sub-treasurer at Boston.

MANY IDEAS

On Abolishing Grade Crossing At Saville and Water Streets

The City Solicitor will represent the city of Quincy on Monday, at the hearing before the Superior court at Dedham on the petition of the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R. for the appointment of a commission to determine if safety and convenience demand that the grade crossings at Saville and Water streets should be abolished, and if so, to determine how it shall be done. The Citizens' Association and Board of Trade will also be represented.

It is understood that no plans will be presented at this hearing, as it is but a preliminary one, but that they will be presented to the commission if one is appointed.

There are many views as to how these grade crossings should be abolished, some favoring the depressing of the tracks, and others favoring the raising of the tracks that the streets may be under them. In view of the fact that there is at present quite a heavy grade on the railroad between Quincy Adams and Braintree it would seem that the only solution would be to raise the tracks so as to provide for Water street at least, beneath them.

It was during Mayor Keith's administration that what seemed like a feasible plan to abolish the crossing at Quincy Adams was drawn up, but at that time the railroad was not ready to do anything about changing the grade.

Mr. Keith's plan closed up the crossing near the Quincy Adams depot, partically abolishing it as Water street was ended on each side of the tracks. It provided, however, for a new street to start in near the street railway turnout on Water street and to run in a south easterly direction crossing the tracks by an overhead bridge south of the station and intersecting Franklin street not far from Pearl street.

There are some who argue that it would be a good thing to treat Saville street in the same way and abolish it altogether, but several improvements would be required in that event from the railroad.

It must be born in mind that the railroad is planning for four tracks through Quincy, and that when constructed people cannot cross the railroad even at stations.

Passengers from Boston will be landed on the west side of the track. There should be at least two subways to the east side, where the depot is now located one to accommodate the people who use Depot street, and one for those who use Saville street.

For years there has been a necessity for better connection with Granite street. It is surprising the number of people who go through Sheppard's coal yard to and from the depot. If the railroad could be crowded over toward Irving place, and a wide walk or street built on the east side to the depot it would be appreciated.

At the same time Upland road should be extended in nearly a straight line intersecting Granite street near Goffe street. This would necessitate the moving of the large house at the corner of Saville street and Irving place and the discontinuation of parts of Irving place.

If the railroad was allowed to close Saville street it should be willing to raise the Granite street bridge about ten feet, allowing the city to fill in the hollow below the bridge three or four feet. This would be a great improvement to Granite street, and would allow loaded teams to pass beneath the bridge. The railroad should also be willing to widen out the Dimmock street bridge to the full width of street.

Should the Water street crossing be closed as suggested in the Keith plan, there would be the need of a wide thoroughfare parallel and near the railroad, between Water street and School street. This could be accomplished by extending Marsh street to Water opposite Liberty street. Some day Marsh street should also be extended to Granite street near Whitwell street.

If the new overhead bridge is south of Water street it may accommodate those who are clamoring for a new crossing near that point.

The Metropolitan Park Commission would undoubtedly favor raising the tracks north of Presidents bridge, because they desire to continue the new Furnace Brook parkway beneath the railroad to Merrymount park. It might not be feasible, however, to raise the Adams street or Presidents bridge.

If it is decided best to build a bridge over the railroad at Saville street, which Presidents Hill people would like, it would be necessary to grade Saville street from Hancock street to the bridge and the grade would be heavy. At the same time it would close the approach to the station and make it necessary to open a new street on one side or the other of Saville street.

The close proximity of the Quincy station, the grain store, and G. B. Bates block to Saville street all complicate the abolition of the crossing. It would not be surprising for these reasons if the railroad favored raising the tracks both at Saville street and Water street.

The interment was at Mt. Wollaston.

—The high prices of lumber arouse suspicion that a trust exists in that trade also, and a resolution is now before Congress directing the secretary of commerce and labor to inquire into the matter. This attributing of high prices to the trusts may be all right to an extent, but it is an inadequate explanation, since high and rising prices are practically universal, while monopoly has certainly not become universal. And in the lumber trade especially, what of the special causes such as the slaughter of limited forest areas and the unprecede[illegible] building activity?

ance and address and should make a valuable member of the City Council.

JESSE F. CURTIS

Is almost too well known to the residents of Ward One to need any extended introduction as he was born in this city and has always made his home here. He has never been a seeker after public office and that of Councilman is his first.

He first saw the light of day Nov. 11, 1853. His early education was received at the Adams school: graduating from there he entered the High school where he completed his schooling.

Since leaving school he has been employed as a bookkeeper and for the past 23 years he has been chief auditor for Swift & Co. in the eastern states.

During his younger days he "be ran with the machine" for many years being a member of the old Washington M. French Hose Co., and he is at present the secretary-treasurer of the veterans of that organization.

In addition to this organization he is a member of Rural lodge, A. F. & A. M.; St. Stephens Chapter, R, A. M.; South Shore Commandery, Knights Templar, Mt. Wollaston lodge, I. O. O. F., George L. Gill, Rebekah lodge, and Merry Mount lodge, Knights of Honor.

MICHAEL T. WALSH

Is one of the best known young men of the city. He will represent Ward Two, the Quincy Point ward, in the new City Council. He was born in Quincy June 9, 1880, and has always made his home here. He attended the public schools of the city and completed his education at the High school where he took the business course.

Leaving school he entered the employ of C. C. Hearn, the druggist, where he remained several years. He then accepted a position with Wood, Pollard & Co of Boston, with whom he also remained several years. He then became interested in the company that was formed to manufacture translucent fabric cloth where he is now located.

He is president of Division 18, A. O. H., and also is an officer of Quincy Council Knights of Columbus. When a young man he was a member of the Quincy Debating club and the experience he gained there, will be of service to him as a councilman.

JOSEPH MCKINNON.

Who will be one of the representatives from the Quincy Point ward in the City Council of 1907, was born in Sydney, Cape Britian, Jan. 6, 1874, and will therefore be 33 years of age the day before inauguration day. He came to Charlestown, Mass., in 1880, where he received his early education. He remained there until 1398, when he enlisted in Co. A. 5th Mass. U. S. V. with which company he served during the Spanish war.

He removed to Quincy in 1901 and has been a resident in this city since that time. He is at present employed as sub-foreman in the electrical department at the Fore River Shipbuilding Co. plant. He is a member of Ensign Worth Bagley Camp, L. S. W. V., and of the Eagles. He is married and has two children, a boy and girl.

ALEXANDER FALCONER.

The new member of the Council of 1907 from South Quincy was born in Arberdeen, Scotland, in 1853, and educated in the public schools of his native city, being graduated from the Mechanics Institution, a branch of the South Kensington school of Science and Art, London. Coming to this country in 1875, landing in New York he worked at his trade as a stonecutter, moving to Quincy in 1881. He early appreciated the educational advantages of his adopted country by taking a course of business training at Commer's business college, Boston. In 1886 he formed a partnership with the late Alexander Marnock as Granite dealers and manufacturers. He still continues in that business and is now of the well known firm of Falconer & Co., who are well and favorably known to the trade wherever Quincy Granite is used for memorial work.

He also stands for the best of citizenship and good government, is a member of the No-License League, the Citizens' Association, a director of the Young Men's Christian Association, also a trustee of the City Hospital. He is affiliated with several benefit and fraternal associations being a member of Clan McGregor, treasurer of Rural Lodge, F. A. M., a member of St. Stephens, R. A. M., South Shore Commandery, K. T., and Boston Council of Royal and Select Masters. He owns considerable real estate and is one of South Quincy's heavy taxpayers. Being a member of the City Council he will safeguard the best interests of the taxpayers and the City of Quincy.

JEREMIAH CURTAIN, JR.

One of the new members of the City Council from the West Quincy ward, is well and favorably known in that section of the city, where he has resided for the past 22 years.

He was born in Ireland in 1867 and received his education in his native place. At the age of 17 years he came to America to join his father who was already here. He came directly to Quincy and has resided here ever since.

His first occupation was as a clerk in a grocery and provision store. From there he worked for a time at the granite business and followed various occupations until seven or eight years ago when he opened a grocery and provision store of his own. This business he is now engaged in, his store being located on Willard street. He is a member of St. Francis court of Foresters and Divi-4, A. O. H.

ROBERT T. TEASDALE.

One of the new members of the City Council of 1907 from West Quincy, is probably one of the best known residents of that section of the city, having lived there all his life. He was born in Quincy in 1866 and educated in the public schools of the town.

Leaving school he entered the employ of the old Warren Powder Co. and he has been in that business ever since. Leaving this company he entered the employ of the American Powder Co., whose representative he has been in this city for many years. He is also agent for all polishing supplies.

He was one of the original members of the St. Mary's Catholic Total Abstinence Society and has always retained his membership in that organization. He is also a member of St. Francis Court of Foresters and Quincy Council, Knights of Columbus and the Elks. His many friends have no doubt but what he will give a good account of himself in the City Council.

VERNAN SHERMAN BROKAW

One of the two new members of the City Council from Wollaston for 1907, has been a resident of that section of the city since 1901. His business is that of representative for a wholesale leather house of Philadelphia and Boston. He was born in Ionia, Mich., Feb. 4, 1870, and spent his boyhood days at Litchfield, Minn. It was here that he received his education and after graduating from the High school of that city he taught school for one term and then accepted a position as bookkeeper and teller in the Meeker County bank, where he remained four years. During the same four years he served as coporal in Co. H, 1st Regt. Minnesota State National Guards.

He then traveled through the west and south for nine years representing a wholesale leather house of New York city. In 1901, he removed to Wollaston.

He is a member of Golden Fleece lodge, A. F. and A. M., of Litchfield, Minn.; the Order of Eastern Star, Knights of Pythias' Wollaston tennis and whist clubs, and American whist club of Boston.

He is also a member of the Wollaston Glee club and besides his work in the glee club, frequently sings with the Wollaston Masonic quartette. Is somewhat of a baseball crank and fond of all athletics. Mr. Brokaw's wide and varied experience should make him a valuable member of the City Council.

REDNOR P. COOMBS.

The new member of the City Council from the Atlantic ward, is well and favorably known in that section of the city where he has resided for many years. He was born in Isleboro, Me., June 27, 1873, and came to Quincy when but 7 years of age, and has resided her ever since. He received his education at the public schools of the city and at High school.

Leaving school he entered the employ of his father who carried on a provision business. This line of work he has followed ever since being at present a salesman for a well known wholesale packing firm. His business takes him to all parts of the city so that he is throughly conversant with all sections. The office of councilman is his first public trust.

WALTER S. PINKHAM

One of the new members of the Council of 1907 from the Wollaston ward, is no novice in City Council business, for he has already served five years in that body. He was first elected in the year 1895 from Ward Five and he was returned for the years 1896, 1897, 1898 and 1899.

During his term of service he served four years on the Committee on Sewers and Drains, two years on the Finance Committee and one year on the Committee on Legislative Matters. In 1898 he was president.

Mr. Pinkham was born in Cambridge, Mass., Aug. 21, 1865. He came to Wollaston with his parents in 1870 and has since made his home there. He attended the public schools of Quincy, fitting for college at the Adams Academy. He entered Harvard in 1883 and was graduated in 1887 a P. B. K. man. He then entered Harvard law school and in 1890 he received the degrees of A. M. and L. L. B. That same year he was admitted to the bar and the following year opened an office in Boston. He is a prominent member of the Citizens' Association and practically will be the only representative of that organization in the Council of 1907.

Fire Alarm Improvements

Work is progressing favorably separating fire alarm circuit No. 1 into two circuits and connecting up the new boxes which will be placed on iron posts. These boxes are 35, 23, 26 and 126. They are the very latest thing in fire alarm boxes and are known as succession boxes

This means that should two boxes be pulled about the same time there will be no confusion of the alarm, and yet both boxes will give an alarm.

As soon as the one pulled first gets through sounding the second box will begin and sound its signal.

Under the so called non-interferring boxes now in use, if two boxes were pulled about the same time, one would be cut out entirely.

Another advantage is that each box will have several pairs of wires running to it so that should one circuit get out of order it would be but the work of a few minutes to open the rear of the box and cut it into another circuit.

It might also be added that the boxes in what is known as the danger district will be on separate circuits.

The four boxes taken from Hancock street, will have new recording dials placed upon them and the boxes put up at different sections at Houghs Neck, so that that section will have better protection.

At the present time there is but one box at Houghs Neck, and when that box is pulled it is an open question in which direction the driver of the apparatus shall go to find the fire.

It might also be added that under the new arrangement the Houghs Neck boxes will be upon a circuit by themselves.

The new work is being done by the Gamewell Co., under the direction of Mr. Gavin, the superintendent of fire alarm.

Theta Sigma Phi.

A largely attended dancing party was held at Colonial hall last evening by the Theta Sigma Phi society of the High school. The program started with a grand march led by Charles Hogan and Miss Mary King. BRAINTREE.

Mr. W. H. Paine, retiring commander of Camp 32, S. of V., entertained the members of the Camp at his home on Liberty street, Randolph, Friday evening.

Hook and Ladder Company No. 2 had an oyster supper at the engine house last Tuesday evening. The captain of hose company No. 2 and the engineers were the invited guests. Mr. E. I. Tracey had charge of the supper which was pronounced fine.

Sixteen members of the milk dealers' association of Braintree enjoyed a fine turkey supper at the house of Joseph Foster, Mayflower Park, last Tuesday evening.

The Noah Torrey school was closed Thursday in order to fumigate the building as several cases of diphtheria have been reported.

Mr. H. W. Simonds of Tremont street is out again having recovered from congestion of the lungs. He will be able to resume his duties in a few days.

Leo Brett, returned to Brown university, Providence, R. I., on Wednesday after a ten days' vacation spent with his parents, Dr. and Mrs. F. W. Brett.

Thomas Killian of Union street has the sympathy of the community during his operation and illness and it is earnestly hoped he may very soon recover.

Many will be pleased to notice the new pump which has recently been placed in position in South Braintree square.

The death of William S. Chessman of Holbrook, which took place at his late home on Linfield street, was a great shock to his many friends in this as well as his native town. His widow will well be remembered by many as Miss Jessie Benham, formerly of this town. Sympathy is extended to the bereaved ones.

The Thayer Sunday school class held its annual meeting at the home of Mrs. Caldwell, Vine street on Thursday afternoon. A pleasant time was enjoyed by all.

Rev. Melvin S. Nash, pastor of the Universalist church, will give an illustrated lecture on Italy Sunday evening.

Bradford Y. Knight of Shaw street has sold his motor boat to Brockton parties. We understand he intends building a larger boat, with a cabin, for the coming season.

The police have been unable to find any trace of the motor boat owned by Mr. Horte of Liberty street and which was stolen from its moorings some weeks ago.

Dr. W. F. Holmes of Randolph announced in the last issue of the Register and News that commencing, Jan. 1, he would charge the old schedule of fees. Dec. 1, 1905, the doctors of Randolph, Holbrook and Braintree adopted a schedule of prices which has been adhered to. Doctor Holmes evidently believes in being independent.

Monday, Jan. 7th, in the Superior court at Dedham, the petition of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad Company for alterations of grade crossings in Braintree, will be considered. The crossings are School street, Elm street, River street and Union street. Many Braintree citizens will be present, and we trust speak in favor of alterations.

Miss Mary K. Morton, teacher of commercial branches in the High school, has been absent during the week and now has typhoid fever. It will be several weeks before she can return and a substitute teacher will be provided.

The Noah Torrey school was closed Thursday morning on account of a case of diphtheria. The building was then fumigated and the floors washed with disinfectant fluid.

Medical inspection in the public schools is resulting as a safe guard to the children. Already some of them have been sent home for medical treatment.

Linas, the four-year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Uimothy F. White, narrowly escaped death by drowning on Friday. The boy with a companion was playing near the dam on Elliot street when young White fell into the water, which is about ten feet deep at that place. His young companion gave the alarm and Joseph Howe rushed to the scene, jumped in and pulled the boy out just as he was going down for the last time.

Considerable interest is manifested, by lovers of horses, in the four young trotters which are being broken and trained by Millard F. Drinkwater. They were brought here from Kentucky by Col. A. C. Drinkwater about two months ago and each day may be seen upon our streets. These handsome future prize winners were sired by Bingen, Sammeto and Cazadero. Two by the latter which is owned by Mr. W. H. Foss of South Braintree. One of Cazadero's gives strong indications of being the fastest and best horse the Drinkwaters ever owned.

John Powers of this place was installed chief ranger of Court Monatiquot No. 150 Foresters of America at Weymouth Tuesday evening.

The annual meeting of the Union Veteran Firemen's association will held at the headquarters Allen stree next Friday evening.

The Observer today enters upon its thirtieth year with good courage. During the past year quite a large gain has been made in the list of subscribers and weekly sales, which, combined with a liberal amount of advertising tends to make this paper stronger and better.

Fatality at The Shipyard

William Trim, an employe at the Fore River shipyard, was killed yesterday afternoon by being struck on the head with a piece of angle iron. He was at work in the hole of the Creole when a piece of angle iron fell from the upper deck striking him on the head.

It was with some difficulty that he was taken to the upper deck where he expired in a few minutes.

The body was viewed by Medical Examiner Jones and turned over to an undertaker. The unfortunate man was about 42 years of age. His home was in South Royalston where he had a wife.

Mrs. Trim was notified and is expected in Quincy today.

STRONG PROTEST

Jamestown Exposition Program Is Much Too Warlike

A SHOCK TO AMERICANS

Prominent Members of Advisory Board Would Have Money Appropriated to Show "Splendors of War" Withdrawn

Boston, Jan. 5.—A lengthy protest by members of the advisory board of the Jamestown Exposition against "the diversion of the exposition to the service of militarism" was made public here last night. The protest is made by President Wright of Clark college, E. D. Mead and Rev. E. E. Hale, D. D., of Boston, Cardinal Gibbons of Baltimore, President Mitchell of the United Mine Workers of America, Miss Jane Addams of Chicago, Miss M. C. Thomas, president of Bryn Mawr college, and many other persons of note. The document in part is as follows:

"The extravagant militarism of the program of the coming Jamestown Exposition, as developed and disclosed during the last few months, is a profound shock to a great body of the American people. In one of the official issues of the official organ of the exposition there is published conspicuously a list of 'attractions' of the coming exposition. Eighteen of the items, nearly all relating to the proposed naval and military display, are given."

The protest continues: "We believe that the knowledge of this program has come to three-quarters of the American people as a great surprise. It is a program utterly different from that given when the plan of the Jamestown Exposition was first submitted to the public, when a large body of men and women whom we honor were, with ourselves, invited to a place upon its advisory board, and when the various states were asked for and granted large financial support to insure its success.

"That an international naval and military celebration was to have conspicuous place in the exposition's program, as provided for by congress in granting aid for that purpose in 1905, was well known, and was conventionally proper; but, the purpose to make this great exposition primarily a naval and military spectacle, to intoxicate the American people for six months by a 'great living picture of war with all of its enticing splendors,' encouraging the notion that war is a thing of splendor, a pageant and a game, instead of a horror, and today almost invariably a crime, was not known, was not avowed and has clearly been a gradually evolving purpose, whose carrying out, as now advertised, can only work immense mischief to the country. We solemnly protest against it.

"Could our counsel at this hour avail it would be that the greater part of the amount now appropriated for showing the American people 'the splendors of war' be withdrawn from that office, whether the apportionment of money be by the exposition's authority or congressional authority, and devoted to showing them the splendors of justice.

"This exposition is to open the first of May. At that very time the representatives of all the nations of the world will probably be assembling at The Hague for the second great international peace conference, and the period of that august assembly's deliberations in behalf of the world's national organization and permanent peace will be precisely coincident with the period of the military and naval excesses planned by Americans for Hampton Roads. The nations are summoned to the Old World to join in moving upward and onward, as they are invited to the New World to join in moving backward and downward.

"It is an awful contrast—and to the great body of those in the republic who revere the memory and cherish the aspirations of its founders its fulfilment would be the crowning humiliation.

"We appeal to all those in any way responsibly associated with the coming exposition who feel the meaning of the word America, and who divine the significance of the international hour which is now striking, to unite in an effort to avert this humiliation from the republic, and in this effort we believe that they will have the support of everything that is enlightened, faithful and sound in American public sentiment."

Bright Business Prospects

New York, Jan. 5.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says that the new year opens bright with promise in business circles. No excessive stocks are being carried over and results of inventories fully equal sanguine anticipations. The only retarding influences are the scarcity of labor and traffic blockades.

City Almost Without Fuel

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 5.—Los Angeles is suffering from a fuel famine. In the face of unusually cold weather for this climate, gas, wood and coal in the city has become almost exhausted. Only 25 tons of coal remains for sale. Wood is equally scarce.

Alabama Negro Lynched

Midway, Ala., Jan. 5.—Will Scott, a negro, was lynched for attempt at criminal assault here by citizens who hanged him up to a tree and riddled the body with bullets. Scott had only recently returned from the penitentiary.

MANNERS AT TABLE.

An account of hospitality in 1629 gives a good idea of the manner in which a country gentleman of the period lived. Dinner and supper were brought in by the servants with their hats on, a custom which is corroborated by Fynes Moryson, who says that, being at a knight's house who had many servants to attend him, they brought in the meats with their heads covered with blue caps. After washing their hands in a basin they sat down to dinner, and Sir James Pringle said grace. The viands seemed to have been plentiful and excellent—"big pottage, long kale, bowe of white kale," which is cabbage; "brach soppe," powdered beef, roast and boiled mutton, a venison pie in form of an egg, goose. Then they had cheese, cut and uncut, and apples. But the close of the feast was the most curious thing about it.

The tablecloth was removed, and on the table were put a "towel the whole breadth of the table and half the length of it, a basin and ewer to wash, then a green carpet laid on, then one cup of beer set on the carpet, then a little long lawn serviter plaited over the corner of the table and a glass of hot water set down also on the table; then be there three boys to say grace—the first, the thanksgiving; the second, the Pater Noster; the third, prayer for a blessing of God's church. The good man of the house, his parents, kinfolk and the whole company then do drink hot waters, so at supper, then to bed, the collation which (is) a stoupe of all."—Scottish Review.

BRAIN QUALITY.

It Is of Just as Much Importance as the Quantity.

The brain of Daniel Webster weighed fifty-six or fifty-seven ounces, that of Napoleon Bonaparte about the same. This is about three pounds and a half. These were exceeded by the brain of Cuvier, the great French naturalist, which weighed between fifty-nine and sixty ounces, and that of the French surgeon Dupuytren, which weighed fifty-eight ounces. The average weight of the brain of man is about fifty ounces and of women forty-five ounces. The maximum weight of the healthy adult brain is about sixty-four ounces and the minimum thirty-one ounces. Men of great intellectual power have generally if not always possessed large brains. The quality of the brain is, however, quite as important as the quantity, so that a large brain does not of necessity constitute a great man. The size of the brain is not in proportion to the physical development of the body, either in animals or in man. The horse has a brain less in weight than the smallest adult human brain; that of a whale seventy-five feet long was found to weigh not quite twice as much as that of a man. Even in men there is no fixed relation between the size of the body and that of the brain. A small man may have a large brain and a big man a small brain.

Warship Models.

Paraffin wax models of all proposed British battleships are used by the admiralty for tests before the keels of the ships are laid down, the miniatures being tested in a great tank. The models are from twelve to twenty-four feet long, the tank being 400 feet long and twenty feet wide. The models are made of wax because it is a material which does not absorb water or change its weight, so that alterations can be easily made, and the material can be melted up and used again. The American naval authorities also have models of all their hulls constructed, but these are much more elaborate than the British, being formed of white pine and fitted with rudders, false keels propeller shafts and all et ceteras.

Mixed Metaphors.

Sir Robert Purvis, addressing his old constituents at Peterborough in defense of an act of parliament under whose operation some of them had gone to prison for a week, said: "That, gentlemen, is the marrow of the education act, and it will not be taken out by Dr. Clifford or anybody else. It is founded on a granite foundation, and it speaks in a voice not to be drowned by sectarian clamor." In an address to the Kaiser Wilhelm's father a Rheinlander mayor said, "No Austria, no Prussia, one only Germany. Such were the words the mouth of your imperial majesty has always had in its eye."

London's Fogs.

November is London's worst month for fogs. During a good year the Londoner may have to breathe only fifty fogs. In a very bad year he may have to endure as many as eighty. London's countless coal fires, mingling soot with mist, concoct the Londoner's fog for him. The great majority of fogs in the metropolis begin to form between 7 and 8 in the morning, just when most fires are being lighted.

Changed.

"Hello, Pepper, old chap!" exclaimed a man to another. "You have altered—scarcely knew you."

"My name—haw—is not Pepper," protested the other haughtily.

"Ah," remarked the first speaker, in no way abashed, "then your name has altered too! By-by."—London Mail.

GLIMPSES OF CASSATT

Noted Railroad Expert Was a Giant In Mind and Body.

CONCENTRATION HIS STRONG POINT

Nothing Could Disturb Late President of the Pennsylvania When Solving Hard Problems—Physically Stronger Than Any Employee and a Tireless Worker—Story of His Consideration For Others—Instance of His Memory.

In his general characteristics, in his methods and in his unflagging energy the late Alexander Johnston Cassatt, president of the Pennsylvania Railroad company, bore a strong resemblance to Thomas A. Scott, the fourth president of the Pennsylvania railroad, who died in 1881, says the New York World. Mr. Scott was noted for his activity and tireless devotion to business. Mr. Cassatt was intimately associated with him, and this contact seemed to convey the spirit of energy from the older man to the younger. The difference in their ages was fifteen years.

The bodily vigor of Mr. Cassatt was as marked as the mental. He was large in frame and possessed of great muscular strength and remarkable powers of endurance. Brought down to an actual physical test, there was not an engineer or fireman on the road when he was forty years old who could go so long without sleep or food or rest and attend to business. It was a common saying on the eastern division of the railroad that Mr. Cassatt could tire out the strongest employee.

His mental powers were in complete consonance with his physical. Concentration was his strong point. When he had a difficult problem to solve in railroad management or railroad engineering, for he was a practical civil engineer, nothing could disturb him. He could work and figure out a conclusion in a hubbub that would have scattered the thoughts of an ordinary man.

His ability to apply himself to a task and to stick to it until finished was one of the points in which he was so much like Scott. He could weary relay after relay of expert clerks, and even if he worked until long after midnight for weeks in succession he was fresh and bright every morning, ready and eager to continue what he had started to perform.

Mr. Cassatt was peculiarly diffident. He enjoyed witty speeches at dinners, but never made a speech in his life and could not be induced to attempt one. One of his greatest enjoyments was listening to the badinage at the dinners of the famous old Clover club of Philadelphia when it was in the heyday of its popularity and when the intellectual fencing at its feasts excited the keenest interest.

His consideration for others was shown a few years ago when he was coming in from his country seat at Haverford to Philadelphia. He was seated in a rear car and was not known to the brakeman or conductor. The train came to a standstill owing to some trifling accident, and at the expiration of ten minutes Mr. Cassatt asked the brakeman if it was not customary to send a man back with a red flag to warn trains behind. The brakeman admitted it. "Then why don't you do it?" asked Mr. Cassatt.

"If you will mind your own business," was the reply, "the railroad men in charge of this train will attend to theirs. We know what to do and want no interference from you."

When Mr. Cassatt arrived in the Broad street station, Philadelphia, he hunted up the station master and related the circumstance. The station master started to have the brakeman discharged, but Mr. Cassatt restrained him.

"Don't do that," he said. "Just call him into your office and tell him he cussed the president and that hereafter he should be more polite to passengers."

Before Andrew Carnegie retired from the steel business and before the Wabash got into Pittsburg Mr. Carnegie found that A. J. Cassatt was absolutely unbendable at times. With all the prestige of his tremendous business and his riches behind him and a smile of confidence on his face, Mr. Carnegie walked into Mr. Cassatt's office to ask why his company's secret freight rates had been discontinued.

He was sure it was a mistake. Mr. Cassatt was quite as sure that it was not. Mr. Carnegie's smile disappeared, and he began to glower. If that was the case, he would insist that the rates be re-established, else he (Carnegie) would construct a line from the west through Pittsburg to the Atlantic seaboard that would destroy the primacy of the Pennsylvania system.

His answer from the tall man who was directing the affairs of the Pennsylvania railroad company was a cold stare and an invitation to build as many roads as he liked.

"That's a very fine place you have there, Mr. Cassatt," said the director, surveying the mansion.

"Yes," replied Mr. Cassatt, with doubtful appreciation, "but I would rather live in the country."

"Then, why don't you?"

Mr. Cassatt looked at his friend very soberly and asked:

"Aren't you married?"

Memory was a great factor in the success of A. J. Cassatt. He "kept track of things," as he called it, and,

STEAMER IN FLAMES

Terrible Panic Prevailed Before Ill-Fated Craft Was Beached

Christiana, Jan. 5.—A terrible disaster which overtook the mail steamer Lindholmen, which plies between this port and Bergen, off Farsund, yesterday. The steamer was discovered to be on fire. A strong gale was blowing at the time and the flames soon spread to the saloons and cabins. Thirty passengers hurried from their quarters to get on deck. Four of them were suffocated in their efforts to get out. Others jumped overboard and one was drowned. Another passenger went mad. One lifeboat was burned and another was crushed against the side of the ship.

Finally, while the remainder of the half dressed and panic-stricken passengers were huddled in the forecastle in a blinding snowstorm, the rest of the ship being in flames, the captain drove the vessel ashore and managed to save the rest of the passengers and the crew. There was much hardship, however, before all the ship's company were gotten safely to land. The dangerous nature of the coast made the operation of beaching the Lindholmen most risky.

Freight Handlers to Quit Work

New York, Jan. 5.—The strike of the 400 freight handlers of the Erie railroad at Jersey City and Hoboken may be followed by a general demand on all the railroad companies at their local piers, except the Pennsylvania, for an increase in wages from $1.85 to $2 a day, the advance for which the Erie freight handlers struck. About 2500 freight handlers are preparing to make the demands, it is said.

A RAILROAD KING

Harriman Lines Extend Over a Vast Territory

MILLIONS IN HOLDINGS

Harriman Interests Also In Control of Steamship Companies--Some Interesting Facts Are Developed at Inquiry

New York, Jan. 5.—Modern methods of combining and consolidating mammoth railway systems and extending the principle of community of interest were delved into at great length by the interstate commerce commission, which has begun in this city an inquiry into the so-called "Harriman lines." The object of the representatives of the government is to determine whether any of the railroads of the country are consolidated or combined in restraint of trade.

It was brought out in evidence and admitted that the Union Pacific Railroad company, the Southern Pacific company, the Oregon Short Line and the Oregon Railroad and Navigation company are practically under the same administration, Mr. Harriman appearing as president of each company, with only slight variations in the lists of other officers.

It was further shown that the Southern Pacific company owns the Pacific Mail Steamship company; that the Southern Pacific and Union Pacific jointly own the Occidental and Orient Steamship company, and that Harriman interests are in control of the Portland and Asiatic Steamship company. All three of these lines run steamers between either San Francisco or Portland and the Orient. It was said the Occidental is in liquidation, but it still operates two steamers.

On the Atlantic ocean it was shown that the Southern Pacific owns the line of steamers running between New York and New Orleans, formerly known as the Morgan line.

It was shown further that the Union Pacific has a traffic arrangement with the San Pedro, Los Angeles and Salt Lake railway extending over a period of 99 years; that it exercises joint control with the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific railway over the Chicago and Alton railroad; owns $28,123,000 worth of stock or 29.59 percent of the capitalization of the Illinois Central railroad, and owns $5,082,300 worth of stock of the St. Joseph and Grand Island railroad, which is 37.37 percent of the whole.

The Oregon Short Line owns $39,540,630 worth of stock in the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad company, this being 18.62 percent of the whole.

Of Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul stock, the Oregon Short Line owns $3,690,000 worth, or 3.42 percent. The company also owns $2,572,000 or 2.58 percent of the stock of the Chicago and Northwestern. $10,000,000 of the preferred stock of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe, being 4.28 percent, and $14,285,745, or 7.97 percent, of the capital stock of the New York Central and Hudson River railroad.

Of these holdings by the Harriman companies the stocks of the Illinois Central, Baltimore and Ohio, New York Central, Chicago and Northwestern, Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul, Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe, and St. Joseph and Grand Island, aggregating in value $103,293,745, have all been bought since July 1, 1906.

In reply it was stated that the Union Pacific showed last July a surplus of $51,000,000. The Oregon Short Line declared a dividend of 50 percent on its stock held by the Union Pacific and also contributed out of its general assets to the purchase money.

After placing in evidence all that was available as to the ownership of the so-called "Harriman lines," counsel for the interstate commerce commission then had Alexander Millar, secretary of the Harriman company, read from the minutes of many executive committee meetings of the Union Pacific in which it was shown that Harriman reported various things he had done and the committee simply voted to ratify and confirm his actions. It was also shown that Harriman had authority, by resolution, to borrow money for the uses of the Union Pacific company without restriction as to amount or terms.

The minutes of the meeting last July, at which Harriman personally urged the purchase of Illinois Central stock, were read. These minutes quoted Harriman as saying that "while the Illinois Central was generally recognized as an important and valuable system of railroads, yet he believed its strategic value and importance was but little understood even by some of those most active in its management."

The hearing is unfinished.

FLOWER UNDER ARREST

Jumped Bail of $20,000 In New York Three Years Ago

New York, Jan. 5.—The district attorney's office has been notified of the arrest at Philadelphia of Dr. Richard C. Flower, a mining promoter, who three years ago forfeited bail of $20,000 while under indictment in this city for obtaining money under false pretenses.

The police, who had traced Flower about the country, once locating him in Mexico, claim to have found him last fall in Jersey City. From there he went to Philadelphia, where, it is alleged, he was known as Professor Moore. A warrant charging him with being a fugitive from justice was recently issued here. The prisoner will be arraigned in court at Philadelphia and he is expected to fight extradition proceedings.

Flower, who is a physician, was indicted on five counts in March, 1903. He was then, it is alleged, a promoter of the "Arizona and Eastern Mining, Milling, Smelting and Refining company," and sold stock of this concern to the amount of $800,000. The company collapsed and the stockholders were unable to get any of the money which they had invested. The matter was brought to the attention of the district attorney and Flower was arrested.

When Flower pleaded to the charges he was released in $20,000 bail, which was furnished by a Mrs. Storrs. When the case was placed on the calendar the defendant failed to appear and his bail was forfeited.

While the case was pending in court a lawyer, Edgar Mills, was arrested, it being alleged that he represented Flower and tried to bribe a policeman. Mills was convicted and sentenced to Sing Sing.

Crooks In High Russian Life

St. Petersburg, Jan. 5.—Prince Vassilchikoff has been conducting an investigation of the affairs of the ministry of agriculture since he succeeded M. Stichinsky as head of that department, and he has disclosed a state of corruption extending over a number of years. This scandal, coming on top of the mismanagement of the famine relief, has made a painful impression in court and seriously embarrasses the cabinet in view of the approaching elections.

Saloon Man Had Gun Ready

Rochester, Jan. 5.—Frank Randazza, an Italian saloonkeeper of this city, who shot and killed a black hand agent last August, shot and wounded another man last evening. Two men entered his saloon, he says, and demanded money. One of them drew a revolver, but before he could shoot Randazza drew a revolver and shot him in the arm. The other man got away. The wounded man is in custody and Randazza is under arrest.

Alabama Jails Reek With Filth

Montgomery, Ala., Jan. 5.—President Bragg of the Alabama convict board, in a report to the governor, says that humanity would be best served if every jail in the state were burned. He says that "places we call jails are reeking with filth and disease and alive with vermin of all kinds. In many jails men and women remain for months without means of washing their faces and hands."

Congressman Neglected Duties

Washington, Jan. 5.—Speaker Cannon has appointed Representative Englebright (Cal.) to a place on the committee of mines and mining, vice Mr. Williamson (Ore.), removed, who has failed thus far to attend a single session of the Fifty-Ninth congress. He was indicted prior to the first session of this congress and was convicted for participation in land frauds in Oregon.

Sultan's Troops After Raisuli

Tangier, Jan. 5.—Villages in the direction of Zinat are burning and firing has been heard from them. The minister of war is encamped near here, awaiting the arrival of the second column of the sultan's army. As soon as the two forces meet an attempt will be made to cut off Raisuli's retreat in the direction of the mountain fastnesses.

Train Passed Danger Signal

Washington, Jan. 5.—The coroner's jury investigting the Terra Cotta wreck of Sunday night on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad heard testimony all day from telegraph operators and others at the Silver Spring, Takoma and University stations, all of which went to show that the "dead" train ran by a red light at Takoma.

To Explore Greenland Coast

Copenhagen, Jan. 5.—The Duke of Orleans intends to start a new expedition next spring in the ship Belgica to penetrate as far as possible along the northeast coast of Greenland. The purpose of this expedition is to join the Danish expedition under Mylius Erichsen, which left here last June to explore the same coast.

Elsie's Little Miracle

By Anna Steese Richardson

Copyright, 1906, by May McKeon

It was pretty generally understood that the Billy Daltons were drifting apart. There was no particular reason for this state of affairs, save the lack of something better to do.

You see, they had just enough money so that Billy did not have to work nor Janet to worry about making both ends meet. They had danced their way through several seasons into a lazy, good humored and comrade-like engagement, thence into matrimony. After that Billy had continued to lead cotillons and Janet to dance them, but generally with other partners.

Matters between them had reached the point where the rumor laden society papers had suggested covertly that when Billy went to England and Scotland, where he had nothing in particular to do, Janet would probably take up her home in Nevada or South Dakota, there to remain until Norman Stanley returned from Africa, where he was fighting ennui by hunting big game. It was even whispered that Billy Dalton had insinuated to Stanley that it was rather better taste to stalk big game than another man's wife, especially when the other man was perfectly willing to make it clear sailing for his wife if it would make her any happier.

Of course, this sounds a bit strong on paper, particularly to the old fashioned folk who still believe that marriage is a contract for life and not a mere episode. In the set to which the Billy Daltons belonged the situation was accepted as a matter of course, and when Janet asked a lot of people down to their Long Island place for the automobile races and the week end no one thought of refusing just because the Daltons might separate within a fortnight after the gathering.

Such was the situation when the Dalton car broke down on the Jericho turnpike, and its occupants—Janet, Mrs. Greenwalt, Joe Jeffreys and "Marsh" Huntoon—decided to cut through the woods to the Dalton place and leave the car for a farmer to guard until the mechanic who handled the Dalton garage could be dispatched to the scene of the accident.

Perhaps it was not entirely impatience which led them to take the short cut through the woods, but the call of a hundred autumn voices in rustling leaves, rich, warm colorings and the chatter of squirrels laying up winter stores. And thus it was that they suddenly stopped in their tracks and listened to a sound that was not of the woods, but of the nursery—the plaintive wail of a child. Janet it was who found it—a bit of white faced, staring eyed humanity rolled up snugly in a great shawl of Iceland wool.

While she held the baby in her arms and tried to silence its wails with uncertain and awkward little pettings the quartet held a conference. The child was too young to have walked there. Mrs. Greenwalt said it was not a day over two months old. It was too far from the road to be heard by passing travelers. Ah—there was the answer, a wisp of paper tied to the end of the shawl:

"Please take care of little Elsie. It was not her fault that she came into the world, and I can do no more."

"I've always said that the government ought to regulate the question of marriage among the poor," remarked Mrs. Greenwalt severely. "Here is a case in point."

"You are jumping at conclusions," said Huntoon dryly. "Let's take it to the town marshal"—

"And what then?" asked Janet without lifting her gaze from the child's face. The baby had clutched her finger with its tiny fist and settled down as if it had found anchorage.

"Oh, there are asylums and homes for youngsters like this. You'd better hurry along home with it before it begins to howl. One of your men can take it to town before dark. Shall I carry the little beggar for you?"

"Oh, no. She's not a bit heavy, and she is quiet now. She might cry if we changed her position."

They trudged on through rustling leaves and soft Indian summer haze, three of the party chatting gayly; two, the young wife and the baby, looking into each other's eyes as if searching for a new key to the problem of life. Sometimes Janet wished that the child would close its eyes. She did not like to meet that trustful, clear eyed gaze.

* * * * * * * *

"Have you disposed of the youngster?" asked "Marsh" Huntoon as they sat down to dinner that night.

Janet started and looked across the table at her husband. He lifted his eyebrows inquiringly.

"What? Don't you know that our party was increased by one during our ride this afternoon? Rather a small 'one,' but, my, what lungs it has!"

Janet drew in her breath sharply.

"I wish you would not talk any more about it at present, good people," she said, trying to speak lightly. "I've started inquiries in a quiet way. I don't want the thing to get into the papers—because if no one claims little Elsie I think I—I shall keep her."

"Keep her!" gasped Mrs. Greenwalt. "Why, my dear girl, the place for a child without a name is a foundling asylum."

Janet spoke very softly, yet every word was heard, so complete was the silence.

"I shall give her a name because—once—just once—I saw a line of children walking, rows and rows, by twos, from an orphan asylum. I can't send her there."

Mentally she saw again those clear, trusting blue eyes.

"And I know you will all be kind enough to keep this very quiet until"—there was just a slight, tense hesitation—"until we decide what shall be done."

Naturally it was talked about, however. In boudoirs and at clubs the question was raised as to what name little Elsie would acquire. Was it not bad enough to be facing a divorce residence in the far west without acquiring an unnecessary incumbrance at the crucial moment?

Within the Dalton bungalow on Long Island stranger things were happening. No clew to the baby's parents had been found. When Billy Dalton dropped down occasionally, as he had been doing for a year past to keep up appearances, his first question was, "Anything new?" and this always meant "anything new about the baby's history." And little Elsie would look up at him with reproachful blue eyes as if asking, "Why do you care?" And the worst of it was that Billy Dalton began to realize that he did care. Janet had changed, and, with an odd sort of jealousy, he realized that it was little Elsie and not he who had brought about the marvelous and altogether desirable change. She was no longer bored. How could she be with Elsie cutting a new tooth every few days and such wonderful hampers of clothes to be bought, fine handkerchief linen, narrow val and convent embroidery? A more fastidious customer had never entered the shops which specialize on layettes, and with her own hands Janet made covers for down pillows, silk tufted afghans and other foolish things, while the tongue of gossip wagged gayly over the whole absurd episode.

One frosty December afternoon Dalton ran down to the bungalow and found Janet standing at the window. The low spreading evergreens on the west side of the house were powdered lightly with snow, and Janet turned to him with kindling eyes.

"Billy, I shall have a Christmas tree for Elsie. She is so bright for her age. I do believe she will notice it."

"Quite likely," responded Billy, with assumed carelessness, as she laid aside his storm coat, "but in making your plans you seem to have overlooked one important fact. As yet Elsie is not really yours. The law"—

Janet turned on him sharply.

"She is mine by right of—everything. I found her, and I love her."

"Yes, but you must formally adopt her. I thought perhaps you'd better see to that before I leave. I've changed my plans a bit. I'm going to meet mother and Grace in Rome for Christmas. The mater has not been feeling very fit. I am not fond of England in winter, and"—

Janet crossed to his side, and her hand rested lightly on his arm.

"Don't you think you'd enjoy much more seeing Elsie have her first tree? And—and I think—I need you—more than your mother does."

Something rose in Dalton's throat and threatened to choke him. It was a sensation he had never felt before, not even during the good natured, lazy run of his wooing. Janet wanted him! He thought he had not cared. Now he knew that he had cared all along. But it was characteristic he did not express his fierce joy in words. He held Janet very close and whispered:

"Well, I rather did hope you'd give the little beggar the name of Dalton. It's a pretty good name after all, eh?"

* * * * * * * *

Norman Stanley heard the news when he landed in London. He sent a lion's skin captured by his own hand for little Elsie to roll upon. Then he went to the Nile country for the winter.

Not Too Abrupt.

Radical changes in clothing are seldom safe, at least so the old time grandmothers held. The putting off of winter underwear was likely to be a gradual and prolonged process. That this belief in deliberate adjustment was widespread and inclusive is shown in W. P. Frith's story of his life. He was engaged in painting a portrait of Mrs. Birt, the wife of a prominent business man, who used to bring her little dog to share her sittings.

Mr. Birt was a great lover of dogs, but he entertained a strong aversion to dog collars, so I was surprised one day when Mrs. Birt brought her favorite dog, Ducky, to see a band around the little animal's neck.

"I thought you objected to dog collars, Mrs. Birt," I said. "I see Ducky sports one today."

"Oh, no, that's not a dog collar," returned the lady. "It's only a piece of flannel. The poor dear has had a dreadful cold and a sore throat. She has worn flannel night and day."

"Surely that is too narrow to do any good. The strip is no wider than a collar."

"Oh, it was wider, of course. We have gradually lessened it. She is leaving it off by degrees."

Nothing but the Truth.

Tidbits from All Wards of City

A gold locket has been lost as will be seen by ad.

The Reapers Circle will be held Friday evening' Jan. 11.

The ordinance of the Lord's Supper will be observed at the Wollaston Baptist church on Sunday, with reception to new members.

This Saturday night the Harvard University Gymnastic team will give an exhibition of floor work at the Quincy Y. M. C. A. gymnasium.

A watch meeting was held at the Wollaston Baptist church on New Year's eve, in charge of Mr. Harris Barbour. Quite a number were present.

"Foundations of a happy home" will be the subject of the first of the Sunday evening lectures by Rev. W. S. Perkins at the Universalist church at 7.30.

Another of the monthly vesper lectures will be given on Sunday at the Wollaston Unitarian church, subject, "The Soul's Awakening"—The Ancient Mariner.

The Woman's Guild of St. Chrysostom's church will hold its regular business meeting on Wednesday in the parish room. There will be the usual table of salable goods.

At the meeting of the Library Trustees at which the resignation oe Miss Bumpus was accepted, Miss Alic G. White was appointed librarian.

The meadow in the rear of the street railway barn has been flooded and all that is needed to make good skating is some cold weather.

The next meeting of the Unitarian club of Wollaston will be on Tuesday evening, January 8, at 6 o'clock. The speaker of the evening will be Hon. Louis D. Brandeis, who will talk on "Industrial Insurance."

Mrs. Joseph G. Jacobs of Elmwood avenue, who went to Carney hospital December 27, is convalescing from the operation which was performed, Her many friends will be glad to know she is doing as well as can be expected.

The supper at the Wollaston Unitarian club of Wollaston next Tuesday evening will be served at the usual hour, 6.30 o'clock. Mr. Louis D. Branders will speak on "Industrial Insurance." one of the problems of the day.

The Sunshine club of St. Chrysostom's church will take up its regular meetings on Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock. Mrs. Henry B. Barham will still retain the head of the Club and direct it in its practical working, and Mrs. Fulton plans the mission study. Visitors are always welcome.

Mr. James P. Seely of Belmont street will leave Wollaston for New York next week. He has been connected with the Boston office of Messrs. Harvey Fisk & Sons for about 8 years. This firm discontinued its Boston office on December 31st and Mr. Seely will go to their New York office. His family will remain in Wollaston until spring.

It has always been given out that Christian Scientists did not attempt proselytizing. That is, all Christian Scientists tell you so. But from the amount of reading matter that they have sent to one of our Wollaston clergy we take it that there is no body who does so much vain trying. It is not exactly annoying to him, yet he has expressed himself as not desiring such attention.

Dr. W. T. Clarke of Wollaston and friend are occupying the Faxon house on Washington street, at the corner of Coddington. It seems good to see life about the house once more, especially children playing in the yard.

* * *

Mrs. Ellen B. Gage of New York, who has spent the past two years traveling in Europe, is visiting her son, Harold M. Gage of Braintree.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Laurance Heaton Sturtevant of Presidents hill gave a dinner on Wednesday evening in honor of Miss Jane Childs Reed and Dr. F. Ramon Burke whose engagement was announced recently.

Mrs. Jack Gardner has returned from Europe and many are looking forward to the Fenway palace being opened to the public on several days soon.

The members of the Matrons' whist club and their husbands were entertaintained by Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Thayer of Braintree. The souvenirs were secured by Mrs. F. W. Brett, Mrs. M. C. Gillette, Mrs. Curtis, Mr. A. A. Smith, Mr. J. G. Spear and H. A. Simonds.

Mrs. George Farrington of East Orange, N. J., has been visiting her mother, Mrs. N. E. Hollis of Braintree.

Pupils of Miss Ethel P. Parker gave a fine pianoforte recital at her residence on Belmont street, last evening and it was very enjoyable to all present. After the recital the pupils were treated to ice cream and cake. Miss Parker is to be congratulated on such a fine musical treat.

The Smokers.

The greatest smokers are unquestionably the Dutch, each inhabitant consuming about 3.110 grams of tobacco a year. Their neighbors, the Belgians, come next, with 2,488 grams; then follows Turkey, with 2,177 grams. The United States, Germany, France, Italy and Spain consume on the average about 1,866 grams, while the English content themselves with about 715 grams each a year.

Plants Near the Sea.

Plants growing near the sea have thicker leaves than those growing inland. Apparently the sea salt is the cause of this phenomenon, as plants cultivated in artificially salted soil yield thicker leaves.

Quaint Yorkshire Custom.

A quaint custom is still in vogue in winter at Bainbridge, a Yorkshire village. Every night at 9 o'clock a huge horn is blown on the village green, so that any one lost or rambling on the surrounding fells may be guided to safety. Very welcome has the sound often been to many a wayfarer lost in snow or fog on the cheerless moors.

Tallest Britishers.

The tallest people in the British isles are to be found in the district of Galloway, in south Scotland, where records of the stature give an average height of five feet ten and a half inches. The shortest stature is found in Wales and southwest England.

Pulled Bread.

For those to whom coarse breads or even light fine wheat flour breads are indigestible and unappetizing a form of the latter known as "pulled bread" may be welcomed. Simply pull out the crumb part with forks in long strips after the loaf has been cut in quarters. Toast these in the oven and keep in a dry place. So prepared they cost less than the zwieback which is on sale.

The Wolverene.

The wolverene, now almost extinct, is one of the greatest gluttons and thieves among animals. It robs the hunter's trap of his game and his hut of blankets, gun, ax, knife and dishes. When any one approaches it sits up on its hind legs and shades its eyes with its paws.

Chocolate.

Chocolate was first introduced into England from Mexico in 1520. It was made from the flower of the cocoanut, soon became very popular and was generally used in the London coffee houses.

Hawthorn Buds.

Hawthorn buds are known among English children as "bread and cheese" and are sometimes eaten by them. They have, however, poisonous qualities, due to the presence of calcium oxalate, and a girl at Penrith died after eating some.

BOSTON AMUSEMENTS.

Keith's Theatre.

The bill at Keith's for the second week of the New Year will be notable for several reasons, but principally for the fact that the headliner will be Harry Houdini, the handcuff king and world's record prison-breaker. All New England remembers the tremendous furore which Houdini's work created when he appeared at Keith's last winter. Edward J. Connelly, late of Weber's Music hall, New York, and his company are to present for the first time in vaudeville a sketch written by George Ade. "Marse Covington" is its title and it was successfully produced recently at one of the Lambs' Club Gambols in New York, scoring so heavily that it was immediately secured by a representative of the Keith circuit.

Castle Square Theatre.

The second Shakespearean production of the season at the Castle Square theatre will be made next Monday, when "Twelfth Night" will be staged for one week only. This brilliant comedy by the master dramatist is rarely seen upon the stage, and its presentation at the Castle Square will therefore attract many thousand playgoers who are familiar with it only through reading and study. It is one of the most effective, most humorous and most charming of all the Stakespearean plays.

Park Theatre.

Miss Lulu Glaser will make her first appearance in Klaw and Erlanger's production of Sydney Rosenfeld's new comedy, called "The Aero Club," at the Park theatre, Boston, on Monday evening, Jan. 7th, for two weeks. Mr. Rosenfeld took up a timely subject in his musical play, "The Vanderbuilt Cup," and in his latest work, which deals with the fad of ballooning, he has kept pace with the step of popular interest in extraordinary things and has produced a play which, it is predicted, will attract a great deal of public attention. Klaw and Erlanger will give the piece their usual elaborate production and have surrounded Miss Glaser with a large company headed by well-known players.

Thayer Academy Notes.

The class of 1883 had its twenty-third reunion, Dec 31, at Hotel Buckminster in Boston, with sixteen members present and Prof. Sewall as guest.

Dr. Gallagher attended the American Association for the Advancement of Science at Columbia college and the Head Masters' Association at Hotel Astor in New York during his vacation. On Monday he addressed the Girls' Latin school of Boston at their annual luncheon at the Hotel Vendome, and spoke at New Year's reception of the Quincy Y. M. C. A. Tuesday evening.

The best game of basket ball seen thus far this season was played in the gymnasium Tuesday afternoon, when the Alumni team was defeated by the regulars 13 to 11. The game was close, well-played and stubbornly contested throughout. Taunton High is the opposing team scheduled for this afternoon.

Clarence Wilson, '09, has gone to Arizona to enter a business house.

New Year's Reception.

Rev. and Mrs. Edmund D. Webber gave a New Year's reception at their home on South Central avenue, Wednesday evening. Rev. and Mrs. Preston Gurney and Mr. and Mrs. Robbins received with Mr. and Mrs. Webber.

Mr. and Mrs. Robbins are missionaries in the Philippine Islands, and Mr. Robbins was a class mate of Mr. Webbers at the Newton Theological Seminary.

About two hundred friends called to extend a New Year's greeting, among whom were the other clergymen of the town.

Mrs. Oscar A. Blaisdell and Mrs. Frank Burgess presided at the table.

Misses Edith Perry, Bessie Drew, Marion Corey, Edith Barker and Florence Barbour passed around cake and ice cream. Miss Marion Barker served punch, which was quite harmless.

Messrs. Max Pinkham and Theodore Corey rendered a very pleasing violin duet. Mrs. Charles Young and Miss Grace Seely played piano solos during the evening.

The reception rooms were beautifully decorated with cut flowers and potted plants.

Gymnasium Exhibition.

This evening the Harvard University Gymnastic team will give an exhibition of floor work at the Young Men's Christian Association gymnasium. This exhibition is sure to be a fine one, and it is an unusual opportunity to see some clever gymnastic work.

The program includes: horizontal bar, parallel bars, side horse, flying rings, club swinging, tumbling and flag swinging. W. C. Bennett is manager of the Harvard team.

Sunday Evening Lectures.

The first of a series of lectures on the Family Circle will be given in the Universalist church next Sunday evening at 7.30, by the pastor. The subject will be "Foundations of a Happy Home." Other topics to follow are "Choosing a Wife," "Choosing a husband," and "Courtship and Marriage."

These discourses are not sermons but lectures instructively and entertainly dealing with some of the most practical subjects of our social life. A very earnest invitation is extended to the young people to attend these services.

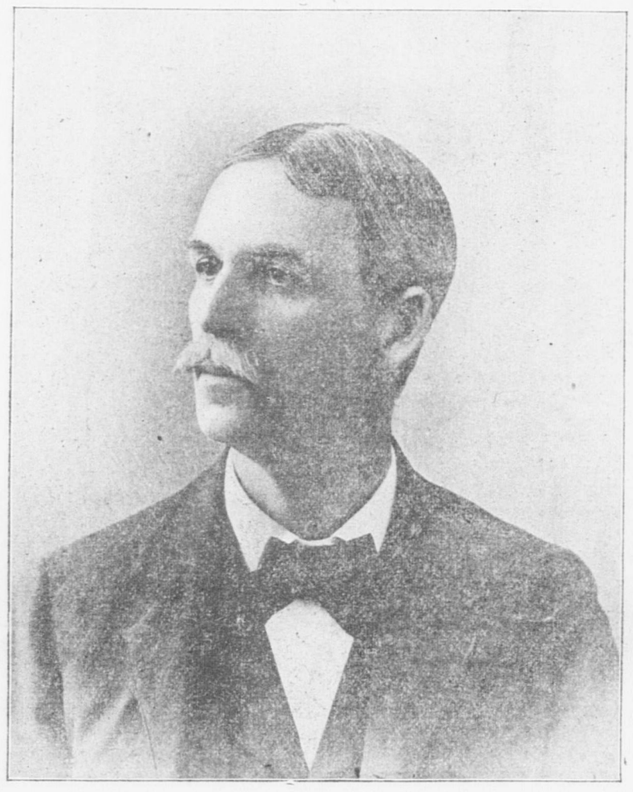
Will Petition The Legislature To Go Outside The Debt Limit



JAMES THOMPSON,
Who Enters Third Term as Mayor.

The third annual message of Mayor James Thompson is longer than usual, and reviews all departments. He says in conclusion that the means of the city are extremely limited:

Gentlemen of the Council:

Having taken the oath of office as required under the city charter, to promote and to protect to the best of our ability the interests of our city, imposes a moral obligation as well as that patriotic duty of all good citizens in whom has been reposed the confidence of the community, of giving our best thought and effort to advance that which is best not only for a section but for the whole community after a comprehensive examination of the merits of the many questions which will be submitted to us.

I herewith submit a financial statement of the condition of the city at the close of business on December 31, 1906; covering all debts paid as well as contracted, with a summary of same and a comparison with the previous year:

Organization Of New City Government

President Piper And All Other Council Officers Are Reelected

The nineteenth year of the city government of Quincy was inaugurated at 12 o'clock noon today in the presence of a large gathering of ladies and gentlemen, the fair sex occupying seats in the gallery. Large boquets of pinks and roses adorned the desk of the President.

The ceremonies today differed but little from other years; yet they are always of an interesting nature and are well worth attending.

Promptly at 12 o'clock City Messenger Tirrell entered the hall from the rear entrance followed by Mayor Thompson, City Clerk Keith and Rev. Ellery Channing Butler. The exercises were commenced without delay by a prayer by Rev. Mr. Butler.

City Clerk Keith administered the oath of office to Mayor Thompson and then calling the roll of the new City Council he swore the members to the faithful performance of their duties.

Mayor Thompson was then introduced, and delivered his inaugural address, omitting reading financial tables which he hoped the council would pursue carefully. The address was quite a lengthy one and at its conclusion there was applause. The address appears in full in this issue.

City Clerk Keith presided until the City Council was organized which was the next thing on the program. The first business was the election of President, which was by roll call and Walter E. Piper was re-elected without opposition.

Then came the election of other City Council officers. George T. Magee was re-elected Clerk of Council and Committees, Harry W. Tirrell as City Messenger, and Henry O. Fairbanks as City Auditor without opposition.

Next in order was the drawing for seats. By vote of the Council old members were allowed to retain their old seats. The result was as follows:

RAISULI IS ROUTED

His Stronghold Captured and Pillaged by Sultan's Troops

Tangier, Jan. 7.—Zinat, Raisuli's stronghold, was virtually destroyed by fire and fell into the hands of the troops of the sultan at noon yesterday after a short and almost bloodless fight. Raisuli and his 700 followers succeeded in eluding capture and reaching the mountains despite the elaborate plans of War Minister Gabbas to prevent their escape.

No firing took place during Saturday night, but at 10 o'clock yesterday morning the artillery opened fire on the town. The Moorish gunners showed utter incapacity in handling their guns and the infantry fired haphazard. Two shells dropped inside the fastness without reply, and thereupon a body of the sultan's troops charged, shouting, and reached the walls amid desultory shots from the surrounding brush.

The gates to the town were found to be open, but there were no occupants of the place except 15 prisoners, included among whom were four Portuguese.

A detachment of the government troops continued firing in the direction of the mountains, where Raisuli and his followers were observed fleeing. Meanwhile the other government troops pillaged the stronghold, securing considerable booty in the shape of costly carpets, arms and cattle and sheep.

No fatalities in the fighting are reported, though a few persons on both sides were wounded.

Agricultural Bank Blocks Usurers

Washington, Jan. 7.—An agricultural bank in the Philippines, similar to the agricultural bank established in Egypt by the British, is advocated by E. W. Kommerer, who has just made a report to Secretary Taft and the Philippine commission on his investigation of the Egyptian bank. Kommerer says the Egyptian bank has in a large measure freed the farming population from the usurers and that the necessity for such a bank is even greater in the Philippines than it was in Egypt because of the crying need for agricultural credits.

Dravo Very Much Alive

Hartford, Jan. 7.—Milton S. Dravo of Trinity college, whose death at his home in Pittsburg was announced here Saturday, is not dead, but is on his way to this city to resume his college work. Dravo is prominent in athletics. Two years ago a report of Dravo's death was sent out. President Luther of Trinity says that the college may institute an investigation into the source of this latest report of Dravo's death.

To Search For the Ponce

Washington, Jan. 7.—Secretary Shaw has ordered out two additional revenue cutters in search of the steamer Ponce, now seven days overdue at New York from San Juan, P. R. The Seminole was started out from Charleston and the Algonquin from Porto Rico. The Mohawk had previously been started from New York. The three revenue cutters will make a search of the entire route of the steamship.

Fatal Fire In Pullman Car

Council Bluffs, Ia., Jan. 7.—A northwestern train had got within a mile of Loveland when passengers in the Pullman car Redfield were aroused by smoke. Louis de Lario, aged 22 years, was dead when found. The fire had started near his berth. One theory is that the fire started in a berth occupied by a woman who had been using an alcohol lamp to heat milk for her baby. Three passengers were injured.

Firemen Buried In Ruins

New York, Jan. 7.—Three firemen were killed during a fire that burned out the interior of Hill's paper warehouse last night. Just before the third floor of the structure fell all the men were ordered out of the building. Firemen Campbell, Siefert and Lennon failed to respond and a subsequent roundup of the fire-fighters established that the three were beyond doubt buried in the ruins.

Boy's Life Crushed Out

Arlington, Mass., Jan. 7.—While playing near his home on Mystic street, Porier Verrett, 11 years old, ran in front of an electric car, was knocked down and instantly killed. Motorman Goodhue was taken to the police station, but was released upon it being shown that he could not have prevented the accident.

Made Good Time In Rough Weather

Norfolk, Jan. 7.—Battleship Connecticut, from Newport, R. I., on a rough weather trial trip, arrived in Hampton Roads yesterday after a quick voyage down the coast. She reported her arrival to the Norfolk navy yard by wireless, but made no report on her trip down the coast, leaving this for official reports to Washington.

Meant What She Said

Bath, N. Y., Jan. 7.—Mrs. Fred L. Landgraf, aged 25 years, died yesterday from a bullet wound self-inflicted. With her husband, Mrs. Landgraf called on friends Saturday evening and upon leaving them said: "You will not see me alive tomorrow." Her remark was not taken seriously.

Broken Rail Caused Wreck

Winnipeg, Man., Jan. 7.—Six cars of a trans-continental train from Winnipeg were derailed 25 miles west of Fort William by a broken rail. Two men were killed and six persons injured.

VALUE OF OLIVE OIL.

It Is Good Either Taken Internally or Used Externally.

Various forms and kinds of oils form a large stone in the foundation of beauty culture. Only the thoughtful observer realizes their importance and that they were indispensable to the belles of old time—to the Greeks and Romans and eastern beauties of ancient days.

Olive oil was the most luxurious, as well as the most common. It was taken internally and externally; they rubbed with it, bathed in it, drank it and used it in a hundred ways. Olive oil is still olive oil, though not so many people recognize its value except as an ingredient of salad dressing.

It is excellent for the digestion and may be taken in doses of from one to nine or more teaspoonfuls a day. Some people find it is distasteful taken clear. In that case it may be disguised in wine or lemonade or some pleasant drink, which of itself should agree with the individual's system.

Olive oil is a good flesh builder. If rubbed into the skin, it not only accomplishes this with faithful applications, but makes the skin soft and velvety. Being a vegetable oil, it has absolutely no tendency to stimulate a growth of hair.

Olive oil is used in a hundred other ways, but the sum of its virtues lies simply in this—it is gentle in its action, soothing, nourishing and strengthening.

THE ALFALFA PLANT.

It Was Cultivated In Asia Long Before the Christian Era.

Alfalfa is a native of southwestern Asia and five centuries prior to the Christian era had been carried to and cultivated in southern Europe. The Romans used and appreciated it as a feed for their chariot and war horses before the birth of Christ. From Italy, in which country its growth has been maintained continuously to the present day, it found its way into Spain and France.

The Spaniards during the Spanish invasion carried it into South America and Mexico. During the middle of the nineteenth century it was introduced into this country through California by the Chileans. Since then it has gradually spread eastward until today there is probably not a state or territory in the Union in which this oldest of cultivated forage plants is not grown to some extent. Where this plant has come to us from Spain, directly or indirectly, it is known as alfalfa, while if brought from other countries of Europe (and it is in isolated instances here and there) it is generally called lucerne, from a valley in Switzerland by the same name in which it grows well and in large quantities.—St. Louis Republic.

Pretty Names For Books.

The following are some of the curious titles of old English books:

"A Most Delectable Sweet Perfumed Nosegay For God's Saints to Smell At."

"Biscuit Baked In the Oven of Charity, Carefully Conserved For the Chickens of the Church, the Sparrows of the Spirit and the Sweet Swallows of Salvation."

"A Sigh of Sorrow For the Sinners of Zion Breathed Out of a Hole In the Wall of an Earthly Vessel Known Among Men by the Name of Samuel Fish" (a Quaker who had been imprisoned).

"Eggs of Charity Layed For the Chickens of the Covenant and Boiled With the Water of Divine Love. Take Ye Out and Eat."

"The Spiritual Mustard Pot to Make the Soul Sneeze With Devotion."

Most of these were published in the time of Cromwell.

Lawyers at Westminster.

Of the professions and trades represented in the house of commons the law holds first place, but in early days no class of men gave greater trouble than the lawyers, and many were the attempts made to keep them out of the house. James I., when the parliament of 1624-25 was to be chosen, advised electors "not to choose curious and wrangling lawyers, who may seek reputation by stirring needless questions." This and other antagonistic counsel in the past and present has, however, done little to stem the tide of lawyers which flows at each election into the house.—Strand Magazine.

The Ideal Life.

To live content with small means, to seek elegance rather than luxury and refinement rather than fashion, to be worthy, not respectable, and wealthy, not rich; to study hard, think quickly, talk gently, act frankly; to listen to stars, babes and sages with open heart; to bear all cheerfully, do all bravely, await occasions, hurry never—in a word, to let the spiritual, unbidden and unconscious grow up through the common.—William Henry Channing.

Those Good Old Days.

"Dear, I wish you would lay down your novel and come and button my shirt for me."

"Dear me, I never saw such a helpless man! I'd like to know how you buttoned your shirts before you were married."

"My shirts had buttons on them in those days."—Indianapolis Star.

Modest.

"Is that all the work you can do in a day?" asked the discontented employer.

"Well, suh," answered Erastus Pinkley, "I s'pose I could do mo', but I never was much of a hand foh showin' off."—Washington Star.

Absence of occupation is not rest; a mind quite vacant is a mind distressed.—Cowper.

Bomb Thrower's Grip Shows That Deed Was Premeditated

HE IS FULLY IDENTIFIED

Man Who Wrecked Philadelphia Bank and Killed Two Men Had Met With Many Reverses and Was in Most Desperate Mood

Philadelphia, Jan. 7.—With the finding of the personal effects of the man who threw the bomb in the Fourth Street National bank on Saturday, killing Cashier McLear and himself, there is little doubt left in the minds of the police officials that he was J. Rollo Steele.

The bomb-thrower was found to have slept Friday night at the Grant house. He registered as J. R. Steele of New York. He arrived at the hotel about 7 o'clock on Friday night and engaged a 50-cent room. He carried a grip which he refused to allow the porter to carry to the room.

When detectives searched the room yesterday they found several yards of slow fuse, a number of detonating caps, a revolver and box of cartridges in the grip, together with a number of tools and some clothing. There was a suit bearing the tag of a Chicago clothing house and a pair of overalls marked with the name of a Lynchburg, Va., merchant. There was also a waybill for a box shipped over the Southern railway. As Rollo Steele was reported to have been in Chicago and Lynchburg a few days ago, the police say there is little doubt as to the bomb-thrower's identity.

It is probable that none of those hurt by the explosion will die. William J. Cramp, the negro messenger in the bank and bodyguard of President Rushton of the institution, who is the most seriously injured, was operated on yesterday. His condition was such a few hours after the explosion that he was reported dead, but he rallied and the physicians operated in an effort to save his eyesight, though his eyes will never regain their normal condition.

Dressed in black from head to foot, Steele, a stockily built man with a peculiar, drawn, thin face entered the Fourth Street National bank, the richest bank in Philadelphia, at noon Saturday, demanded a loan, and on refusal hurled a nitro-glycerine bomb to the floor, blowing the cashier of the bank to pieces and destroying himself at the same moment. Twenty of the bank's employes and depositors were injured, five of the former seriously.

The dead are W. M. McLear, cashier of the bank, whose body was disemboweled, part of the head blown off, and all his teeth knocked out by the concussion. His body was found under a pile of laths and plaster, which had been dashed from the ceiling. His heart was torn in twain. Steele was blown almost to pieces by the parcel which he dashed to the floor. His feet were torn off. His face was mangled beyond recognition.

It was an old-fashioned idea of "not putting on airs," which is peculiar to Philadelphia, that made possible the tragedy which shocked and terrorized the city.

The Fourth Street National bank is one of many institutions where a stranger can walk into the office of the president or cashier without being challenged or an inquiry made as to the purpose of his visit.

The similarity of the bomb throwing Saturday and that of the would-be assassin of Russell Sage 15 years ago is remarkable. There was the unopposed entrance of the visitor, the demand for a loan, the veiled threat of injury and the interposition of a human shield, which in Sage's case was Walter Laidlaw, and in the Fourth street Crump, the colored porter, whose eyes were blown from their sockets.

The escape of President Rushton was remarkable, for the damage was greatest in his office. The ceiling over his desk was spattered with blood and under a pile of wreckage in one corner of the office were found the head and shoulders of the bomb-thrower, as well as his overcoat.

Lynchburg Friends Not Surprised

Lynchburg, Va., Jan. 7.—J. R. Steele worked here as a concrete construction foreman for several months and Mrs. Steele and a 10-year-old son were seen at their home last night. Steele left here Thursday morning early, telling his wife that he was going to Danville, Va., to secure work on a railway contract.

There is no doubt in the minds of friends of Steele, from descriptions in press dispatches from Philadelphia, that the bomb-thrower is from this city. Those who know him well are not surprised, as they say for some time he had been experimenting with explosives and electric batteries. He frequently talked in a way that indicated thoughts of a violent nature. When told of statements attributed to Mrs. Irene Steele in Chicago, Mrs. Steele said Steele was divorced from her before his second marriage. Steele failed 10 years ago as a concrete contractor. He has had sickness in his family and had been in debt and his friends here say Steele probably was driven to desperation by his reverses.

Steele Not Divorced

Chicago, Jan. 7.—Mrs. Irene Steele last night said that she was married to Rolla Steele 14 years ago and that they never were divorced.

THE HOUSE OF LORDS.

What This Great British Institution Represents.

At first sight there is not much likeness between the comfortable country gentlemen, retired lawyers, blase men of fashion and liberal subscribers to party funds, who now drop into rather than frequent their magnificent hall, and "the mail covered barons, who proudly to battle led their vassals from Europe to Palestine's plain" in the days of the Henrys and Edwards, but in one point the house has always maintained its character through centuries—it is an aristocracy of birth, but it is still more emphatically one of wealth. The law of entail and primogeniture has kept the landed estates together as far as the law can. Many have passed by heiresses to new names or been sold by spendthrift lords, many holders of ancient titles have lost the wealth that gilded their ancestors' coronets, but new peers are almost always rich, and a title is still an attraction to an heiress. We sometimes hear that the house of lords represents nothing. This is false. It represents property. Tennyson's new Lincolnshire farmer, whose horse's hoofs trotted "proputty, proputty, proputty," is the type of a vast number of Englishmen. Such men are not only content, but proud, to be represented by the house of lords. They know that as long as the lords have their say "proputty" will have a stanch body of organized champions.—William Everett in Atlantic.

NATURAL KITCHENS.

Places Where Cooking Is Done In Boiling Springs.

There are one or two countries—Iceland, for example—where washday is not dreaded, because nature provides the hot water at one's very door in the shape of steaming springs of spouting geysers. But there is only one country where the native women do practically all their cooking by unaided nature, and that is the North island of New Zealand. Here is a wonderland of a thousand square miles so volcanic that a fire may be lighted by inserting a few sticks in the earth, and wherever one makes a hole he speedily has a pool of boiling water, into which a pudding may be lowered incased in a cloth and cooked expeditiously.

Frequently in perfectly cold streams a boiling hot current may be seen and felt running along the edge of the river, and here the Maori women do their own and the white man's washing. Naturally the volcanic region of New Zealand is a dangerous country to wander in without a guide, and many tourists have lost their lives as the result of such carelessness. Maori servants boil coffee and eggs in this way.—New York Tribune.

A Vile Performance.

On the occasion of his brother's benefit Edwin Booth was standing behind the scenes when a character actor who had been giving imitations of noted actors was about to respond to an encore.

"Whom do you imitate next?" inquired Booth.

"Well," was the reply, "I was going to represent you in Hamlet's soliloquy, but if you look on I'm afraid I shall make a mess of it."

"Suppose I imitate myself?" remarked the tragedian, and, hastily putting on the other actor's wig and buttoning up his coat, he went on and delivered the well known lines.

Next morning the newspapers stated that the imitations ruined the performance, "the personation of Edwin Booth being simply vile enough to make that actor shudder had he seen it."—Toledo Blade.

Costly Windsor Castle.

No royal castle has cost Great Britain more in hard cash than that of Windsor, says the London Chronicle. When George IV. announced his intention of making it a family residence parliament granted him £300,000 toward its reconstruction. For four years the work went merrily on under fresh grants, and the king then took possession of the private apartments. That did not end the expenditure however. By the time William IV. had satisfied himself that there was nothing more to be done the castle had swallowed up close to a million pounds.

Pope's Skull.

The skull of Alexander Pope, the poet and satirist, is in the private collection of a phrenologist. During some alterations in the churchyard where Pope was buried it was necessary to move his coffin, which was opened at the time to ascertain the state of his remains. By bribing the sexton of the church possession of the poet's skull was obtained for the night, and in the morning a different skull was returned instead. The cost of the skull, including the bribe, was £50.

His Stubbornness.

"Haven't you and your friend got through that argument yet?" asked a parent of his youngest son.

"It isn't any argument," answered the boy. "I am merely telling Jimmie the facts in the case, and he is so beastly stubborn that he won't understand."—Chums.

Escaping the Organ Grinders.

Reside close to a dentist's if you are not fond of street music. Itinerant organ men carefully avoid playing anywhere near the house of a practitioner who can effectually stop or remove all troublesome grinders.—London Punch.

GOOD AFTERNOON.

The inaugural address of Mayor Thompson is printed in full in this issue and should be carefully read and re-read particularly by the Councilmen and the voters.

It is a fact that the city's revenue is limited by law, and Quincy has only a small leeway inside the debt limit. Also all it can raise under the $12 limit for annual expenses is already apportioned.

The proposition to go to the Legislature for authority to borrow outside the debt limit will not meet with favor, because many have not forgotten the unnecessary street orders which passed during the last days of the old Council, and received the Mayor's signature.

Neither will the proposition to delay a new Coddington school meet with favor. With a leeway of $83,858 inside the debt limit, and the payment of maturing debt to the amount of $77,060, will allow new debt to the amount of $160,918. This is more than is needed for the Coddington and all other improvements.

The Mayor carefully reviews the Water department, the Sewer department, the Street department, the Fire department, the Police Department, and has some timely words on grade crossings, franchises, liquor laws, schools, Public Library, and the gypsy and brown tail moths.

The Daily Ledger hopes that Mayor Thompson may sail this year on calmer seas than was the year 1906, and extends a Happy New Year.

The battleship Connecticut, which was government built, made only 17 knots on her trial trip.

Gymnastic Exhibition

What proved to be the most interesting athletic event of the season was the gymnastic exhibition given at the Young Men's Christian Association by the Harvard University gymnastic team on Saturday evening.

A large and appreciative audience filled the gallery, and loudly applauded the efforts of the performers. Unusual interest was aroused in the event by the fact that Wallace Bennett, a resident of Quincy was manager of the team, and contributed two of the most spectacular features of the program by his club swinging and flag-swinging.

The performances of the athletes were highly finished, and gave evidence of careful coaching and long, painstaking practice.

The program consisted of work on the parallel and horizontal bars, side horse, club and flag swinging, tumbling and juggling.

The years 1905 and 1906 have been strenuous in demands, and fulfilment of matters long postponed, especially in that of appropriations for school purposes. And what is unsatisfying in it all is that the larger proportion of the accommodation provided is to meet existing wants of long standing by substituting new buildings for old quarters also without that future provision for school growth apparently warranted by the expenditure; nor is the pressure in this direction yet relieved as seen by the necessities in the Coddington school district.

Out of a total debt incurred in the past two years within the municipal debt limit of $290,490.00, the sum of $202,250.00 has been appropriated for school purposes alone.

At this meeting an order will be presented calling for the appropriation of of $42,055.95, with interest from October 8, 1906, our proportion of the expense and cost of the Fore River Bridge as assessed by a special commission appointed by the Superior Court to apportion the same upon the several municipal and quasi-public corporations benefited. Also the sum of about $15,000, our part of the cost of the Hancock street bridge, we may expect to be called upon to pay at any time, and provision must be made for it within the debt limit. The statute, however, has placed its limitations upon the municipal debt we may incur, and, necessarily, our wants must be governed by it.

We begin the year with a margin on the same of $83,858.06. Therefore, I cannot see how, for the present, any appropriation involving a debt other than stated can be made; for it seems to me that a city, no less than an individual, cannot go to the extreme limit of its credit without creating doubts in the minds of persons or corporations to whom we apply for loans. And as all applications must be accompanied with a statement of our financial condition, we cannot afford to raise questions of due care in the management of our monetary affairs.

I have dealt with the matter of the city as a borrower upon its credit as established by law.

We now turn to the matter of current expense which is to be met in the tax levy. Again the statute imposes the limit to which the tax may go, namely, twelve dollars per one thousand dollars valuation, based on two ways; First, the average of the three preceding years' valuation, less all abatements; second, on the valuation of the preceding years, less all abatements.

During the life of our city both methods have been used as the valuation on which the amount has been raised; and as by neither method can we raise a sufficient sum to pay the charges imposed by ordinances, and otherwise deemed necessary to meet the expenses, receipts of the city from various sources have been taken to make up the sum lacking.

Greater scrutiny must be used this year in the disposition of the receipts, and that less can be used for current expenses than in the past, is quite clear to me if we are not to impose a heavy burden upon the property of the city by an extreme tax rate. The chief reason for this being the fact that the main sewer charges (the city's proportion of the cost of the system) are now to be raised to pay the expenses against the same; this being the first time such has occurred, with the exception of a small amount included last year in the tax levy, as the proportion levied against private property has been expended with the exception of new assessments on extensions during the past year.

METROPOLITAN AFFAIRS.

The Metropolitan Park Commission informs me that the grading and surfacing of Furnace Brook Parkway from Adams street to the Blue Hills Reservation has been substantially completed, and it was expected to be open for public use by January first.

Wampatuck Road in the Blue Hills Reservation connecting the end of Furnace Brook Parkway with Administration Road which runs through the Reservation from east to west, has also been completed. Sassamon Road has been finished for use as a driving road from Administration Road down to the entrance of Sawcut Notch Road at the Pine Tree Brook entrance in Milton. It is therefore possible to make a pleasant circuit drive in Blue Hills Reservation, entering by Furnace Brook Parkway and driving over in succession Wampatuck Road, Administration Road, Sassamon Road and Sawcut Road, back to the Parkway.

At Quincy Shore the building of the road to subgrade from the National Sailors' home to Squantum street has been completed, and at the same time the beach along the waterside has been regraded. This work has involved the building of a concrete bridge across Sachem Brook and a concrete culvert across the mouth of the creek near the Sailors' Home. Next year it is expected to complete the work already begun on Quincy Shore, and possibly to begin work on the future connection between the Shore and Parkway.

The Metropolitan water charges for the year 1906 reached the very large sum of $46,314.16, an increase over the previous year of 30 per cent; accounted for by the method of assessment, as provided under chapter 426, Acts 1904, two thirds of which is based on consumption, becoming effective for the first time.

As I stated in my inaugural of last year, our per capita consumption of November of one year ago was the second highest of any city or town in the Metropolitan district, and in the opinion of the engineer of the distributive department of the system, was an excessively large consumption in comparison with others in the district of about our population and character. Our per capita consumption in November, 1905, was 113 gallons, while in November, 1906, it was reduced to 97 gallons. It is fair to assume that our population has not remained stationary during the past year for we have added 209 new water services, nearly all of which were connected prior to November, and therefore additional consumers during that month, showing a larger per capita reduction in comparison than the above named figure indicates.

I find by reference to meter readings covering the periods above named that the large water takers increased their consumption 17 per cent; therefore the cause for decrease is to be sought elsewhere. It is true that during the year about the average number of leakages have been found in our pipes, but taking the consumption of the two periods named we have every reason to believe the placing of meters has had a most salutary effect, and must be credited with the showing made. It is only in this direction that I see any opportunity to effect a saving in the Metropolitan charges levied upon us for water, sewerage and park purposes, which during the past year reached a total of $82,486.48, and represented a charge in the tax rate of $2.77.

There will be but a slight reduction in the South Metropolitan sewer charge, and a considerable increase on account of construction of Furnace Brook and Quincy Shore Parkways, which will be partially offset by the extra paid in last year's assessment which should have been paid in 1905 had the Commission appointed to apportion percentage reported in time.

The percentage of our assessments on these several matters is now fixed for the present five-year period; but with expenditures within our limits for these purposes, we cannot hope to escape our proportionate part of them.

WATER DEPARTMENT.

The money appropriated to extend the water mains has been expended mainly in response to petitions for the same.

COUNCILMAN STONE

The authority under which we may borrow money for the purposes of the water plant—mainly if not wholly devoted to the extension of the water mains—is about exhausted. The extension of the water mains has tended not only to the up-building of the city, its growth and the general health of the public, but has added to its receipts as well; and it is from this source alone that we may hope to make it self-paying. I am pleased to say that the estimated income for the past year has been exceeded, and if such increase in receipts as made during 1906 is continued, with the saving in Metropolitan water charges, we may soon hope to equal the expenses of the department.

I will therefore ask the Council to grant the necessary authority to petition the legislature to borrow a further sum of money for the extension of water mains, fixtures, and additions; and if that authority is obtained, I would recommend that we make the annual appropriation for extensions. Several petitions for extensions are now on file and should be attended to in the spring as early as possible.

The sum appropriated for the purchase and installation of meters has been almost wholly expended in the purchase of the Empire meter manufactured by the National Meter Company. Upon investigation I found great difference of opinion as to the merits of the different makes upon the market, and only after considerable correspondence and interviews with persons connected with public and private water supplies was the purchase made. The consensus of opinion was that the Empire meter had proven to be the most economical, durable and accurate; so simple in recording that the average man may guage his own consumption, and read it easily. I have not the least doubt that the reduction in the per capita consumption must be ascribed to the installation of meters. We placed them where we suspected a large waste occurred without benefit to the individual or the company; it being simply a careless waste with no compensating return to the city. I feel that the reading of the meters by the inspector and the water taker as well, is teaching a lesson in economy which it is plain to see must be advantageous to all, and for which ample opportunity still exists, our consumption in November, 1906, being largely in excess of other cities that are metered.

I recommend that a sufficient sum be appropriated for the further installation of meters.

SEWER DEPARTMENT.

The money appropriated for this department has been mainly expended to complete that section for the disposition of the sewage at the Fore River Shipbuilding Company's plant and vicinity. This has been a very expensive piece of work, and justifiable only because of the large interests involved.

At the time of the largest construction of the system of sewerage in the city, this and other sections of similar character were omitted because of the known difficulties and expense attached thereto. In my opinion, when the city is compelled to take up these other section to which I have referred, the work should be let by contract to the lowest responsible bidder, as the city is not equipped to perform it economically.

Other streets in localities where premises were deemed detrimental to the public health and ordered abated by the Board of Health as well as minor petitions for other extension, have been sewered.

The Metropolitan Park Commission requests if any sewer is to be constructed in the Quincy Shore Parkway it be done preceding completion of the roadway. I would suggest that this matter be taken up as soon as possible, but only where absolutely necessary should flowage to the parkway be permitted, and as little entry as possible be made upon it, for we have to consider that only one side can be assessed instead of two sides as on city streets.

During the year petitions will be received for the extension of the sewer, and for sanitary reasons should be granted if possible.

I would recommend that we make a sufficient appropriation.

STREET DEPARTMENT.

The decision of the Fore River Bridge matter places one-third the cost of maintenance on us, whereas heretofore our proportion on the old bridge was five twenty-fourths, and adds an increased cost. I fear it will be expensive to maintain, as even now a considerable sum is needed to put it into good condition. This will increase the annual appropriation heretofore made for bridge account.

The trustees of the bridge have ordered the demolition of what was formerly the old toll-house. With that removed, Washington street can be built to its width at this point.

The new streets laid out and ordered built in the various sections of the city, with the exception of those ordered at the end of the year, have all been completed, meeting in many instances, long standing demands, affording conveniences previously lacking, and increasing in value abutting property. To encourage development in our growing city, it should be our policy to act as liberally as possibly and comply with the ordinance relating to streets, as far as our means will permit. We now have about 78 miles of accepted streets, all of them at sometime of the year requiring attention, which of course, means money.

Where our streets intersect the Quincy Shore Parkway it will involve changes in grade of some if not all. Plans are now being prepared, and joint action by the City and Park Commision will be necessary, and may involve us in some expense. Later, I will communicate further with you in the matter.

During the year we have renewed contract with the Quincy Electric Light and Power Company for the usual period of three years, beginning July 1, 1906, on terms enabling us to meet a very large accumulation of petitions for street lighting, without extra cost to the city, so that with a few exceptions present demands are now met.

The Citizens' Gas Company, since its acquirement of the property, has made very extensive additions to its mains, reaching portions of the city not heretofore piped, and is now in position to furnish street lighting, which will later give the city whatever benefits may accrue from competition. Well lighted streets are protection to life and property of the highest value, avoided for their publicity by those intent on crime and misdemeanor.

Last year I called the attention of the Council to the city's need of obtaining the best material possible, of trap rock character, for use on streets. This is an urgent matter, especially if we are to maintain in good condition our macadam streets. There is heavy traffic on many of our streets of this kind, and it is important we should have the proper material with which to renew them. I think we do not possess it now, and provision should be made by purchase, or lease, to secure a location that will furnish what we require.

I ask your consideration of this matter.

GRADE CROSSINGS.

The New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company has petitioned the Superior Court to appoint a Commission to take up the question of the abolition of the grade crossing at Saville and Water streets, respectively; the Commission to decide whether the security and convenience of the public require alteration of said crossings, or the discontinuance thereof; to prescribe the manner of the work and whether it shall be done by the city or the R. R. Co.

Both crossings are important arteries of travel, and both dangerous because of their constantly growing use by pedestrians and vehicles. And while none will object to the abolishment of the grade, a discontinuance of the streets will prove inconvenient, detrimental and damaging to many interests.

This is as important a matter as the city can be involved in; and in order to obtain the best results, I hope a plan contributing to improved transit facilities and satisfactory to the interests involved may be obtained. Under the grade crossing Act, we are required to pay not than 10 per cent of the cost of same.

FRANCHISES.

The Old Colony Street Railway's application for a trolley franchise to convey express matter through our streets, has been refused in one instance, while the other is still before us.

The status of street railways to a locality has in the past few years undergone radical changes in Massachusetts, brought about by the investment, growth and consolidation of the interests involved. At the time the selectmen of the town of Quincy granted the original franchises, locations were revocable by the same authority if public necessity could be shown. Furthermore the promoters and investors were local men all of whom were interested in the prosperity and growth of the town, believing it would aid development by opening up outlying sections, and increasing its valuation. These expectations have all been realized and franchises then looked upon as of small value have grown to be a considerable asset. Credit must be given the street railway as being a large factor in development, and it is along a clear appreciation of both interests and a mutual understanding whereby both are protected that the highest interest for all may be achieved. What was once a small local affairs has by consolidation become part of a system represented by 342 miles of trackage. The local investors and directors have been eliminated, and where once subject to local control, it has now been changed and placed in the hands of a state commission whose approval is required upon any action of the local authorities to impose restrictions in granting further rights and privileges or interference with locations of what is now an extensive system serving numerous communities.

An agreement has been sought in the interest of the city, if the rights and privileges petitioned for were granted, in prompt service and deliveries with lower rates than now existing as partial compensation for the same, as well as a positive knowledge that there will be no interference with the passenger service which at the present time is inadequate on some lines in the city to meet existing demands. My opinion is that more double trackage must be had on the lines referred to if increased traffic with present and future demands are to be promptly met.

I believe the franchise asked for, if granted, is bound in the near future to be of great value to the Company; and if facilities are provided for prompt service and delivery with cheaper transportation rates obtained by the citizens, it will help solve in part some of the industrial problem of the day, and be mutually beneficial.

In my opinion, the requests we have made are not unfair and should be granted prior to favorable action in giving the valuable rights and privileges asked for.

FIRE DEPARTMENT.

The new combination apparatus with the necessary horses ordered for Houghs Neck was early in the year put into commission. A bell striker was also placed in the station; and with the permanent men and call men attached to the Company there is an equipment equal to cope with the needs of this district, which affords fire protection satisfactory to the citizens. The City Council has also ordered four fire alarm boxes placed at convenient points, which will further add to the efficiency of the fire department in this section.

As requested by me last year, an appropriation has been made to divide fire alarm circuit No. 1, which will cover the large property interests in the centre by a separate and distinct line. By using the ducts reserved for the use of the fire alarm in the underground conduits this line will be much better protected and less liable to breaks; therefore affording greater security than heretofore.

During the year the chief engineer changed the so-called running card of the apparatus, dividing the city into districts: the first alarm to be responded to only by the apparatus in that particular district; a general alarm calling for all the apparatus. I consider the plan a good one, as we have many false alarms throughout the year—there is less wear and tear of apparatus, it tends to higher efficiency in both men and equipment, and affords greater protection to the property interests which are more uniformly covered than before.

The ordinance has been changed during the year, creating the rank of captain and lieutenant at the central fire station, which positions have been filled, and increasing the compensation to be paid to permanent men.

POLICE DEPARTMENT.

This department has great responsibility resting upon it, but with a strict discharge of the duties by its individual members it is entitled to the cooperation of all law abiding citizens. To obtain the respect of the citizens the conduct of the policemen must be above suspicion. They cannot associate on terms of intimacy with persons whose transactions are questionable, or visit in a friendly way premises with a shady reputation. As the vested guardians of the peace and of the enforcement of the law and order, they should appreciate the fact that their conduct must be flawless if they are to inspire respect and orderly conduct in others.

Unquestionably, the work of the department is growing, as well as that of all other departments; and it is largely a question of means as to how to provide in sufficient amount to meet the pressing necessities of all. I see no way whereby the work of the force can be made less exacting. It is only by the best endeavor and efficiency of the department that we may hope to meet the wishes of the citizens and improve existing conditions.

During the past year the express laws relating to the transportation of intoxicating liquor into the city, became effective. It appears to me that the city council should exercise greater scrutiny and discrimination in granting these licenses. What experience has been had in the operation of the laws during the year may be obtained from the records of this department, whose labors and responsibilities I feel have been increased thereby.

I would recommend a closer adherence to the no-license sentiment of the city, and a stricter interpretation of what defines a "common carrier" under the law, to be our guide in further action in this matter.

The ordinance has been changed increasing the force, and compensation to be paid.

NO-LICENSE.

Again the citizens under the local option law have emphatically recorded their decision to pursue the uniform policy of the last quarter of a century. Majorities rule under our form of government, and it becomes those who would do otherwise and favor license, to conform to that decision.

Industrially, we are growing very fast; and being made up of a cosmopolitan population, some portions of which have a weakness for strong drink, the temptations to sell it are many. I do not question but what the illicit sale of liquor is daily occurring, but it is surrounded by all the concealment that can be thought of both by the violator of the law and the purchaser.

If the law is to be strictly enforced, public sentiment must be active and continued; for I do not think the duty of the citizen ends by simply voting. In many instances they come into

1,166,353 ALIENS

Numb r Entered at American Ports During the Fiscal Year

NOT OF BETTER CLASS

Physical and Mental Quality Much Below That of Immigrants of Former Years--Japanese Laborers Imported

Washington, Jan. 7.—The fiscal year ended June 30, 1906, produced a record eclipsing all former figures on the subject of immigration, according to the annual report of F. P. Sargent, the commissioner general of immigration.

During that period the population of the United States was increased by the admission of 1,100,735 immigrant aliens, and 65,618 non-immigrant aliens entered at its ports, making the total admissions 1,166,353. The increase over last year's record was 106,598. During the fiscal year 1905 11,480 aliens were rejected and during the past year 12,432. Of the immigrant aliens, that is, those who intended settling in the United States, there were 764,463 males and 336,272 females.

"Without exception," the report says, "all the countries from which we formerly obtained the greater part of our foreign population, and which are inhabited by races nearly akin to our own, have supplied us with smaller numbers during the past year than during 1905. Ireland sent 17,950, England 15,210, Sweden 3281, Germany 3010, Denmark 1229, and Scotland 1111 less. On the other hand the four largest gains are: Italy, 51,641; Russia, 30,768; Greece, 8974, and Turkey (in Europe and Asia), 5165."

The immigration from Austria-Hungary amounted to 265,138; Italy, including Sicily and Sardinia, 273,120; Russian empire and Finland, 215,665; China, 1544; Japan, 13,835, and the West Indies 13,656.

The immigration from southern and eastern Europe, the commissioner says, is a result of general unrest existing among the laboring classes of those sections, which is encouraged or even fomented by the steamship agents scouring the country for passengers, and the commissioner says more drastic measures are required to effect a discontinuance of these practices. That the physical and mental quality of the aliens we are now receiving is much below that of those who have come in former years, he says, is evident.

The report refers to what the commissioner believes to have been extensive schemes to secure foreign labor brought to light in the past year and now being investigated. The evidence is already at hand, the report says, to show that some individual or corporation is engaged in importing numbers of Japanese laborers to work on the railroads of the northwest.

These Japanese come to Hawaii destined to "hotels" kept by labor agents and claim that they are merely seeking labor that may be secured in the islands. They are admitted to the islands and after remaining a few days or weeks there they ship for the northwestern mainland ports. Having been admitted at the Hawaiian ports, their voyage thence is "coastwise" and they cannot be examined on arrival at the mainland port under the alien labor contract or any other provision of the immigration laws. The immigration commissioner at San Francisco reports that Japanese have been arriving there coastwise from Honolulu and from Canadian ports at the rate of 1000 to 3000 a month. The report says "that several thousand laborers have been imported under this evasion of the law is not doubted."

The Chinese exclusion law and the many difficulties attending its enforcement are discussed. The commissioner reports that on the Mexican border Chinese coolies are constantly being smuggled into this country from Mexico.

The commissioner again recommends increasing the penalties on steamship companies for bringing aliens afflicted with dangerous or loathsome diseases and either to enlarge the prohibited classes or to adopt means to compel steamship companies to observe in good faith the law which forbids them to encourage or solicit immigration.

During the early part of the year, the report says, the "white slave" traffic was extensively revived. Many of the girls and women imported for immoral purposes were brought through Mexico and secured a right to citizenship by marrying Chinese born in this country.

Supposed Bomb Explosion

Rochester, Jan. 7.—The entire front of the building at 38 North Water street, in the business section, was blown out last night by an explosion. The explosion broke window glass on both sides of the street and was heard for blocks. The cause of the explosion is still a mystery, but it is believed to have been caused by a bomb. No one was injured.

Funeral of Prefect Launitz

St. Petersburg, Jan. 7.—The funeral of Major General Von der Launitz, prefect of St. Petersburg, who was assassinated last Thursday, was held yesterday and was attended by a majority of the members of the cabinet. The body was taken to Tambov for interment.

Thirteen Lives Lost in Wreck

Ancona, Italy, Jan. 7.—During a storm the Greek sailing boat Urania went on the rocks near here and was wrecked. Thirteen of the members of the crew were drowned.

CLUBBED AND SHOT

Mysterious Assault Upon Undertaker by an Unknown Man

Providence, Jan. 7.—A mysterious assault, murderous in its character, was committed upon John P. Sutton, an undertaker's assistant, by an unknown man, who, after clubbing his victim over the head with the butt of a revolver, fired three shots at him, two of them taking effect. The wounds inflicted upon Sutton are painful, but are not expected to prove fatal.

Sutton is employed by Undertaker Lynch and lives in a tenement over the undertaking rooms at 603 Broadway, Olneyville. Sunday morning he answered a ring at the bell and found a stranger who said that a man on Amherst street was dead and asked Sutton to attend to the case. Sutton invited the stranger into the office and the latter suddenly struck the undertaker over the head with the butt of a revolver.

Sutton attempted to grapple with his assailant, but the latter eluded him and rapidly fired three shots, one entering Sutton's right eye, another his neck, while the third lodged in a casket. Then, rushing from the house, the man made his escape.

Sutton did not lose consciousness and had strength enough left to reach the telephone and call for an ambulance. Meantime, his wife had come to his assistance and the police were summoned by her.

The injured man was removed to a hospital and the entire police force was ordered to make a vigorous search for the stranger. He is described by Sutton as a man about 40 years of age, light complexion, and wearing a suit of dark clothing.

When France Will Have Liberty

Paris, Jan. 7.—The Temps considers that Archbishop Ireland placed his finger upon the national weakness when, "sparing neither republican, reactionary or anti-clerical Catholic, he reproaches all alike with their traditional hereditary inability to comprehend the meaning of true liberty. Liberty will not be established in France until everyone recognizes that the question of going or of not going to mass concerns the conscience of the individual and not the government. This is what the French people must learn soon and would learn if we had many prelates as liberal as Archbishop Ireland."

Independent of Federation

Boston, Jan. 7.—The convention of building laborers' unions belonging to the international union not affiliated with the American Federation of Labor yesterday reaffirmed its independence of the international body and formed the New England Building Laborers' Protective union. There were delegates from 20 of the unions of the six states. William Buckley of Lowell was deposed from office, and Edward Burnes of Lawrence succeeded him as acting president.

Arrest of Anarchists

New York, Jan. 7.—Alexander Berkman, who last summer was released from state prison after serving 14 years for an attack on Henry C. Frick, with Emma Goldman and two others, was arrested yesterday by detectives who broke up an alleged anarchist meeting on the East Side. Emma Goldman made an incendiary speech, while Berkman exhorted the audience to disobey the command to disperse. The other prisoners are John R. Coryell and Israel L. Schwartz.

Army of Postoffice Employes

Washington, Jan. 7.—The annual report of First Assistant Postmaster General Hancock shows that at the close of the fiscal year 65,600 postoffices were in operation and that the total number of employes, not including postmasters and assistant postmasters, was nearly 150,000. The total personnel of postoffices of all classes aggregated 205,288. The gain in revenue from the postoffices during the year—about $15,000,000—was unexpectedly large.

Fairbank's Reply to Moran

Worcester, Mass., Jan. 7.—"Irrelevant to the issue, scandalous and impertinent" is the characterization by counsel for Wilson H. Fairbank of the answer fired by John B. Moran, district attorney for Suffolk county, to the suit brought against him by Fairbank, growing out of allegations made by Moran in political speeches during the recent campaign for the governorship of Massachusetts.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Rev. Thomas L. Gason, S. J., professor of ethics and political economy in Boston college, was elevated to the presidency of the college to succeed Rev. William F. Gannon, S. J., who goes to New York. Gason was born in England in 1859.

A number of men who served in the Philippines in 1899 and 1900 organized the Bumpus camp of the army of the Philippines at Boston. The members of the camp are nearly all New Englanders. The camp is named after Lieutenant Bumpus of Quincy, Mass., who was killed at Balangiga in 1900.

E. H. Harriman, who underwent an operation about a week ago at New York, is doing very well. The physicians say that Harriman needs absolute rest for perhaps a week or more.

The White Star line announces that it will transfer the British terminal of its New York Wednesday mail service to Southampton. The service will be maintained by four steamships.

There is a movement to have the New Brunswick Southern railway between St. John and St. Stephen taken over by the Intercolonial railway and made a part of the Canadian government system.

THE NEW CITY COUNCIL.

The Ages Average Younger Than Last Year.

The Daily Ledger makes a few interesting comparisons between the new Council and the old Councils below. Where the Council of 1904 had only 3 new members, the Council of 1905 had 11, the Council of 1906 had 13, and the new Council 9.

The members of the City Council of 1906 average younger in years than two previous Councils, but it is a difference of only a few months. The aggregate number of years of the new Council is 865 against 870 in 1906.

Councilman-elect McGilvray will be the youngest member, being only 23 years, while Councilman Falconer is the oldest in years.

Perhaps the most remarkable observation is the fact that a larger number of the new Council are foreign born than Quincy born, but the same was true in 1906. Eleven of the 23 however were born in Massachusetts.

FAMILY PERISHED

Illuminating Gas Caused the Death of Six Persons

FIVE SUFFOCATED IN BED

Head of Family Probably Made Efforts to Secure Fresh Air, but Failed--Poison Entered House Through Sewer Pipe

Burlington, Vt., Jan. 7.—Through some unknown manner, but probably by way of a sewer pipe, illuminating gas entered the house of George H. Devino, a grocery clerk at Winooski, some time during Saturday night and asphyxiated the entire family of six persons, consisting of the father, mother and four children. All were dead when Devino's brother broke into the house. The children were Isabel, 5 years old, Madeline, 3; Yvonne, 2, and Cecelia, 5 months.

Devino's home is in Winooski and a milkman who called there shortly after 10 o'clock Sunday forenoon discovered that the family was not up. The man smelled gas and hastened to the next house, occupied by Edward Devino. The two men ran back to the house and burst in the door. The hall was so full of gas that the men hesitated before going into the rooms. Placing handkerchiefs before their faces, the two men opened the door into a bedroom on the ground floor, where they found the bodies of Devino, his wife and the two youngest children. Windows were hastily thrown open, but it was soon ascertained that all were dead. Up stairs Isabel and Madeline were also found dead in their bed.

The bodies of Yvonne and the baby were found as they were tucked in their bed by their mother the night before. The body of Mrs. Devino was on the bed by their sides. The father, however, was lying on the floor and it was evident that he had made some effort to get to the window. The body was face downward, and on turning it over the men found that Devino had endeavored to escape the fumes by placing cotton batting in his mouth and over his nose.

The authorities were notified of the accident and the bodies removed to the house of Mrs. Edwin Devino, mother of the dead man.

The Devino house is not connected with the gas main at Winooski, but as the odor was very noticeable about the closets and sink drains it is believed that the gas came from a break in the main and entered the house through the regular sewer connection.

Three Killed In Hotel Fire

Delhi, N. Y., Jan. 7.—Three lives were lost in a fire that destroyed the American hotel at this place. The dead are William Winter and his wife and John O'Connor. All were permanent guests at the hotel. They had lived in Delhi for years and were prominent in the business community. The fire was discovered in the apartments of Winter and his wife on the third floor. O'Connor also occupied apartments on the third floor. The other guests escaped by leaping from the windows in their night clothing.

Barber Shop Carried Big Stock

New York, Jan. 7.—Goods said to be worth $2000 were seized last night on steamer Tagus, from West Indian ports, by two special inspectors of the treasury department as the steamer lay at her pier here. All the stuff was taken from the barber shop, which is conducted by an Italian. The articles included mackintoshes, Panama hats, cigars, cigarets, shoes, slippers, umbrellas, hosiery, ladies' embroidered shirt waists, toilet articles and cases of fine perfumery.

Collision Caused Panic

Naples, Jan. 7.—Steamer Prinzessin Irene, in leaving port for New York, was caught in a strong windstorm and damaged. She re-entered the harbor and collided with steamer Moltke. Both were injured and will be compelled to remain here three weeks for repairs. The 950 passengers on board the Prinzessin Irene became panic-stricken when the collision occurred and several of them were slightly injured.

Our Great Export Trade

Washington, Jan. 7.—A statement issued by the bureau of statistics of the department of commerce and labor announces that this country now ranks third in the value of manufactures entering the world's international commerce, the amount of its exports for the past year having aggregated more than $700,000,000. The value of American trade in the foreign markets is twice as great now as eight years ago.

Customs People Seized Steamer

Halifax, Jan. 7.—The Canadian Pacific liner Lake Manitoba was seized previous to her sailing for Antwerp and London for an infringement of the customs laws. It is alleged that the customs seal placed on her storeroom by the St. John customs authorities was broken on the way from that port to Halifax. After depositing a bond the steamer was released.

Salvador's Latest Rebellion

San Salvador, Jan. 7.—The Salvadorean government officially declares that armed revolutionists disguised as soldiers have appeared in Estanzuelas. A number of persons connected with the rebellion have been imprisoned here and in Honduras.

BOSTON'S QUIET SUNDAY

Many Accustomed to Work on the Lord's Day Had Vacation

Boston, Jan. 7.—Sunday laws were obeyed better in Boston yesterday than for many years. Nearly every one who formerly had found occasion to perform some kind of labor on the Lord's day had learned by the numerous court decisions just what was permissive, with the result that the day was a very quiet one.

Work on the Washington street tunnel ceased entirely, as well as that on the construction of a sewer in the Back Bay district. Druggists throughout the city refused to sell anything except medicines, tobacco, candy and soda fountain refreshments. It was impossible to buy any toilet articles, even toothbrushes being considered merchandise. Caterers in the residential section refused to deliver ice cream and a number of bakers who were detected engaged in their vocations received summonses from the police.

It is anticipated that the agitation over the Sunday laws will figure prominently in the present session of the legislature and that a complete revision will be suggested by a special committee which has been investigating the subject since the adjournment of the last legislature.

Lynn Police Enforce Law

Lynn, Mass., Jan. 7.—The wave of agitation for a more vigorous enforcement of the Sunday laws reached Lynn yesterday and, while no arrests were made nor summonses served, there was a general closing of all stores, except those that are permitted by law to be open, as well as a cessation of all work. The police stopped the work of building a sewer on the grounds of one of the shoe factories and at another factory the instalment of a new boiler was also prevented by the authorities.

Old Tavern Held Many Secrets

Arlington, Mass., Jan. 7.—A raid which was begun shortly after midnight Saturday at the old Cooper tavern, a relic of revolutionary days, developed so many secret places in which a considerable quantity of liquors and gambling implements were found that the search is still in progress. Many strange chambers were opened, sliding panels disclosed hidden closets and behind chests and old bureaus were peculiar recesses, all of which are said to have contained illegal goods.

Hotel and Contents Burned

Westboro, Mass., Jan. 7.—The Whitney hotel, a four-storry brick structure containing 50 rooms, was burned. The fire started by the explosion of a lamp in the basement, which was occupied by a meat market, and the flames leaped to all parts of it with remarkable rapidity, bursting from the windows of each floor almost simultaneously. Practically all the furnishings of the hotel and the personal effects of 20 guests in the house were burned.

Victim of Hydrophobia

New Haven, Jan. 7.—An autopsy performed on the body of Oscar Wilson, engineer on a local tugboat, the cause of whose death at Grace hospital baffled the physicians there, revealed the fact that death was due to hydrophobia. Wilson was taken to the hospital Saturday, but was not thought seriously ill. In the evening he was seized with convulsions and died. It is not known where he became infected.

A Suspicious Looking Object

Lynn, Mass., Jan. 7.—A piece of iron pipe plugged at both ends, which the police thought might prove to be a bomb, was found last night lying on the west-bound track of the Boston and Maine railroad, a short distance from the station here. The tube was turned over to the state police and an investigation showed that it was a dry battery from a small electric pocket lamp.

Succumbed to Gas Poisoning

Melrose, Mass.,.Jan. 7.—Miss Agnes Geary, aged 20, who applied for work last Wednesday at the house of William A. Dole, and who was found insensible from gas poisoning the next morning, died yesterday after remaining unconscious for four days. The relatives of Miss Geary are not known here. The physicians were surprised at her remarkable vitality.

Got Bullet Through His Brain

South Framingham, Mass., Jan. 7.—In a quarrel among Italian workmen employed as railroad section hands, Antonio Gesonio was shot and the police are searching for "Patsy" Vizzo, who is said to have fired the shot. The bullet intered Gesonio's left eye and, passing through his brain, passed out through the skull at the rear. Gesonio cannot recover.

Killed by His Own Truck

Lynn, Mass., Jan. 7.—Patrick Sexton, a teamster, was driving a four-horse hitch attached to a truck carrying 10 tons of rosin. He was adjusting the harness of one of the horses when the team started ahead unexpectedly and he was thrown to the ground, falling so that the wheels of the truck went over his neck, killing him instantly.

Many Persons Dragged to Safety

Boston, Jan. 7.—Policemen and firemen dashed into a burning tenement at 431 Hanover street early Sunday and dragged nearly a score of people to safety. The tenement was occupied by 16 Italian families. A similar fire in an adjoining house some years ago resulted in the death of nine persons.

Two Bitten by Rabid Dog

Moosup, Conn., Jan. 7.—A rabid dog ran through this place, biting an 8-year-old girl named Gaston on the leg and dashing into the boiler room of a woolen factory, where it bit the watchman, Andrew Broullard, on the wrist. The dog was killed.

How the Auto Did It

By IRVING CRANE

Copyright, 1906, by P. C. Eastment

Mazie Jefferson and her mother had come into the city from their country home to do some shopping, and because the cabman overcharged them and because Mazie turned indignant and said she would go to a police station before she would submit to be swindled a crowd began to gather.

Harry Finchly was in the crowd. He promptly espoused the cause of the women and was struck by cabby's whip. In return he pulled cabby off the box and flung him about in the dust until the man looked like a bundle of lost rags. Then, no policeman having appeared to interfere with the natural course of events, the women were escorted to a hotel.

Cards were exchanged and thanks returned, and "all's well that ends well" would have been the finish had not young Mr. Finchly decided that Miss Mazie was an extremely fine looking girl. It had been at least a year since he had met her equal. Within two hours he was longing for another look into her brown eyes and recalling with satisfaction what a wealth of hair she had, how white and even were her teeth and what a cute dimple ornamented her chin. At the end of twenty-four hours romance and love were at work.

Of course Harry had been invited to call if he ever found himself in Westchester county. Miss Mazie, who did most of the talking to him as well as to the cabman, couldn't do less than issue this invitation, but she hadn't the least idea that her rescuer would ever take the trouble to travel their way. A surprise was in store for her. He made a call within a week, and he took pains to thoroughly identify himself.

His trip into the country was made in his automobile, and it soon became a regular thing for him to be seen skimming over the roads once a week. Mr. Jefferson liked him. Mrs. Jefferson thought he was a very proper man indeed, and Mazie—well, she wasn't telling her thoughts, but if they hadn't favored the young man in a general way he would have found her confined to her room with a convenient headache.

An acquaintance begun in April had progressed to September without a thing to mar it. It had ripened into friendship at least, and there were signs that it was nearing the critical point. Then one day Harry Finchly did an unwise thing. In his guileless and innocent way he mentioned that he had given a little dinner to a little actress the night before. In an instant the brown eyes that had been full of laughter began to harden.

He saw that he had made a mistake, and he began to hedge—that is, he explained that the mother of the little actress was at the dinner. The point of Miss Mazie's nose seemed to turn up. Mr. Finchly further explained that two aunts and two uncles of the actress were also at dinner. Half a minute later he was protesting that he would never have given the dinner but for the fact that the little actress seemed to be hungry and he felt sorry for her. It had not been much of a dinner anyhow. He had sat at one end of the dining room and the actress at the other, and they had chewed olives and drunk poor claret and confined their conversation to the weather.

In fact, Mr. Finchly did all possible in the next few minutes to repair his blunder. He even went the length of saying that the little actress had a cast in one eye and was probably twenty years older than she claimed to be, but when he had finished and could protest no more Miss Mazie asked to be excused for a moment, and he felt a chill around his heart. The mother came into the parlor to entertain him, and, although both made a great effort, conversation dragged.

When Miss Mazie walked out of the parlor she simply wanted to be alone for ten minutes to recover her self possession. She was furious at the little actress, at Mr. Finchly and at herself, but she didn't want the second person mentioned to even suspect such a state of affairs. She would smooth the lines out of her face, coax back a smile and return to him and say that she always had admired little actresses!

Her intentions were good and politic and diplomatic, but her temper got the best of her. Under the big walnut tree at the gate stood Mr. Finchly's auto. He always acted as his own chauffeur. Twenty times over he had taken the Jeffersons out for a spin, and Miss Mazie had entertained an idea for some time that she knew all about the running of the machine.

As she walked about to calm herself she caught sight of the auto, and there was mischief in her eyes as she ran toward it and climbed in. She actually did know enough to start the thing and get headed down the broad turnpike. Perhaps she knew enough to stop and turn, but the sensation of being alone gave her a helpless feeling. She put on speed instead of diminishing it, and in the course of five minutes she was whizzing down that old colonial cow trail in a way that made the telephone poles sit up and wonder.

The first living thing met was a trusting and confiding calf that had escaped from a field and was wandering at large to broaden its mind. When it saw a cloud of dust coming down the pike, it trusted that a windfall of rich green grass was to be had for the picking up. It advanced to the middle of the road with eyes bulging out and ten seconds later woke up in a far distant spot and in a mussed up condition. Miss Mazie had the steering wheel in hand. In fact, she was frozen to it. She could hold the old machine reasonably straight in the middle of the road, but she was helpless beyond that.

The next incident was a load of hay with two farmers on top. They were men who had never harmed a human being, and they had no idea that any human being wanted to harm them. Rude was their awakening. They held the middle of the road until they saw that the auto meant to run into them head-on. Then they swerved and began to gesticulate and yell to the white faced girl. They said "Darn it" and "Dum it" and "By gosh" and succeeded in saving their lives. One hind wheel of the wagon was chopped off by the auto, however, and as the machine careened onward it also carried with it a fair sized haystack.

"Oh, Harry!" wailed the girl as she turned a corner and felt the machine running on two wheels, but Harry was not there. He had finally bade Mrs. Jefferson adieu and found his car gone. He was after it now with a horse and buggy. He was making six miles an hour, while the flier was flying along at nearly thirty.

A quarter of a mile beyond the turn a farmer was guiding a drove of hogs. There were twelve in the drove, and he was changing them from one lot to another. He knew that the Spanish war had ended and that the country was at peace, and he was humming a hymn, and the hogs were grunting grunts of satisfaction when that auto came howling down upon them. It seemed to be standing on its hind legs and pawing the air. It was hissing and gurgling and roaring and crying for blood.

"Gosh all hemlock!" shouted the farmer as he made for the fence and fell over into the field.

The hogs had no time for words or for athletics. It seemed to the weeping and terrified girl that the full dozen were picked up and flung sky high. Two of them came down in the back seat and installed themselves in comfortable positions for the remainder of the ride, while the others shot right and left, their remains to be gathered up by the owner later on.

The hog episode was scarcely two minutes old when a young man in a buggy appeared a mile ahead. He was a young man with red cheeks and a marble brow, who was driving to the city to invest in green goods. He held up his hand as a sign that his horse did not like autos. No good. Then he rose up in his buggy and waved his arm. He was still waving when the cloud of dust passed over him and left him a wreck on the sands of time. Some day he may tell his grandchildren that he was flung 200 feet high and 400 feet sideways, and he will not be exaggerating much either.

A constable and an old wagon finally stopped the runaway. The officer saw it coming and shoved the ancient vehicle across the road. When the collision came the auto took a skate into the bushes and brought up against a tree and rested there. Before Miss Mazie could half explain matters she found herself before a country justice of the peace, and he was solemnly saying:

"This is certainly a case for the higher court. It is not only running away with an auto and letting it run away with you, but you have been stealing hogs."

Miss Mazie wept. She looked so pretty when she wept that the heart of the constable was touched. He took the justice outdoors and was trying to touch his heart and have the hog stealing charge left out when Harry Finchly drove up on the gallop. He had traced the auto by a trail of dead hogs and frightened farmers, and he had arrived just in time.

"Oh, Harry!" was all that the girl could say as she threw herself into his arms and sobbed on his shoulder.

That was quite enough. He patted her golden head and gave the justice to understand that his honor was descended from the Spartans and always died in the last ditch, and the fine was reduced to $10 and paid. Then came the brushing away of tears and the return home, followed by family rejoicing that the lamb had returned alive. Then—then—well, don't be stupid. Those things always turn out the same way, and it is the best way.

An Ancient Telephone.

In 1783 M. Linquet de la Bastille issued a prospectus, published in the "Correspondence Secrete," London, 1788 (volume 14, page 302), of "a singular machine or experience of the propagation of sound and the voice through tubes prolonged to a great distance." If it succeeded, he announced, people would be able to maintain with their sweethearts and friends at a distance of some hundreds of leagues a conversation which would "become somewhat public on the way, but by suppressing the names no one would be in the secret of the interlocutors." But it is not recorded that the scheme was put into practice. In a paper published in L'Illustration for 1854 by M. Charles Bourseul he says: "Let us imagine that a person speaks near to a mobile plate sufficiently flexible not to lose any of the vibrations produced by his voice and that this plate interrupts and establishes accordingly communication with a battery. Then we might have at a distance another plate which would give at the same time the same vibrations. An electric battery, two vibrating plates and a wire would be sufficient." In apportioning the honors of telephonic discovery M. Bourseul at least would seem entitled to a share.

Rev. James Norcross of Jamaica Plain spoke at the Y. M. C. A. Sunday afternoon. An address, filled with good cheer for the year 1907, delivered by a speaker possessing the gift of oratory held a large audience of men for a most interesting half an hour. The boys' choir of Christ church sang several selections in their usual fine manner.

Surprise for The Octopus

The crew of the submarine Octopus, which is having her trials between Hangman's island and Fort Warren, had quite an experience on Saturday. While submerged the boat ran into thick water and the crew were puzzled to know what it meant.

After running for quite a distance they came to the surface to see what was doing, and were more than surprised to find that they were surrounded by sewage. It was then learned that they had unconsciously run into the outlet of the South Metropolitan sewer which empties off Peddock's island.

The sewer was discharging at the time and the Octopus had run quite a distance in the thick mass. The crew had a good laugh to themselves and then backed out into open water.

During her runs on Saturday she made over 11 knots on the surface, and nearly 10 knots submerged.

Pocket Business.

Officers Larkin and Thorne ran across two men on Sunday near the corner of Chubbuck street and Des Moines road, whom they had reason to believe were doing a pocket liquor business. One of the men, who gave his name as John Tatian, was arrested. The other fellow took timely warning and made his escape. Later in the day he foolishly returned to Quincy to bail Tatian. The result was he was immediately arrested and locked up. He gave his name as Vehan Bedigian. Both were arraigned in court.

The Superior Civil Court

The Norfolk Superior Court civil session for January, came in this morning, Judge Hardy presiding. The time-honored custom of calling the trial list was not observed this time on account of several cases being especially assigned to begin with. The trial list for this term is the longest ever made up at Dedham, there being over four hundred cases on it.

The action of Dunham vs McDonald et al which ended the work for the last term, was not allowed to go to the jury the court ruling that the plaintiff had not shown that he had a case, Edward J. Parker for plaintiff; Walter I. Badger for defendants.

The next jury waived session will last only five days,—the first week in February. Divorce cases stand but little chance of being heard, as there are far more other cases awaiting trial than can be disposed of in in so short a time, the December list having been reduced very little and many cases having become ripe for trial since.

possession of information that would, if disclosed, be of value to the police; and the enforcement of the law can be more nearly attained by the combined efforts of all.

Constant vigilance and honest work by the police is imperative, for in no wise can they be relieved of the responsibility resting upon them, and for which I shall hold them fully accountable.

SCHOOLS.

The question of the needs of our public schools is always prominent, and, with the steady growth in those of school age, promises to continue so. In proportionate numbers, we are above the average, calling for a large expenditure in the current expenses, and making demands upon the municipal debt very largely in excess of all other expenditures combined.

A generous liberality has been the policy of the city in educational matters, but with the large growth in pupils the present program is how to provide for them in equal degree as in the past without corresponding increase in the income of the city, which income can only be obtained from property valuation; and a survey in this direction gives but slight encouragement for the immediate future.

The needs of the Coddington district are pressing, but increase in cost of material and labor, with the requirements of the up-to-date school building, represents a large expense, and relief here must await such time as the financial condition of the city can afford it.

An appropriation of $61,000 was made for the construction of a twelve-room grammar school building at Atlantic, according to plans and specifications of Hurd & Gore, architects, approved by the School Committee, the contract for which has been placed, and it is expected to be completed and ready for occupancy on the reassembling of the school for the fall term.

The building of an addition to the High school, involved the demolition of a large portion of the old structure to carry into effect the plans and specifications approved by the School board. A contract was entered into providing the completion of the work so far as to admit of its occupancy by September first, 1906. While the date of completion was satisfactory to the city, unfortunately, it was beyond the ability of the contractor to fulfil; and while causing inconvenience by which none profited that I am aware of, the opportunity was seized upon by selfish persons from interested motives to indulge, through the press, in campaign bickering and the malignant abuse of those whose efforts were directed to make effective the advantages so long sought. The sinister purposes of its authors, however, were spent in vain effort to convince a discerning public.

Happily, the long delay of nearly five years in which this question has been prominently before the various city governments, with all its inconveniences and disappointments to teachers and pupils, is nearing fruition; and the benefits accruing from a building of substantial construction with all modern conveniences sufficient for the accommodation for increase in future years, are now, in part, enjoyed by the school.

PUBLIC LIBRARY.

The Library building having become inadequate to the needs of its services, Mr. Albert Crane, with still further liberality toward the City, has already natured plans for an addition to the present beautiful structure. It will consist of a wing toward the North, the upper portion to be used for a stack-room, and the lower for a children's reading-room and stack-room.

During the past year the Trustees have sold the old house on Washington street near Coddington street, built for Gideon F. Thayer years ago, in which Mrs. Esther Hayden for a long time kept the only drug-store in Quincy. The building has been torn down, and the land on which it stood also the valuable gift of Mr. Crane to the City, will be incorporated with the Library grounds.

GYPSY AND BROWN TAIL.

I am informed by the State agent for this section that, in his opinion, the city is in about the same condition as it was last year, so far as the Gypsy Moth is concerned. The nest cleaning in the winter of 1905-6 was fairly well done, considering the inexperience of the men employed. The street trees were well protected by burlap bands and accomplished good results. If the trees in the private estates had been as well cared for, the saving in expense in the work this winter would have been at least twenty-five per cent. and the city in better condition. No town or city can ever hope to clean the insects from its limits without the faithful use of burlaps. It is the best method yet discovered, and although its use appears, at first, to be costly, in point of fact it is most economical; since its results are positive, it being possible to get every caterpillar, while in the work of nest-hunting, even where the most expert labor is used, the result is problematical, for the best men will miss finding some nests and inexperienced men will leave enough behind them to continue the crop for time eternal. This has been proven by sixteen years' experience.

It is considered that the section to the east of Hancock street, and Quincy evenue, from Elm street to the Braintree line, are the worst infested portion of the city, although the insect has now been found generally distributed all over its area. I might, perhaps, except Houghs Neck, for the work done there by the department was exceptionally good, as was also the work done on the street trees. Of course, the woodlands are as yet an unknown quantity, but there is no doubt that they are more or less infested.

It is thought most of the street trees are cleared of the gypsy moth. According to the law, as soon as the time limit set by the notices to property owners to clear their trees has expired, we are called on to enter on those lands and clear them of the insect at their expense, according to law.

The condition of the city in regard to the brown-tail moth is most excellent. Those sections bordering the water-side were in very bad condition last year, but the work was so well done in cutting off the webs that it is estimated the reduction is fully ninety per cent. There were a few places that were not reached, notably a portion of Germantown and a section of the Point district. In these places there are a number of nests, but the rest of the city is comparatively clean.

The cost of doing all this work is hard to estimate with any degree of accuracy, but undoubtedly an appropriation the same as that of last year will be needed if the work is to be continued.

Gentlemen:—In conclusion, we have been honored by our fellow-citizens with the conduct of their public affairs. Financially, the means of the city are extremely limited, therefore little can be granted during the year to meet the many demands I feel will be requested of you, and which must be refused not because of any unwillingness on our part to comply with the wishes of those whose servants we are, but because the means of the city will not permit us to do so.

I hope under the conditions existing, and by counselling together as to that which is best, we may conclude our labors at the end of the year with the knowledge that we have performed our duty.

Class Dinner.

The class of 1901, Thayer academy, held a most enjoyable reunion and dinner at the Copley Square hotel, Boston, on Friday evening, Dec. 28th. Seventeen members of the class were present and told what they had been doing since graduation. News of absent members was also supplied by friends.

It was voted to hold an annual dinner during Christmas week, and it is hoped that next year a still larger number will be present.

The following officers were elected for the coming year: president, Merton L. Emerson; secretary, Miss Alice M. Redding; dinner committee, Rollin M. Gallagher, chairman, Miss Carolyn A. Bates, Miss Alice M. Dow.

Repolling Eggs.

When on removing part of the shell of a boiled egg you find that it is not cooked at all or else too soft to suit your taste if you will put a tablespoonful of vinegar in the water in which it is to be reboiled or if you will shake a little salt and pepper in the open egg you can then drop it in the water until it is cooked without spilling even a taste.

Copper Coins.

In 1620 the first large copper coins were minted in England, putting an end to private leaden tokens.

Pickled Herrings.

The mode of pickling herrings was invented by a Dutchman named Benkels about the year 1370. The Emperor Charles V., who was fond of pickled herrings, one day visited Benkels' grave and ordered a handsome stone tomb to be erected to his memory, a memorial which makes the deceased pickler famous even to this day.

The Sausage In Vienna.

In the homes of the great middle class of Vienna, says a paper of that city, the sausage is a necessity. It appears at the table at least once every day, and the variety is so great that there may be a certain kind for every day.

Largest Size Paper.

"DANDROCIDE"

Dandruff is a scalp disease. "Dandrocide" is its cure. "Dandrocide" is a scalp food, and in ridding the dandruff, gives the hair cells natural life and healthy hair growth. Most hair tonics gloss the hair, but leave the damaging dandruff.

"Dandrocide" removes the dandruff, thereby removing the evil. "Dandrocide" grows a bountiful supply of long and silky hair—a luxuriant growth of hair will come with the use of "Dandrocide."

CRADE CROSSING

City of Quincy Enter an Appearance On the Petition

No one from Quincy was present Monday at the hearing before the Superior court at Dedham, on the petition of the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R., for the appointment of a commission to determine if safety and convenience require the abolishment of the grade crossings at Saville and Water streets in this city.

The City Solicitor had entered his appearance, however, in behalf of the city. The hearing Monday was practically no hearing at all, simply being the return day of the order of notice. It was simply the first step in the proceedings. Counsel for each party at interest entering their appearnce so that they can be heard when the question comes up.

The next step in the procedure is for one of the parties at interest to file a motion for the appointment of a commission. This will probably be done immediately by the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R. then there will be a hearing on allowing the motion and the appointing of the commission.

The city, having filed its appearance, will have an opportunity to say something on the personnel of the commission. As soon as the commissioners have been appointed the actual hearings will take place. These will probably be held in Boston, and will be largely attended as both the Board of Trade and Citizens' Association have committees who are looking into the matter.

Marvel of Compilation

The World Almanac and Encyclopedia for 1907 is a one-volume library of information. Concise, comprehensive and complete, it is a marvel of compilation—of good editing. Legislative, election, financial, trade, sporting, athletic, departmental and educational matters, American and foreign, national and State, are all presented in a manner economical of time and nervous irritation.

The professional man, the business man, the young and the aged, in fact all kinds and conditions of men, will have frequent occasion during the course of the year to refer to the pages of this valuable volume, the contents of which is given in a well arranged index. The Daily Ledger would be at a loss without it.

Carol Singers Have Been Busy

The Cornish Glee Club which is composed entirely of natives of Cornwall, England or their families gave a very fine concert at the meeting of the Men's Club, held in the parish house of Christ church on Monday evening. These men have banded themselves together, for the purpose of keeping alive the old English custom of singing carols during the Christmas holidays, and judging by this season's success the good old custom will live for some considerable time to come.

The club began to go their usual rounds on the night of Dec. 24th, visiting the homes of their fellow countrymen awakening old memories by singthe grand old Christmas carols of their native land.

On Dec. 31, they visited the home of George Pawsey at Rock Island farm, and gave a taste of their quality.

On Jan. 2, they gave a concert at the Congregational church, South Braintree, and after the concert they were tendered a reception. Then, headed by the pastor, they visited quite a number of residences, including those of several sick members of the congregation.

The concert at the Men's club was the last for this season, but it is the intention to have a larger and better choir next season, if that is possible. The names of the various members and the parts taken are as follows:

Basses, — Richard Reed, Richard Matthews, Alfred J. Spargo, Harold Warmington, Thomas Veale, Ambrose Newcombe and John Williams.

The Men's club also had for their guests Monday evening the Knights of Malta. Hon. E. C. Bumpus made an address on the subject of "Labor" which was intensely interesting, and very instructive. The judge included in the term labor every form of useful effort, physical and mental, and pointed out the dignity of work, its rewards and satisfaction. He illustrated and supplemented his views by reading apt selections from Carlyle and Zola. A collation was served making the evening thoroughly enjoyable.

☞Churches, clubs and lodges contemplating giving an entertainment or concert would do well to communicate with Mr. Erastus Osgood, whose talents as an impersonator and monologist have been endorsed by the press throughout New England. Mr. Osgood's monologues, readings and sketches are all strictly original. Some of them have appeared in Harper's and other magazines. Refinement and originality are Mr. Osgood's trade mark.

—The Malden High School alumni has pledged itself to raise $250 for decorations for the new High school building. The school also has a Literary Society.

Assessor Johnson Passes Away. Was a Prominent Builder.

The news that Julius Johnson, one of Quincy's most prominent Swedish residents has passed away, will be received with feelings of regret by a large circle of friends and business associates throughout the city.

Mr. Johnson had been in poor health for some weeks, owing to stomach trouble. When he was first taken ill he was removed to the City Hospital, where it was said that an operation would be necessary to save his life. Owing to his weak heart the specialist refused to perform the operation.

He apparently recovered from the attack and was about attending to his business again. His recovery, however, was of but brief duration, for in a few days he suffered another attack and was again removed to the hospital. Specialists who were called into the case said that the only possible hope of saving his life was an operation.

He was allowed to regain his strength somewhat, and last week the operation was performed.

Mr. Johnson was born in Sweden, May 23, 1860. He received his education in his native town, and then served his time as a carpenter.

He came to America in 1887, landing in Boston. He remained in Boston about two months, and then came to Quincy where he has since made his home.

Since coming to this city he has continued to follow the business of a carpenter and builder and has built over one hundred houses in this city. Quite a number of these are on Upland road extension, which he practically built up with desirable houses. Quincy needs more such progressive builders.

Mr. Johnson was the builder of the $18,000 residence of the late John C. Randall on Adams street, the large fourtenement house of Mrs. Emma Lark at Brewers Corner, the residence of William Hayward on Chestnut street, of Albert M. Parker on Presidents Hill, and other fine houses, being one of the most extensive builders in the city.

His first public office was that of a Councilman. He represented Ward Three in the City Councils of 1903 and 1904, serving on the standing committees on Streets, Public Buildings, Fire Department and Health.

During the latter part of the year 1904, after Mr. Thompson who was their principal assessor had been elected Mayor and resigned from the board of Assessors, Mr. Johnson was appointed by Mayor Bryant to fill the unexpired term. His term of office expired in first Monday in the coming February. He was a valuable member of the board.

Mr. Johnson was a prominent member of the Swedish Baptist church at Brewers corner, of which he was the architect and builder, and one of the pillars. He was also prominent in the Board of Trade, a member of Mt. Wollaston lodge of Odd Fellows and the Scandinavian Republican club.

Mr. Johnson was a man universally popular with all with whom he came in contact. He had the happy faculty of making friends and retaining them. He was in the prime of life and his untimely death is regretted by all. He leaves a widow and children.

The body will lay in state for all who wish to see him, on Thursday morning, at the Swedish Baptist church, Brewers Corner, between 10 and 12 o'clock. The funeral services will be held Thursday afternoon at 1.30 o'clock.

Boston, Mass., Jan. 2, 1907.

Mr. Editor:—The program of music given at Bethany Congregational church the past two Sundays calls for special mention, and I ask you in the interest of good church music in Quincy, to give this communication place in your columns. So far as I am aware, (and I am a constant attendant at church,) no such music has ever before been heard in a Quincy church. Indeed it is my impression that the giving of such a musical service regularly in any Boston church would insure a congregation which would tax its seating capacity. I am not advocating the turning of our churches into concert halls, but such music as that given at Bethany church is entirely in keeping with a religious service, and cannot fail to uplift the soul and bring it in closer touch with its maker.

It seemed impossible that such a body of tone could come from the mere handful of singers clustered about the organ; but I am not writing to criticise the separate parts of an excellent and harmonious whole, or to speak individually of organ, voices, or instruments; nor yet to comment upon the immense amount of labor and skill which such a performance must have necessitated, but to call the attention of the people of Quincy to the fact that there is in one of their churches music, which is at once sane and reverential, and at the same time, beautiful and inspiring.

Price of Gas May Be Reduced

Since the present company has assumed control of the Citizens Gas Light Co., the mains have been extended to many streets, work having been commenced soon after it obtained control and continued until late in the fall of last year. During the year the company laid in all sixteen miles and over of new mains, a good part of which was in streets that had not previously been piped for gas, and the result was that they have many new subscribers or takers.

Of the new mains laid in 1906 there was 22,423 feet of 12 inch; 12,928 feet of 8-inch; 24,802 feet of 6-inch; 23,023 feet of 4-inch and 1,810 feet of 3-inch, or a grand total of 16 miles and 500 feet.

It is planned the coming year to lay fully as much as was laid in 1906, which means that by the end of the year a very large part of the city will have been piped.

As to further reduction in the price of gas the company say that they intend to voluntary reduce the price in the near future. The date of the proposed reduction however depends largely upon the support given the company by the citizens.

Odd Fellows Attend Funeral

The funeral of George W. Taylor was held Monday from his late residence on Elm street, and was very largely attended. Aside from his relatives and friends there were large delegations present from Mt. Wollaston lodge, I. O. O. F., Manet Encampment, and Canton Shawmut, P. M.

The services were conducted by Rev. Dr. Edwin N. Hardy of the Bethany church. The Appolo quartette sang, "Nearer My God to Thee," "Gathering Home," and "Lead Kindly Light."

After the regular service, the burial service of the Odd Fellows was read by the officers of Mt. Wollaston lodge. The burial was at Randolph.

GOOD AFTERNOON.

In the eighteen years of the city government, according to the Mayor's Inaugural address, a debt of $1,785,350 has been accumulated, although we have been paying maturing debt to the amount of about $75,000 annually, and a large sum for interest on debt. This represents a net increase of nearly $100,000 per year. To have paid this as current expenses would have increased the tax rate each year from $4 to $5. Quincy has today a municipal debt of $540,450 which is $53,820 larger than a year ago; a sewer debt of $526,400 which is $2,700 larger; a water debt of $684,500 which is $9,500 smaller; and a playground debt of $34,000, which is $2,000 smaller.

The limit of the municipal debt is $624,308, and increasing each year. The margin within this limit on Jan. 1, according to Mayor's address, was $83,858. Yet orders were introduced into the new City Council to go to the Legislature for authority to borrow above this limit, $75,000 for a new Coddington schoolhouse, and $200,000 for water extensions and meters.

Whatever the limit, the City Council will find it easy to exhaust it, and it is unfortunate that the limit does not decrease each year instead of increase. The city borrowed $113,000 in 1905 for enlargement of the High school, but in 1906 paid off but $5,000 and in 1907 pays but $6,000, less than one-tenth in two years. In the years from 1912 to 1915 inclusive, the city must pay $15,000 each year. Thus the debt increases and also the interest. The taxpayers are fooled for awhile but must pay ultimately.

1901	380,905.61
1902	442,735.64
1903	477,740.35
1904	*516,828.00
1905	407,572.00
1906	486,630.00
1907	540,450.00

To pay the total debt of the city,—placed by the Mayor at $1,785,350,—would require on the valuation of $26,786,885 in 1906 a special tax rate of over $66 per $1,000.

It was a severe fine that Judge Avery imposed upon the two men whom it was alleged were doing a pocket liquor business at Quincy Point. It will take a lot of drinks to make that $100 and should act as a lesson to others.

How It Was Worked In an Alleged Graft Game

A CHECK FOR $60,000

Testimony That It Was Raised to $72,000 by Railroad President to Get Sufficient Votes to Pass City Ordinance--Recipient-to-Be Got "Trimmed"

Pittsburg, Jan. 8.—Sensational testimony was given in the $70,000 "graft scandal" in connection with the ordinance to give the Pittsburg and Tube City Railroad company an entrance into Pittsburg, when William A. Martin, a member of the common council, was put on trial in the criminal court, charged with soliciting a bribe for the passage of the ordinance.

J. H. Milholland, a civil engineer for the railroad company, testified that he had placed a $60,000 certified check in a safety deposit box which was to have been given to Martin and was told by President Cameron of the railroad company, in Martin's presence, that the alleged money was increased from $60,000 to $70,000 in order to get sufficient votes to pass the Tube City ordinance over the mayor's veto.

Milholland also testified that $70,000 in cash was subsequently placed in safety deposit boxes, first at the Colonial Trust company and then at the Union Trust company, for Martin. Milholland held the key to one box and the key to the later box was deposited in another safety deposit box at the Farmers' Deposit National bank. He also swore that Martin ordered him to deliver the keys of a safety deposit box back to Cameron, remarking, as he did so, that "he had been trimmed again, for the money was not there."

C. R. Richardson, a broker, told of the mysterious disappearance of the $70,000 which he had loaned President Cameron, and of Councilman Martin's refusal to be searched for the money when it disappeared, and which was subsequently found by a local detective agency, which received $10,000 for its recovery.

According to Richardson, the scheme of fooling Martin was worked in his very presence by means of two envelopes, one containing the money and the other identically similar in outside appearance, which did not contain the money.

Both Legs Amputated

New York, Jan. 8.—Charles Fisher, a freight conductor, attempted to swing onto the side of a switch engine, but missed his footing and became pinned under the engine. An ambulance surgeon crawled under the locomotive and there amputated Fisher's left leg. This, however, did not release the man, whose other leg was still held. Finally the engine was jacked up and, after four hours, Fisher was removed to a hospital, where his right leg was amputated. It is believed that Fisher will recover.

Negroes Made Poor Showing

Washington, Jan. 8.—The members of the government board of the Jamestown Exposition had a conference yesterday with the Negro Development and Exposition company, which has charge of the negro exhibit at the exposition. The showing made was not satisfactory to the government board and it is understood the matter will be taken up at the next cabinet meeting.

Cheap Novels to Blame

New York, Jan. 8.—William Gearin, 17 years old, and Herbert Coburn, aged 15, played "Wild West" in a small room of a tenement house here and Gearin was shot through the head and killed. Coburn was arrested. The police think the two boys, who lived together in the little room, had been reading cheap novels. Three revolvers were found in the room.

Tells of Attempt to Bribe

Chicago, Jan. 8.—Victor H. Beckman, secretary of the Pacific Coast Lumbermen's association, who is actively engaged in an effort to force railroads to relieve the car shortage in the northwest, asserts that attempts have been made by Northern Pacific railroad managers to bribe him to desist in his endeavors to force their hands.

Policemen's Union Struck a Snag

Tours, France, Jan. 8.—The mayor of this city has disarmed and dismissed the entire police force because the Policemen's union caused to be posted throughout the city hundreds of placards setting forth certain demands of the force and complaining because the principal streets of Tours are being patrolled by troops.

Crime Runs Riot at Lodz

Lodz, Jan. 8.—There are indications that the labor trouble here is coming to an end, but there are no signs of a halt in the reign of terrorism and crime. Since the first of the year 16 workmen have been killed in street fights and 62 have been wounded.

COUNCILMAN ARRESTED

Warrant Charges Haverhill Man With Accepting a Bribe

Haverhill, Mass., Jan. 8.—The arrest of Councilman J. W. Homans on a charge of accepting a bribe was the sensational outcome of a spirited contest over the election of a city solicitor at the inaugural session of the city council. A warrant for the arrest of the councilman was sworn out prior to the meeting of the city council, but it was not served until the session was concluded, although Police Inspector Shannon, who had the warrant in his pocket, was a witness of the proceedings of the council.

Homans was released last evening under a bond of $3000 furnished by friends. He denied the charge flatly, and said that the whole matter originated in a remark which he made jokingly in answer to a question put to him yesterday morning by a former alderman. The latter, said Homans, asked him, in speaking about the city solicitorship, whether he proposed to get his money before he voted. "I slapped my pocket," said Homans, and replied, "Well, I've got it right here in my jeans."

Life Lost In Boston Fire

Boston, Jan. 8.—When the firemen rushed into the William Tell house, a boarding house in the West End, last evening, they found George McDowell, the cook, unconscious in his basement bedroom, Frank Davis, a cripple, helpless in his room, and half a dozen chorus girls shrieking for help, while a brisk fire on the lower floor was filling the house with dense smoke. McDowell died in a few minutes. Davis was carried down over the ladders, the chorus girls conducted in safety to the street and the fire extinguished with a loss of $3000.

Foundry Receivers Appointed

New Haven, Jan. 8.—F. B. Farnsworth and H. S. Hotchkiss have been appointed temporary receivers of the National Steel Foundry company upon the application of counsel representing the National Steel and Wire corporation, the latter concern having gone into the hands of the same receivers during last week. This action is an emergency measure to forestall closing of the plant through attachments. The foundry company operated with the wire company.

Liquor Selling Hour Extended

Boston, Jan. 8.—For the first time in many years 22 hotels in this city supplied their patrons with liquor last night until the midnight hour. Yarn Workers Want Increase Taunton, Mass., Jan. 8.—The employes of all the yarn mills in this city have presented the demand for a 10 percent advance in wages. The operatives were induced to make the request because of the recent increase in wages in the yarn and cloth mills of Fall River and other sections, and on account of the greater cost of living.

Shot Mother and Self

Providence, Jan. 8.—During what was probably an attack of mental despondency, William W. Rhodes, a local real estate dealer, shot his mother in the back of the head as she sat in a rocking chair in their apartments at a local hotel and then held the revolver to his own head, pulled the trigger and died on the floor by her side.

BROWNSVILLE ROW

LODGE VERSUS FORAKER

Bay State Senator Wants Whole "Affray" Investigated--Guerin Discusses Japanese Question and Gives Warning to Labor

Washington, Jan. 8.—President Roosevelt's dismissal of the negro troops was again the subject of contention in the senate yesterday, and indications point to protracted debate before any of the pending resolutions on the subject are voted on.

Senator Lodge developed a new phase of the question by presenting a resolution providing for an investigation of the "affray" at Brownsville, and by silence conceding the authority of the president to take the action he did. This resolution was supported by Lodge in an address and opposed by Foraker, who followed, and spoke until 5:30 o'clock, giving notice then that he would conclude today.

Senator Lodge said: "Two questions are here involved, a question of fact and a question of law. They are entirely distinct, they ought to be settled separately, and neither should be permitted to cloud or obscure the other in the public mind.

"The question of fact may be stated in this way: There was shooting in the streets of Brownsville on the night of Aug. 13, 1906, houses were fired into, one man was killed and the lieutenant of police had his horse shot from under him and was so severely wounded in the arm that amputation was necessary.

"The president, the secretary of war and the officers of the army detailed to inquire into the affair have decided that the shooting was done by the soldiers and furnish testimony to sustain their opinion.

"The Constitution league, representing the soldiers, deny that the shooting was done by them, and assert that it was done by the citizens of Brownsville for the purpose of casting odium on the troops of Fort Brown.

"One of these two propositions must be proved, for general negations are of no use here. It will be the duty of the committee under this resolution to take all possible testimony and decide whether this shooting was done by the soldiers or by citizens of Brownsville.

"Whether the United States soldiers or the inhabitants of Brownsville did the shooting on the night of Aug. 13 is the question of fact, and on that as a member of the committee and a senator I have no opinion to express until I have heard and examined all possible testimony.

"The question of law is whether the president in dismissing the companies without honor exceeded his powers under the law and the Constitution. The law, the Constitution, the statutes and the uniform practice are so clear as to the right of the president to terminate the contract of enlistment and discharge soldiers at pleasure that it seems a waste of words to anyone who has read the statutes to argue it at all."

At the conclusion of the day's debate it was agreed by senate leaders that a settlement of the controversy between Foraker and Lodge on the discharge of the negro troops of the Twenty-fifth infantry was not in sight. Prior to the speech by Lodge it had been the intention of Foraker to offer a substitute for his own resolution, and in this substitute ask the committee on military affairs to conduct an investigation into all of the matters pertaining to the affair at Brownsville.

The term "all of the matters," it is said, would have permitted an inquiry into the constitutional questions, although that would have been a question for the decision of the committee. Senators who sought to end the controversy between Foraker and supporters of the president's action assumed that the military affairs committee would have considered that the constitutional and legal questions involved were for the deliberations of the judiciary committee.

Previous to this debate the senate listened to a two-hour address on the Japanese question by Senator Gearin, who argued for a resolution directing the opening of negotiations with Japan for a revision of our treaty with that nation.

Senator Gearin discussed the questions of the rights of Japanese children to education in white schools and of the necessity for the restriction of immigration of Japanese coolies. The senator took strong issue with the president because of the tone of his message in its references to the Japanese, and uttered a vigorous warning to labor against the threatened invasion of cheap labor.

Declaring that there has always existed the warmest feeling of friendship and mutual esteem between Japan and the United States, Gearin said:

"We are at peace now with Japan, but we shall not continue so without a better understanding of the rights guaranteed by the present treaty and the obligations imposed by its terms."

After quoting the president's message, the senator continued: "California is under no obligations to the federal government to have public schools or any kind of schools at all. And if she does have them it is her province to say how they shall be conducted."

HEARST ELECTED

CLAIM MADE BY STATE

Attorney General Brings Suit to Oust McClellan--Latter Hesitates to Submit Rights to Man "Contemptuous of the Law"

New York, Jan. 8.—Attorney General Jackson, in behalf of the people of the state of New York, has entered suit in the supreme court against G. B. McClellan, praying that the latter be ousted from the office of mayor of the city of New York on the ground that he has usurped and unlawfully holds such office, whereas William R. Hearst is legally entitled to the same.

A summons and a copy of the complaint in the action were served upon McClellan at the city hall by Deputy Attorney General De Ford. The complaint declares flatly that at "the election in November, 1905, Mr. Hearst was duly and legally elected mayor of the city of New York." It is alleged that in various ways the election laws were violated.

It is demanded that judgment be rendered upon the right of Hearst to the office, and also "upon the pretended right of the defendant McClellan, thereto, and that it be adjudged that the defendant McClellan has no just or legal right to hold said office, and that he has had no such right since the first of January, 1906; that the said William Randolph Hearst was duly elected to the office of mayor."

The complaint is signed by Attorney General Jackson. One difference between this new action and those that have preceded it is that it is brought in the name of the people of the state of New York, whereas the others have been in the name of Hearst.

E. L. Richards, Jr., of McClellan's counsel issued a statement which, he said, outlined the mayor's position regarding the Jackson suit. The statement declares that the mayor is justified in hesitating to submit his rights to an attorney general "so careless of his dignity, so reckless of his conduct, so contemptuous of the law." It also scores Jackson for "saddling upon the state in his efforts to befriend Hearst" an expense of $200,000, the estimated cost of the quo warranto proceedings.

"In the ordinary course of justice," says the statement, "it had been determined that a suit against Mayor McClellan to test the title of his office ought not in reason and justice to be brought. This decision was arrived at by the Republican attorney general, after a most careful inquiry. He refused to permit the mayor to be harrassed and oppressed by a suit in which only failure could be anticipated upon the part of his office.

"The court has made an order and issued its writ of prohibition against the attorney general, forbidding him to determine the question involved, viz: whether he has the power to reverse his predecessor and bring the suit.

"The attorney general immediately thereafter determined that he did have power, and has brought the suit. There appears to have been no restraining hand upon him. After the writ was served he immediately came to New York and sought the counsel of Mr. Hearst and of his attorneys. They advised a defiance of the court's writ. The attorney general forsook the dignity of his office and of his own autonomy, violated his oath of office to maintain the law, and inaugurated a reign of 'riot.'"

WAS BURIED IN RUINS

Fireman Thought to Have Perished Is Rescued Alive

New York, Jan. 8.—The search for the three firemen who went down with the ruins when Hill's paper warehouse was burned Monday night, was suddenly halted last night as the sound of someone rapping on a timber from within the debris was distinctly heard.

For nearly 24 hours, with brief respite, firemen had sought the men's bodies, and at first they doubted their senses. As they stared at each other a voice from beneath the charred pile and recognized as that of John Seufert was faintly heard.

Soon they had driven a pipe through the debris which finally reached him and through this some stimulants and hot coffee were sent to him. Through the pipe also a priest heard his confession, as it was feared he might be crushed to death at any moment.

The rescuers began to work like demons to clear away the debris, but the fear of the walls falling in or the sand working into the cavity where the fireman lay was so great that the utmost caution was necessary.

Seufert was taken out of the ruins at 1:45 o'clock this morning. He will live, it is said. He was very weak and his right leg badly injured.

Mackin's Probable Assistant

Fort Reno, Okla., Jan. 8.—The finding of his khaki jacket, one sleeve of which was covered with blood and punctured presumably by a bullet, led to the arrest of Corporal Knowles of the Twenty-fifth infantry (negro) on the charge of murderously assaulting Captain Macklin on the night of Dec. 21. When arrested Knowles was found to have a severe flesh wound on the wrist, which he is said to have been treating himself for more than three weeks. Knowles' jacket was found on the trail taken by bloodhounds that followed the scent of Macklin's assailant.

The Steele Marriage Tangle

Lynchburg, Va., Jan. 8.—Mrs. Bessie L. Steele, wife of J. R. Steele, who is supposed to have wrecked the Fourth Street National bank of Philadelphia Saturday, being killed in the explosion, claims she was legally married to Steele at Greenville, Mich., June 12, 1904. She states that Steele told her he was divorced from the Chicago wife, and admits that she had no other evidence. She says Steele had been sending a monthly check to Chicago. She says she has no relatives living other than her 12-year-old boy, the result of her first marriage.

To Probe Freeman's Death

Washington, Jan. 8.—Representative Hay (Va.) introduced a resolution in the house seeking information concerning the death of Robert V. Freeman, a former member of Dr. Wiley's "poison squad." Rockefeller to the Rescue

Chicago, Jan. 8.—John D. Rockefeller will soon endow the University of Chicago with $3,000,000 to maintain a fund for superannuated professors of the institution. The exclusion of the University of Chicago, because it is a denominational school, from sharing in the $10,000,000 Carnegie pension fund is said to be responsible for Rockefeller's decision to create a pension fund for the University of Chicago.

Georgians Are Dissatisfied

Washington, Jan. 8.—Birmingham, Ala., was selected as the location for a new sub-treasury by a caucus of southern senators and representatives at the Capitol. The Georgia delegation bolted the caucus, insisting that the caucus was not called with any authority, as Secretary Shaw had no right to refer the location of the sub-treasury to a caucus.

DENIED BY BRIAND

Did Not Utter the Harsh Words Attributed to Him

Baltimore, Jan. 8.—Since Cardinal Gibbons issued his statement Dec. 13 last regarding the church trouble in France he has received many inquiries from various parts of the country asking for his authority as to the quotations cited by him from public utterances of M. Briand, French minister of public worship. The cardinal credited Briand as saying:

"The time has come to root up from the minds of French children the ancient faith which has served its purpose and replace it with the light of free thought; it is time to get rid of the Christian idea. We have hunted Jesus Christ out of the army, the navy, the schools, the hospitals, insane and orphan asylums and law courts, and now we must hunt Him out of the state altogether."

Premier Clemenceau has denied, on the authority of Briand, that the latter as minister ever delivered any such statement as is given in the second sentence of the foregoing excerpt. Cardinal Gibbons says that the quotations were taken from the London Saturday Review of Aug. 18 and Aug. 25, 1906.

Too Young to Marry

Youngstown, O., Jan. 8.—Miss Ida Scott, sister of Mrs. Mary S. Hartje, and Howard Lappe, 24 years old, of Pittsburg, arrived here yesterday and applied for a marriage license. The police had been informed by the girl's father that she was only 15 years of age and the license was not issued. Scott came here and returned last night, accompanied by his daughter and Lappe. Scott stated that his only objection to the wedding was the age of his daughter. Miss Scott was a witness for her sister in the Augustus Hartje divorce suit.

An Immigration Decision

Washington, Jan. 8.—The supreme court of the United States decided the case of Zartarian vs. Billings, involving the right of a minor child of foreign birth, whose father is a naturalized citizen of the United States, to come to this country notwithsanding she may be so diseased as under ordinary circumsances to bar her from landing. The decision was unfavorable to the child on the ground that the case did not fall within the statutes naturalizing the foreign born children of American citizens.

Foul Play Is Suspected

Jackson, N. H., Jan. 8.—County Solicitor Abbott has ordered Medical Referee Hodsdon to exhume the bodies of Elmer E. Fernald of Everett, Mass., and his father, who were buried here, and hold a post mortem examination. The bodies will be disinterred and an examination will be made of the stomachs. Recently persons in Jackson requested the county solicitor to investigate the deaths of father and son, as a suspicion was entertained that there might have been foul play.

More Pay For Navy Yard Workers

Washington, Jan. 8.—Secretary Metcalf has yielded to the demand of the employes of the various navy yards, and, beginning Jan. 13 of the present year, a new schedule will go into effect. All yards will get the benefit of the increase, but not all the employes. The salaries of the clerical force will remain as they are. The increase to the mechanics and others will be on the basis of the wages paid for similar work in the vicinity of each particular yard.

Failed to Regulate Watches

Washington, Jan. 8.—It was disclosed at the coroner's inquest into the Terra Cotta wreck on the night of Dec. 30 that engineers and conductors have not heretofore generally observed the rules of the Baltimore and Ohio in regard to regulating their watches in accordance with the company's standard clocks. In his testimony, Conductor Hoffmier of No. 2120, the "dead" train, intimated that these clocks did not always keep correct time.

To Take Coal by Force If Necessary

San Francisco, Jan. 8.—Under orders of Chief of Police Dinan and at the request of the board of education, a detail of 20 policemen will mount a train of wagons today and go to the bunkers of the Western Fuel company to procure sufficient coal for the use of the schoolhouses. Was Proment in In Organizations

Mrs. Lizzie A. Monk, a woman generally beloved by a large circle of friends, passed away this morning at her home on Washington street. She was the wife of George Monk, the talented violinist, and was in her 59th year.

Of late years she has been greatly interested in several organizations, and held the most important offices. She was the first noble grand of George L. Gill Rebekah lodge instituted in 1898, a past noble grand of Amana Rebekah lodge of Braintree, a past protector of Maple lodge, K. and L. of H., and a member of the Grand lodge; also a member of Paul Revere, W. R. C., and was held in high esteem by all members.

She was ever ready and willing to do her full share of the work, and also upheld the principles upon which the orders were founded. Her lovable qualities, her smiling disposition, and her generosity endeared her to many and she will be greatly missed.

All Pupils At One Session

For the first time on Monday all the the pupils of the High school were accommodated at one time under one roof. Between the closing of school last Friday and the opening of school Monday morning several more rooms were put in conditions for use, so that nineteen rooms are now being occupied for school purposes.

These are really not enough to accommodate the pupils properly, but by a little crowding all are being taken care of.

While nineteen rooms are now in use there is not one that is fully ready, as they lack some part of the furnishings.

It is however a great improvement over what the pupils have contended for several months.

The session for all pupils now begins at 8.15 and closes at 1 P. M.

Argument Against Muzzling of Dogs

Judge Charles M. Bruce of Malden, president of the English Setter Dog Club of the United States and Canada, says he is not in favor of muzzling dogs. He says he does not believe that there have been a half-dozen mad dogs in this state during the past year. The alarm during the past two months is caused by dogs who may have had fits or have been sick. If a dog who is muzzled is of high temperament it is liable to drive him mad, and if the town and city officials who pass orders ordering all dogs muzzled would have to wear the muzzles as long as the dogs do, they would soon see the cruelty and suffering that they needlessly inflict upon these dumb beasts.

Judge Bruce says most dogs are overfed. They are also kept in hot rooms, and in his opinion this is the cause of much sickness and also fits.

At a recent meeting of the English Setter Dog Club there were a large number of dog fanciers present. Judge Bruce asked those present if they had ever seen a mad dog and they told him no, that they believed there was no such thing as a mad dog.

Mayor Charles A. Grimmons of Somerville doesn't think much of the mandate making the muzzling of dogs compulsory throughout the state. "Ninety-nine per cent. of the agitation," I consider all bosh. Last spring the city was put to a great expense in connection with the collection and disposal of unmuzzled dogs, and others suspected of being affected by the rabies. If I can help it, the city won't be put to such an expense again. As a matter of fact, I am not satisfied that any of the dogs killed in Somerville last spring really had the rabies.

"The best way to cultivate a horde of mad and ugly dogs is to muzzle them when there's nothing the matter with them," says Chief of Police Parkhurst. "Wouldn't it make the average man or woman mad to prevent the free use of the mouth by the muzzle process? Furthermore, most of the muzzles made are practically useless. They don't prevent the dog biting if he takes the notion."

MYTHICAL CREATURES.

Now that the cold light of science has thrown its ray upon the most remote parts of our globe there is no longer room for legendary creatures—save the sea serpent—and we are told that the mermaid is nothing more than a dugong, a unicorn either a rhinoceros or a Tibetan antelope, while the cockatrice, the phoenix and the roc appear to be pure imaginations.

But in the Elizabethan age—an age when the dodo had but recently been discovered—these and many other mythical creatures were, if not living, at all events actual realities to the ordinary public, and as such were referred to in the works of the great dramatist and other contemporary writers. We meet, for instance, in the "Winter's Tale" the line, "Make me not sighted like the basilisk," and in "The Tempest," "Now I will believe that there are unicorns." But not only was more or less of credulity given to the existence of these and such like fabulous monsters, but a web of mystic lore encircled the most common and best known of beasts, birds and fishes. Who, for instance, is forgetful of the popular superstitions connected with the salamander, the newt and the blindworm, and who fails to remember White's account of the "shrewash" at Selborne? And if such superstitions still survive among uneducated peasants of the present day we may be assured that two centuries ago they were fully believed by the higher classes.—Academy.

WORKS OF A WATCH.

To one who has never studied the mechanism of a watch its mainspring or the balance wheel is a mere piece of metal. He may have looked at the face of the watch, and while he admires the motions of its hands and the time it keeps he may have wondered in idle amazement as to the character of the machinery which is concealed within. Take it to pieces and show him each part separately, and he will recognize neither design nor adaptation nor relation between them, but put them together, set them to work, point out the offices of each spring, wheel and cog, explain their movements and then show him the result. Now he perceives that it is all one design; that, notwithstanding the number of parts, their diverse forms and various offices and the agents concerned, the whole piece is of one idea. He now rightly concludes that when the mainspring was fashioned and tempered its relation to all the other parts must have been considered; that the cogs on this wheel are cut and regulated—adapted—to the ratchets on that, etc., and his final conclusion will be that such a piece of mechanism could not have been produced by chance, for the adaptation of the parts is such as to show it to be according to design and obedient to the will of one intelligence.

Fifty Miles to Market.

It is not an uncommon thing in France to see a farmer forty or fifty miles from home in wet weather with a load. If he sees a prospect of a three days' rain, he puts his tarpaulin over his load, a cover over his horses and a waterproof coat on and starts off to market. He may go fifty miles before he finds a market that suits him, or he may know in advance just where he is going. You do not often see anybody driving fifty miles through a rainstorm in the United States to find a market for a load of hay, but it is not uncommon to see farmers' wagons forty or fifty miles from home in France. They choose the wet weather for that purpose. Their roads are just as good then as at any time.

The Chinese.

Conservative historians among the Chinese claim for their race an antiquity of at least 100,000 years, while those whose estimates are a little "wild" assert that the Chinese were the original inhabitants of the earth and that Chinese history goes back at least 500,000,000 years. The government records of China place the foundation of the empire at 2500 B. C. and claim that it was established by Tohi, who, they assert, is the Noah mentioned in the book of Genesis, B. C. 2240.

How It Struck Her.

"You seemed greatly impressed," said the minister, "with my description of how they brought the head of John the Baptist before the king on a salver."

"Yes," sighed Mrs. De Style; "I was thinking how much better they trained servants in those days. Now, mine, when they bring me things, are forever forgetting the salver."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

A Sure Way.

First Author—Oh, the unutterable monotony of existence! I am thoroughly disgusted with it all. Would that I might completely disappear for awhile. Second Author—Then why don't you marry a famous woman?—Judge.

Her Mourning.

Maud—Why is that lady over the way always in black? Is she mourning for any one? Bess—Yes, a husband. Maud—I didn't know she'd been married. Bess—No, but she's mourning for a husband all the same.

Of Course.

Professor (a little distracted)—I'm glad to see you. How's your wife?

"I regret it, professor, but I'm not married."

"Ah, yes. Then of course your wife's still single."—Fliegende Blatter.

THE CAPE COD CANAL

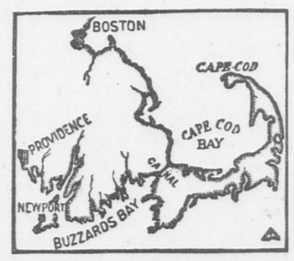
REVIVAL OF OLD PROJECT TO SHORTEN BOSTON-NEW YORK ROUTE.

The Scheme Was First Mooted In the Reign of Charles II.—The Advantage of the Plan to Commerce and Passenger Traffic.

OLD WINDMILL ON CAPE COD.

THE canal across Cape Cod that August Belmont and other capitalists propose to build and for which the eminent engineer, William Barclay Parsons, has made plans is by no means a new project. It seems strange that the work of uniting the waters of Buzzards bay and Cape Cod bay has not been put in execution long ere this, for the advantages to commerce and navigation are manifest. The present journey around Cape Cod to Boston harbor is a perilous one. Passenger traffic especially would be facilitated by the digging of the canal, for the route to Boston from New York and points on Long Island sound would be materially shortened, and many dangers would be eliminated. Mr. Parsons, who was the engineer of the now famous New York subway, recommends a sea level canal, and the engineering difficulties of the problem are not great, for the waters of the two bays come almost together as it is at certain times, and there is no material difference in their tide level.

The Cape Cod canal has been a joke for a century or two among Cape Cod folks. It was in 1620 that the pilgrims landed on the sandy shores of the cape, and it was but a comparatively short time after that event, during the reign of Charles II., that the scheme now to be put in actual operation was first mooted. Since then the Cape Cod canal has been the mariner's dream, and several times it has seemed on the eve of fulfillment. The



MAP OF CAPE COD.

Massachusetts records of 1676 contain a reference to the project, and in 1687 the general court of the state appointed a commission "to view a place for a passage to be cut through the land in Sandwich from Barnstable bay to Mahomet bay for vessels to pass through to and from the western parts of the country." One of George Washington's engineers made a survey for the purpose of a canal in the year 1776, and about forty years later, when John C. Calhoun was secretary of war in the cabinet of President Monroe, he reported in favor of the construction of such a canal. His idea was that a chain of artificial waterways might be constructed which would afford continuous passage for vessels of war as well as ships of commerce from Boston all the way down the Atlantic coast, so that at no place would they be compelled to go into the open sea. A portion of this plan was actually carried out. But the Cape Cod canal was not built. In 1885 another move in the matter was made, and about a mile of canal was really dug.

Cutting off the forearm stretching out from the mainland of Massachusetts into the sea would shorten the route usually pursued by vessels from Long Island sound by about 150 miles, and the dangers met with on this treacherous coast in winter would be avoided. It is estimated that the canal could be built in three years.

The late Joseph Jefferson, former President Grover Cleveland and others known to fame have helped to keep Cape Cod and the Buzzards bay region in the public eye. Sarah Pratt Greene and Joseph C. Lincoln have written about its inhabitants. It was Thoreau who declared that the sand of the cape was such a nuisance that the tops of some of the sand hills were inclosed with boards and signs put up forbidding persons to enter the inclosures lest their feet should disturb the sand and set it to blowing or sliding. It was this same philosopher who described the Wellfleet oysterman who admitted that he was "a good for nothin' critter" under "petticoat government."

Quincy Man State Secretary

The state convention of the Street Railway Employes' unions was held at Hotel Oxford, Boston, on Monday. P. F. Sheahan of Brockton was elected president and William J. Walsh of Quincy secretary and treasurer.

These two officers with George A. Rose of Lynn was delegated to attend the civic federation meeting to be held in Boston on Thursday.

William J. Walsh, who was elected secretary and treasurer, is well known in Quincy, being one of of the oldest conductors in the employ of the Old Colony street railway. He is prominently identified with unionism. He is president of the local street railway union and has been for a number of years. He is also a member of the Central Labor Union, and has served as its president.

The general good feeling that exists today between the employes of the street railway in Quincy and the officers of the company is due in a great measure to his untiring efforts for a peaceful settlement of all differences.

Her Head Was Hot.

Lady Dorothy Nevill in her reminiscences tells this story of the two Misses Walpole, her cousins: "On one occasion, when both of the two were well over ninety, Miss Fanny, the younger, who had that day been rather ill, only joined her sister in the sitting room just before dinner. On her arrival downstairs the latter (Miss Charlotte by name) remarked: 'Fanny, I am going to be ill too. I feel so hot about the head. It must be apoplexy.' 'Nothing of the sort!' exclaimed Miss Fanny, making a dash at her sister's head. 'Your cap's on fire, and I'm going to put it out.' And so the brave old thing did."

The First Dancers.

People have danced for thousands of years and will probably continue to do so for ages to come. This custom is of ancient origin. The first people to dance were the Curetes, who adopted dancing as a mark of rejoicing in 1543 B. C. In early times the Greeks combined dancing with the drama, and in 22 B. C. pantomimic dances were introduced on the Roman stage. At the discovery of America the American Indians were holding their religious, martial and social dances.

Daily Duties.

The best part of one's life is the performance of one's daily duties. All higher motives, ideas, conceptions and sentiments in a man's life are of little value if they do not strengthen him for the better discharge of the duties which devolve upon him in the ordinary affairs of life.

Newspaper Editor Made Helpless
URIC-O CURED HIM.
Rheumatism Tortured and Crippled Mr. Theo. D. Hadley of Kennett Square, Pa.
Dear Friend:
You will remember of my writing you some time ago regarding Uric-O for rheumatism. I took your advice and purchased three bottles from my local druggist and began its use at once. Favorable effects were experienced and day by day I improved. I have used the three bottles and can truthfully state that I am a well man.
Uric-O has cured in me as bad a case of rheumatism as ever existed. My suffering for months was intense, some nights not able to get one moment's sleep, could not raise my right hand to my head had to do all with my left. I could not even dress myself for over three months. My trouble being inflammatory rheumatism had settled in my right arm and shoulder, crippling, as I thought, permanently. This is the third letter I have written, a thing I hardly expected to be able to do again, as I did not think I could possibly recover from the terrible effects of the disease, as you know I am past the four score year on the way to the "New Jerusalem." I am happy to state that after suffering so long with the most painful forms of rheumatism, that Uric-O has cured me and nearly normal conditions exist. My former strength is improving, and yet for all I am 85 years old, sleep well again, eat well and as hale and hearty as a man at the age of fifty. I thank you again most heartily for recommending Uric-O to me. I can now recommend it to my friends.
Theo. H. Hadley, Kennett Square, Pa.
This marvelous specific is sold at 75 cents a bottle, two weeks' treatment, a blood cure for all forms of rheumatism, acting alone on the blood, muscles and kidneys. Uric-O is a liquid taken in spoonful doses three times daily and must be used for rheumatism only. Ask your druggist for samples and circulars explaining the treatment.
The store of E. J. Murphy is the Uric-O store in Quincy.

INDUSTRIAL INSURANCE

Saving Bank Plan Explained By Mr. Brandeis At Wollaston

The speaker at the monthly dinner of the Wollaston Unitarian club Tuesday evening was L. D. Brandeis whose address was on "Industrial Insurance." The guests of the evening were Clarence Burgin, treasurer of the Quincy Savings bank, Henry M. Faxon a trustee of the bank, Representative Sandberg, and Representative White, secretary of the Industrial Insurance League.

President Parlin presided and a hot roast beef dinner was served at 6.30.

After dinner the committee on ladies' night reported, and after some discussion the matter was referred to a special committee.

Amidst the revelations of the Armstrong Committee, the greatest of life insurance abuses escaped almost unnoticed. No recommendation was made by the Armstrong Committee to remedy the evils of the so-called "Industrial Insurance," which includes child insurance. And yet this class of insurance, which is merely life insurance in small amounts, represents three-fourths of the total number of policies in the old-line companies, held in the United States January 1, 1906. On that day 16,872,583 such policies were held in our workingmen's families.

Public attention has been frequently called to the evils of child insurance, but the fearful sacrifice of workingmen's earnings involved in all kinds of industrial insurance, has apparently been overlooked. Some idea of the extent of this loss to the workingmen may be formed from the figures recently collated of the financial results of this insurance in a single state.

The workingmen of Massachusetts paid into the industrial insurance companies during the fifteen years ending December 31, 1905, premiums aggregating $61,294,887, and received back during the fifteen years an aggregate of $21,819,606, or 35 per cent. of the amount paid in; and the insurance reserve applicable to these policies remaining in the possession of the companies amounts to only $9,838,000. If this $61,294,887 had been deposited in Massachusetts savings banks, and the depositors had withdrawn each year the same amounts that were paid to the policyholders by these insurance companies, they would, through the interest accumulations, have held on deposit on January 1, 1906, $49,931,548.35.

The least which the workingman pays for insurance is at about double the rate charged by the Equitable or by the New York Life, or by the Mutual Life of New York, and the cost of this industrial insurance for the earlier periods of the policy rises as high as eight times that ordinarily paid for life insurance.

Of the $40,000,000 thus lost to the workingmen of Massachusetts in fifteen years, some has been taken to enable the insurance companies to pay exorbitant dividends to their stockholders; for the dividend paid by the Prudential Insurance Company is more than 219 per cent. each year upon the cash actually paid in for stock, and the annual dividends on the stock of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company amount to 28 per cent. on the cash paid in on its stock. But a far greater part of the loss to the workingman is due to the extraordinarily wasteful system under which the business is conducted. This waste arises mainly from the fact that the premiums are collected weekly at the homes of the insured, and that a large part of the policies which are secured by persistent and expensive solicitation lapse shortly after they are written.

Even in the old and established companies, a majority of all industrial policies written lapse within the first year. The Metropolitan company lost by lapse in the year 1905 1,253,635 policies. The Columbian National Life Insurance began the year 1905 with 40,397 policies, and ended it with only 63,497, although there had been written during the year 103,466. In other words, 79,598 policies lapsed, while only 699 of its policy holders had died; and hence on only 699 of these policies was any payment made by the company.

When a policy lapses, the policyholder loses all that he paid in (except the the temporary protection), but a far greater loss falls upon his fellow policyholders who continue to pay premiums. For, owing to the heavy initial expense involved in writing a policy, it does not "pay its way" until it has been in force about three years: and as few policies which lapse have been continued so long, every lapse, causes a heavy loss which the others have to bear.

With this exhibit of waste on the part of the industrial insurance companies, which take for expenses and dividends at least 50 cents out of every dollar paid in as premium, the record of the Massachusetts Savings Banks presents a notable contrast:

The 189 savings banks with aggregate deposits of $662,808,000 are conducting their business on the basis of an expense of less than one quarter of one per cent a year on the aggregate assets administered, or only one and one-half on the year's deposits.

Insurance is but one form of savings, and, by an extension of their powers, the savings banks could, under proper state supervision, provide the workingmen with life insurance also, and thus perform a further service as great as they are now performing with respect to ordinary savings deposits.

Recognizing this fact, a large number of public spirited citizens of Massachusetts have formed the Massachusetts Savings-Insurance League, with headquarters at 2 A Park street, Boston, for the purpose of securing the necessary legislation to enable the savings banks to extend their usefulness by providing life insurance to wage-earners in small amounts at a proper cost.

Governor Guild in his inaugural address said: "To the poor, the expense of so-called industrial insurance is very severe; to the very poor, it is prohibitive. I suggest for your earnest thought and careful consideration the subject of insurance of the lives of those able to pay but a very small premium, but whose honorable pride is now in too many cases urging them to pay what they can ill afford if they would avoid a pauper's burial. Life insurance without agents or collectors is an experiment in which the demands of the people are supplemented by practical plans. I commend for your consideration the study of plans to be submitted to you for cheaper industrial insurance that may rob death of half of its terrors for the worthy poor."

The Recess Insurance Committee shows by its report that its members regard Mr. Brandeis's plan with approval.

After the address, which was of an hour's duration, questions were asked the speaker and there was a spirited discussion in which several members took part.

Clarence Burgin, when introduced, said that from the present standpoint he would favor the Savings Banks going into the insurance business. Economically managed institutions, like the Savings Banks, gave the best returns to the workmen, and he believed it the duty of the trustees to encourage the workingmen all they could. The Quincy Savings bank has 15,000 accounts, and more than 85 per cent. was with Quincy people. The greater part of the work was the making of investments. The actual expense of management is but 5 per cent. of its gross earnings. He believed Savings Bank insurance would result in benefit for the workingmen.

Henry M. Faxon felt that the Savings Banks was doing a public service to the community. While he was not ready to commit himself at the present time, there was much merit in the plan outlined.

Representative Sandberg was in favor of the proposed plan, and while he did not so far commit himself as to say he would vote for the measure, he intimated as much.

The last speaker was Representative White, secretary of the league, who spoke briefly of some of the methods used by industrial insurance companies.

COLLARS PRESENTED

At Public Installation Of Quincy Odd Fellows

The officers elect and appointive of Mt. Wollaston lodge of Odd Fellows were publicly installed at Faxon hall Tuesday evening, and it was the occasion of a large gathering of Odd Fellows and ladies, and the program was of interest. The platform was decorated with plants from Patterson's greenhouse.

The installing officer was District Deputy Grand Master Edward Prouty of Rockland, who was assisted by Past Grand Samuel Hunt as grand marshal and a large suite. These officers were installed:

N. G.,—James Moorehead, Jr.

R. S. S.,—Thomas Furnald.
L. S. S.,—George Fisher.
I. G.,—Thomas Smith.
O. G.,—Charles Jones.

Interesting remarks were made by the district deputy and members of his suite, which were interspersed by music by Wilson's orchestra. A feature of the evening was the presentation of past grand collars to three members who have always worked hard for the upbuilding of the lodge.

Past Grand D. E. McDonald first presented a collar to Past Grand Tobias H. Burke, the oldest past grand, who presided over the lodge in 1885. Then Past Grand W. H. Cobb presented a collar to Past Grand Aubrey Keith, whose term was in 1896, and finally Past Grand F. W. Flowers presented a collar to Past Grand Frank Carlton who was in the chair in 1902.

Refreshments of ice cream and cake followed; then dancing until midnight to Wilson's inspiring music.

CITIZENS' ASSOCIATION

Interested in Grade Crossings And the Telephone Service

The regular January meeting of the Citizens Association was held Tuesday evening, when the telephone service and the abolition of grade crossings were the principal improvements considered. In the absence of President Kincaide, ex-Councilman John Q. A. Field was elected chairman.

A resolution was reported and adopted setting forth poor service by the telephone company and excessive rates. The following committee of five was appointed to attend the hearing on Wednesday before the State Highway Commission, and to cooperate with other committees: A. F. Schenkelberger, E. H. Angier, P. R. Blackmur, A. L. Baker and J. F. Burke.

The bylaws were amended to provide for meetings every two months instead every three months. The other amendment was defeated.

Ex City Solicitor McAnarney spoke of the movement looking to the abolition of the grade crossings at Saville and Water streets, regarding it as the most important question of the day. It was important he said that a commission favorable to the city should if possible be secured. The appointment was left to the sitting judge of the Norfolk Superior court. While he had full faith in the Mayor and law department of the city, he believed they they would be strengthened by a committee of the Citizens Association. He moved a committee of three.

Ex-City Solicitor Blackmur seconded the motion. The court, he said, often appointed men upon whom the city and the railroad agreed, so it was important that the city should be alert at the start.

Ex-Representative Fallon learned upon inquiry that the cost would be apportioned as follows: 65 per cent on the railroad, 25 per cent. on the state, and 10 per cent. on the city. He favored the improvement.

Councilman Pinkham said Quincy should be greatly interested and should endeavor to have the work done right. He suggested Judge Bumpus as a member of the committee.

Andrew Milne hoped the need of a new crossing between Water street and Capens bridge would be considered at the same time.

Mr. Blackmur said there would be opportunities later to present individual ideas. He opposed relocation of streets. He said experience had shown that it was difficult to get the State to agree to all the improvements necessary, and therefore urged activity on the part of the city.

The motion to appoint a committee prevailed, and the chair appointed lawyers E. C. Bumpus, J. W. McAnarney and P. R. Blackmur.

Steps were taken to secure as speakers at early dates, Mr. Fillebrown on the single tax, and L. D. Brandeis on industrial insurance.

George H. Brown asked the question whether it was the desire to consider political questions at meetings. He thought some were opposed to it, but personally he thought it within the scope of the association.

Mr. Blackmur thought it not improper.

Mr. Fallon thought there were other subjects that demanded more attention, such as Metropolitan parkway, river improvements, etc. He wanted the Representatives instructed to push along the parkway.

Representative Hultman said plans had been prepared, and that contract would probably be let this year for a bridge over Blacks creek, and other work was progressing.

GOOD AFTERNOON.

Mayor Thompson is right when he interprets the voice of the people relative to No-License, as a desire for "a closer adherence to the No-License sentiment of the city, and a stricter interpretation of what defines a common carrier under the law." The number of express licenses should be limited, and the limit should be low, say one for each ward of the city, not over eight at the outside.

Under a licence vote the number of licenses for sale would be limited to one for each thousand population or 28, yet under No-License nearly that number of expressmen are licensed to transport liquor to the homes of Quincy.

It was a great surprise to Quincy people in 1906 when so many claimed to be expressmen, and a greater surprise when the Council granted so many licenses. Already the new Council has a petition of this kind, but should promptly give leave to withdraw.

The workingmen owe much to L. D Brandeis for what he is doing to secure for them industrial insurance at greatly reduced rates. His investigations of the old-time companies has been thorough, and his solution which allows Savings Banks to go into the business is worthy of support.

The assessed valuation of Quincy last May was $26,786,885 including bank shares, so that a tax of $1 per $1,000 would raise less than $26,786.89. It is plain therefore that the Metropolitan assessments of $82,486.48 in 1906 would entail a tax of over $3 per $1,000 instead of $2.77 as figured by the Mayor in his address.

It was good news that Mayor Thompson gave us in his address that Mr. Albert Crane has already matured plans for an addition to the Thomas Crane Public Library, which will be a gift to the city. The building of this addition and the erection of the Federal building and new Coddington schoolhouse all in one neighborhood should make things lively.

SEIZED BY STATE

Raid on Ballot Boxes to Prevent "Possible Tampering"

A HITCH IN MANHATTAN

Boxes Stored There Could Not Be Located--McClellan's Counsel Talks of "Practicing Law With Mask and Jimmy"

New York, Jan. 9.—To prevent, he says, possible tampering with the ballots cast in the Hearst-McClellan mayoralty election of 1905, which may be needed for a recount under the action begun by the state to oust Mayor McClellan and seat Hearst as mayor, Attorney General Jackson, acting under orders from the supreme court, caused raids to be made at such storage places throughout Greater New York as were known to his representatives. After some delays the greater number of the boxes were located, newly sealed and placed under guard of officers representing the attorney general.

A hitch developed in Manhattan, and the deputies assigned to the work reported that many boxes stored in that borough could not be located. Later Commissioner of Elections Dooling was formally served with a copy of the court's order commanding those in custody of the ballot boxes to deliver the same to the attorney general. Jackson says that the commissioner refused to obey the court order which, the attorney general added, will, however, have to be respected.

Eugene L. Richards, Jr., of Mayor McClellan's counsel, issued a statement late yesterday in which, with reference to the seizure of the ballot boxes, it is declared that the action "adds a chapter to a work which could be properly entitled 'How to practice law with mask and jimmy.'"

The statement continues: "The news of the night raid on the ballot boxes in the Staten Island Savings bank only confirms our judgment of the methods, purposes and official ideals of Attorney General Jackson. Unwilling to work in daylight, he has in the dark hours before dawn, without notice to the board of elections, attempted to take from their present legal custody the ballot boxes of the last mayoralty election and turn them over to himself, that is, to Shearn, his new deputy attorney general, that is to Hearst. Of course in the custody of Hearst they will be safe and inviolate; and of course, too, it would be presumptuous for Mayor McClellan to protest against such custody, or even to suggest that he should have had notice of such a proceeding.

"As a lawyer and a citizen, I deem this action of the attorney general in closing the last door to the possible discovery of fraud as unworthy of his office and contrary to the law and spirit of our institutions."

Highwaymen's Terrible Work

Pittsburg, Jan. 9.—After being brutally beaten by two highwaymen on a lonely road and with his son, who had also been assaulted, lying unconscious nearby, Frank Mason, a farmer, was tied to the tracks of the Pennsylvania road near Beaver last night and escaped being crushed to death by wrenching himself free of his bonds just as a flyer was thundering down upon him. Both men will recover. Mason says he recognized his assailants and warrants were sworn out for their arrest.

Typhoid Fever In Full Sway

Scranton, Pa., Jan. 9.—Twenty-three new cases of typhoid were reported up to 10 o'clock last night, the total number being 1007. Four deaths were reported yesterday, making a total of 74. Mayor Dimmick declares that the city is now, to all intents and purposes, under martial law. Warrants for 70 property holders were issued at the instance of the mayor. They were ordered to put their premises in a sanitary condition and neglected to do so.

Duke and Duchess Separate

London, Jan. 9.—The Duke and Duchess of Marlborough have at last separated and all talk of reconciliation is now out of the question. Yesterday the legal deed of separation was signed by each of them, and once again an American girl has emerged from sensational marital troubles with her colors flying and her reputation unblemished.

Lowell, Mass., Jan. 9.—It is announced that there is a deficit of about $67,000 in the general treasury fund of the city of Lowell for 1906. The deficit is the largest ever recorded at city hall and is ascribed to over-estimation of the city's revenues for last year.

Senator Nelson Renominated

St. Paul, Jan. 9.—The Republican members of the Minnesota legislature, in caucus last night, nominated United States Senator Nelson to succeed himself. This is equivalent to election, as the Republicans have an overwhelming majority in the legislature.

PLOT TO SLAY WHITES

Alleged Object of Members of the Twenty-Fifth Infantry

El Reno, Okla., Jan. 9.—Belief of the army officers at Fort Reno that a conspiracy to murder every white officer at Fort Reno, beginning with Captain Macklin, against whom it is said many negro soldiers at the post entertain a grudge as a result of the affair at Brownsville, Tex., and the discharge of the negro soldiers that followed, became known as a result of the preliminary hearing in the case of Edward L. Knowles, corporal of company A, Twenty-fifth infantry, who was held on a charge of assault with intent to kill Macklin on the night of Dec. 21. Knowles was bound over to await the action of the grand jury.

All of the officers now go heavily armed and protected throughout the night. Every effort has been made to keep the alleged conspiracy a secret, but it is learned that an investigation is now being conducted at several army posts and important places throughout the country and within a short time arrests of the members of the troops recently discharged without honor are expected to follow.

Evidence of Murder With Arsenic

Philadelphia, Jan. 9.—Coroner Jermon states that enough arsenic has been found in the bodies of Patrick Cook and his sister to have killed six persons, and Mrs. Bridget Carey, who was recently held by the coroner to await the action of the grand jury on the charge of poisoning her two children, will again face the ordeal of an inquest when the coroner will investigate the deaths of the Cooks, who formerly boarded with Mrs. Carey.

Chinese Labor Not Necessary

New York, Jan. 9.—Senator Flint, Congressman McKinlay and Congressman Dickson have returned from Panama. The first two said they found work progressing favorably. They gave it as their opinion that there is no necessity of employing Chinese labor to complete the canal. Smith declined to be quoted as to what he thought of the employment of Chinese laborers.

Bill Aimed at Trusts

Boston, Jan. 9.—A so-called "anti-trust" bill was filed in the state senate by Senator Vahey of Watertown. The bill provides a penalty of $5000 for any combination in the form of a trust or otherwise, whereby competition in the supply or price of any article or commodity in common use in the state, for the support of life and health, may be restrained or prevented.

Firemen Seriously Injured

New York, Jan. 9.—In fighting a fire at 259 Greenwich street late last night, five firemen were caught in a back draught and for several minutes were enveloped in smoke and flame. They were all unconscious when rescued and removed to a hospital. Two of them are said to be in a serious condition. The fire was controlled without serious loss.

Dryden and Colby Both "Sure"

Trenton, Jan. 9.—Senator Dryden, who came to Trenton to attend the opening of the legislature, has returned to Washington. Before leaving Dryden expressed himself as confident of being made his own successor. Senator Colby, who is opposing Dryden's re-election, is equally sure that Dryden will be defeated.

Bryce Coming In February

London, Jan. 9.—James Bryce, the new British ambassador to the United States, has arranged to reach Washington Feb. 24, thus permitting him to pass a few days at the capital before congress adjourns. He has not yet booked his passage, as several lines are contending for the honor of carrying the ambassador.

Money For Fortifications

Washington, Jan. 9.—The house committee on appropriations finished consideration of fortifications and decided to report a bill carrying an appropriation of $4,411,000. This sum is $357,000 below the amount appropriated last year, and is nearly $7000 less than the estimates submitted by the war department.

Whole Community Poisoned

Carlsbad, N. M., Jan. 9.—W. E. Kiser, wife and two children are dead, and others are thought to be dying from what is supposed to be ptomaine poisoning. The Kisers reside on a ranch on Toyah creek, Texas, and the entire community is said to be suffering from the same kind of poisoning.

SHAH PASSES ON

Had Been on Persian Throne Since May 1, 1906

SPENT MONEY LAVISHLY

Death Comes at Time When European Governments Are Struggling For Prestige In Persia--About His Successor

London, Jan. 9.—The Daily Mail's correspondent at Teheran says that the Shah of Persia died last evening. All the shah's vital functions were suspended yesterday and at 5 o'clock in the evening the heir apparent and the ministers were summoned. The women of the palace also began preparations for mourning. Soon after sunset the doors of the harem were closed. This was the sign that all was over.

The death of the shah removes a picturesque ruler who was well known to western Europe owing to his frequent visits, particularly to France, where he took "cures" at Contreville and enjoyed the pleasure of Paris life. During the visit of 1905 the shah and his suite made a dazzling appearance on the boulevards and in the music halls of Paris. They were treated as national guests and given a truly royal welcome, while popular enthusiasm was marked, owing to the shah's good nature and lavish charity. On one occasion he gave the conductor of an orchestra $100 for playing a tune which caught his fancy. At that time his majesty looked old and feeble, his face was pale and flabby, and had a waxen pallor. He invariably wore a regal costume, with richly embroidered coat and red fez.

The shah's death comes at a time when European governments are engaged in a struggle to strengthen their position in Persia. This struggle is due to the geographical position of Persia as a buffer between the British possessions of India and Russia's southern possessions stretching toward the Persian gulf. Still another international factor has recently been introduced by Germany's commercial and railway activity along the Persian gulf.

The late shah was strongly pro-Russian and as a result Russian influence has been predominant at Teheran. The Cossack guard under Russian officers forms the principal force of the Persian capital and Russia's loans to the impoverished Persian treasury makes the country financially dependent upon Russia. Until quite recently the struggle over Persia was confined mainly to Russia and Great Britain, the latter seeking to restore her former prestige. The Japanese war so weakened Russia that her hold upon Persia somewhat relaxed. British policy thereupon sought to join interest with Russia instead of antagonizing her. As a result, an Anglo-Russian understanding has recently been negotiated and the announcement of its terms is considered imminent. By this agreement Great Britain and Russia will cease their rivalry over Persia and unite in a joint policy, whereby each safeguards its interests.

At the same time Germany has been extending her influence in Persia. German physicians attended the shah during his last illness, the establishment of a German bank gives the first competition to the Russian and British banks, German enterprises are being established, and the German project of a Bagdad railway promises to give a new route to India.

Muzaffar-Ed-Din, the late Shah of Persia, was born at Teheran March 25, 1853, and succeeded his father, Nasr-Ed-Din, on the death of the latter May 1, 1896. Muzaffar-Ed-Din was the second son of the Nasr-Ed-Din, but was appointed heir to the throne. Previous to his accession to the throne, Muzaffar-Ed-Din was governor general of the province of Azerbaijan, his elder brother, Masud Mirza, being governor of Ispahan. Nasr-Ed-Din was assassinated May 1, 1896, in the mosque of Abdul Azim, near Teheran, and, while Muzaffar-Ed-Din ascended the throne the same day, it was not until June 8, 1896, that he was formally invested with sovereign power.

The late shah leaves many children and will be succeeded by his eldest son, Mohammed Ali Mirza, the heir apparent and governor of the province of Azerbaijan, who was born in 1872, and who is now in Teheran.

The new shah has shown strong force of character and the general view is that a strong ruler at Teheran will be the best corrective to European intrigues. The recent disorganized condition of the country was largely due to the fact that, on account of ill-health, the shah was unable to attend to state business.

His successor is in the prime of life, 34 years of age, and throughout his governorship of Azerbaijan he has shown marked energy and ability. He is a devoted sportsman, being particularly attached to motoring and hunting, and received an excellent education, both Persian and European.

The shah, or according to his official title "Shah-In-Shah," or King of Kings, is absolute ruler within his dominions, and master of the lives and goods of all his subjects. The whole revenue of the country being at the shah's disposal, recent sovereigns of Persia were able to amass a large private fortune, but that of Muzaffar-Ed-Din is reported to amount to only $10,000,000, most of it represented by diamonds, one of 186 carats and one of 146 carats and other precious stones forming the crown jewels.

PLANNING PEACE

Senators May Compromise on the Brownsville Investigation

DANIEL MAKES A SPEECH

Says Congress Should Not Impugn President and Military Law--A Texas Representative Tells Brownsville Story Anew

Washington, Jan. 9.—Practically all of yesterday was given over by senate leaders of both parties to an effort to bring about harmony between opposing views concerning the proposed investigation of the affray at Brownsville, Tex. What amounts to an agreement between Senators Foraker and Lodge has been attained by their friends, but inasmuch as it was decided not to present the compromise until all of the senators desiring to do so had made speeches on the subject of the dismissal of the negro troops it is not absolutely certain that the peace plans will not be upset.

The compromise is not greatly different from the resolution presented by Lodge and a similar one which Foraker had intended to offer as a substitute for his original resolution. It provides for the investigation by the senate committee on military affairs of the affray at Brownsville, and to this is to be added provisions that a sub-committee be sent to Brownsville and that the expenses of the committee be paid out of the contingent fund of the senate.

Such a resolution would ignore the constitutional and legal questions that have been debated for several days in the senate. Senator Lodge declares that he is satisfied with the program, and Foraker says he is not particular about phraseology, so long as an investigation is ordered and a committee sent to Brownsville to take testimony.

The situation now is said to be the same as it was before the speech of Lodge on Monday. Both sides were then agreed to leave out the constitutional questions and they had been ignored in the substitute offered by Lodge. It was the speeches on the resolution and the manner in which it was interpreted that caused Foraker to oppose it. Unless the speeches yet to be made create sentiment on one side or the other, it is believed the compromise will be effective.

Justifying Democratic support for the position of the president, Senator Daniel in a speech yesterday said:

"Nothing has ever prevented anybody coming from south of the Potomac from declaring his honest judgment as to the meaning of the Constitution, nor in upholding the power of the president and the army on all occasions where patriotism invoked adhesion or where clear understanding produced conviction."

Mr. Daniel denied that the race question was involved and ridiculed the suggestion, which he said had been mysteriously hinted at, that the people of Brownsville "shot up" their own town in order to bring reproach upon the colored soldiers.

"In all the southern outrages I have ever heard of," continued Daniel, "this is the first time that the human mind has been distorted into the suggestion that a southern town was shooting up itself. If this had been a white company, whether from Connecticut or Virginia, we would have had no public meetings on the subject, no sermons would have been preached, no churches would have been aroused and diverted from their religious devotion."

Mr. Daniel favored an investigation. "Get all the evidence you can," he said, "but do not impugn the president and the military law. To sustain the president," he said, in conclusion, "is not friendship for autocracy: it is simply friendship for government; it is respect for law."

An echo of the Brownsville assault was heard in the house, Representative Slayden of Texas telling the story anew and with considerable detail.

"In the history of the negro troops in the United States," said Slayden, "one finds many chapters that tell of violent breaches of discipline, of riotous and mutinous conduct, or murder and race hostility."

In declaring the negro race to be unfit for American soldiers, the Texas congressman said he had in view only the circumstances of their services. He did not impeach their physical courage. "This is a virtue," he said, "that belongs to nearly all men, and if there is any difference between savage and civilized man in this respect the superiority possibly lies with the savage, who is undeterred from rash ventures by thought of the consequences."

Mr. Slayden spoke of the sympathy that welds people into a homogeneous political and social mass, but said that it "has never existed and never will exist between negroes and Caucasians. If the soldiers had been white and the circumstances the same and if the president had dismissed them from the service in the same manner there not only would have been no doubt as to who were the murderers, but the action of the president would have been almost unanimously approved. But then, the whites are not a valuable political asset handled in bulk, which explains many things."

RAILROAD DELAYS

Boston and Albany Is Criticised For Its Ill-Timed Frugality

Boston, Jan. 9.—A recommendation for freer and more timely expenditures by the management of the Boston and Albany railroad is a feature of the railroad commission's long anticipated report on delays on the railroads having terminals in Boston. The report discusses the breaking of the lease of the Boston and Albany and the New York Central railroad as one remedy, but advises against breaking the lease, preferring rather to bring pressure to bear on the management that will result in bringing equipment and service up to first-class standards. Incidentally the board recalls that the equipment of the Boston and Albany at the time of the lease was by no means the best ideal to hold up as a standard.

The board cites the railroad delays all over the country as an indication that Boston conditions are not peculiar, and intimates that the Boston and Albany is more blameworthy than the other lines entering Boston by making less provision beforehand for the great flood of business that has caused the trouble. The Boston and Maine and New York, New Haven and Hartford managements are only briefly mentioned, their trouble being laid largely to the overcrowding of terminals.

Peonage In West Virginia

Bluefield, W. Va., Jan. 9.—Under the peonage law an investigation has been completed and evidence submitted to Governor Dawson, at the instance of the Italian ambassador at Washington, charging a lumber camp at Estalle with securing a carload of Italian laborers from immigration agents and herding them in detention camps under armed guards. One man escaped and went 40 miles to Prince station, where he was overtaken and arrested under a warrant. Similar conditions are said to exist in Mercer and Raleigh counties.

Steel Company's Big Suit

Halifax, Jan. 9.—The Dominion Iron and Steel company, which, in its litigation with the Dominion Coal company, demands more than $15,000,000, has filed its statement of claims in the supreme court. The steel company asks the court to declare that its contract with the coal company is still in existence and to appoint a receiver for the coal company, in case the latter refuses to fulfill the contract. The steel company says that it was solely dependent upon the coal company for its supply of coal.

Policyholders Want Receiver

Boston, Jan. 9.—A number of the policyholders of the American Insurance company, which was forced to assign on account of losses in the San Francisco fire, in a petition in the supreme court asking for the appointment of a receiver, allege that the 40 percent settlement which other policyholders were induced to make was obtained by fraud and that the company has sufficient funds to pay all claims in full.

Naval Wonder to Cross the Pond

London, Jan. 9.—Battleship Dreadnought is about to make a notable cruise across the Atlantic, which will take her to West Indian waters at about the time Rear Admiral Evans' squadron will be in the same vicinity. Wrestler Barnes Defeats Canadian

Lewiston, Me., Jan. 9.—James Barnes of Springfield, Mass., successfully defended his title of champion middleweight wrestler of the United States here against John Bourque, champion of Ontario. A Terra Cotta Wreck Suit

Washington, Jan. 9.—The first suit growing out of the recent wreck on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad at Terra Cotta was filed in the district supreme court by Mrs. Fannie Austin, who asks for $30,000, alleging that she received injuries while a passenger on the train in collision.

Senator Clark's Successor

Helena, Mont., Jan. 9.—The election of Congressman J. M. Dixon to the United States senate to succeed Senator Clark was assured last night, a caucus of the Republican members of the legislature giving him 49 votes to 22 for former Senator Mantell.

Young Men's Christian Association

OF QUINCY, MASS.

(Legal Title – Incorporated 1892.)

The Directors of the YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION of Quincy, with a firm faith in the great value of the work which is being done for the young men and boys of our city, make their appeal for donations and bequests toward paying the mortgage indebtedness on the new Association Building. When the building is free from debt it will serve as an Endowment, as there is a goodly income from the dormitories.

Should the Donor prefer, such sum as might be given could be used as an Endowment for an educational class or classes, the Boys Department, or as a special fund in other ways, and could be designated with the name of the Donor.

The Treasurer, WILLIAM F. CUMMINGS, 7 Clive Street, Quincy, or the General Secretary, ERNEST G. GAY, will be happy to answer inquiries.

OUR HOSPITAL

Five Thousand Dollars ($5,000) will endow a Free Bed to which such name may be given as the Donor may desire, but any sum for this noble institution which stands ready to serve us all in the hour of need will be most gratefully received.

The Secretary, TIMOTHY REED, Adams St. Quincy, or the Treasurer, RICHARD D. CHASE, vings Bank Building, Quincy, will be very glad confer with any one or to answer any inquiries.

TWO BODIES EXHUMED

Hints That Poison Caused Death of Fernald and His Son

Jackson, N. H., Jan. 9.—Suspicions of foul play in connection with the deaths of George Fernald of this place and his son, Elmer E. Fernald, of Everett, Mass., both of which occurred at Everett within a few hours of one another 10 days ago, are believed to have been strengthened when the bodies were exhumed by order of County Attorney Abbott, and an autopsy performed on the body of the son.

The stomach, kidneys and a portion of the intestines were removed from the son's body by Medical Referee Hodsdon of Ossippee, assisted by Dr. Shedd.

Throughout the village the action of the authorities is the main topic of discussion, and the belief is general that the coroner has found evidences of foul play.

Much interest is shown in the case here in Jackson because of the prominence of the family and because of the expressed belief of the two sons of George Fernald, living here, that the deaths of their father and brother were caused by poison.

Dr. Hodsdon declined to discuss the nature of his examination or to express any opinion as to the cause of death. Dr. Shedd also refused to comment upon the case in any way.

Silk Mill Employes Strike

Central Falls, R. I., Jan. 9.—The employment of a Polish operative in the warping department of the Royal Weaving company's silk mill precipitated a strike of 50 girls at that factory. About 800 hands are employed at the plant and there is a probability that the entire plant will be shut down. Although some 250 Poles are at work in the mill, it was only recently that one of their number was assigned to the warping department.

Progressive League Organized

New Haven, Jan. 9.—For the celebration of the anniversary of Jackson day and the perfecting of the organization of the New England Democratic Progressive League, prominent Democrats from various parts of New England gathered here. It was voted that the executive board should name the place for the next annual meeting, which it was voted to hold on the first Monday in March. A constitution and by-laws were adopted.

Shoe Cutters on Strike

Boston, Jan. 9.—The discharge of two men at the large shoe factory of the Thomas G. Plant company led to the strike of 165 "outside" cutters and a number of trimming cutters. The cutters complained of the stock furnished them, and when the head of the company heard of the grievances it is alleged he discharged two of the men. Last night the strikers were organized into an assembly of the Knights of Labor.

Wants $1000 to Pay For Trousseau

Boston, Jan. 9.—Although married to a man whom she says she loves and admires, Mrs. Jennie Silverman appeared in the municipal court as the plaintiff in a $1000 breach of promise suit against her first lover, Samuel Levine. Mrs. Silverman does not seek the $1000 as heart balm, but desires to recover the money which she says she paid out in making arrangements for her intended marriage with Levine.

Bakers Violated Sunday Law

Boston, Jan. 9.—Twelve summonses were issued in the lower court yesterday against alleged violators of the Sunday laws. Most of them were against bakers, ice cream dealers and theatrical transfer men. Four bakers were fined $5 each by Judge Murray for violating the Sabbath laws and all appealed. Norman Lilly and Franklin W. Smith were both fined $5 for working on books last Sunday.

Sued For Breach of Promise

Cambridge, Mass., Jan. 9.—Professor Phillipe B. Marcou, Ph. D., of Harvard is made the defendant in a $25,000 breach of promise suit brought against him by Miss Annie L. Manley. The suit was entered yesterday and the news of it spread rapidly through the university and among society circles. Just who Miss Manley is no one seems to know, exxcept the counsel in the case, and they will not tell.

Hackett Murder to Come Up

Augusta, Me., Jan. 9.—The Kennebec county grand jury will not consider the murder of Mattie Hackett at this session, according to County Attorney Beane, who says that the case will be taken up at a subsequent session and considered in detail. Miss Hackett was mysteriously murdered in Kent's Hill Aug. 17, 1905. It is understood that the county authorities have in their possession new evidence.

Fire Vets to Drop Benefits

Boston, Jan. 9.—At the annual meeting of the New England States Veterans Firemen's league it was decided to wind up the benefit branch of the league. The branch has been in existence for 16 years and has paid out in death benefits nearly $58,000 in 10-cent benefits. Portsmouth, N. H., was chosen as the place for holding the May meeting.

Charged With Setting Fire

Worcester, Mass., Jan. 9.—Perry Wood, a prominent lumber dealer and box manufacturer of Coldbrook Springs, was arrested by the state police on a charge of setting fire to his factory and dwelling on Dec. 19. Wood was held in $3000 for a hearing on Jan. 12.

From Vermont to Philippines

AMONG THE CLUBS.

Club women who make use of reference books at the Public library are going to miss Miss Amelia Bumpus who has resigned as librarian of the library after nearly forty years of most faithful service. They have always found her most helpful and interested in whatever they were looking up. No matter how pressing her duties she found time to offer suggestions. It was not alone her years of experience and life spent among books which made her services so much appreciated but the cheerful and quick response which is characteristic of Miss Bumpus. In appreciation of her services, a few years ago the Friday club made Miss Bumpus an honorary member of their club, and she is a welcome visitor in other clubs.

QUINCY WOMEN'S CLUB.

The usual monthly business meeting of the Quincy Women's club was held previous to the regular meeting on Tuesday afternoon with a large attendance. Reports were given by the secretary, corresponding secretary, and treasurer.

Resolutions were passed on the death of Mrs. Joseph C. Morse, Jr., who passed away in December, the third member since the formation of the club

Mrs. Charles K. Crane, chairman of the Hospitality committee, presented three beautiful silver urns to the club as the result of a cake and candy sale held in December by her committee at the home of Mrs. Emery L. Crane, Whitney road. The urns are reproductions of the old colonial and are engraved in old English. The committee was indebted to Mr. T. A. Addision of the Point who gave his personal attention to the selection of the urns.

To create more sociability in the club a series of three afternoon whist parties has been arranged by the board of directors to be held on Jan. 15, 29 and February 19 from 2.30 until 5.30. These parties are for members and their friends and tickets for the one next Tuesday may be had of the club treasurer, Miss Annie Prescott, or of any of the executive board. The board also has about perfected plans for a gentlemen's night in February, so that the social side of the club will be well looked after.

At the close of the business the program of the afternoon was in the hands of the Education committee, Mrs. Florence Peltier Pope chairman. Owing to Mrs. Pope's unavoidable absence Mrs. Wilson Marsh presided, the program opening with a short musicale by Mr. Theodore R. Kendall of Allston, violinist and Miss Edith Randall at the piano. Four selections were given of pleasing variety which were heartily encored the difficult scores for both violin and piano being skilfully and sympathetically rendered.

The first group was Shubert's "Serenade" and "Kuiwiok" by Henri Wiencawski and the second group, "Polonaise by Hans Sitt and "Moto Perpetuo" by Carl Bohm.

An interesting report of a day's work was given by the Visiting Nurse who in closing paid a touching tribute to Mrs. May Willis Hatch, Quincy's first visiting nurse, who had endeared herself to all her patients who frequently asked for her.

The speaker of the afternoon was Mr. Arthur Fairbanks Stone of St. Johnsbury, Vermont, who spoke on "The year in retrospect." It was one of the most interesting papers the the club has had the pleasure of listening to. The look backward over the year 1906 was like a series of current events lectures condensed into one. Every happenings of importance was clearly set forth, not alone in our country, but in the world, all entertainingly told. Club members were appreciative and enjoyed seeing things through the eyes of a man, especially one so well informed.

Tea and a social half hour brought the meeting to a close. The next meeting will be the annual musicale, always looked forward to with pleasure by club members.

The literature class under the direction of Mrs. J. Herbert Gurney meets for the first time tomorrow morning at the club house. The meetings are to be on Thursday mornings.

Lord Ellenborough And His Sarcasm

THERE are few places that have given birth to more humor and wit than the courtroom. Many have heard of the humor of the famous Lord Ellenborough.

One day a young member of the bar rose to address the court in a grave criminal case. "My unfortunate client"— he began, repeated it two or three times and then stopped short.

"Go on, sir; go on!" said Ellenborough. "So far the court is with you."

At another time Randle Jackson, who despised technicality and reveled in eloquence, began his argument with "In the book of nature it is written"—

Ellenborough broke in with, "Be good enough to mention the page from which you are about to quote."

One day during an important criminal trial a surgeon was called to the stand, and when asked his profession he said, "I employ myself as a physician."

"But," said Ellenborough, "does any one else employ you as a physician?"

When Westmoreland was in the house of lords he rose to give his opinion on a question in debate and said, "At this point I ask myself a question."

"And a stupid answer you are sure to get to it," murmured Ellenborough.—St. Louis Republic.

He Knew Them.

"What's up, Tommy?" said a good natured London coster, who was passing, to a small boy who was sobbing bitterly.

"Oh, me farden! Hi've lost me brite farden!" wailed the little lad, continuing his search.

"'Ere, mates," said the man to some others standing near, "let's help the pore kid find 'is farden." And the company set to work.

"'Ere y'are, Tommy," he said. "'Ere's yer farden."

Then, looking at it in the light of a street lamp: "W'y, it ain't a farden at all. It's a 'arf quid."

"Garn!" said the boy as he snatched away the coin. "D'ye think Hi was going to let yew blokes know hit was a 'arf thick 'un? W'y, wun of yer would 'a' 'ad 'is foot on it afore Hi'd 'ad tyme ter turn rahnd."

A Good Excuse.

Flubb—Come dine with me tomorrow evening, old fellow. I won't take any excuse.

Dubb—Sorry, old man, but I really can't. Tomorrow evening I am to be married to Miss Readymoney.

Flubb — Oh, well, business before pleasure, I suppose. — Philadelphia Press.

Hard to Be Suited.

"Isn't that bread as good as your mother made, George?"

"As good? Well, I should say not!"

"But it was made from your mother's recipe."

"The recipe? That's a small part of it. It's all in the mixing."

"Well, your mother mixed it too."

"Eh?"

"That's right. She sent me half a dozen loaves by express, and this is one of them."

"That's it. That's the trouble. Mother's bread is no good unless you eat it right out of the oven."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Over the Breakfast Table.

Alice (finding a roll of bills under her plate)—You were out awfully late, Arthur. Is this conscience money?

A Checkmate.

She—Papa says he thinks our love affair should be checked.

He—Dear, thoughtful old guy! Tell him to make the check for four figures if possible.—New York World.

The Man Who Clipped.

I saw him take the paper and
Turn to the household page,
Then scan the column up and down
As one who all would gauge.

"Aha!" he muttered to himself.
"Here's 'How to Make Rice Fritters'
And 'How to Utilize Cold Beef'
And 'Homemade Stomach Bitters.'"

Then from his pocket forth he took
A pair of scissors small
And severed from the printed page
The helpful hints and all.

He clipped "The Way to Scramble Eggs"
And "How to Make Peach Butter,"
As well as half a dozen more.
"That's all"—again his mutter.

"A thoughtful man," at once I mused,
"A man who cares for things,
Who loves the calm, contented song
The home teakettle sings."

"Do you," I asked, "preserve those notes
So that your wife may eye them?"
"Not much," he growled. "I cut them out
So she won't get to try them."

DOG MAN'S BEST FRIEND

Famous Eulogy Of Senator Vest Republished By Request

U. S. Senator Vest's famous eulogy on a dog is timely at this time and is republished by request:

"Gentlemen of the Jury—The best friend a man has in this world may turn against him and become his enemy. His son or his daughter that he has reared with loving care may prove ungrateful. Those who are nearest and dearest to us, those whom we trust with our happiness and our good name, may become traitors to their faith. The money that a man has he may lose. It flies away from him, perhaps when he needs it most.

"A man's reputation may be sacrificed in a moment of ill-considered action. The people who are prone to fall on their knees to do us honor when success is with us may be the first to throw the stone of malice when failure settles its cloud upon our heads. The one absolute, unselfish friend that man can have in this selfish world, the one that never deserts him, the one that never proves ungrateful or treacherous, is his dog.

"Gentlemen of the jury, a man's dog stands by him in prosperity and in poverty, in health and in sickness. He will sleep on the cold ground, where the wintry winds blow and the snow drives fiercely, if only he can be near his master's side. He will kiss the hand that has no food to offer, he will lick the wounds and sores that come in encounter with the roughness of the world. He guards the sleep of his pauper master as if he were a prince. When all other friends desert he remains. When riches take wings and reputation falls to pieces he is as constant in his love as the sun in its journey though the heavens.

"If fortune drives the master forth an outcast in the world, friendless and homeless, the faithful dog asks no higher privilege than that of accompanying him to guard against danger, to fight against his enemies, and when the last scene of all comes, and death takes the master in its embrace, and his body is laid away in the cold ground, no matter if all other friends pursue their way, there by his graveside will the noble dog be found, his head between his paws, his eyes sad but open in alert watchfulness, faithful and true even to death."

The above eulogy is prompted after reading in a Boston daily of a pet dog's fate, and the brutality of a policeman. The paper says:

Because his little companion, "Spot," a small white terrier dog, is dead, having been killed by a policeman, Joe Mahoney, a bright-eyed, 3-year-old lad, is heart-broken. His sorrow is shared by the entire community in the Beachmont station district, Revere, where he is the pride of the neighborhood.

The paper proceeds to tell how the dog slipped out with a grocery clerk, how he was lassoed but escaped, how he was pursued and shot near home in sight of the boy, and even pursued into the house and clubbed to death.

As much as we may desire to obey the laws and keep our dogs muzzled, they are liable at times to slip out without our knowledge. In such event we trust our Quincy policemen will not take such action as the above officer did. Lest we forget, read again the eulogy of U. S. Senator Vest's on the dog.

Merritt---Frost.

The wedding of Miss Nellie M. Frost, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. George H. Frost, to Mr. Arthur H. Merritt, of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, took place Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents.

Only the members of the two families were present, owing to the ill health of the father of the bride. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. William H. Allbright, D. D., assisted by the Rev. A. H. Plumb, D. D.

After a reception and collation, Mr. and Mrs. Merritt left on an early evening train for Montreal and Qubec. They will be at home to their friends after March 1 at 223 Neponset avenue, Dorchester.

Our Rights As Citizens

Professor Frank Parsons and some coworkers in the last legislature caused the Gas and Electric Light Commission to demand of the Edison company of Boston, certain information concerning names and customers in specified locations, and prices paid by them for electric light during the month of February, 1906.

In some cases these rates are reported to be less than five cents per kilowatt, while private citizens pay eighteen and twenty cents per kilowatt.

These figures are in the hands of the Gas and Electric Light Commission, but they will not make them public unless compelled by the Legislature to submit them to that body. The Legislature will not be likely to do this unless the citizens instruct their representatives to take such action.

It is our right as citizens of the Commonwealth, and it is also important that we see these figures. Only in this way shall we know of any discrimination made. Only in this way can we obtain an approximation of the value of these monopoly functions and data to determine the cost of such service.

Quincy should submit a petition to its representatives at once, instructing them in this matter. I am willing and anxious to assist any persons who are willing to circulate a petition. Please mail postal card to

WEST QUINCY INDIGNANT

Because Teams Are Not Allowed to Enter Crescent St From Copeland

There is considerable indignation at West Quincy because teams are prohibited from crossing the boulevard from Copeland street into Crescent street the streets having intersected for years. That part of Crescent street at its junction with Copeland street is now a part of Furnace Brook Metropolitan Parkway and under control of the Metropolitan Park Commission.

Until recently teams coming from Quincy were permitted to cross the boulevard from Copeland street into Crescent street. Now however this is prohibited, as the Metroplitan Park Commission claims that the street is being too much cut up.

Even a funeral on its way to St. Mary's cemetery is not allowed to cross. Last week, at the funeral of Mrs. Deasy, when the hearse attempted to cross, it was held up by an officer, and was obliged to turn back and go up Copeland street over the pavements, and thence through Cross street into Crescent street.

There is a very rigid law about stopping funerals, and it is a question if the Metropolitan Park Commission with all of its power has authority to stop one.

It was a sad mistake when in 1901 the City Council, without looking into the matter, relinquished the city's rights on that part of Crescent street at its junction with Copeland street.

Quite a difference in the temperature today from what it has been for several days past.

Railroad Connection

The N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R. has revived the plan to connect the Granite and Shawmut branches by a new bridge across the Neponset river near the Granite avenue bridge between Milton and Boston. This week a petition was presented to the Legislature by Frank A. Farnham, accompanied by a bill which reads as follows:

Section 1. The Old Colony Railroad Company is hereby authorized to locate, construct and maintain an extension of its railroad between the Shawmut and Milton branches thereof in the city of Boston and the Granite branch thereof in the city of Quincy, crossing the Neponset river, and extending over and taking any lands which may have been heretofore appropriated to another public use, and specifically lands held for the purposes of Metropolitan parks, upon such route and in such manner as the board of Railroad Commissioner may after as public hearing fix and prescribe.

Section 2. The Old Colony Railroad Company shall pay all damages caused by laying out, making and maintaining said railroad, or by taking land or materials therefor. Such damages shall be secured and recovered in the manner provided by the general law for the recovery of damages caused by the laying out, making and maintaining of railroads.

Church League of Base Ball Clubs

There has been a long felt desire among the Galahad Brotherhood to start a baseball league among the churches of Quincy, and a few of the surrounding towns.

There are church leagues in Dorchester and Medford which have proven very successful. They are formed for the purpose of promoting a closer union between the classes composing the leagues, and to extend the influence of Bible classes among young men.

Why not start one in Quincy, which, with a little push could be carried through very well? Of course there would be difficulties, but in every movement someone has to make a start.

There are some teams in Quincy that we would like to hear from, viz., the Makeria Fraternity, Pilgrim Class, and also some teams from Wollaston or Atlantic. Who will take up the matter and communicate with B. C. Miller, 211 Franklin street?

—Charles B. Barnes, Jr., was this week elected commodore of the Hingham Yacht club. There are now 132 members.

ASSESSOR JOHNSON

Many Tributes Of Respect Hundreds View Body at Church

The body of Assessor Julius Johnson, who died Monday night was taken into the Swedish Baptist church on Granite street at 10 o'clock this morning, where it was to lie in state until noon.

The body was encased in a black broadcloth covered casket, which bore the simple inscription: "Julius Johnson—1860—1907." Surrounding it were a large number of beautiful floral pieces testifying to the high regard in which he was held by the citizens at large.

Not only were there set pieces from the officials of the city, officers of the church and societies of which he was affiliated, but from many friends as well.

Among these floral pieces were the following:

A large flat bouquet of white pinks from the Assessors department.

A pillow of white and pink carnations with the words: "There is rest in the sweet heaven," from the Baptist church.

A large wreath with the three links and letters "I. O. O. F." from Mt. Wollaston lodge of Odd Fellows.

A standing cross of pinks marked "Father."

Bouquet of white pinks from Mr. and Mrs. George E. Adams.

Flat bouquet of pinks from John McGinty.

Bouquet of pinks from James Moorehead.

During the hours that the body was lying in state there were hundreds who called at the church to look upon the face, now so peaceful, of him whom in life was respected by all.

The funeral services will be held this afternoon, the pastor Rev. John Bjork, being assisted by Rev. Alfred Lindberg of Boston, and Rev. C. E. Johnson of Cambridge.

There will be a poem read by George R. Blomquist, and brief remarks by A. A. Lundin, senior deacon of the church.

During the services the choir will sing: "Nearer My God to Thee," "We shall meet beyond the River," and "My Home over There."

The services will be partly in the English and partly in the Swedish languages.

The honorary bearers selected are Principal Assessor Charles H. Johnson, President Walter E. Piper of the City Council, and Oscar Nelson, A. A. Lundine, George R. Blomquist and George Almquist, deacons of the church.

GOOD AFTERNOON.

Probably only a few people read this paragraph in Quincy semi-weekly, but it would not be possible to print more mis-statements in 17 lines:

"A word to close showing the inconsistency of the Ledger on city finances. It has always been a warm advocate of refunding the city debt and favored appealing to the Legislature for the right to do so. It favored the borrowing of a large sum outside the debt limit for building streets and advocated appealing to the legislature. The Houghs Neck boulevard is a monument of that work. These were both burdens upon the taxpayers and were unnecessary. It opposes the extension of the water system and it opposes the building of the Coddington school this year. Both of these are necessary and will cause no additional burden upon the taxpayers."

The Daily Ledger is not an advocate of refunding the city debt, but on the contrary favors a more prompt payment that the taxpayers may feel the burden imposed and not be fooled.

The Daily Ledger does not favor going outside the debt limit for streets or schoolhouses, and now that the water and sewer systems are established does not think it necessary to go outside the limit for water or sewers. It should be possible to raise $20,000 annually within the limit for water extension, and also a reasonable sum for sewer extensions.

The Daily Ledger is not opposed to water extensions, but would have money appropriated for extensions, used for extensions not for house connections and current expenses.

The Daily Ledger is not opposed to the building of a Coddington schoolhouse this year, but an earnest advocate. It is Mayor Thompson who favors delay, saying in his message:

"The needs of the Coddington district are pressing, but increase in cost of material and labor, with the requirements of the up-to-date school building, represents a large expense, and relief here must await such time as the financial condition of the city can afford it."

The Daily Ledger would not crowd out a new Coddington, but would crowd out all other improvements until means are provided for the Coddington. It will take until September, at best, to prepare plans and secure approval of the School Committee and State authorities. If it is later, in October, November or December the payment of maturing debt will increase the margin within the limit.

It would appear from the passage of the street loans late in 1906 that there was a studied effort to use up the margin within the debt limit and crowd out the new Coddington. Money appropriate in December for streets cannot be used until next May or June and probably later, and the appropriations were unnecessary. In closing the Ledger quotes from the New Bedford Mercury:

"The Legislature should require cities to live within their income, but it should immediately remove the limit on the tax rate and prohibit the creation of any further debt for running expenses. If the legislature doesn't take cognizance of the problem of the cities before many years an appalling sensation will be furnished. There is no evidence that our governors or Legislatures have any appreciation of the critical nature of the situation."

The distance between the Granite branch and Shawmut branch of the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R. at East Milton is about half a mile, and the intervening territory is not built upon, so it would seem a very desirable connection for the railroad to make as per petition to the Legislature. It will give another route between Braintree and Boston which would be valuable in event of accident on the main line. It would also remove some of the trains and congestion from the main line and result in better service. It should not be difficult to prepare plans which would be acceptable to all concerned.

After all that Jeff Davis of Arkansas has said that he will do and will not do when he comes to the Senate, the only safe bet is that he will draw the salary attached to the job.

Statistics fairly bulge and swell everywhere. The South Dakota divorce crop is even the largest on record.

ARMY MANEUVERS

Item of a Million Dollars For Expenses Will Stand

SOME SEVERE CRITICISM

Grosvenor Tells of "Conglomerate Performance" In Ohio--New Military Regulations to Avert War-Time Difficulties

Washington, Jan. 10.—By a vote of 27 to 50, the house, in committee of the whole, having the army appropriation bill under consideration, refused to strike out an item of $1,000,000 for the purpose of paying the expenses of regiments, battalions, squadrons and batteries of the organized militia to participate in such brigade or division encampments as may be established for the field instruction of the troops of the regular army.

Mr. Hay (Va.) insisted that the maneuvers did not amount to much, and said that so far as the maneuvers held in Virginia were concerned they were a farce. He contended that the encampment was of little good to the National Guard and expressed the opinion that they should not be held oftener than once in every two years.

Mr. Young (Mich.) thought it was the utmost folly to try to have an organized militia and not give them the very best possible opportunity to learn the art of war.

Mr. Hull (Ia.), in charge of the bill, said that the committee knew that he did not approve the large maneuvers because he did not believe the National Guard received any benefit.

"We ought to avoid the garrison dry rot which has destroyed so many armies," suggested Mr. Parker (N. J.), who favored the appropriation.

Mr. Grosvenor (O.) told of the encampment held last summer near his home in Athens, O. He said that after getting the regulars and militia into camp they had two or three days' maneuvers and a sham battle. He said he had served four years in active war and that with a single exception he had never seen any regiment, brigade, division, battery or squadron maneuver either in camp or in battle upon any of the magnificent plans and detail they undertook to perform at his home. He added: "We never want to see any regular conglomerate performance such as that was come near us again."

He said some trouble happened in Athens and a soldier of the regular battery was arrested for being drunk and disorderly. A friend located him in jail. That night 50 or 75 members of the battery to which the prisoner belonged marched to the jail and, as they were about to attack, an officer of the state guard ordered them to halt. Fifty or 60 shots were fired and he fell dead in the street.

"There never was a man punished for anything connected with it," said Grosvenor. "There never was an officer called upon to report and there never was any report made by the officers of that regular battery, and the feeble attempt of the local authorities to punish the men who committed that cold-blooded murder was utterly futile."

He charged that the war department, in addition to the regular officers and men, had taken up the cudgel in opposition to the authorities and in opposition to the militia of the state.

Mr. Crumpacker (Ind.) asked if there were any colored soldiers at that encampment. "Not one," replied Grosvenor.

To Avert War-Time Difficulties

Washington, Jan. 10.—Details of vital importance to the militia of the country are contained in the order issued from the war department governing the mobilization of that arm of the national defense in case of war. Some of these provisions follow:

A sufficient reserve force to meet any emergency must always be left within a state or territory when its militia is called into the service of the nation. The president alone is the exclusive judge of the existence of an emergency justifying a call for the militia. The minimum strength of the militia organizations which states must maintain if they expect to receive allotments from the congressional appropriation for the maintenance of the militia is placed at 58 for a company of infantry, troop of cavalry, company of engineers, and signal company. A coast artillery company must have a minimum of 63 and a battery of field artillery 133. Organizations below these numbers must be immediately recruited to the standard before they can leave the home station in case of call.

In addition to equipping their men, the state officials must purchase cooked meats for the militiamen where they cannot use rations in kind and for this purpose an allowance of 60 cents per day is authorized for each man, which is increased to 75 cents when traveling. The United States will pay these bills as well as those for transportation of the militia upon certification from the proper state officers. States that already have the United States standard of physical examination for recruits shall have these troops mustered into service at once and without interference with the supreme duty of the militia, "the defense of the country" physical examination to be made by an army officer later on and after the muster. To facilitate the settlement of pension claims the militiamen will be examined medically prior to being mustered out.

SACRED THREADS.

The Cords Worn by the Three Castes of the Hindoos.

The sacred thread of the Brahmans is well known. It is a caste distinction assumed at an early age and never parted with. It must be made by a Brahman and should consist of three strands, each of a different color, forty-eight yards in length, doubled and twisted together twice, the ends tied in knots. It must be worn next the skin, over the left shoulder, hanging down to the thigh on the right side. The three castes of the Hindoos are distinguished by the material of these threads—cotton for the Brahmans, hemp for the warriors and wool for the artisans. The Parsees also wear the sacred thread, and boys of seven or nine are invested with it, the threads used being made always of fibers of the suru tree. Monier Williams describes the sacred girdle of the Parsees as made of seventy-two woolen threads, forming a flat band, which is twined three times around the body and tied in two peculiar knots, the secret of which is known only to the Parsees.

The use of "medicine cords" is common among North American Indians. Mr. Bourke describes those worn by the Apaches. These consist of one, two, three and four strands, to which are attached shells, feathers, beads, rock crystal, sacred green stones and other articles, doubtless employed symbolically.—Chambers' Journal.

THE PARIS CLUBS.

Election to the exclusive clubs of Paris is a very serious business. The proposer and seconder must not only know all about their candidates, but be able to bear witness to their antecedents and even to their forefathers. They must write to all their friends and ask them to support their candidates. When the election takes place, they must not only be in the room, but approach each member individually as he comes up to the ballot box and ask him for his support.

When the member has been elected, he arrives the first day as a kind of stranger and with his hat in hand. He is then formally introduced by one of his proposers to each member separately who happens to be in the room at the time. On the second occasion he has ceased to be a stranger and may leave his hat in the hall, but he is still expected to go round the room with one of his proposers and be formally introduced. This lasts for a week, by which time he is assumed to know all his colleagues, though a foreigner who is extra punctilious and insists on being introduced to every member of the club gains considerably in popularity. —London Saturday Review.

A Puzzled Author.

When Alphonse Daudet brought out "Sappho" an American publishing house that issued religious books, not knowing its character, offered M. Daudet a large sum for advance sheets of the work. He accepted the offer, and the advance sheets were sent. When the publishers received them they decided that they could not issue the book, and they cabled to the author, "'Sappho' will not do." This dispatch puzzled Daudet. He consulted with numbers of friends, and this was the conclusion at which they eventually arrived: "Sappho" in French is spelled with one "p"—"Sapho," after the Greek fashion. In English it is spelled with two. An unusually acute friend pointed this out to Daudet, which much relieved the novelist, and he cabled back to the publishers, "Spell it with two p's." It is needless to state that the publishers were more astonished at Daudet's reply than he had been at their cable dispatch.

Properly Situated.

"They may say what they like against him," said the convicted one's defender, "but his heart is in the right place."

"Yes," assented the other, "and so is the rest of him for a few years."

Practical.

"What did she say when she heard he was dead in love with her?"

"She wanted to know if he carried any life insurance."—New York Times.

Eleven Laborers Said to Work Under Fifty-Nine Officials

Boston, Jan. 10.—A sensation was created at the hearing granted telephone subscribers by the highway commission when Thomas W. Vincent, representing the Harvard Improvement association of Dorchester, made a statement that some of those drawing pay from the New England Telephone and Telegraph company were members of the Boston city council. Vincent, to illustrate his point, told of a job which is being done on Washington street, and on which 11 laborers were employed. This force, according to Vincent, is working under one foreman, 23 sub-foremen, 11 watchmen, 23 inspectors and one timekeeper.

"I have personal knowledge," said Vincent, "that the payrolls of the New England Telephone company are padded by Boston politicians and their constituents. Some of those drawing pay from this company are members of the Boston city council who report only twice a day and draw a regular salary, although they give absolutely no labor for what they receive. In addition to the Washington street job, I know of another case where there were at least 30 superiors over eight laborers, many of whom did no work."

Mr. Vincent said that the cost of maintenance could be greatly reduced if the company eliminated the salaries paid to politicians.

Fernald Autopsies Completed

Jackson, N. H., Jan. 10.—The autopsies on the bodies of Elmer E. Fernald and his father, George Fernald, which were disinterred in order to confirm or disprove a suspicion of murder, has been completed by the physicians, who decline to make public their findings. County Solicitor Abbott, if the doctors' report warrants, will pass the report along to District Attorney Sanderson of Middlesex county, Mass., where any criminal action must be instituted, as the city of Everett, where the Fernalds died, is a part of that jurisdiction.

Hospital to Be Investigated

Boston, Jan. 10.—A special inquiry into the affairs of the Massachusetts hospital for dipsomaniacs and inebriates at Foxborough by the committee on pardons, prisons and charitable institutions has been authorized by Governor Guild, whose information is such as to make it, in his judgment, necessary that the facts in regard to this much discussed institution may be ascertained. The committee has power to summon witnesses and will hold hearings.

Musical Building For Harvard

Boston, Jan. 10.—In order that the musical department of Harvard university and the various musical clubs of the university may have a place of their own, the Harvard Musical union has been formed and a building committee, to have charge of a proposed building for the department of music, has been elected. The cost of such a building as planned will be about $100,000, and a maintenance fund of $50,000 annually will be required.

Commissioners Legally Deposed

Boston, Jan. 10.—Deciding that the decision of the judge of the superior court in affirming the order of Mayor Casey of Lowell in removing them as police commissioners last May was final under the statutes, the full bench of the supreme court dismissed the petitions and appeals of Messrs. Dow, Pearson and Beals, the deposed commissioners. They sought to test the regularity and legality of their removal.

Burnham Will Be Returned

Concord, N. H., Jan. 10.—New Hampshire's contest for the office of United States senator culminated last night in the renomination of Henry F. Burnham of Manchester by the Republican members of the legislature, and as the Republicans control that body by a heavy plurality, the choice of the caucus will undoubtedly be ratified when the election takes place next Tuesday.

PERSIA "HARD UP"

Her Productive Resources and Treasury Depleted

HER FUTURE UNCERTAIN

Country Mortgaged to Russia and Great Britain, While Belgium Gets Customs Funds--Germany a "Simple Observer"

London, Jan. 10.—It is declared in official quarters that the understanding between Russia and Great Britain relative to the existing status in Persia includes an agreement to the effect that Mohammed Ali Mirza, who now succeeds to the throne, will have the support of Russia and Great Britain, the two powers most directly interested in Persia.

Cecil Spring-Rice, the British minister to Persia, in one of his latest dispatches assured Foreign Secretary Grey that the possibility of serious disturbances, either internally or as a result of the interference of outside parties, was most remote. Officials who have had years of experience in the countries of the near east, however, are careful to make the reservation that one must remember that Persia is an Oriental land, and that there is no telling what may happen there. In addition to international rivalries, the demoralized financial condition of Persia is considered to constitute the principal danger of possible trouble. The country is practically bankrupt and mortgaged to Russia and Great Britain, while the customs are hypothecated to Belgium, and Belgians are in charge of the customs collections.

Germany enters into the field as having made strong efforts to establish a Persian bank for the purpose of increasing German influence. The present indications are, however, that English and Russian capital will co-operate along lines similar to those adopted by the respective governments. Persian authorities say that the productive resources of the country are so depleted that foreign capital exerts almost as much influence in Persia as do foreign governments.

The Persian legation is the centre of much activity, cabinet ministers and members of the diplomatic corps calling to present their condolences. One of the leading Persian officials said:

"We do not credit the reports that trouble is likely to follow the death of the shah. There are no pretenders to challenge the crown prince's title to the throne, and the masses of the people are devoted to the present dynasty. Concerning the reports of foreign controversies we do not anticipate any disturbances of the present conditions."

Intent to Maintain Open Door

Berlin, Jan. 10.—The death of the shah seemingly does not affect the German attitude of simple observation in Persia, with the intention to maintain equal trade opportunities for all countries. It is remarked at the foreign office that any attempt by Germany to obtain ascendancy at Teheran, as sometimes attributed to her, instead of being a wedge to drive Russia and Great Britain apart would unite them in their Persian policies.

Ali Mirza Assumes Office

Teheran, Jan. 10.—The enthronement of the new shah has been fixed for Feb. 2. Almost immediately after the official announcement of the death of the shah at 9 o'clock yesterday morning Mohammed Ali Mirza proceeded to the palace, where he was formally acknowledged as shah by the grand vizier and other princes of the royal family, and by a large number of high court and government officials.

At a late hour yesterday afternoon the body of the dead monarch was removed, with imposing ceremonial, to the "Great Takieh," where it will remain until its actual interment. The date of these obsequies, however, has not yet been fixed.

Michigan's Senatorial Contest

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 10.—After five ballots on the question of choosing a successor to United States Senator Alger, the Republican caucus of the state legislature adjourned at midnight without making any choice. "LOANS AND FEES"

Bailey Is Said to Have Wrongfully Received Them

TEXAS LEGISLATURE ACTS

Proposes to Investigate Alleged Dealings of United States Senator With Oil Companies For Money Consideration

Austin, Jan. 10.—A resolution providing for a sweeping investigation of the conduct of United States Senator [illegible] was introduced in the house of representatives of the state legislature. It is signed by 28 members of the legislature. Bailey's term expires on March 4.

In the primary election of last July Bailey was endorsed for senator by almost unanimous vote of the people. Since that time it is charged that evidence has been obtained which, it is said, shows that he has received large sums of money in loans and fees from the Waters-Pierce Oil company, the Kirby Lumber company, the Security Oil company, and personally from H. C. Pierce of the Waters-Pierce company.

The resolution charges that "Pierce and the Waters-Pierce Oil company advanced Bailey many thousands of dollars to be used in speculations, whereby Bailey became under heavy financial and personal obligations to Pierce and to the Waters-Pierce Oil company, and that in return Bailey used his influence with the 27th legislature, which was in session in 1901, relative to a senate bill relating to fines, forfeitures and penalties due to the state of Texas and a house bill revoking the permission heretofore granted the Waters-Pierce Oil company to do business in this state and directing the secretary of state to cancel the permit issued to that company."

The resolution also provides for the investigation of Bailey's relations with H. C. Pierce in regard to the sale of the securities of the Tennessee railroad coal properties, amounting to $13,000,000, under a power of attorney, which transaction has already been recounted in the newspapers.

It is also recited: "It is charged that Bailey engaged in a transaction with Barnett Gibbs and D. R. Francis of Missouri whereby he bought a ranch, and that in this transaction he was financially aided by D. R. Francis and H. C. Pierce as part consideration for using his political and official influence to procure the readmission of the Waters-Pierce Oil company to do business in Texas."

The resolution recites that it is further charged that upon an investigation of Bailey's conduct by the committee appointed by the 27th legislature that he "wilfully and purposely concealed from the committee and legislature all the financial transactions had by him with H. C. Pierce."

The resolution provides for a special committee of seven to be appointed by the speaker of the house to act with a like committee of the senate, should a committee be appointed, the committee to be vested with the powers of a district court to take depositions and force the production of papers. The sessions of the committee are to be open. This resolution is now before the house.

Marlborough Domestic Discord

London, Jan. 10.—The presence here of some members of the family of the Duchess of Marlborough, who was Consuelo Vanderbilt, has led to various reports concerning the differences between the duke and the duchess, one announcing their reconciliation and another that a deed of separation has been signed. As a matter of fact, there has been no reconciliation and there is not likely to be. The suggestion that a deed of separation actually has been signed is equally untrue.

Glace Bay, N. S., Jan. 10.—The possible origin of the recent disastrous smallpox epidemic in Cumberland county was discovered here when the quarantine hospital was opened for the first time in 10 weeks and it was discovered that all of the bedding and part of the furniture had been stolen. The beds stolen from the hospital were occupied a year ago by smallpox patients.

Twenty-Seven Men Perhaps Met Death In Molten Metal

Pittsburg, Jan. 10.—At the Eliza furnaces of the Jones & Laughlin steel works a large quantity of gas which had accumulated at the base of the furnaces became ignited and exploded. Tons of molten metal was showered around the furnace for a radius of 40 feet. Out of a force of, 35 men employed at the furnace when the explosion occurred, three of them have been taken to the morgue, their bodies horribly mutilated by the fire. Seven men are in hospitals fatally injured and 24 others have not been accounted for.

While the mill officials are inclined to believe that all of the missing men were not cremated in the molten metal, nothing definite is known as to their present whereabouts. Only one man, George Knox, has turned up since the explosion, and Knox says everything happened so quick that he doubts whether the men escaped.

The officials at the mill refused to allow anyone to enter the yard where the furnace is located. All information was refused to newspaper men, the officials saying that later they might issue a statement. A heavy guard of workmen were placed at the yard entrance and even the police were powerless to get past the foreign workmen.

New York, Jan. 10.—William Igoe, a truck driver, 24 years old, shot his 14-year-old wife, Mary, then shot his brother-in-law, William Wehmeyer, aged 17, and himself. Igoe will probably die, but his wife and her brother will probably recover. Igoe and the girl met for the first time Thuksgiving day and were married three days after. They never lived together, the girl wishing to remain with her mother, who, to avoid Igoe, moved into a new home. Igoe discovered their whereabouts yesterday.

Republican Committee Tangle

Washington, Jan. 10.—There is an apparent halt in the efforts of the senatorial members of the Republican national committee to secure a meeting of that committee for the purpose of taking action on the resignation of Mr. Cortelyou as chairman. Senators Scott and Heyburn are firmly convinced that Cortelyou's action in naming his own successor is irregular. Senator Crane accepts New as chairman and says that only New can bring the committee together.

Weak-Minded Man Lynched

Charles City, Ia., Jan. 10.—A crowd of more than 1000 men last night battered through the walls of the county jail here with railroad irons and took James Cullen out and lynched him for wife murder and the murder of his stepson yesterday morning. Cullen, who was 60 years old, had been weak-minded for many years. After dragging Cullen from the jail the mob gave the prisoner an opportunity to pray. They then hanged him to a bridge over Cedar river.

Murphy simply rained blows on Corbett, who was outclassed in boxing, hitting and ring generalship.

CARELESS JAIL GUARD

Did Not Miss Prisoner Who Escaped From Small Squad

Boston, Jan. 10.—Within an hour after the escape of John S. Glover from Charles street jail yesterday, John Morrison, the officer in charge of the squad, had been brought before the grand jury, indicted for negligence, arraigned before Judge Stevens in the superior court and placed under $1000 bail. It is said at the courthouse that the proceeding is a record in grand jury work in this county.

Glover's escape was the second which has taken place from Charles street jail within a year and one other officer of that institution is awaiting trial on an indictment charging him with a similar offense.

Glover was a member of a squad of five who were being exercised in the yard under Morrison's charge. The officer left the squad a moment and during his absence Glover seized a step-ladder and made his escape over a 14-foot wall. Morrison did not notice that there were only four men in his squad when he conducted it back to the jail, so that Glover had several minutes' start. The missing prisoner was arrested last summer on a charge of larceny and his term of imprisonment for the crime would have expired today. It was planned to take him to New York, where he is wanted on a charge of forgery. He is still at large.

Kelly, Jr., trainmaster of the Baltimore and Ohio, and W. M. Dutrow, the telegraph operator at Silver Spring.

Action Against Trawl Fishing

Lunenburg, N. S., Jan. 10.—Holding that the operations in north Atlantic waters of French steam trawl fishing vessels are a menace and threaten to harm the fishing industry of Nova Scotia, the fishing interests of this town called a public meeting at which a committee of 10 was appointed to draw up a memorial to the dominion government, requesting it to plead the cause of the Nova Scotia fishermen before the imperial government of Great Britain.

Tax Amendment Declared Invalid

Albany, Jan. 10.—On the ground that it sought to establish an arbitrary and unreasonable classification and discrimination, last year's amendment to the stock transfer tax act of 1905 has been declared unconstitutional by the court of appeals. The amendment sought to impose the 2-cent tax on "each share" of $100, or face value or fraction thereof, instead of on "each $100" of face value or fraction thereof.

METROPOLITAN ASSESSMENTS

How Mayor Reduced Them To Reach Figures In Inaugural

Editors of the Quincy Daily Ledger:

In your editorial column of yesterday, your financial editor commenting on my address of Monday, concerning the Metropolitan assessments of $82,486.48, said would entail a tax of over $3 per one thousand dollars valuation instead of $2.77 as stated.

I would state that the tax rate of $18.60 on the property of the city, for the year 1906, did not meet all the requirements of the appropriations made by the City Council, interest and maturing debts, State, County and Metropolitan charges, but required as well receipts and polls less overlay which amounted to the sum of $56,312.01, and which was proportionately credited to all the purposes alike, or in other words Metropolitan charges represented $2.77 of $18.60 per $1,000.00 valuation raised by taxation.

The apparent discrepancy being the proportionate receipts your editorial writer overlooked.

Respectfully yours,
James Thompson, Mayor.

[EDS—In reply the financial editor knows of no reason why receipts of the city should be apportioned to reduce Metropolitan assessments. The fact remains, as stated by the Daily Ledger, that over $3 of the tax rate of 1906 was required for Metropolitan assessments. In other words had there been no Metropolitan assessments the tax rate would have been less than $15.60.

The Mayor should not object to being set right on this point, because it shows that even a smaller part of the tax rate was required for city expenditures over which he had control.

FOUND A HOLE FOR HIM.

Experience of a Fresh Young Man In His Start In Business.

Here is something that should appeal to every young man starting out in business: "When I came to New York," said a bright fellow to me, "I engaged by the year as entry clerk with a large dry goods house. I soon found out I couldn't get along with the superintendent, a dictatorial, domineering man. Being young and brash, I 'sassed' him, which made matters all the worse for me. At last my position became unbearable, and I quietly looked around for another place. The manager of a great grocery house asked where I worked and why I wanted to make a change. I told him in all frankness, and he asked me to come around in a few days. I guess I talked altogether too much. When I called he said, 'I have no place open at present, but I guess I can find a hole for you.' That was enough. I went back to my store and resigned.

"The next morning I presented myself before the manager of the grocery house. 'As I told you,' said he, 'I have no place open at present,' and walked away. 'But,' said I, 'didn't you tell me you would find a hole for me?' 'I did,' he answered back. 'Ain't you in it?' He then added, 'Mr. R., the superintendent of the firm you have been working for is my brother.' I have worked since then with my hands in my pockets, and the lesson took a good deal of the freshness out of me. It taught me to look before I leaped."—New York Press.

WEIGHT FLUCTUATIONS.

A Man May Gain and Lose Five Pounds In the Day.

"A dinner like this increases one's weight two and a half pounds," said a physiologist as he finished his more than generous meal. "An average dinner increases the weight two pounds two ounces. Did you ever consider how the weight fluctuates night and day?

"We lose in bed at night two pounds six ounces. Between breakfast and lunch we lose fourteen ounces. Between lunch and dinner we lose ten ounces more. Total loss, four pounds fourteen ounces. That goes on every day of our lives.

"At breakfast we gain one pound twelve ounces; at lunch, one pound; at dinner, as I said before, two pounds two ounces. Total gain, four pounds fourteen ounces.

"Thus, day by day, gaining nearly five pounds, our weight remains uniform. If we ate but a half or a third what we do, it is logical to suppose that our organs, digestive and so on, would have but half as much work to do and that our brains in consequence would be able to do twice as much. That is the logical supposition, and no doubt it is the correct one, but man is still too nearly animal to eat only what he needs. He insists upon eating till he can hold no more."

Saved by the Apostles' Creed.

The value of a religious education was once experienced by the skeptic Hume. He fell off a temporary bridge connecting old and new Edinburgh and sank in a bog. After many cries for assistance an old woman drew near and began to make preparations for saving him. But as soon as she saw who it was she would save she desisted and bade him stay where he was. "I am no atheist," protested Hume. "I assure you, good woman, you are mistaken." "Well, then, if you are not an atheist," she cried, "you can say your belief, and if you cannot do that I will be no aid to save an infidel." Hume accordingly, embogged in the swamp—de profundis—recited the Apostles' Creed and, having made no mistake in the recital, was duly saved by this severe Samaritan. If he had failed—

Exhibits In Law Cases.

What are known as "exhibits" in law cases range from sheets of paper to boilers and other large articles. At various times an omnibus, a motor car and a cab have been on view in the private roadway by the side of the London law courts, and as they could not be brought into the witness box the judge and jury have had to go out and inspect them in the open. One of the most ponderous "exhibits" of this kind was a large ship's boiler furnace, which was conveyed from Swansea for inspection.—London Standard.

Cool and Thoughtful.

"Yes," said the warden, "he was the coolest and most thoughtful convict who ever broke jail."

"You don't say!" exclaimed the visitor.

"Yes; he left behind him a note to the governor of the state beginning, 'I hope you will pardon me for the liberty I'm taking.'"—Catholic Standard and Times.

The Intention Was Good.

Governess—You're a naughty little girl, Christabel, to kick your cousin like that. Christabel—I didn't kick her. Governess—Oh, hush, dear! I saw you kick her several times. Christabel—I didn't. I missed her every time.—Punch.

Jumping at Conclusions.

"I see that the 'human ostrich' is no more. He's the chap who swallowed nails, needles and hatpins. And he chewed glass too."

"I see. He chewed so much glass that he got a pain."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Value Received.

"It costs more to live than it did years ago," said the man who complains.

"Yes," answered the man who enjoys modern conveniences, "but it's worth more."—Exchange.

Basket Ball.

The fast Boston Y. M. C. A. basket ball quintet plays at the Quincy Y. M. C. A. gymnasium on Saturday evening. This is sure to be a fine exhibition of basket ball as the Boston team is one of the best in this vicinity.

Tonight there will be a game between teams representing the two dormitory floors.

Last night the local Y. M. C. A. team was defeated by the Reading Y. M. C. A. team at Reading.

—"Why do they put the nation's flag on the top of the schoolhouse?" asked the teacher who wanted to instill a patriotic lesson. "Please, ma'am," answered the head boy, "it's because the pole is there."

BEAUTIFUL FLOWERS

At Funeral of Mrs. George Monk Many Organizations Were Represented

The funeral of Mrs. George Monk was held from her late residence on Washington street Thursday afternoon, and the home was inadequate to hold the vast throng of friends and acquaintances, who assembled to pay their last tribute to one who had endeared herself to those with whom she associated.

The services were simple and in keeping with the life lead by the deceased and were conducted by Rev. F. R. Griffin of All Souls' church, Braintree.

There was a wealth of beautiful flowers that nearly filled the room in which the casket containing the remains were placed. The tributes included:

Wreath of pink roses, marked "My dear wife."

Standing crescent and star, from George L. Gill Rebekah Lodge.

Galayx wreath of white roses and violets, D. D. G. M. Mrs. Annie E. Sawyer and suite of Boston.

Triangle, K. and L. of H.

She hath fallen asleep; it is well;
She hath thus lain her life's burden down;
She has patiently borne the stern cross,
But fitted her brow for the crown.
She may have forgotten e'er now,
That ever earth taught her to weep;
Let us say while in sorrow we bow,
It is well, she has fallen asleep.

Adelaide Guild

Adelaide (Bachelder) Guild died at her home, 176 Willard street, West Quincy, Wednesday morning, Jan. 9, at 4 o'clock, after a very brief illness with pneumonia.

She was born in Roxbury, March 19, 1836. In 1856 she was married and lived in Dedham for a number of years, but most of her life has been spent in Quincy.

She is survived by a granddaughter, Mrs. Dora I. (Clarke) Trask, with whom she had been living; a sister, Mrs. Eldora Bachelder, and a nephew, Dr. William B. Bachelder of Dorchester.

Mrs. Guild was a godly, christian woman, a member of the Episcopal church, a kind neighbor, a self sacrificing, helpful woman, who is mourned by all who knew her.

The funeral was held on Friday afternoon at the late home, Rev. A. B. Tyler officiating, music being furnished by Misses Hodgkinson and Shirley of the Methodist church choir. The interment was at Mount Wollaston.

Art at Library.

The Library Art Club exhibit at the Thomas Crane Public Library includes 70 photographs of the City of Rouen which is on the River Seine, 70 miles north-west of Paris. It was the Rotomagus of the Romans. The Normans, after sacking the city several times, finally settled there and made it the capital of Normandy. It was taken for France by Philip II in 1204, for England by Henry V. in 1419, and recovered by the French in 1449. Joan of Arc was here condemned and burned at the stake in 1431. It is the richest of French cities in mediæval architecture. At the present day it is an important port with large foreign and domestic trade, and is called "the Manchester of France" on account of its cotton manufactures. The population in 1891 was 112,000.

SURPLUS REPORTED

The Wollaston Congregational Church Makes Good Showing

The annual meeting of the Congregational church of Wollaston was held on Wednesday evening.

After the church family supper was disposed of, business was in order. The treasurer's report showed a surplus. It became necessary to sing the Doxology before the balance of the report could be listened to.

Churches rarely have to wrestle with a surplus, but those present were equal to the emergency. First the pastor was voted a gratuity of one hundred dollars, grateful hearts making the vote unanimous.

A second surprise was sprung when Mrs. A. A. Lincoln moved the gift of $25 for Mrs. Chase.

Before the evening closed the era of good feeling and sound judgment had reached the point where Mr. Chase was voted an addition of $200 per year to his salary.

The Wollaston Congregational church has reason to congratulate itself upon the degree of material and spirtual prosperity which it enjoys.

Mr. and Mrs. Chase have met fully all the demands made upon them and the place they hold in the hearts of these people is evidenced by the action of the annual meeting. What shall be said about a church treasurer who can make the record that Mr. John B. Cornish has made?

The total receipts of the year were $3,767.19, which included $3,435.55 in weekly offerings, $207.44 in cash collections and $90.08 in pew rentals.

The disbursements were $3,604.44, including $1,500 as pastor's salary and $864.05, for music.

The benevolences of the church were $394.66, against $200 the year before, including:

American Missionary Association,	$32 78
San Francisco Sufferers,	73 00
A. B. C. F. M.,	105 21
Congregational Church Building Society,	23 85
Massachusetts Home Missionary Society,	84 32
Congregational Church Union,	75 00

Benevolence of the various organizations of the church were:

Ladies' Benevolent Society	$326.45
Sabbath School	115.00
The Wollaston Auxiliary of the Woman's Board of Missions	160.85
Y. P. S. C. E. Seniors	17.75
Y. P. S. C. E. Juniors	4.50
Men's Congregational Club	50.00
Mission Study Club	93.25
	$767.25

The summary of all accounts shows the total receipts of all organizations to have been $4,963.04. With every bill paid there was a balance of $159.69.

W C T U Meetings.

The two last meetings of the W. C. T. U. of Wollaston, have been of unusual interest. The meeting of Dec. 11, held in the vestry of the Baptist church was addressed by Miss Caroline M. Caswell in regard to the work of the Francis E. Willard settlement. The proposed plan of raising a fund to purchase the Trinity church property, was duly discussed and the union agreed to raise $25 for that purpose. The meeting of January 8 was held with Miss A. M. Merrill, 293 Fayette street. The attendance was good and the meeting interesting.

Arrested For Assault

Antorto Malini was arrested on Water street Thursday afternoon by Officer Bradley for assault on the little daughter of James Craig of Franklin street.

It appears that last Monday noon Mrs. Craig sent her little daughter to Dobles corner on an errand. While on her way there it is alleged that Malini met her and taking her by the hand led her toward Quincy avenue. The little girl began to cry and attracted the attention of several persons who started to investigate. Upon their approach the Italian dropped her hand and walked away.

Others then took her home. The man is said to be a stranger in this section. Thursday afternoon Officer Bradley received word that the man was in a barber shop on Water street and he placed him under arrest.

A Sad Case.

The case of DiCesare Donato of Cottage street who died Thursday is a particularly sad one. The family have resided in Quincy upwards of ten years. Mr. Donato has worked for the city at times and was always able to support his family until taken sick with consumption. Since then the family, consisting of his wife and two children, have had a hard time, and have been dependent upon charity. Recently they were provided with four charity tickets to enable the family to return to Italy, and they were to sail Saturday. Thursday Mr. Donato's illness took a sudden turn and he died. The remainder of the family will return to Italy tomorrow.

CHURCH CROWDED

With City Officials And Others At Funeral of Julius Johnson

Never has the little church of the Swedish Baptist society held as many people as it did on Thursday at the funeral of Julius Johnson. The services were held at 1.30, and at that hour every available seat was occupied and many were standing in the rear.

Aside from neighbors and friends there were present many city officials and men who had been associated with him in business. Among these were Mayor Thompson and Principal Assessor Charles H. Johnson, who occupied seats on the platform; Commissioner Thomas F. Burke, City Treasurer H. G. Fay, City Solicitor W. R. Thomas, Chief Engineer A. L. Litchfield, Assessor Willam B. Glover and J. F. Merrill of the Assessors' office, W. H. Teasdale and H. P. Kittredge of the Board of Health, President Piper and Councilman Otto Gellotte and Alex. Falconer, ex-Councilman W. T. Shea, Charles H. Burgess, John C. Murray and James F. Burke, Walter McKenzie of the Sewer department, Representatives E. C. Hultman and E. J. Sandberg, Postmaster C. L. Hammond, Col. Edward Anderson; President T. L. Williams, J. W. Pratt and N. B. Furnald of the Board of Trade, George W. Abele, Richard D. Chase, William A. Bradford and others.

The services were in the English and Swedish languages and were conducted by Rev. John Bjork, who was assisted by Rev. Alfred Lindberg of Boston, Rev. C. E. Johnson of Cambridge, and Rev. M. Sandberg of Manchester, N. H. There were also addresses by Deacons A. A. Lundine and George R. Blomquist.

Mr. Rev. Lindberg gave an eulogy in English, and said beyond all this, joy and happiness are to be found, because the memory of his life was good, sweet and clean. The speaker had learned to know and love him, and he was a good christian man. He also spoke of his life in church and his faithfulness and active part in church work.

His charity could not be crowded between the walls of a church. It embraced his daily life, and he took it with him in his daily life. He was a man of wide sympathy. May God grant we may have more like him. The real Mr. Johnson is not here. He has gone to his master to fulfil the everlasting existence in life. May God bless you all and bless the memory of our beloved friend.

During the services there was singing by the choir, and at its close an opportunity was had for the friends to look for the last time upon the face of their friend. The interment was at Mt. Wollaston.

THE HARGIS TRIAL

Prohibition Writ Causes Its Golden Postponement

CHARGES AGAINST JUDG

Arbitrary Manner In Conducting Trial Is Alleged--Armed Men Follow Him About Street and Line Up In Courtroom

Jackson, Ky., Jan. 11.—The trial of Judge James Hargis on the charge of participating in the assassination of Dr. J. B. Cox in this city three years ago was suddenly postponed yesterday as the result of a writ of prohibition, issued by the court of appeals of Kentucky. This writ was granted upon the application of Attorney General Hays and James B. Adams, commonwealth's attorney.

The petitioners allege that Special Judge Carnes, who was appointed by Governor Beckham to try the case of Judge Hargis and others, charged with the assassination of Dr. Cox, is conducting the trial in a arbitrary manner and is overstepping the bounds of the law. The principal objection to Carnes is his ruling that temporarily suspended Sheriff Crawford and named Robert Burton as elisor. The petitioners allege that Carnes has directed the elisor to summon bystanders for the jury, which is in violation of a statute passed at the last session of the legislature.

When court adjourned Carnes said that he thought the writ would be dismissed on a demurrer which he would file when he reached Frankfort.

Much excitement was caused early yesterday by the declaration of Carnes that his life was in danger and his request for steps to protect him. He asserted that he would not proceed with the case unless protected. This excitement last night subsided and Jackson is almost deserted.

Adjutant General Lawrence arrived yesterday afternoon and went into conference with Carnes. He said that he would take no action as to the judge's request for troops until the writ of prohibition had been argued before the court of appeals.

Judge Hargis appears to be bewildered by the writ and the prosecution is elated. In the early part of the day Jackson was filled with mountain men, fully armed, and considerable alarm was felt for those conducting the prosecution.

During Wednesday afternoon's session of the court 20 men, armed with revolvers, were lined up on each side of the courtroom. Armed men made several attempts to reach Judge Carnes in his room at the hotel Wednesday night, but they were prevented. Armed men followed the judge about Jackson yesterday.

The friends of James B. Marcum and James Cockrell, with the assassination of whom Hargis, Callahan, Smith and Abner are charged, are arriving in Jackson and are taking sides against the accused men.

Uncertainty as to Number Killed in Pittsburg Disaster

Pittsburg, Jan. 11.—Partial investigation to ascertain the number of fatalities that occurred at the Eliza furnaces of the Jones & Laughlin Steel Co., Ltd., when an accumulation of gas exploded, bursting the base of the large furnaces and showering tons of molten metal over about 40 men, was completed last night. The result shows that the bodies of 12 men, horribly mutilated, have been recovered, from 15 to 20 men are missing, it being generally believed their bodies were consumed by the hot metal, and 10 men are in hospitals, terribly burned, four of them expected to die.

It is doubtful whether the number of men killed will ever be known. From present indications over 15 men were caught by the metal, which flowed over their bodies to a depth of six feet. No trace of them, it is said, will ever be found. Of the dead bodies now in the morgue several are minus arms, legs and heads, while the others are burned and twisted beyond recognition. The condition of the injured is pitiful. A number of men have their eyes burned out and others were so badly injured that amputation of arms and limbs was necessary.

Deputy Coroner Laidley says one foreigner, apparently a youth, became crazed by his injuries and before he could be prevented leaped into a pot of molten metal and was incinerated.

Alged Discrimination

Washington, Jan. 11.—Representative Murphy (Mo.) introduced a resolution in the house providing for an investigation of the manner in which the district attorney for the District of Columba caused the arrest of Baltimore and Ohio officials and employes held by the coroner's jury to be responsible for the recent wreck at Terra Cotta. The resolution seeks to find out why the employes were arrested immediately and taken to jail, while officials of the road were merely notified of the verdict of the coroner's jury. Murphy said that he believed employers and employes should be given the same treatment by federal officers.

Insurance Arrests Predicted

New York, Jan. 11.—More arrests may be made in connection with the investigation of the affairs of the New York Life Insurance company, according to an announcement made by District Attorney Jerome while he was opposing an application of counsel for George W. Perkins, now under indictment in the New York Life case, for an inspection of the entire minutes of the December grand jury. Jerome opposed the request, as, he said, there are persons mentioned in the evidence who may be arrested at some future time. No decision was reached in the matter.

Man Killed by Fright

Philadelphia, Jan. 11.—By an explosion of molten metal in the finishing plant at Baldwin's Locomotive works Frank Sakolowsky and Patrick Dolan were burned about the face and body by the hot metal which flew over them Albert Lindsay, who was standing near, was so frightened that he collapsed. He was picked up unconscious and died from fright in a few minutes.

Persians Are Not Worrying

Teheran, Jan. 11.—The general public did not become aware of the death of the shah until yesterday afternoon. No shops have been closed, all the government offices are open as usual, and even the military college at which the brother, the sons, the grandsons and the nephews of the late ruler are students, is still open as though nothing had happened.

Double Crime of Love-Crazed Man

Roanoke, Va., Jan. 11.—Wallace C. Mays, aged 25, unmarried, shot and killed Mrs. Etta Murray, aged 30, the wife of Frank Murray, and then blew out his own brains, falling dead at the feet of the woman. Mays was madly in love with Mrs. Murray, who was his cousin, and letters found on his body told of his plan to kill both Mrs. Murray and himself.

Boycott Movement Voted Down

Stockton, Cal., Jan. 11.—The State Federation of Labor convention refused to endorse the boycott started in Humboldt county against Japanese and Koreans and their employers. Another resolution commending the action of the labor unions in Humboldt county in driving out Chinese also was voted down.

HOUSE IN UPROAR

Tennesseean Threatened Violence to Pennsylvanian

ALMOST CAME TO BLOWS

Mahon Replied to Charge That He Was a Chronic Absentee by Declaring That the Accusation Was a Deliberate Falsehood

Washington, Jan. 11.—The house late yesterday took on the appearance of the closing days of the Fifty-Fifth congress, commonly known as the "war congress," when altercations between members were frequent.

Late yesterday afternoon Mr. Gaines of Tennessee and Mr. Mahon of Pennsylvania were prevented from meeting in a personal encounter by the intervention of other members. Gaines was making a speech on his bill to "dock" members' pay for absence from the house and was being twitted by both sides of the chamber to his evident embarrassment. He charged Mahon with being absent from the house 95 percent of the time.

Previous to this sweeping assertion, Gaines had read excerpts from the record in relation to the withholding of pay in the Fifty-Third congress and the part Mahon had played at that time.

Mr. Mahon remained silent throughout Gaines' speech with the exception of interjecting a remark or two at the beginning. When Gaines had concluded Mahon rose. He explained how in the Fifty-Third and Fifty-Fifth congresses he had $7000 due him and that the then speaker, Crisp, had given him an order on the sergeant-at-arms for the amount, which was paid. Then, coming to the crux of Gaines' charge, Mahon thundered: "Any man who charges me with being away from this house 95 percent of the time tells an untruth."

Mr. Gaines started down the aisle from his seat. "No man can tell me I lie," exclaimed the Tennesseean.

Then Mr. Mann (Ills.), who was in the chair, took a hand in the altercation. Both men were ordered to their seats. Mahon obeying the command, while Gaines stood two seats away from the center of the chamber, shaking both fists and head at the Pennsylvanian.

When order had been restored Mahon again rose and said: "The charge of the gentleman from Tennessee that I am away from this house 95 percent of the time is a deliberate falsehood."

With a rush Gaines reached the center of the chamber, making direct toward Mahon, insisting as he went that no man could call him a liar without personal chastisement. The house was in an uproar by this time, the chair adding to the noise by pounding the desk with his gavel. His efforts finally caused the head of the gavel to fly off and it bounded into the body of the house, almost striking one of the members.

The rush of Gaines upon his adversary brought a dozen members before the speaker's desk. Several grabbed Gaines, who, resisting, was borne back to his seat. Mahon, standing in the first aisle on the Republican side, seemed to wait for the impact which never came. With Gaines in his seat Mahon continued his speech of explanation as to how he came to be connected with the invoking of an old statute compelling members to forfeit pay for the time absent from the house. He said that the charge that he was away from the house 95 percent of the time was a lie on its face and that he was there 95 percent of the time, as every member who cared to inquire could ascertain.

Mr. Lacey (Ia.) had read the statute relating to the docking of members' pay and he was followed by Mr. Grosvenor (O.), who explained the reasons for the statute. Mr. Dearmond (Mo.) asked that the minority views of the judiciary committee on the statute be printed.

While this colloquy was in progress the friends of Gaines and Mahon were engaged in an effort to bring about a reconciliation in which they were successful and at its conclusion Mahon rose to a question of personal privilege. He stated that he did not desire to impugn the motive which prompted Gaines to utter what was an untruth about his absence from the house, but he desired to say that his informant was incorrect and he wanted Gaines to understand that the person from whom he obtained his information misrepresented the facts. Not to be outdone in chivalry, Gaines immediately arose and, showing deep feeling, said that he had been goaded beyond endurance. He regretted extremely the turn affairs had taken.

"Are you satisfied with that?" he asked, pointing to Mahon. For answer Mahon rushed across the chamber. The two men clasped hands amid loud applause.

LOVE CHARMS.

Some of the Queer Superstitions That Live In Sicily.

The love charms of Sicily are many and curious. One, very popular and considered very powerful, is to put into an eggshell a few drops of the blood of the longing lover. The shell is exposed to the sun for three days and to the dew for three nights. It is then placed on hot ashes until calcined, when the whole is reduced to a fine powder and administered secretly in a cup of coffee or a glass of wine to the object of affection.

Another charm is for the witch to undress at midnight and tie her clothes up in a bundle which she places on her head. Then, kneeling in the center of her room, she pronounces an incantation, at the end of which she shakes her head. If the bundle falls in front of her, it is a good sign; should it fall behind her, the charm will not avail.

Yet another is worked in the following manner: Pieces of green, red and white ribbon are purchased in three different shops, the name of the persons to be charmed being repeated mentally each time. The shopkeeper must be paid with the left hand, the ribbon being received in the right. When all the pieces are bought they are taken to a witch, who sets out to find the person to be charmed. On finding him or her the witch mutters to herself, "With these ribbons I bind you to such a one." Then she returns the ribbons to the purchaser, who ties them beneath his or her left knee and wears them at church.—Macmillan's.

DIED A BEGGAR.

The Pathetic Career of John Stow, the English Antiquary.

John Stow, the celebrated English antiquary, was a remarkable man. He was born of poor parents about 1525 and brought up to the tailor's trade. For forty years his life was passed among needles and thread, but in the few leisure hours which his trade allowed him he had always been a fond reader of legends, chronicles, histories and all that told of the times that were past. By such reading he grew to be so attached to old memoirs that when about forty years of age he threw down his needle, devoted himself to collecting them and followed his new profession with the faith and enthusiasm of an apostle. Short of means, he made long journeys afoot to hunt over and ransack colleges and monasteries, and, no matter how worn and torn might be the rags of old papers which he found, he kept all, reviewing, connecting, copying, comparing, annotating, with truly wonderful ability and good sense. Arrived at fourscore years and no longer capable of earning a livelihood, he applied to the king, and James I., consenting to his petition, granted to the man who had saved treasures of memoirs for English history the favor of wearing a beggar's garb and asking alms at church doors. In this abject state, forgotten and despised, he died two years later.

From the Bountiful East.

A small proportion of the flora is indigenous. The majority came from the east, like all the great ideas on which our culture is founded, and were developed and improved on this classic soil. Italy received the lemon and the orange from the Semites, who in their turn had obtained them from India. The olive, the fig, the vine and the palm were grown by the Semites long before their cultivation penetrated to the west. The laurel and myrtle, indeed, are indigenous in Italy, but their use for ceremonial purposes came across the Mediterranean from the east. The home of the cypress is not in Italy, but in the Greek archipelago, northern Persia, Cilicia and Lebanon.—From Strasburger's "Riviera."

The Difference.

Small Boy—Pa, what is the difference between a pessimist and an optimist? Pa—Well, let me see if I can illustrate. You know I am often discouraged, and things don't look to me as if they'd ever go right. Well, at such times I can be said to be a pessimist. But years ago, when I was a young man, everything looked bright and rosy, and I was always hopeful. Then I was an optimist. Now, my son, can you understand the difference between a pessimist and an optimist? Small Boy—Oh, yes; one is married and the other isn't.—Harper's Weekly.

Cause of His Joy.

"What are you looking so happy over, old man?"

"I am rejoicing over the birth of twins."

"Great Scott! I congratulate you!"

"Don't congratulate me. Go and congratulate Evans. He's the lucky man. I never did like him."—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Stole His Livelihood.

Tattered Timothy—I hate doctors. Tiepass Thomas—What fur? Tattered Tim—One of 'em cured me o' fits w'en I wuz a kid. Gee, I cud work up some sympathetic crowds if I c'd have one right now!—Cleveland Leader.

She Was the Girl.

The Widower—I've always said that if I married again I should choose a girl who is as good as she is beautiful. Miss Willing—Really, this is very sudden, George, but I accept you, of course.—Pick Me Up.

When money does not talk too much it may properly be termed a modest sum.—Nashville Democrat.

TROOPS TO BLAME

Fifteen Negroes Participated In Brownsville Affray

PURDY REPORT IS READY

President Will Send It to Congress With a Message--Part of His Order Discharging Infantrymen to Be Countermanded

Washington, Jan. 11.—The Purdy report on the Brownsville affray is now in the hands of the president. It will be sent to congress early next week, accompanied by a special message from the president.

The report contains abundant evidence in the form of sworn affidavits that the Brownsville affray was committed by about 15 negro soldiers. Two volleys were fired from within the fort. Soldiers made an excursion in the town and there continued the firing. Bullets and shells have been secured showing that the shots were fired from the new Springfield rifle.

Much of the evidence is of a character which strongly indicates that practically all of the soldiers of three companies of the Twenty-fifth infantry at the post must have been cognizant of the disturbance while it was in progress.

Few if any new witnesses have been examined by Purdy that were not examined by Major Blockson, but the latter did not obtain affidavits from any whom he questioned. All of the Purdy testimony is in legal form. It makes out a strong case in support of the conclusions of all the officers who have investigated the case, that soldiers of the Twenty-fifth infantry did the shooting.

The president has decided to countermand that part of his discharge order which forever debars the discharged soldiers from employment in the civil service of the government.

That part of the order was based on the recommendation of Inspector General Garlington. It has not commended itself to the lawyers of the cabinet nor to Senator Crane and other close advisors of the president. That portion of the order showed a punitive spirit not in keeping with the form of discharge administered which was not a penalty, but merely the severance of a contract. The president's decision on the point will be announced in his message to congress accompanying the Purdy report. There is no evidence in the Purdy report that will lead to the identification of any of the individual soldiers implicated.

It is reported that critics of the president in the senate will endeavor to show that the shooting was done by Mexicans masquerading in khaki as troops. The Purdy report is expected to upset this theory, as well as Senator Foraker's contention that Brownsville citizens were implicated.

A Denial From Penrose

Fort Reno, Okla., Jan. 11.—That there is or has ever been a plot on the part of the soldiers of the Twenty-fifth infantry, the negro organization recently discharged by order of the president following the trouble at Brownsville, to assassinate the white officers at the fort, is denied by Major Penrose, commanding officer. Penrose scouts the idea that the officers go heavily armed.

President's Action Endorsed

Nashville, Jan. 11.—The Tennessee house of representatives unanimously adopted a joint resolution endorsing the action of President Roosevelt in dismissing the negro soldiers connected with the rioting at Brownsville. The resolution requests the Tennessee delegates in congress to support the president in this case.

Railway Employes' Working Hours

Washington, Jan. 11.—After more than five hours spent in a lively consideration of the subject of limiting the hours of service of railway employes, the senate, by a vote of 70 to 1, passed a substitute for the pending bill limiting the time of train employes to 16 consecutive hours of service to be followed by 10 hours off duty. One negative vote was cast by Senator Pettus.

DELIBERATE MURDER

Judge Thus Characterizes the Work of Iowa Lynchers

Charles City, Ia., Jan. 11.—Denouncing as murderers the men who stormed the Charles City jail and hanged James Cullen, slayer of his wife and stepson, from the Cedar river bridge, Judge Kelly instructed the grand jury to conduct a rigid investigation with a view to placing the blame. The judge said:

"The crime of which James Cullen was accused, and which was doubtless committed by him, pales into insignificance when compared with the deliberate act of an organized mob. You now have nothing to do with the guilt or innocence of James Cullen. His case is in the hands of God. But he was murdered and every person who actively participated in the act or who aided or abetted it is equally guilty of murder and upon you rests the duty of taking the first steps towards bringing his murderers to justice. I enjoin you on the performance of this duty without fear or favor in accordance with your oaths."

The judge has already heard several witnesses, including Ensign Roper of the Salvation Army, who asked Cullen if he would pray before he was hanged.

Desperate Fight For Life

New York, Jan. 11.—Eight tunnel workers fought for life last night 100 feet below the surface of the earth in a caisson of the Hudson Tunnel company's terminal. Below them was a fountain of murky water, rapidly filling the narrow chamber in which they had been at work. Above them was an air lock, through which only one man could go at a time. Each wanted to be the first to escape the inrush of water. Every one of the eight was injured in the fight on the ladder leading up to the opening. For 15 minutes the men fought, finally being rescued, bruised, but not seriously hurt.

Verdict In Tobacco Trust Trial

New York, Jan. 11.—A jury in the United States circuit court returned a verdict in the so-called "tobacco trust" trial, acquitting Carl Jungbluth and H. E. Young on the charges of conspiracy in restraint of trade and combining to control the licorice paste industry, but finding the MacAndrews & Forbes company and the J. S. Young company guilty of forming an illegal combination and of being a monopoly. The corporations named were acquitted of the charge of conspiracy.

A "Black Hand" Demand

New York, Jan. 11.—Anthony Saitta, a broker, whose 6-year-old son, Salvatore, disappeared on Wednesday last, has received a "Black Hand" letter, demanding $10,000 for the boy's return. Saitta turned the letter over to the police. The lad was last seen on his way home from school. About a year ago Saitta received a "Black Hand" letter demanding $1000 on penalty of death. He ignored the communication.

Lodz Terrorists Active

St. Petersburg, Jan. 11.—Colonel Andrieff, chief of the gendarmes of the Lodz district, was shot and killed yesterday on Poludniowa street. A passing infantry patrol fired a volley at the assassin, but only wounded several innocent persons. The assassin escaped. The murderer of General Pavloff, who was killed Wednesday, was tried by court martial yesterday and sentenced to death.

Strike Violence In France

Fougeres, France, Jan. 11.—Because of a renewal of violence on the part of the striking shoe workers, and the limited number of men returning to work, the proprietors have closed the few factories that were running. Six Socialist members of the chamber of deputies are here to encourage the strikers in their resistance.

Will Go to Highest Court

Cincinnati, Jan. 11.—The United States circuit court of appeals has denied a rehearing to Edward Flickinger of Galion, convicted of conspiracy with President Hayes of the Galion bank to wreck the bank and sentenced to 7½ years in the penitentiary. An appeal will be taken to the United States supreme court.

Congressman Goes to Senate

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 11.—Congressman William A. Smith of Grand Rapids was last night nominated to succeed United States Senator Alger. As there are only a half dozen Democrats in the state legislature the nomination by the Republican caucus is equivalent to an election.

Knew Nothing of Murder

Portland, Or., Jan. 11.—The two Japanese arrested on suspicion that they might know something of the death of Dr. Philip E. Johnson, who was thrown or jumped from the Ford street viaduct, were released. They are deserters from a Japanese liner now in port.

Porch Climber's Fat Pickings

Atlanta, Jan. 11.—Jewels and money to the value of nearly $10,000 were taken from the residence of Stephen A. Ryan, evidently by a porch climber, who left no clue except finger-prints on the dust on a window seat.

Russia to Build Twelve Warships

St. Petersburg, Jan. 11.—The new budget will contain continuing appropriations for two 21,000-ton warships, to have a speed of 21 knots an hour, and 10 12,000-ton war vessels. They will all be built in Russia.

The Weather Forecast

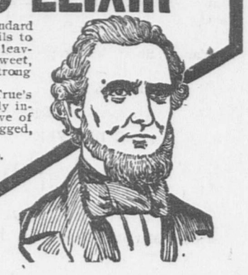
Almanac, Friday, Jan. 11.
Sun rises—7:13; sets—4:31.
Moon rises—4:10 a. m.
High water—8:30 a. m.; 9 p. m.

Weather conditions will be generally unsettled in New England, with local rains and snows.

WORMS

Unsuspected worms are the cause of numerous little things that go wrong with children. When a child is sick you rarely think that its sickness is caused by worms, yet worms, either directly or indirectly, are the cause of three quarters of all the ills of childhood. Children, and often-times adults feel out of sorts, are irritable, feel listless and unrefreshed in the morning; suffer with indigestion, have a variable appetite, foul tongue, offensive breath; hard and full belly, with occasional gripings and pains about the navel; eyes heavy, and dull; itching of the nose; short, dry cough; grinding of the teeth; slow fever; and often in children, convulsions—in the majority of cases the cause of all the trouble is worms though you may not suspect their presence.

DR. TRUE'S ELIXIR



a pure vegetable compound, has been the standard household remedy since 1857; it never fails to expel not only worms but all waste matter, leaving the blood rich and pure, the stomach sweet, the bowels regular and the whole system strong and healthy.

The mother who gives her children Dr. True's Elixir regularly is wise, because it not only increases the appetite, acts as a preventative of coughs, cold, fever and worms but gives rugged, robust health.

THOUSAND ON STRIKE

Cotton Operatives In Chicopee Mills Dissatisfied With Wages

Chicopee, Mass., Jan. 11.—One thousand operatives at the cotton mills of the Chicopee Manufacturing company at Chicopee Falls struck on account of a dispute with the agent regarding wages. Several hundred hands remained at work, but it is thought that unless the strike is settled within a few days the mills of the company will be shut down.

Last month a demand was made for a 10 percent advance of wages and refused by Agent Rawlinson. Two or three days after the refusal the Dwight Manufacturing company raised wages 5 percent, and the agitation at the Chicopee plant was resumed by the operatives. The agent later granted concessions which, the operatives claim, amounted to an advance of but 24 cents a week for the employes working on 14 of 33 grades of cloth.

On Wednesday 200 weavers walked out of the mills and at a meeting Wednesday night of the Polish hands it was voted to declare a general strike. Yesterday practically all the Polish hands, about 1000 in number, left their work.

Italian Murdered In Street

Rockland, Me., Jan. 11.—The police of this city were confronted with a murder mystery last night when the body of Ralph Confont, an Italian, was found on Acorn street, with a bullet wound in the cheek and another in the chin. An inquest will be held. Confont and six other Italians lived at a lodging house kept by Vito Montigene. Dominick Teta, one of the Italians living at the house, is missing.

The order will be considered later.

Investigating Provident Securities

Boston, Jan. 11.—What is believed to be an investigation of the affairs of the Provident Banking and Securities company, which closed its doors last spring with but few assets to pay its 2000 depositors, has been begun by the grand jury. The only witness thus far examined is Treasurer Burlen. It is understood that the books of the company are also in the possession of the district attorney.

Four Narrowly Missed Death

Boston, Jan. 11.—Four men who were returning to East Boston last night in a dory from the lower harbor had a narrow escape from drowning, when their craft capsized half a mile off the dock. New Bedford, Mass., Jan. 11.—Lightship No. 66, stationed on Nantucket shoals, 44 miles off the island, is partially disabled through defects in her boilers and donkey engine. The Heart Can't Stand Rheumatic Acid Poisoning

To Free and Correct the Blood a Uric-O Treatment is Advised.

There is great danger in those sharp shooting pains through the chest around the region of the heart. It means that poisonous uric and rheumatic acid are there ready to spring and grip tightly the muscles controlling the heart's action. Don't neglect these warnings, they are the danger signals Nature flashes to you for help. You must neutralize and drive these dangerous poisons from the system, or sooner or later they will overcome you.

The only true way to cure Rheumatism is to get at it from the inside with Uric-O. It acts with marvelous swiftness upon the muscles, kidneys and blood. Clears out the sand-like deposits in the muscles, forces the kidneys to perform those duties for which they were designed and neutralizes the acid within the blood.

Your physician will admit that this is the only true way to cure Rheumatism permanently, and should know that Uric-O is the one remedy that will do it successfully and permanently. Uric-O is a liquid taken internally, 3 times daily and does not contain a drop of alcohol, opium or other dangerous poisons. It is good for Rheumatism in any form. Sciatica, Muscular, Inflamatory and Articular Rheumatism all yield readily to Uric-O. The store of E. J. Murphy is the home of Uric-O in Quincy, and if you call on him, he can tell you of many wonderful cures that Uric-O has made right here in your own home-city. He sells it for 75c. and $1.00 the bottle or you can obtain a trial bottle free by writing to the makers of Uric-O, the Smith Drug Co., Syracuse, N. Y.

STATESMAN AND SCHOLAR.

James Bryce, Who Comes to This Country as an Ambassador.

The selection of James Bryce as British ambassador to the United States has met with much praise on both sides of the Atlantic, and the choice is an unusual one, in that Mr. Bryce has never served in a diplomatic position before. It is considered that he confers dignity upon the position, for he is not only a statesman of a high type, but a scholar of varied and exceptional attainments. He is best known in America as the author of "The American Commonwealth," which is esteemed by many the most discriminating, frank and yet friendly criticism of our republic and its institutions ever written. The American state department was sounded by the British government on the subject of Mr. Bryce's appointment previous to his selection for the post, and the reply of our government was to the effect that his appointment would be especially acceptable. It is said to be the first time a man without a title has been chosen to represent the British empire at Washington. It was thought that Mr. Bryce would be raised to the peerage before leaving England for this country, but it is now reported he will refuse rank and title of this kind, thus showing his sympathy with democratic ideas.

The post which Mr. Bryce will surrender to take that of ambassador to the United States is the Irish chief secretaryship. He was one of the chief bulwarks of the Gladstonian home rule policy and has battled in the interests of Ireland during all his long public career. He was born in Belfast in 1838, his mother being Irish and his father, the late James Bryce, LL. D., a Scotchman. The future ambassador was educated at the Glasgow High school and university and at Trinity college, Oxford. He practiced as a barrister, was for nearly a quarter of a century regius professor of civil law at Oxford, has represented the South Aberdeen district in parliament for over two decades and has served in important cabinet positions under several governments. He has written numerous historical works, one of the best known being his history of "The Holy Roman Empire." Like most English statesmen, he is fond of outdoor life, and his specialty is mountain climbing. He has been president of the Alpine club.

ENRIQUE C. CREEL.

New Mexican Ambassador to the United States.

The newly appointed ambassador from Mexico to the United States, Enrique C. Creel, is considered one of the ablest of the public men of Mexico and has been best known heretofore in our own republic as a financier. He was chairman of the commission appointed by the Mexican government in 1902 to devise a new currency system for the country and in furtherance of his duties visited the United States and the leading countries of Europe. The work of the commission resulted in the adoption of the gold standard by Mexico. Senor Creel's father was a Kentuckian and was sent to Mexico as United States consul at Chihuahua. He fell in love with a beautiful Mexican girl, Senorita Cuilty, and they were married. The ambassador, who was born fifty-four years ago, is a very loyal Mexican, but is an enthusiast on the subject of close relations between his own republic and the United States. He has been acting governor of the state of Chihuahua, in which much American capital is invested, and married the daughter of General Luis Terrazas, present governor of that state and perhaps the republic's richest citizen. Ambassador Creel is interested in several Mexican banks. His name in English is Henry Clay Creel.

FAMOUS GAMBLERS.

Old Time London Betting Clubs and Their Members.

There were three principal clubs—White's, Brookes' and Boodles'. White's was originally a "chocolate house" in William III.'s time, but became a private club early in the eighteenth century and was used by the Tories. It was a club always noted for high play and betting, and very curious some of their bets were, the old wager book being still preserved. Brookes' was the Whig club and was then conducted by that

Liberal Brookes, whose speculative skill
Is hasty credit and a distant bill;
Who, nursed in clubs, disdained a vulgar trade,
Exults to trust and blushes to be paid.

Among the members of this club were the Prince of Wales, and, of course, his fidus Achates, Sheridan, besides the great Charles James Fox, who here played deeply and whose name is oft recorded in the wager book, which, however, is of older date and was kept when the club was held at Almack's. "Lord Northington bets Mr. C. Fox, June 4, 1774, that he (Mr. C. F.) is not called to the bar before this day four years." "March 11, 1775, Lord Bolingbroke gives a guinea to Mr. Charles Fox and is to receive a thousand from him whenever the debt of this county amounts to £171,000,000. Mr. Fox is not to pay the £1,000 till he is one of his majesty's cabinet." "April 7, 1791, Mr. Sheridan bets Lord Lauderdale and Lord Thanet 25 guineas each that parliament will not consent to any more lotteries after the present one voted to be drawn in February next."—From "The Dawn of the Nineteenth Century," by John Ashton.

HE DIED FIGHTING.

How Prince Louis Napoleon Was Killed by the Zulus.

How Prince Louis Napoleon was killed by the Zulus June 1, 1879, is told graphically in the book by Sir Evelyn Wood, who took part in that war. The little party which the prince accompanied was surprised and attacked. Sir Evelyn writes: "The Zulus in pursuit ran first after the two white soldiers who were on the flanks, three or four men, headed by Labanga, following the prince. His horse had jumped just as he was mounting, and his sword fell out of its scabbard. He was very active and was vaulting on his horse in motion when the wallet on the front of the saddle broke away, and he fell to the ground, being at this time only sixty yards behind the (British) fugitives. There were seven men who actually fought the prince. When Langalebele, pursuing the fugitives, first saw Labanga, he was running away from the prince, who was rushing at him. Labanga, crouching in the grass, threw an assagai at him. The first assagai stuck in the prince's thigh, and, withdrawing it from the wound, he kept his foes at bay for some minutes. In the native's words: 'He fought like a lion. He fired two shots, but without effect, and I threw an assagai at him, which struck him, as I said at the time, but I always allowed Labanga's claim to have killed him, for his assagai hit the prince in the left shoulder, a mortal wound.'"

Some Odd Wills.

One of the oddest documents of the will kind known was that of Queen Austrigilda, consort of King Goufram of Burgundy. The dying princess enjoined upon her husband to slay and bury in the same grave with her the physicians who had attended her. Another will was that of a husband who forbade his wife's marrying on pain of his returning to haunt her. This is quite different from that of a woman who instructed her executors to seek out "some nice, good, pretty girl" who would make an affectionate second wife to her spouse. It is a fact interesting in this connection that the first Napoleon actually bequeathed 10,000 francs to a fellow named Cantillon, who had been tried for attempting the assassination of the Duke of Wellington.

A Problem In Life.

They had met in the subway and in the interval of passing a few stations had fallen to talking of a lovely woman friend who had died.

"How did she die? Do you know?" he asked.

"She nursed a little niece through an infectious disease, then took it herself and died of it," said she.

"A strange Providence!" he mused sadly. "She, lovely, gracious, charming, everything to live for and a blessing to her friends, to die in order that a child might live. A strange and unaccountable Providence!"—New York Press.

Good and Osgood.

The subject of ancestors is often an interesting topic of conversation. A lady extremely proud of her mother's family created a sensation and made her listeners wonder a little when she remarked: "My father filled many responsible positions. We all have the greatest respect for him. My father was a good man, but"—and a certain stiffening of the shoulders and an added expression of firmness in the good lady's face added importance to her conclusion—"my mother was an Osgood!"

Man to Blame.

Women are more prone to deceit than men. From the time when Scheherazade told her lord 1,001 lies to keep the peace it has been the accepted way. And the men, not the women, are the most to blame. It is what they like, and they get it.—Good Words.

Love is intoxicating, it is said. What a good thing it is that marriage has a tendency to sober a man.—Terrell (Tex.) Transcript.

The Social Realm

And sometimes the thing our life misses
Helps more than the thing which it gets.
For good lieth not in pursuing,
Nor gaining of great nor of small,
But just in doing, and doing
As we would be done by, is all.

BRILLIANT PARTY

The Annual Assembly As Usual a Society Event

The social season in Quincy would not be complete without the assembly which has now become an annual event looked forward to with pleasure. When the Home Science Association was formed seveal years ago for the purpose of maintaining summer kindergarten schools, the dance and a children's party were given as a means of raising funds for carrying on the work, and both have become annual affairs.

When the Quincy Women's club was formed the Home Science Association was disbanded, and its work merged into that of the Educational committee of the club under the same supervision. Miss Elizabeth Johnson on relinquishing the chairmanship gave over the assembly to the Civic Betterment committee of the club, retaining the children's entertainment for her committee.

Mrs. Dexter Emerson Wadsworth, chairman of the Civic Betterment committee commenced early to arrange for the dance with the result that a large and most successful party was held at Music hall last evening.

Every detail was complete. During the reception Daggett's orchestra played inspiring music. In the receiving line were: Mrs. Richard R. Freeman, Mrs. Russell A. Sears and Mrs. Charles M. Bryant. Mrs. Freeman was in grey, Mrs. Sears in pink, and Mrs. Bryant in white.

The ushers were: Mr. Edward H. Angier, Mr. George Bailey, Mr. Tyler Brigham, Mr. William I. Dewson, Mr. H. E. Frick, Mr. Richard R. Freeman, Mr. Henry R. Holden, Mr. Delcevare King, Mr. George Lawton, Mr. Alva Morrison, Mr. George E. Plaffmann, Mr. Fred Rice, Mr. Morton Smith, Mr. William P. Thompson.

Among the patronesses were: Mrs. William R. Bateman, Mrs. Clarence Burgin, Mrs. George H. Brown, Mrs. Paul R. Blackmur, Mrs. Richard C. Drinker, Mrs. John Downes, Mrs. W. H. Doble, Mrs. Arthur P. Homer, Mrs. Henry R. Holden, Miss Elizabeth Hubbard, Mrs. Jesse I. Litchfield, Mrs. C. Lee Morrison, Miss Etta M. Prescott, Mrs. Harry L. Rice, Mrs. Eben W. Sheppard, Mrs. James H. Stetson, Mrs. A. P. Thompson, Mrs. George. E. Williams.

Among the many pretty light gowns were noticed several very beautiful black ones: Mrs. James H. Stetson in black velvet, Mrs. George E. Pfaffmann, Mrs. Clarence Burgin, Mrs. George E. Williams, Mrs. Lee Morrison and others in net and sequins, all adding to the pretty effect.

Punch bowls of frappe refreshed the dancers.

About 250 were present coming not alone from Quincy, but from neighboring towns and Boston.

It was a success socially and financially and Mrs. Wadsworth who was so ably assisted by Mr. Wadsworth and her committee will realize a goodly sum to continue the work of civic improvement in our city, which surely stands in need of some improving.

New Trial.

Judge Crosby of the Norfolk Superior Court has ordered that there be a new trial of the Colburn-Marble breach of promise case on the question of the amount of damages unless Miss Colburn shall by Feb. 1 accept a verdict of $3000 instead of the $5000 awarded her by the jury.

To Build Twelve

The new Russian budget will contain continuing appropriations for two 21,000-ton battleships, to have a speed of 21 knots per hour, and ten 12,000-ton battleships. They will all be built in Russia, but it has not yet been decided whether they will be fitted with turbine or with horizontal engines.

A little more wintry. Snow has fallen since 9 A. M. and promises to continue.

Hearse Damaged In Collision

A hearse owned by John W. Lavery of South Boston, and driven by Thomas Curley, collided with the baker wagon of M. Capodiluko on Hancock street, near the street railway car barn this noon, the hearse was overturned and the driver injured.

The hearse had been to Quincy at a funeral and was returning to Boston. Just before reaching the car barn the horses evidently became unmanagable. They dashed across the street in the rear of a snow plow only to meet the team of Capodiluko coming toward Quincy.

The wheels of the two became locked, the hearse was overturned and the driver, Curley, thrown to the ground. He was carried into the street railway office where he was attended by Dr. Welch. Fortunately no bones were broken, but he was severely bruised and shaken up. He was taken home in a carriage.

The hearse was quite badly damaged. The heavy plate glass sides were smashed, and some of the woodwork splintered and broken.

Sudden Death.

P. Victor Johnson, an employe of the Street department of the city died suddenly this morning at his home at 88 Cranch street. Mr. Johnson has been employed by the city for some time and was at work no later than Wednesday, and his death was unexpected. He was 42 years of age and leaves a widow and two children.

City Square Burglary

The store of Charles H. Brooks in City Square was entered by burglars sometime last night and the cash register robbed of what change there was in it, probably $12 or $15. Entrance to the store was obtained by forcing the rear door.

C. E. Giles received a consignment of ten horses this week from Bloomington, Ill. He will use them on his ice wagons next summer.

And sometimes the thing our life misses
Helps more than the thing which it gets.
For good lieth not in pursuing,
Nor gaining of great nor of small,
But just in doing, and doing

BRILLIANT PARTY

The Annual Assembly As Usual a Society Event

The social season in Quincy would not be complete without the assembly which has now become an annual event looked forward to with pleasure. When the Home Science Association was formed seveal years ago for the purpose of maintaining summer kindergarten schools, the dance and a children's party were given as a means of raising funds for carrying on the work, and both have become annual affairs.

When the Quincy Women's club was formed the Home Science Association was disbanded, and its work merged into that of the Educational committee of the club under the same supervision. Miss Elizabeth Johnson on relinquishing the chairmanship gave over the assembly to the Civic Betterment committee of the club, retaining the children's entertainment for her committee.

Mrs. Dexter Emerson Wadsworth, chairman of the Civic Betterment committee commenced early to arrange for the dance with the result that a large and most successful party was held at Music hall last evening.

Every detail was complete. During the reception Daggett's orchestra played inspiring music. In the receiving line were: Mrs. Richard R. Freeman, Mrs. Russell A. Sears and Mrs. Charles M. Bryant. Mrs. Freeman was in grey, Mrs. Sears in pink, and Mrs. Bryant in white.

The ushers were: Mr. Edward H. Angier, Mr. George Bailey, Mr. Tyler Brigham, Mr. William I. Dewson, Mr. H. E. Frick, Mr. Richard R. Freeman, Mr. Henry R. Holden, Mr. Delcevare King, Mr. George Lawton, Mr. Alva Morrison, Mr. George E. Plaffmann, Mr. Fred Rice, Mr. Morton Smith, Mr. William P. Thompson.

Among the patronesses were: Mrs. William R. Bateman, Mrs. Clarence Burgin, Mrs. George H. Brown, Mrs. Paul R. Blackmur, Mrs. Richard C. Drinker, Mrs. John Downes, Mrs. W. H. Doble, Mrs. Arthur P. Homer, Mrs. Henry R. Holden, Miss Elizabeth Hubbard, Mrs. Jesse I. Litchfield, Mrs. C. Lee Morrison, Miss Etta M. Prescott, Mrs. Harry L. Rice, Mrs. Eben W. Sheppard, Mrs. James H. Stetson, Mrs. A. P. Thompson, Mrs. George. E. Williams.

Among the many pretty light gowns were noticed several very beautiful black ones: Mrs. James H. Stetson in black velvet, Mrs. George E. Pfaffmann, Mrs. Clarence Burgin, Mrs. George E. Williams, Mrs. Lee Morrison and others in net and sequins, all adding to the pretty effect.

Punch bowls of frappe refreshed the dancers.

About 250 were present coming not alone from Quincy, but from neighboring towns and Boston.

It was a success socially and financially and Mrs. Wadsworth who was so ably assisted by Mr. Wadsworth and her committee will realize a goodly sum to continue the work of civic improvement in our city, which surely stands in need of some improving.

New Trial.

Judge Crosby of the Norfolk Superior Court has ordered that there be a new trial of the Colburn-Marble breach of promise case on the question of the amount of damages unless Miss Colburn shall by Feb. 1 accept a verdict of $3000 instead of the $5000 awarded her by the jury.

To Build Twelve

The new Russian budget will contain continuing appropriations for two 21,000-ton battleships, to have a speed of 21 knots per hour, and ten 12,000-ton battleships. They will all be built in Russia, but it has not yet been decided whether they will be fitted with turbine or with horizontal engines.

A little more wintry. Snow has fallen since 9 A. M. and promises to continue.

Hearse Damaged In Collision

A hearse owned by John W. Lavery of South Boston, and driven by Thomas Curley, collided with the baker wagon of M. Capodiluko on Hancock street, near the street railway car barn this noon, the hearse was overturned and the driver injured.

The hearse had been to Quincy at a funeral and was returning to Boston. Just before reaching the car barn the horses evidently became unmanagable. They dashed across the street in the rear of a snow plow only to meet the team of Capodiluko coming toward Quincy.

The wheels of the two became locked, the hearse was overturned and the driver, Curley, thrown to the ground. He was carried into the street railway office where he was attended by Dr. Welch. Fortunately no bones were broken, but he was severely bruised and shaken up. He was taken home in a carriage.

The hearse was quite badly damaged. The heavy plate glass sides were smashed, and some of the woodwork splintered and broken.

Sudden Death.

P. Victor Johnson, an employe of the Street department of the city died suddenly this morning at his home at 88 Cranch street. Mr. Johnson has been employed by the city for some time and was at work no later than Wednesday, and his death was unexpected. He was 42 years of age and leaves a widow and two children.

City Square Burglary

The store of Charles H. Brooks in City Square was entered by burglars sometime last night and the cash register robbed of what change there was in it, probably $12 or $15. Entrance to the store was obtained by forcing the rear door.

C. E. Giles received a consignment of ten horses this week from Bloomington, Ill. He will use them on his ice wagons next summer.

MRS. EDDY'S REPLY TO THE JANUARY McCLURE ARTICLE.

CONCORD, N. H., Jan. 4:

The January issue of McClure's Magazine, which undertakes to publish the history of the early life of the Reverend Mary Baker Eddy, Leader of the Christian Scientists, and her family, has been brought to the attention of Mrs. Eddy. She has taken the pains to correct the matter, and has sent out the following statement over her own signature:

It is calumny on Christian Science to say that man is aroused to thought or action only by ease, pleasure, or recompense. Something higher, nobler, more imperative, impels the impulses of Soul.

It becomes my duty to be just to the departed and to tread not ruthlessly on their ashes. The attack on me and my late father and his family in McClure's Magazine, January, 1907, compels me as a dutiful child and the Leader of Christian Science to speak.

McClure's Magazine refers to my father's "tall, gaunt frame," and pictures "the old man tramping doggedly along the highway regularly beating the ground with a huge walking stick."

My father's person was erect and robust. He never used a walking stick. To illustrate: One time when my father was visiting Governor Pierce, President Franklin Pierce's father, the Governor handed my father a gold-headed walking stick as they were about to start for church. My father thanked the Governor, but declined to accept the stick, saying, "I never use a cane."

Although McClure's Magazine attributes to my father language unseemly, his household law, constantly enforced, was no profanity and no slang phrases. McClure's Magazine also declares that the Bible was the only book in his house. On the contrary, my father was a great reader.

The man, whom McClure's Magazine characterizes as "ignorant, dominating, passionate, fearless," was uniformly dignified—a well-informed, intellectual man, cultivated in mind and manners. He was called upon to do much business for his town, making out deeds, settling quarrels, and even acting as counsel in a law-suit involving a question of pauperism between the towns of Loudon and Bow, N. H. Franklin Pierce, afterward President of the United States, was the counsel for Loudon and Mark Baker for Bow. Both entered their pleas, and my father won the suit. After it was decided, Mr. Pierce bowed to my father and congratulated him. For several years, father was chaplain of the New Hampshire State Militia, and as I recollect it, he was Justice of the Peace at one time. My father was a strong believer in State's Rights, but slavery he regarded as a great sin.

Mark Baker was the youngest of his father's family, and inherited his father's real estate, an extensive farm situated in Bow and Concord, N. H. It is on record that Mark Baker's father paid the largest tax in the colony.

McClure's Magazine says, describing the Baker homestead at Bow: "The house itself was a small, square box structure of rudimentary architecture." My father's house had a sloping roof after the prevailing style of architecture at that date.

McClure's Magazine states: "Alone of the Bakers, he (Albert) received a liberal education. * * * Mary Baker passed her first fifteen years at the ancestral home at Bow. It was a lonely and unstimulating existence. The church supplied the only social diversion, the district school practically all the intellectual life."

Let us see what were the fruits of this "lonely and unstimulating existence." All my father's daughters were given an academic education, sufficiently advanced so that they all taught school acceptably at various times and places.

My brother Albert was a distinguished lawyer. In addition to my academic training, I was privately tutored by him. He was a member of the New Hampshire Legislature, and was nominated for Congress but died before the election.

McClure's Magazine calls my youngest brother, George Sullivan Baker, "a workman in a Tilton woolen mill." As a matter of fact, he was joint partner with Alexander Tilton, and together they owned a large manufacturing establishment in Tilton, N. H. His military title of Colonel came from appointment on the staff of the Governor of New Hampshire.

My oldest brother, Samuel D. Baker, carried on a large business in Boston, Mass.

Regarding the allegation by McClure's Magazine that all the family, "excepting Albert, died of cancer," I will say that there was never a death in my father's family reported by physician or post mortem examination as caused by cancer.

McClure's Magazine says that "the quarrels between Mary, a child ten years old, and her father, a gray-haired man of fifty, frequently set the house in an uproar," and adds that these "fits" were diagnosed by Dr. Ladd as "hysteria mingled with bad temper."

My mother often presented my disposition as exemplary for her other children to imitate, saying, "When do you ever see Mary angry?" When the first edition of Science and Health was published, Dr. Ladd said to Alexander Tilton: "Read it, for it will do you good. It does not surprise me, it so resembles the author."

I will relate the following incident, which occurred later in life, as illustrative of my disposition:

While I was living with Dr. Patterson at his country home in Rumney, N. H., a girl, totally blind, knocked at the door and was admitted. She begged to be allowed to remain with me, and my tenderness and sympathy were such that I could not refuse her. Shortly after, however, my good housekeeper said to me:

"If this blind girl stays with you, I shall have to leave; she troubles me so much."

It was not in my heart to turn the blind girl out, and so I lost my housekeeper.

My reply to the statement that the clerk's book shows that I joined the Tilton Congregational Church at the age of seventeen is that my religious experience seemed to culminate at twelve years of age. Hence a mistake may have occurred as to the exact date of my first church membership.

Fannie McNeil, President Pierce's sister, afterward Mrs. Judge Potter, prescribed to me my coat-of-arms, saying that it was taken in connection with her own family coat-of-arms. I never doubted the veracity of her gift. I have another coat-of-arms, which is of my mother's ancestry. When I was last in Washington, D. C., Mrs. Judge Potter and myself knelt in silent prayer on the mound of her late father, General John McNeil, the hero of Lundy Lane.

Notwithstanding that McClure's magazine says, "Mary Baker completed her education when she finished Smith's grammar and reached long division in arithmetic," I was called by the Rev. R. S. Rust, D. D., Principal of the Methodist Conference Seminary at Sanbornton Bridge, to supply the place of his leading teacher during her temporary absence.

Regarding my first marriage and the tragic death of my husband, McClure's Magazine says: "He (George Washington Glover) took his bride to Wilmington, South Carolina, and in June, 1844, six months after his marriage, he died of yellow fever. He left his young bride in a miserable plight. She was far from nome and entirely without money or friends. Glover, however, was a freemason, and thus received a decent burial. The masons also paid Mrs. Glover's fare to New York City, where she was met and taken to her father's home by her brother George. * * * Her position was an embarrassing one. She was a grown woman, with a child, but entirely without means of support. * * * Mrs. Glover made only one effort at self-support. For a brief season she taught school."

My first husband, Major George W. Glover, resided in Charleston, South Carolina. While on a business trip to Wilmington, North Carolina, he was suddenly seized with yellow fever and died in about nine days. I was with him on this trip. He took with him the usual amount of money he would need on such an excursion. At his decease, I was surrounded by friends, and their provisions in my behalf were most tender. The Governor of the State and his staff, with a long procession, followed the remains of my beloved one to the cemetery.

The Free Masons selected my escort, who took me to my father's home in Tilton, N. H. My salary for writing gave me ample support. I did open an infant school, but it was simply for the purpose of starting that educational system in New Hampshire. The rhyme attributed to me by McClure's Magazine is not mine, but is, I understand, a paraphrase of a silly song of years ago. Correctly quoted, it is as follows, so I have been told:

Go to Jane Glover,
Tell her I love her;
By the light of the moon
I will go to her.

The various stories told by McClure's Magazine about my father spreading the road in front of his house with tan-bark and straw, and about persons being hired to rock and swing me, I am ignorant of. Nor do I remember any such stuff as Dr. Patterson driving into Franklin, N. H., with a couch or cradle for me in his wagon. I only know that my father and mother did everything they could think of to help me when I was ill.

I was never "given to long and lonely wanderings, especially at night," as stated by McClure's Magazine. I was always accompanied by some responsible individual when I took an evening walk, but I seldom took one. I have always consistently declared that I was not a medium for spirits. I never was especially interested in the Shakers, never "dabbled in mesmerism," never was "an amateur clairvoyant," nor did "the superstitious country folk frequently seek my advice." I never went into a trance nor described scenes far away, as McClure's Magazine says.

My oldest sister dearly loved me, but I wounded her pride when I adopted Christian Science, and to a Baker that was a sorry offence.

McClure's Magazine calls Dr. Daniel Patterson, my second husband, "an itinerant dentist." It says that after my marriage we "lived for a short time at Tilton, then moved to Franklin. * * * During the following nine years the Pattersons led a roving existence. The doctor practiced in several towns, from Tilton to North Groton and Rumney."

When I was married to him, Dr. Daniel Patterson was located in Franklin, N. H. He had the degree D. D. S., was a popular man, and considered a rarely skilful dentist. He bought a place in Rumney, which he fancied, for a summer resort. At that time he owned a house in Franklin, N. H.

Although, as McClure's Magazine claims, the court record may state that my divorce from Dr. Patterson was granted on the ground of desertion, the cause nevertheless was adultery. Individuals are here today who were present in court when the decision was given by the judge and who know the following facts. After the evidence had been submitted that a husband was about to have Dr. Patterson arrested for eloping with his wife, the court instructed the clerk to record the divorce in my favor.

What prevented Dr. Patterson's arrest was a letter from me to this selfsame husband, imploring him not to do it. When this husband recovered his wife, he kept her a prisoner in her home, and I was also the means of reconciling the couple. A Christian Scientist has told me that with tears of gratitude the wife of this husband related these facts to her just as I have stated them. I lived with Dr. Patterson peaceably, and he was kind to me up to the time of the divorce.

The following affidavit by R. D. Rounsevel of Littleton, N. H., proprietor of the White Mountain House, Fabyans, N. H., the original of which is in my possession, is of interest in this connection:

About the year 1874, Dr. Patterson, a dentist, boarded with me in Littleton, New Hampshire. During his stay, at different times I had conversation with him about his wife, from whom he was separated. He spoke of her being a pure and Christian woman, and the cause of the separation being wholly on his part, that if he had done as he ought he might have had as pleasant and happy home as one could wish for.

At that time I had no knowledge of who his wife was. Later on I learned that Mary Baker G. Eddy, the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science, was the above mentioned woman.

Grafton S. S. January 18th, 1902.

Then personally appeared R. D. Rounsevel and made oath that the within statement by him signed is true.

Before me,
H. M. Wood,
Justice of the Peace.

I was obliged to be parted from my son, because after my father's second marriage my little boy was not welcome in my father's house.

Who or what is the McClure "history" so-called presenting? Is it myself, the veritable Mrs. Eddy, whom the New York World declared dying of cancer, or is it her alleged double or dummy heretofore described?

If indeed it be I, allow me to thank the enterprising historians for the testimony they have thereby given of the divine power of Christian Science, which they admit has snatched me from the cradle and the grave, and made me the beloved Leader of millions of the men and women in our own and in other countries,—and all this because, the truth I have promulgated has separated the tares from the wheat, uniting in one body those who love Truth; because Truth divides between sect and Science and renews the heavenward impulse; because I still hear the harvest song of the Redeemer awakening the nations, causing man to love his enemies; because "Blessed are ye, when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely, for my sake."

Mary Baker G. Eddy

A SOURCE OF DISEASE.

Beware the Man Who Blows Smoke Through His Nostrils.

A popular practice of many smokers consists in discharging the smoke inhaled, especially from cigarettes, through the nostrils. This is even considered by some to be essential to the full enjoyment of the flavor of the tobacco.

The London Lancet, while acknowledging that perhaps under ordinary circumstances no harm is done to the smoker save to his sense of smell, has sounded a note of warning against the habit as a possible disseminator of disease. Hay fever and other annoying complaints have been spread through unsuspecting households by the unthinking visitor who habitually blew smoke through his nose.

The surface traversed by the tobacco smoke before issuing from the nose, it is remarked by the Lancet, is moistened with the natural secretion of the mucous membrane lining it, and this secretion is mingled with the fluid discharged from the conjunctival sac protecting the eyes. It therefore contains numerous micro organisms, which, floating in the air, have become attached to the moist and stick surface of the conjunctiva, as well as those which pass over the surface of the nasal membrane. As Tyndall long ago showed, germs are completely filtered off from the air inhaled by the extensive and irregular surfaces presented by the turbinal bones. These germs are carried into the air by the man who blows smoke through his nostrils.

The Saddle.

Early Greeks and Romans rode horses bareback. They regarded it as effeminate to ride in a saddle. The modern saddle, with pommel, crupper and stirrups, was unknown to the ancients. Nero gave out fancy coverings to his cavalry, and the bareback riders of the German forests used to laugh at them. Saddles with trees came into use in the fourth century, stirrups three centuries later.

Colds on the Chest

Ask your doctor the medical name for a cold on the chest. He will say, "Bronchitis." Ask him if it is ever serious. Lastly, ask him if he prescribes Ayer's Cherry Pectoral for this disease. Keep in close touch with your family physician, and follow his advice carefully.

FINING OF UNION MEN

Declared to Be Lawful Upon a Refusal to Strike

Boston, Jan. 12.—It what was considered one of the most important and sweeping labor decisions yet rendered in this state, Judge Gaskill of the superior court decided that a labor union has a right to fine any member who does not accede to the demand of the union and quit work in an establishment where a strike is in progress.

He also decided that no officer or member of a union has a right to threaten the imposition of a fine upon a member in order to force him to quit his employment, even though a strike is in progress.

This decision is the outcome of a petition brought by L. D. Wilcutt & Sons company, a firm of contractors, against Bricklayers' Benevolent and Protective unions 3 and 27, and also the Stone Masons' Benevolent and Protective union 9. The petition sought to restrain the union from fining members who did not quit work while a strike was in progress among the employes of the plaintiff.

Aside from this the petition also sought to prevent the officers and members of the unions from threatening to have members fined, in order to compel them to leave their employment with the plaintiffs.

Dog on the Rampage

Boston, Jan. 12.—Three persons were attacked, while others narrowly escaped the fangs of a large St. Bernard dog, believed to be suffering from rabies, which threw Sullivan square into a panic yesterday. Pursued by policemen and pedestrians, armed with revolvers and all kinds of weapons, the dog seemed to possess the traditional nine lives of a cat, as he was shot at many times. After being pursued for over an hour, the dog was finally killed by Edward Madden. With a blow from the butt end of a shovel Madden fractured the animal's skull and thus put an end to its mad career.

After the 30th ballot Deering withdrew in favor of Ricker (Rep.), but on the succeeding five ballots the relative showing was unchanged, Hanrahan receiving 12 votes, and Ricker a similar number.

The strike, which is confined for the most part to Polish operatives, has not been endorsed by the National Textile Workers' union.

Immigration Question Discussed

Boston, Jan. 12.—The question "Shall Immigration Be Further Restricted?" was discussed at the dinner of the Massachusetts Reform club by Nathan Bijur of New York, Congressman Underwood of Alabama and Secretary Hall of the American Restriction league of this city. Two Fishermen Missing

Provincetown, Mass., Jan. 12.—All hope for the safe return of Captain Frederick Cahoun and Frank Bassett, who left here Wednesday in a motor boat for the fishing grounds, has been abandoned. PURE CHARACTER

Smoot Has Lived a "Singularly Upright Life"

SPEECH IN HIS DEFENSE

Hopkins Contends That Senate Has No Authority to Pass on Private Acts of Its Members - Dubois' Question Unanswered

Washington, Jan. 12.—The first speech in defense of the right of Reed Smoot to a seat in the senate was delivered by Senator Hopkins, who took the position that senators were not federal officers to the extent that the senate could pass upon their qualifications and eligibility or could impeach them for high crimes or misdemeanors. If a senator was to be punished, it must be done by the state or federal courts. Only federal officers, he maintained, were impeachable, and this impeachment must be for acts committed as federal officers.

The precedent cited was the unsuccessful effort to impeach Senator Blount of Tennessee, charged with treasonable correspondence with a foreign nation, more than 100 years ago. The conclusion then, Hopkins said, had never been reversed, and that was that the senate had no right to try the case, as Senator Blount was not an officer of the United States.

After citing other cases, Hopkins remarked that it was unnecessary for him to multiply evidence to demonstrate his point that individual states have no power to add any qualification to a senator other than those prescribed by the federal constitution. Referring directly to Smoot, he continued:

"It is conceded that Smoot possesses all of the qualifications spoken of in the constitution itself. It is also conceded that Smoot is not a polygamist, that he has never married a plural wife, and has never practiced polygamy; that he is a man—in his personal relations, as son, husband, father and citizen—above reproach; that in all of the relations of citizenship he has lived a singularly pure and upright life."

He then asked: "Why, then, should he be expelled from this body, disgraced and dishonored for life, a stigma placed upon his children, his own life wrecked and the happiness of his wife destroyed. He is a Christian gentleman and his religious belief has taken him into the church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, commonly called the Mormon church."

Mr. Hopkins said he felt sure that those representing the protestants would not contend that there was any apostolic oath which had been taken by Smoot which would prevent him from discharging his duties as senator. "Never before in the history of the government," he declared, "has the previous life or career of a senator been called in question to determine whether he should remain in the senate or not. If members of any Christian church were to be charged with all of the crimes that have been committed in its name, where is the Christian gentleman in this body who would be safe in his seat?" He denied that the protestants had made good in any of the charges against Smoot.

Senator Fulton asked Hopkins whether the Mormon church had recognized the 20 polygamous marriages which the evidence shows had taken place since the manifesto of 1890. Hopkins said the church had not recognized these marriages; that under the laws of the Mormon church today such marriages were not permitted.

Mr. Dubois asked if Smoot had done anything to bring these persons to justice. Hopkins held that there was no more obligations on Smoot in this respect than on anyone else. He maintained that Smoot had, in his position in the church, done more to stamp out polygamy than any thousand other men.

Mr. Dubois wanted to know where and when Smoot ever publicly placed himself on record as condemning polygamy. Hopkins' reply was that Smoot had 20 or 40 times stated his position before the committee and that his whole life was a protest against polygamy. "The senator himself," said Hopkins, addressing Dubois, "dare not stand up here on this floor or any other place and say that Reed Smoot has not been a persistent opponent of the practice of polygamy."

Mr. Dubois demanded to have pointed out in the committee testimony where Smoot had stated his position. Hopkins, however, took his seat, and Mr. Cullom was recognized to call up the legislative appropriation bill and no answer was made to Dubois.

STEAMER PONCE SAFE

Was Disabled When Picked Up by the Elizabeth Rickmers

New York, Jan. 12.—Steamer Ponce, disabled but safe, is riding at anchor in St. George's bay, the Bermudas, and her crew of 52 and seven passengers are "all well." This assurance was received direct from Captain Harvey by the owners, the New York and Porto Rico Steamship company, last evening. The long overdue steamer had reached the fortified harbor in tow of the German steamer Elizabeth Richmers.

The Ponce, it appears, was but two days out of New York when her machinery was disabled. She sailed from Ponce, P. R., Dec. 26 and on Dec. 30 broke the shaft in the stern tube. Roughly estimated, the vessel was then 350 miles from this port, which ordinarily she would have made on Jan. 1. Helpless, the Ponce drifted for 10 days, her signals of distress being picked up by the Rickmers on Jan. 8. The Rickmers had sailed two days earlier from Philadelphia for Japanese ports.

The commission promised to take the matter up in a short time.

AFFAIRS OF CITIES

Discussion as to How They Should Be Regulated

PRAISE FOR COMMISSIONS

George Turner and President Eliot Argue in Their Favor, While Former Mayor of Nashville Sees Much Harm in Them

Boston, Jan. 12.—City government by commission, as against city government by mayor and council, was the theme of discussion at a dinner last night of the Economic club of Boston, and the speakers were George K. Turner of New York, former Mayor Head of Nashville and President Eliot of Harvard university.

Messrs. Turner and Eliot argued in favor of commissions, while Mr. Head, telling of what had been accomplished in Nashville, severely arraigned public service corporations and in a general way defended government by city council. President Eliot spoke earnestly in behalf of government by commission. Cities should emulate great business corporations, he held, and should entrust their executive work to paid experts. Incidentally he suggested that the idea of the sovereignty of the people in municipal governments was about as "archaic as the granting by Spain to the United States of the sovereignty of the Philippine islands for a consideration of $20,000,000, and you can't speak of anything more absurd than that."

Mr. Turner criticised the geographical or ward method of electing members of a city council, which, he pointed out, was accounted a great advantage of government by city council by those who believed in that kind of civic government. It was better, he said, for a city to vote as a whole and to pass upon the question of fitness of the candidates rather than their adherence to a geographical district. "Galveston's government by commission," said the speaker, "has transformed politics into business."

A vigorous denunciation of legislative control of cities was a feature of the address of Mr. Head. "The rudimentary principles upon which our government was founded are denied us today in the conduct of our municipal governments," declared Head. "We are governed by commissions, but sooner or later the politicians will get control of these commissions, and then you will have the worst form of government possible. What we need is an appeal to the people themselves. We must impress them with the fact that the government is in their own hands."

But what seemed "infamous" to Head was the custom of cities of granting perpetual franchises to public service corporations. The greatest individual evil in the city he held to be the political boss who acted as the go-between for the franchise "grabber" and the franchise grantor, the man whose business it was to see that the people were made to feel satisfied.

"We have here in Massachusetts," said President Eliot, in opening, "a successful regulation of the more dangerous corporations. But we have not succeeded in obtaining a reputable city government, especially in Boston. There is a decline in the general moral sentiment in the community, and this produces bad government. And bosses are the fruits of this decline, not the seeds."

To return in a way to the idea of town government and choose a commission of selectmen, say to number seven, was Eliot's suggestion for a form of municipal government. He pointed out that it was impossible today to carry on business on the old municipal unit, for cities had changed and the population had changed in such manner that many of the existing lines and boundaries are preposterous.

"What more stupid a thing," said the speaker, "when a fire breaks out in Cambridgeport, to have the engines gather from distant parts of the city and the engines of Boston just across the river remain in their houses." He advocated metropolitan police and fire departments after the fashion of metropolitan sewage and water departments, and declared that the interests of the 30 cities outside of Boston, being identical with Boston, should be regulated and governed as one unit rather than 30 units. In conclusion Eliot said:

"A light has broken upon Galveston. In cities we have not to decide questions of peace or war, or great questions of the tariff. The object is to get business of the city done well. There are dark days now, but the light of day is dawning, and it is found in carrying on the business by commissions and by experts."

TWAIN AS A DUELIST.

How a Tiny Bird Made Mark's Opponent Decline an Encounter.

Mark Twain in an installment of his autobiography in the North American Review for December gives his experiences as a duelist in his early journalistic days in Nevada. He describes the preparations made for a duel between him and a Mr. Laird, proprietor of the Virginia Union, as follows:

"The boys were jubilant beyond expression. They helped me make my will. Then they took me home. I didn't sleep any—didn't want to sleep. I had plenty of things to think about and less than four hours to do it in, because 5 o'clock was the hour appointed for the tragedy, and I should have to use up one hour—beginning at 4—in practicing with the revolver and finding out which end of it to level at the adversary. At 4 we went down into a little gorge about a mile from town and borrowed a barn door for a mark—borrowed it of a man who was over in California on a visit—and we set the barn door up and stood a fence rail up against the middle of it to represent Mr. Laird. But the rail was no proper representative of him, for he was longer than a rail and thinner. Nothing would ever fetch him but a line shot, and then as like as not he would split the bullet—the worst material for dueling purposes that could be imagined. I began on the rail. I couldn't hit the rail. Then I tried the barn door, but I couldn't hit the barn door. There was nobody in danger except stragglers around on the flanks of that mark. I was thoroughly discouraged, and I didn't cheer up any when we presently heard pistol shots over in the next little ravine. I knew what that was—that was Laird's gang out practicing him. They would hear my shots, and of course they would come up over the ridge to see what kind of a record I was making—see what their chances were against me. Well, I hadn't any record, and I knew that if Laird came over that ridge and saw my barn door without a scratch on it he would be as anxious to fight as I was, or as I had been at midnight before that disastrous acceptance came.

"Now, just at this moment a little bird no bigger than a sparrow flew along by and lit on a sage bush about thirty yards away. Steve Gillis whipped out his revolver and shot its head off. Oh, he was a marksman—much better than I was! We ran down there to pick up the bird, and just then, sure enough, Mr. Laird and his people came over the ridge, and they joined us. And when Laird's second saw that bird with its head shot off he lost color, he faded, and you could see that he was interested. He said:

"'Who did that?'

"Before I could answer, Steve spoke up and said quite calmly and in a matter of fact way:

"'Clemens did it.'

"The second said: 'Why, that is wonderful. How far off was that bird?'

"Steve said, 'Oh, not far—about thirty yards.'

"The second said: 'Well, that is astonishing shooting. How often can he do that?'

"Steve said languidly, 'Oh, about four times out of five!'

"I knew the little rascal was lying, but I didn't say anything. The second said: 'Why, that is amazing shooting. I supposed he couldn't hit a church.'

"He was supposing very sagaciously, but I didn't say anything. Well, they said 'Good morning.' The second took Mr. Laird home, a little tottery on his legs, and Laird sent back a note in his own hand declining to fight a duel with me on any terms whatever."

Even the Women Members Answer to the Name.

One hundred men and three women who answer to the name of Bill gathered at a dinner in the Benton hotel at Excelsior Springs, Mo., the other night. It was the third annual banquet of the Bill Club, No. 1, of the World, says a dispatch from Excelsior Springs.

Judge Bill Fowler acted as toastmaster, Bill Steck's orchestra furnished instrumental music, and the Bill quartet, composed of Bill Brownell, Bill Craven, Bill Wallace and Bill Courtney, sang songs glorifying the Bills. The oratory, too, was furnished by Bills, the chief of whom was ex-Congressman Bill Cowherd of Kansas City.

Any woman christened Willie, Wilhelmina, Wilma or Williamette is eligible to membership in the club. Two "lady Bills," Miss Bill Hervy of Kansas City and Miss Bill Metheny of Excelsior Springs, made speeches.

The Duck and the Golden Egg.

It was not a goose, but a duck, that had been laying golden eggs in Nebraska up to a few days ago, says the Savannah News. The owner of the duck, Mr. Prebyl, didn't know just what was the matter with the duck's eggs and killed her as useless. In the crop of the fowl was found a veritable placer mine. Mr. Prebyl prospected the places where the duck had been in the habit of feeding and found an exceptionally rich gold deposit. Now there is a rush of gold seekers to the banks of the creek where once the duck quacked and dived for lily roots.

Green Hand's Experience With Cow.

George Bierce of Sharon, Conn., hired as a farm helper a newly arrived foreigner named Ogliguski, says a Winsted (Conn.) special to the New York World. The farmer handed him a three legged stool and pail and introduced him to Old Spot, a good, easy milker. Ogliguski bravely placed the stool upside down under the cow, put the pail between the legs of the stool and then stood back and waited for results.

AN APPROPRIATION

in 1907 for a

NEW CODDINGTON

GOOD AFTERNOON.

An increase of the "municipal" debt from $323,206.59 on Jan. 1, 1900, to $540,450.00 on Jan. 1, 1907, may not seem large to some, but it is nearly 70 per cent. in seven years. But in these seven years the taxpayers have been called upon to pay maturing debt to the amount of over half a million dollars, as will be seen below, so that the loans really amounted to $798,741.19 in seven years.

1901	68,605.61
1902	66,685.64
1903	70,540.35
1904	*148,078.00
1905	77,942.00
1906	79,670.00
	$581,496.60
Net increase added,	217,242.59
	$798,741.19

*Included $80,000 notes borrowed for few months.

In addition to this, the taxpayers paid for interest on municipal debt in these seven years over $100,000 as will be seen below:

1900,	$12,458.25
1901,	13,750.58
1902,	15,664.86
1903,	16,657.28
1904,	16,648.86
1905,	14,344.39
1906,	*15,262.87
	$104,787.09

*To Dec. 1.

It will be seen that the interest account is increasing rapidly as well as the debt, and over $100,000 will be required to pay the interest on the present municipal debt before it matures.

The figures above relate only to the "municipal" debt, not including the debt and interest for water, sewer, and parks, the total debt of Quincy being $3,785,350.00 and the annual interest charge over $70,000.00.

If the Legislature would adopt the proposed measure to abolish the limit on tax rates and at the same time prohibit additional debt, the cities might escape sometime from their burdens which promise to swamp them. If the tax rate was thus forced up to $25 per $1000 to meet the alleged demands of the day it might result in reducing expenditures.

Senator Lodge this week laid aside his shield and buckler, which he has been wearing as the self-appointed champion of the President in the Brownsville affair, to attend the annual banquet of the American Institute of Architects. The statesman from the Bay State waxed eloquent over the American "sky-scraper," and declared it to be typically American and a type of architecture which yet can be molded into beauty. Mr. Lodge's eulogism of the "sky-scraper" brought a sharp retort from F. Hopkinson Smith, the author-architect, who declared the "sky-scrapers" of New York to be "the monstrosities of Broadway." However, there is no danger of the Lodge-Smith controversy becoming a national issue.

Attorney General Bonaparte this week received notification of his appointment as one of the vice presidents of the Public Health Defense League, which has just been incorporated in New York. The League is modeled along the lines of the Red Cross society, and, like that organization, will be national in scope. It will work under the provisions of the Pure Food Law, with a special reference to stamping out medical frauds, illegal practices, adulterations of drugs and similar offenses. The national scope of the League is shown by the fact that the membership fee is only one dollar per year, although much aid is expected from voluntary contributions. By placing the fee so low, the League expects to secure quickly thousands of members in all parts of the country. Austen G. Fox of New York is to be president of the organization.

Quincy had advance news on proposed life insurance laws, the report of the recess insurance committee to the Legislature embodying many of the reforms advocated by Mr. Brandeis before the Unitarian club at Wollaston. Savings Bank insurance is approved. The committee will accomplish much if it secures annual distribution of dividends on life policies, and the cost of insurance will be less if it is done over the counter. There are many other reforms included.

The Business Men's Association of Waltham has a membership of 301, and with receipts amounting to $1,104.03 was able to accomplish much for the Watch City in 1906. The abolition of grade crossings will receive attention at the next meeting, and there will be a ladies' night Feb. 28.

Representative Katzmann of Hyde Park has a very responsible position as clerk of the Committee of the Legislature on Legal Affairs, but the young man takes an interest in his work, and will perform the duties faithfully.

Some one has sent us a communication about muzzled dogs, but forgot to give us his name. We would have no objection to publishing it if we knew who the writer was. We must know the name of all writers.

There would be more churches with a surplus, like the Wollaston Congregational, if there were not so many religious societies. Quincy has about 30, one for ever 1,000 of the population to support.

Credit should be given Congress for having defeated the measure to raise the salaries of members and the cabinet officers.

A bill for jury reform has been introduced into the Legislature by Representative Turtle of Pittsfield, and has some good points.

The Sign of the Cross.

The stereopticon address at Bethany church Sunday evening will attract more than usual attention The address, "The Sign of the Cross," is a story of the Christian martyrs of the time of Nero, adapted from Wilson Barrett's famous story. The story reveals the wonderful faith and courage of the early Christians, and is illustrated by sixty beautiful colored views, representing home life and customs in the city of Rome in the reign of Nero. The views have probably never been given in Quincy before.

Men's Meeting.

"The Loudness of Silence" will be the subject of an address to men at the Quincy Y. M. C. A. on Sunday, at 4 P. M.

Rev. Clifton D. Gray of Dorchester is the speaker. This is an address well worth hearing as Mr. Gray is one of the most popular and able preachers in the city of Boston. Large crowds fill his church every Sunday, and he is a preacher noted for his ability to hold and interest men. Mrs. Mary Hastings Slade of Wollaston will render several vocal selections. The special music at these meetings is proving a very popular feature as the best talent possible is obtained each week.

Whist Party.

A jolly and happy party assembled at Poland's hall, Norfolk Downs last evening to enjoy two hours of whist. Seventeen tables were in play, and souvenirs were awarded: Miss Laura Thormley, Miss M. Lizzie Furnald, Mrs. L. G. Shay, Mrs. J. E. Poland, Mrs. H. S. Fairchilds and Messrs. S. G. Osgood, G. F. Spooner, H. Mateson, W. G. Woodward and E. M. Dunn.

—Manual training was officially adopted as part of the curriculum of the public schools of Chelsea at the annual meeting of the School Committee this week. The city has hitherto refused—with the exception of sewing in lower grades and applied design work in the High School—to comply with the law governing the introduction of manual training. The action was taken last night upon the request of Superintendent Gregory, who has been earnestly striving for the manual training course ever since he took charge of the city's schools.

A Home Wedding.

A very pretty parlor wedding was held on the evening of December 22 in the hospitable home of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Belyea, 44 Pearl street.

The bride, Miss F. E. Blewett of Cornwall, England, arrived in this country a few days before the marriage ceremony and was received into the family of Mr. and Mrs. Belyea. Mr. J. I. Wilkins, the groom, has been in the country about two years and has made a host of friends by his genial good nature and industrious habits.

A goodly company gathered together to participate in the wedding festivities and after the ceremony a reception was tendered the bridal couple, and congratulations and good wishes were showered upon them by friends from Braintree, Quincy and adjoining towns.

The bride was attired in a silk flowered crepoline gown trimmed with satin and chiffon, and especially made in England for the occasion.

The wedding presents were numerous and valuable, many having been sent from England by friends of the bride and groom. Among the gifts were noticed: a rocking chair upholstered in green plush, silver tea pot, silver cake stand, sauce bowl and dishes; spoons, vases, etc.

Miss Emily Moyle of Quincy attended as maid of honor and Mr. W. S. Belyea acted as best man. The Rev. C. F. Hill Crathern of the South church officiated. During the evening refreshments were served and a very delightful occasion was enjoyed by all.

We are all interested in the new state law which requires medical inspection in the public schools. F. Herbert Gile, M. D., of Braintree has consented to speak upon that subject at the Penniman school, Tuesday evening, Jan. 15, at eight o'clock. The meeting is free to all and a large attendance is anticipated.

Deaconess Carter To Speak on Alaska

An interesting meeting is announced for Thursday evening, Jan. 17, in the parish house of Christ church, to welcome to the parish and to Quincy, Deaconess Clara M. Carter, who for more than four years has been engaged in missionary work in Alaska. Miss Carter, who is a Canadian by birth, came to Boston in 1897, but after five years of devoted service there, accepted a call from Bishop Rowe of Alaska to undertake hospital work in his bleak and far away jurisdiction.

A woman of great courage and endurance, with unusual training and experience both as nurse and deaconess, her equipment for such arduous service seemed complete, and her many friends in the east have not been surprised to hear of two hospitals, one at Skagway and one at Fairbanks, built up and carried on largely by her efforts, under conditions of almost inconceivable difficulty and privation.

All who are interested in Alaska, whether members of the parish or not, are cordially invited to hear Miss Carter speak. The meeting will be informal in character, and will begin at eight o'clock.

Reception To Newsboys

By invitation of G. C. Shunk the popular news agent of Wollaston, a reception was held Thursday evening at his residence 225 Arlington street, in honor of the newsboys who have so faithfully served him in the distribution of papers during the past year.

About fourteen responded and were ushered into the spacious and well lighted rooms where ample provision had been made for their entertainment. During the evening several games were played, for which suitable prizes were given, and much enthusiasm was displayed in the endeavor to win, each trying to outdo the other.

Vivian McCarty gave several selections on the piano, which were finely rendered and added no small part to the evening's entertainment.

Refreshments were served, consisting of sandwiches, ice cream and cake, and punch.

An original poem, written for the occasion by Mrs. Shunk's father, was read and much enjoyed by all.

At a late hour the party left for their homes, feeling that Mr. and Mrs. Shunk had given them a royal good time.

Among those present were: Paul Clark, Winslow Weston, Stewart Dineen, John Conway, Vivian McCarty, Harold Tripp, Sydney Claflin, William Hoxie, Herbert Sutermeister, Fred Sutermeister, Joe Cox, William Cox, Theodore Penley and Warren Baker.

Pine Tree Club

Wednesday evening appeared to be the gala night of the season. Almost every person in town seemed to attend one or more of the meetings of the many organizations of clubs, orders, associations and public and private functions.

The Pine Tree State club of Braintree had its cup of cheerfulness at its fullest, in Pythian hall, at its regular monthly meeting. About sixty members and guests were present.

A delightful entertainment was given as follows:

Piano duet,—Miss Alice Pillsbury and Miss Bertha Pillsbury.
Reading,—Miss Edith May.
Solo,—Miss Alice Pillsbury.
Vocal duet,—Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Pillsbury.
Reading,—Miss May.
Solo,—Miss Bertha Pillsbury.
Comic solo,—Mr. F. J. Pillsbury.
Reading,—Miss May.
Piano duet,—Misses Pillsbury.

The refreshments by the matrons Mrs. H. E. Roberts, Mrs. Will W. Mayhew, Mrs. W. H. Martin and Miss Annie Hale were willingly put out of sight. The president Will W. Mayhew declined to serve a second term and was succeeded by Herman E. Roberts who has always been an active member. It is safe to say that Mr. Roberts will make an ideal president and the club will prosper under his guidance.

The committee in charge of the next meeting are Mr. and Mrs. Howes, Mr. and Mrs. Duckworth, Mr. and Mrs. Gerry, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Whitman, Miss Susie Clark and Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Wales.

—New York club women are discussing the address made by Mrs. Martha Moore Avery before the Woman's Republican Club at Delmonico's, New York. Mrs. Avery, who lives in Boston, spoke on "Socialism versus the Home." As dangerous persons she placed Mrs. Herbert Parsons, Mrs. J. G. Phelps-Stokes and Mrs. Charlotte Perkins Gilman in the same category, declaring them a menace to the American home.

It is rumored that Edward Tracy and Henry Barnes are planning to take a trip to Virginia and will engage in the shoe business there.

—The public health reports of the government adduce figures showing an extraordinary increase of smallpox in the United States during the latter half of the year 1906, the increase being almost 100 per cent., and affording totals that should be disgusting. In all during this period there were reported 3,979 cases agaiost 2,023 cases during the same period in 1905

—At the meeting of the State Board of Agriculture the officers of last year were re-elected. Gov. Guild is ex-officio president, the elective officers being William R. THE LAND OF ROMANCE.

Spain and the Peculiar Temperament of Its People.

If I were asked to sum up the dominant impression that the survival in Spain of the old world mediaevalism makes, I should say that Spain is in the precise and specific sense of the word the home of romance. The special character of the Spanish temperament and of Spanish developments in literature and in art is marked by a quality, rising and sinking with the rise and fall of Gothic, which we call the romantic spirit—a mixture, that is, of the mysterious and grandiose with the grotesquely bizarre of the soaringly ideal with the crudely real, a mixture which to us today has the cunning fascination of art, but was really on both sides the natural outcome of the experiences and feelings of the men who created it. This romantic spirit was once the common possession of all Christendom, but the Spanish temperament peculiarly lent itself to the romantic attitude, and it is in Spain today that we may catch its final vanishing echoes. It is the church, always the most powerful stronghold of tradition among any people, which enables the stranger most vividly to realize how well the romantic spirit has been preserved in Spain. Notwithstanding invasions from without and revolutions from within, especially during the early years of the last century, Spain is still the country where the mediaeval spirit of romantic devotion is most splendidly embodied and preserved.—Havelock Ellis in Atlantic.

THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

A Member May Drink There, but Is Not Allowed to Eat.

The British house of commons has its own code in regard to the partaking of liquid and solid refreshments. A member making a long speech may take a drink, and the house is liberal enough not to care whether the color of the contents of the glass is white or brown or black, whether, in fact, the glass holds water or whisky or beer. Mr. Gladstone's egg flips, which his wife carefully compounded for him and he brought to the house in a bottle, are classic.

But woe betide the man who scorns drink and must have meat. Contemporary recollection only recalls one member rash enough to disregard this rule. It was a number of years ago, in the stormy time of the home rule debates, that an Irish member, in the small hours of the morning, produced from his pocket a paper bag and drew out a bun, which he proceeded calmly to eat. The house was instantly in an uproar. There were loud cries of "Order! Order!" and that bun was never finished.

No member may read a newspaper in the house. If he had the temerity to smoke, the sergeant at arms would quickly place him under lock and key. —Appleton's Magazine.

Mexican Church Legends.

Queretaro was a town before the Spanish conquest and was made a city in 1655. A legend of Queretaro is that an Otomite chief, Fernando de Tapia by name, undertook to convert the city to Christianity in a way that seems novel to us, but was common enough to his day. He came from Tula with a challenge to the people of Queretaro to a fair stand up fight. If he won, the people surviving were to be baptized. The challenge was accepted, but while the fight was in progress a dark cloud came up and the blessed Santiago was seen in the heavens with a fiery cross, whereupon the people of Queretaro gave up and were baptized. They set up a stone cross to commemorate the event on the site of the present church of Santa Cruz. There is scarcely a church in Mexico which has not a legend of this kind attached to it.

Misjudged.

The manager of an office had advertised for an office boy. In consequence he was annoyed for an hour by a straggling line of boys of all sizes, claiming various accomplishments.

"Well," he said to a late applicant, "I suppose you can read anything, and write anything, and figure a little, and use the typewriter a little, and"—

"Naw!" interrupted the boy. "If I could do all them things I'd strike yer fer yer own job. I ain't nothin' but an office boy."

He got the position.—Bohemian.

Remedy For Excess In Eating.

A hint to those who may thoughtlessly at some time or other indulge in excess in eating. If this indiscretion is committed, especially in high seasoned things with rich sauces, a draft of cold water acidulated with lemon juice will take off the sense of weight at the stomach and assist the digestive process by moderating the alimentary fermentation.

Old English Elections.

As an illustration of the violence that was once common during political campaigns in England is a quaint bill from a lawyer after an election at Andover in 1768: "To being thrown out of the George inn, Andover, to my legs being thereby broken, to surgeon's bill and loss of time and business, £500."

"Yes'm," replied Tommy, "but I don't believe everything I hear."—Philadelphia Press.

"Go ask your mother," replied dad curtly. "She spends the most money." —Harper's Weekly.

Quilting Bee Of Ladies Aid

The Ladies Aid society of the Universalist church met Wednesday at the home of Mrs. Frank Hobart, Mill street. Needle and thimbles were the order of the day. As the ladies gathered around the quilting frame it brought to mind the good old fashioned quilting bees, and the merry songs and wit kept time with the nimble fingers. At noon the ladies were invided to the dining room, where a bountifully spread table greeted them, and they soon convinced their kind hostess they could handle knives and forks as well as needles.

After dinner, work was again in order, and at three o'clock they had finished the quilts to be delivered. The president reported an order had been sent for three more making five in all.

At 3.15 meeting was called to order and regular business taken up. The ladies were very much pleasod with the report of the treasurer, and the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

President,—Mrs. Frank Hobart.
Vice President,—Mrs. Mary Hobart.
Treasurer,—Miss Susie Bradbury.
Secretary,—Mrs. Annie Merritt.
Directors,—Mrs. Susie Harris and Mrs. Annie Morrison.

A vote of thanks was given to the president for the delightful day spent with her, and all look forward to the next quilting.

Mr. A. W. Small, principal of the High school, is taking a course in education at Harvard Friday afternoons. This course includes supervision, principles of education and the study of programs.

The High school teachers return to the school building every Monday afternoon from 3.30 to 4.30, thus giving the scholars who wish, opportunity for getting extra assistance in their work. Parents also can have the opportune time for visiting the teachers and talking with them about their children and their work.

The Board of Health have been visiting the various schools the past week examining the pupils for signs of whooping cough, diphtheria and other contagious diseases.

A vesper service will be held at the Union Congregational church of Weymouth and Braintree on Sunday next January 13th at 7.30 o'clock. Everyone is cordially invited to this service.

Mrs. Martha Bennett wife of Charles Bennett died at her home on Factory hill last Saturday aged 78 years. Besides her husband two daughters Mrs. Whittaker and Mrs. DeYoung survive her. The funeral took place Monday. Interment was at St. Francis Xavier cemetery, Weymouth.

Horace H. Dana of Central avenue got the highest number of pins at the roll-off Tuesday evening at the Kenwood alleys. He had a total of 285.

James O. Sypher is excavating at the corner of Washington and Pearl streets for a cellar. A new three-story block is to be built there at once by William S. Tracey, three stores on the first floor and two modern tenements above.

New foundations are being placed under the boilers in the Braintree pumping station so that at present the town is being supplied with the water from Great pond. There is a watchman stationed at the engine house to ring the bell in case of fire.

"The annual parish meeting of the Union Religious society of Weymouth and Braintree will be held on Tuesday evening, January 15, 1907 at 7.30 o'clock."

Rev. and Mrs. Kirk entertained a party of friends from Kansas on Monday the 7th.

Funeral services over the remains of John Whitty were held at the St. Francis church on Wednesday afternoon, Rev. M. F. McDonnell, pastor officiating. Mr. Whilty was the first child born to Catholic parents in the town of Randolph and during a long and an honorable life continued a practical member of that faith. During the greater part of his life he was a member of the choirs in Randolph and Braintree, in both of which his services were given freely and continuously. "Blessed are they who died in the Lord."

Next Wednesday evening in G. A. R. hall, South Braintree, Blue Hill lodge, No. 208, A. O. U. W. will have its installation of officers at eight o'clock. Later in the evening a supper will be served.

Mr. Small, of the High school, received a letter this week from Master John Long of the sophomore class, who is now in Riverside, California. Master Long writes: "We had a fine trip west through Colorado, New Mexico and Arizona. It was exciting pulling up through the mountains of Arizona. At times it took three engines to pull the load. The climate in California is beautiful with cool nights. This is the picking season for oranges. About 1500 Japs have already come into the city for that purpose." We are glad Master Long is enjoying his trip and wish we might be there to enjoy it with him.

Over 150 people partook of the supper prepared by the men of Union church, East Braintree, on Wednesday evening. The children present were entertained from 5.30 P. M. to 6.30 P. M. with Master Rowen's magic lantern in the ladies' parlor. After all had appeased their appetites with the tender ham, baked beans, hot rolls, potato salad, hot coffee and cake, an entertainment was enjoyed, college songs were sung and a good social hour ensued.

The annual meeting of the corporation of the City Hospital will be held this year in the chapel of the Unitarian church instead of Colonial hall as formerly.

MESSAGE OF POPE

Offers Consolation to Roman Catholics of France

SURE OF FINAL VICTORY

Says New Law Is One of Spoliation, Has Consummated Pillage of the Church, and Has Organized Anarchy

Rome, Jan. 12.—The Osservatore Romano, official organ of the Vatican, published the text of a most important encyclical addressed by the pope to the French Catholics. In this document the pontiff said that his chief object in addressing the faithful in France was to comfort them in their sufferings, which he felt deeply. There was, however, great consolation in the fact that the Catholics of France were united.

The French government's declaration of war was not only against the Christian faith, but against all spiritual ideas. The French Catholics must be prepared for all sorts of trials, but they were certain of final victory. This meant the maintenance of their union with the holy see.

Contrary to the statements made on the subject, the church did not desire a religious war, involving violent persecutions. Being a messenger of peace and carrying out her mission loyally, the church did not willingly expose herself to war and persecutions, as she did not desire to see her children suffering. Regarding the ecclesiastical properties, the encyclical said the pope had not abandoned them. The French government had imposed on the Catholics of France an organization which the church was absolutely unable to accept without imperilling her existence as a divine institution. The church could not prevent the unjust spoliation in progress. As for the proposed cultural associations they were contrary to the ecclesiastical hierarchy.

Continuing, the pope said: "We have been accused of prejudice and inconsistency. It has been said that we refused to approve in France what we had already approved in Germany. But this reproach is unjust and unfounded. The Germans explicitly recognized the Catholic hierarchy, which the French do not.

"As to the annual declaration required for public worship it did not offer the legal guaranty that the church had the right to expect. Nevertheless, to obviate worse evils, the church might have tolerated making declarations, but laying down that the clergy shall be only occupants of the churches, without any legal status and without the right to perform any administrative act in the exercise of their ministry, placed them in such a vague and humiliating position that the making of declarations could not be accepted.

"It remains to examine the law recently voted by the chambers. From the point of view of church property the law is a law of spoliation and confiscation and has consummated the pillage of the church. The statement that the government disposed of the 'abandoned' properties of the church is adding derision to spoliation.

"From the point of view of the exercise of religion the new law has organized anarchy. It installs a regime of uncertainty and arbitration. There is uncertainty as to whether the churches, which are always liable to disaffection, shall or shall not in the meanwhile be at the disposal of the clergy and faithful. In each parish the priest will be in the power of the municipality, with the consequent possibility of conflicts in all parts of the country. The new law aggravates the law separating church and state. We can only condemn it with precision and without ambiguity.

"Certain articles of the law throw new light on the real aim of our enemies. They wish to destroy the church and de-Christianize France without attracting too closely the attention of the people. If their course was really popular, as they pretend it is, they would pursue it openly and take all the responsibilities."

In conclusion the pope appealed to the judgment of history, which, he said, will recognize that the papacy, in acting as it has, did so because it did not wish to humiliate any trivial officials or oppose any form of government, but defended with all its strength the work of the divine founder of the church, demanding "respect for the hierarchy and the inviolability of its property and liberty." The papacy wished to remind the world that "man must concern himself here below with higher ideals than the occurrences of everyday life, and that the supreme, inviolable joy of the human soul on earth is to accomplish its spiritual duty at all costs and thus, in spite of all, honor, serve and love God."

Comment of French Press

Paris, Jan. 12.—The newspapers comment at length on the pope's encyclical. Most of them agree that it shows there is a necessity for negotiations, but the clerical and anti-clerical organs disagree regarding who should begin them.

The Figaro considers the document incomplete and foresees the publication of another giving directions for the organization of worship.

The Siecle, moderate, declares the encyclical is rich in condolences, but says it does not remedy the situation.

The Gaulois and The Soleil, clerical, consider the document a clear exposition of the difficulties to Christian faith.

The view of the Socialists and freethinkers is expressed by Humanite, which declares that the pope's sole desire is to sustain the Roman hierarchy's absolutism and autocracy before every other consideration and witho reference to the opinions of the flock.

A Message of Sympathy

New York, Jan. 12.—President Feeney of the American Federation of Catholic Societies has cabled to Pope Pius X a message of sympathy from that organization, protesting against the present treatment of the Catholics of France by the French government.

MUCH ACUTE SUFFERING

Chinese Famine Camps Overcrowded, With More Coming

Shanghai, Jan. 12.—Captain Kirton, the foreign relief commissioner in the famine camp at Tsing Kiang Fu, describes the refuge camps as consisting of mat sheds arranged in rectangular groups in street formation two miles long and a mile wide. In other camps in the vicinity of Tsing Kiang Fu of nearly a half million refugees, 30 percent show signs of distress and among 10 percent the suffering is acute. The roads are thronged with rice peddlers. Women tear up the roots of grass for food and are cooking leaves and twigs.

The efforts of the officials are confined to attempts to persuade the people to return to their homes. Some of them comply, but more arrive than depart. One hundred thousand men are absolutely idle. Though it would not be difficult to organize relief work, none has yet been started. If the inaction continues there will be a gigantic problem to face. The end cannot be foreseen. The worst pinch has not yet been felt.

Alleged Clemency to Trusts

Lincoln, Neb., Jan. 12.—Representative Van Housen has presented a resolution asking for a legislative investigation of Morris Brown, formerly attorney general of Nebraska and now Republican nominee for United States senator. The resolution went over until Monday under the rules. It alleges that Brown entered into an agreement with representatives of the grain trust and a printing company not to press suits brought by the state, extending unlawful clemency. Brown denies these charges.

Liquor Law Interpretation

New York, Jan. 12.—Alcoholic beverages may be served at hotels on Sunday only where food, designed in good faith for a meal, is served, under a decision handed down by the appellate division of the supreme court. Under previous interpretations on the Raines law, liquors have been served on Sunday to customers who ordered a sandwich, the sandwich being regarded as complying with that section of the law which provides that liquor may be served with a meal.

Textile Workers Locked Out

Cohoes, N. Y., Jan. 12.—All the largest textile mills in Cohoes and Waterford have been closed as the result of the demand of the operatives in the "boarding" departments for a new wage schedule. At a meeting of the Manufacturers' association it was decided to close the mills rather than submit to the demands of the strikers. Thousands of employes are out of work.

Pair of Alleged Highwaymen

Baltimore, Jan. 12.—Two young men, giving their names as James Allen of Watertown, Mass., and Frederick Dunn of New York, are under arrest on the charge of highway robbery. It is alleged that they waylaid two men in this city and, at the point of revolvers, relieved their victims of money and jewelry. The police say the prisoners have confessed to one of the robberies.

College Graduates' Downfall

Chicago, Jan. 12.—Three college graduates were arrested last night, charged with having participated in a score of burglaries in Chicago within the last two months. The police say that they recovered stolen property valued at $6000 in the apartments of the men. The police say the men have admitted the accusations against them.

Trade Returns Irregular

New York, Jan. 12.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says that trade returns are irregular because of the erratic weather, unseasonably high temperature restricting sales of heavyweight wearing apparel at some points, while business is most satisfactory in colder sections.

Senate Passes Pension Bill

Washington, Jan. 12.—A general service pension bill was passed by the senate which, if it becomes a law, will gave to survivors of the Civil and Mexican wars who have reached the age of 62 years $12 a month, $15 to those 70, and $20 to those 75 years of age.

Fire Scare In Mills Hotel

New York, Jan. 12.—Fire that started on the fifth floor filled Mills hotel with smoke and caused something of a scare among 600 guests at midnight. The hotel was quickly emptied, however, without injury to anyone. The monetary loss was not great.

Fierce Duel With Revolvers

New Iberia, La., Jan. 12.—George H. Brigham and Roscoe Sealy, both young men, fought with revolvers at a street corner until Brigham was killed and Sealy wounded four times. The cause of the quarrel is not known.

Love by Graphophone

By Alice Lovett Carson

Copyright, 1906, by Alice L. Carson

The office of Horwitz & Mallon, wholesale brass manufacturers, shone with polished fixtures and fresh white wood. A pleasant, cheery place to work in, Mabel Thurston thought as she entered. She had come early that morning because it was the last day of the month and a great deal of correspondence had to be finished up. She greeted Dick, the office boy, before going into her own little sanctum, for, as the "graphophonist" of the firm, she was given a nook away from the rattle of tickers and other machines.

"The boss left a note fer you, Miss T'urston," said the boy as he followed her in, carrying an armful of wax cylinders. "There it is."

Mabel read it as she opened and dusted off her typewriter. "No. 3 important—to be done first. Then 5, 4 and 2. C. H."

She nodded understandingly and fitted cylinder No. 3 into the graphophone that stood on the table at her elbow. Then she wound up and started the machine and, having fastened about her head the cap that held the tubes against her ears, sat down prepared for the work.

The instrument buzzed a few seconds, then started off. "Take this letter to Messrs. Carroll & Briggs, Middle Roxbury, Mass.," began the gruff voice of Carl Horwitz. She could almost see the sharp glances he gave from under his bushy eyebrows while he dictated. The typewriter began to rattle in a businesslike way. Other stenographers and clerks came in, laughing and chattering, and settled down to work, and the office quickly resumed its usual active appearance.

Hurrying, for he was a little late, entered Pierce Mallon, the junior partner. He was Horwitz's nephew, a bright young fellow of twenty-six. He hesitated a moment, with flushed face and embarrassed air, before Miss Thurston's door, then moved on to the inner office. Puzzling over the phrasing of a sentence, Mabel did not see him enter, though she always looked for his morning greeting and felt something lacking in the day when she missed it. Of late the handsome boy who blushed and stammered whenever he spoke to her had been often in her thoughts.

"No. 5 next," she thought pleasurably, handing Dick a sheaf of letters to be signed by Horwitz. That cylinder always contained Mallon's correspondence and she enjoyed hearing his sympathetic voice.

"Please take this letter, Miss Thurston," it began deferentially—so different from his uncle's abrupt manner. "Mr. Henry S. Wright, 845 Main street, Poughkeepsie, N. Y. My dear Mr. Wright," and so continued, the girl drinking in every word.

"If you've finished that, the next is a personal note," Mallon's voice went on. He stopped a minute, then continued with many halts and jerks of utterance. "Dear friend—no, my dear friend—just leave out the name, Miss Thurston. My dear friend, though I've wanted to do so many times lately—in fact, whenever I passed your door—I've never had the courage to speak to you of a matter on which I feel very deeply. I don't know how you'll regard this method of addressing you. No doubt it will seem to you as rude as it is unconventional, but I must run the risk of offending you. Miss Thurston—Mabel—I love you and"—

With a sharp exclamation the girl started from her seat and tore the cap from her head. "How dare you?" she panted, her cheeks flaming with indignation. To take advantage of her position to insult her in this way! Of course there were always little jokes that the instrument permitted of—things the men would not say to her face, but never anything of this nature. James Cate, Horwitz's secretary, began his letters by drawling out, "My deah girl, if you love me take this," and Steve Murphy, the business manager, sometimes interrupted his correspondence to tell a story in his inimitable brogue, ending in a lusty "Haw! Haw!" that always made her laugh. Horwitz frequently prefaced his dictation with remarks that consigned his correspondent to Jericho, but to think that Pierce Mallon, of all men, should be guilty of a vulgar practical joke like this!

She jerked the paper off her typewriter and tore it into bits. Then she stopped the graphophone and changed the cylinder for another. "If Mr. Mallon's letters are not all written today it's his own fault," she thought hotly, with a feeling of joy that she could punish him thus.

But a dull ache that would not cease remained in her heart, though she told herself over and over again that the fellow was a cad and a boor and she despised herself for ever taking him for a gentleman. Her pillow that night was wet with some bitter tears as she tossed sleeplessly on the narrow boarding house bed. It is hard to give up ideals when one is only twenty-two.

The same cylinder was frequently used more than once, for the surface could be shaved smooth ready for another impression, so No. 5 was brought in next morning by Dick, and, though Mabel instinctively dreaded it, she could not refuse to take it with the rest. Mallon's voice began at once without introduction:

"I have offended you deeply, I know. You thought it was a practical joke, and a poor one at that. Pardon me for being such a boor; but, indeed, I meant every word. It wasn't a joke, but dead earnest, for I love you, love you, love you"— His voice broke passionately. "Ah, forgive me," he went on contritely. "I am offending you again, but I can't be silent when the phone tempts me, and I dare not speak to you face to face. Can't you pity me at least?"

As she listened the girl's expression changed from indignation to surprise, then to doubt. "Perhaps," she said uncertainly, "he is speaking the truth after all. Perhaps I misjudged him. Oh, I hope I have!" With the sudden realization of her own feeling she hid her face in her hands.

Next day when she came to cylinder No. 5 in the routine of correspondence Mabel found herself hoping for the little personal message which should give assurance to her heart. It came abruptly, but decidedly:

"I'm going to stop this sort of thing, Mabel. It smacks of cowardice, and I want to be worthy of your respect. I mean to put my fate to touch at once, so expect me this afternoon."

The girl's heart sang its paean of joy as her fingers flew over a heavy budget of letters. When the day was over she waited for his coming till long past her usual time of leaving and went home at last, sad and uncertain what to think.

"Say, you'll find some fun cussin' on the tubes today, Miss Turston," said Dick as he brought her the cylinders next morning. "The boss chased Mr. Pierce off to Boston in a hurry yesterday, then ripped round all the afternoon 'cause he couldn't find some rush orders the young feller put away. I tell you, there'll be fur flyin', you bet, when he gits back this mornin'."

Dick wondered why Miss Thurston beamed so on him and presented him with a rose she had just bought. He could not know that his news had put an end to a bitter heartache. It was Saturday, a half holiday, and her only fear was that Pierce would not return in time.

The clerks had all left and even the elevator had stopped running before she covered the instruments, and still he had not come. Slowly she adjusted her hat before the mirror. There came a rush of eager, impatient feet up the stairs, and the door of the office was burst open. He dropped his suit case and came forward with outstretched hands.

"Oh," he exclaimed, breathless and relieved, "I was afraid you would be gone!" She did not turn.

"You know, don't you, why I didn't come yesterday? You understand it was not my fault—that I hadn't time to send you a note even?" She bowed her head in silence. "Ah, but you still think it was unmanly to talk through that old graphophone! Forgive me, dear, I didn't know what I was doing. But I do love you, Mabel." He would not be discouraged by her silence. "I love you and I want you. Tell me, can you forgive me and love me a little in return?"

Then she wheeled about, her face radiant, her eyes shining like gray stars. "Pierce, dear!" was all she said, but he was satisfied, for he read the answer in her eyes.

He Drew on Sight.

Mart Hoover years ago, when Kansas was not the cultivated commonwealth it has since become, had sent a consignment of corn to a commission merchant in Kansas City. The merchant telegraphed, telling the consignor: "Your credit is $27.40. Draw on me at sight."

But Hoover was mad. He had expected his money, and none came. He felt he had been duped, and he treasured up the grievance. One time, about six weeks later, the commission man came to Hoover's town, got out of the bus and started to walk down the street. Hoover saw him and instantly drew his revolver and fired. His eye was fairly good. The bullet cut away the merchant's necktie and unfastened his collar.

Then Hoover put up his gun.

"That's expensive shootin'," said he, "but I reckon you're as sorry as I am."

"What do you mean?" demanded the town constable, arresting the gun man.

"He told me to," said Hoover, surprised.

"Told you to?" demanded the white cheeked city man. "I never did anything of the kind!"

"You did," said Hoover. And, drawing out the telegram, he read:

"'Draw on me at sight.'

"I done it," said he.

Curious Freaks of Razors.

The finest grades of razors are so delicate that even the famous Damascus sword blades cannot equal them in texture. It is not generally known that the grain of a Swedish razor is so sensitive that its general direction is changed after a short service. When you buy a fine razor the grains run from the upper end of the outer point in a diagonal direction toward the handle. Constant stropping will twist the steel until the grain appears to be straight up and down. Subsequent use will drag the grain outward from the edge, so that after steady use for several months the fiber of the steel occupies a position exactly the reverse of that which it did on the day of purchase. The process also affects the temper of the blade, and when the grain sets from the lower outer points toward the back you have a razor which cannot be kept in condition even by the most conscientious barber. But here's another curious freak that will take place in the same tool: If you leave the razor alone for a month or two and take it up you will find that the grain has assumed its first position. The operation can be repeated until the steel is worn through to the back.—Strand Magazine.

Centennial of the Birth of General Lee

THE announcement of exercises on the 19th of January to observe the one hundredth birthday anniversary of General Robert E. Lee makes the American civil war seem almost like ancient history to the generation now growing up. General Lee, however, was one of the oldest leaders on either side of that conflict. He was sixteen years the senior of General Grant. Stonewall Jackson, his own great lieutenant and next to Lee the most beloved of southern generals, was seventeen years his junior.

General Lee, not alone by virtue of his years and his gray hairs, but also by reason of his solicitude and kindliness, was a father to the southern forces. History, wherever written, records Robert Edward Lee as the perfect flower of southern chivalry. Generals who opposed him in battle have been glad to pay tribute to his knightly honor, his unassuming dignity and his simple manliness; also they have agreed with European and American authorities in assigning him to a place among the greatest soldiers in history.

General Lee was born at Stratford, Westmoreland county, Va., Jan. 19, 1807. He entered West Point in 1825 and was graduated second in his class without a single demerit mark during his entire course. He entered the engineer corps. In 1832 he married Mary Custis, daughter of the adopted son of George Washington. In the Mexican war he was promoted repeatedly for distinguished services at Cerro Gordo, Contreras, Churubusco and Chapultepec. He was made superintendent of the Military academy at West Point in 1852 and a few years later was transferred to field service as lieutenant colonel of the Second cavalry, doing able work against the Comanches and other hostile Indians in Texas. In 1859, while on furlough at his home at Arlington, Va., he was sent with a force of United States marines to Harpers Ferry, where he captured John Brown. Shortly thereafter he was made a full colonel. Early in 1861 Abraham Lincoln sent Montgomery Blair, of his cabinet, to Colonel Lee offering him command of the United States army. Lee courteously declined the offer, saying that he could not take up arms "against his state, his home and his children." He resigned from the United States army and was made commander in chief of the Virginia forces. A little later he became one of the five full generals of the Confederacy and finally commander in chief of all the southern forces. In the fall of 1865 he became president of Washington college, now Washington and Lee university, at Lexington, Va., remaining in that position until his death, Oct. 12, 1870.

Lee was always a Virginian. He never lived anywhere else except when absent necessarily on military duty. His lifelong devotion to his native state was the strongest motive in his entire career. It shaped his career. On one side of the Potomac was the capital of the United States. On the other side was the home of Lee. There also lay Virginia. Lee might have led the Federal armies against the south, but he elected to stay with Virginia because in his view that was the honorable course.

At this late day it is useless to discuss Lee as a general. All the world knows how he withstood the legions of the north and how nobly he acquitted himself as a commander. Leaving aside all consideration of war issues, it is appropriate, in view of the Lee centennial, to consider him briefly as a man. After all, it is the man that men remember and revere rather than the military commander. Measured by this gauge, Napoleon, Frederick the Great and other famous generals fall so far below Lee that it is an insult to his memory for them to be mentioned in any spirit of patronizing comparison with him.

Five months after the surrender of his army at Appomattox General Lee assumed the presidency of Washington college at a salary of $3,000 a year. Like thousands of other well to do southerners, the war had impoverished him. His beautiful and historic estates were lost. He belonged by birth to the aristocracy of Virginia. Some time after he became president of the college the board of trustees desired to raise his salary, the efforts of Lee having largely increased the efficiency of the instruction and the attendance of students. Lee firmly declined the increase, saying:

"My salary is as large as the college ought to pay."

General John B. Gordon was sent to offer him the presidency of a southern insurance company at a salary of $10,000 a year. He declined on the ground that he knew nothing about the insurance business and could not earn the salary and that his duty lay in remaining at the head of the college. Another person offered him a large salary "for the use of his name" as head of a corporation, but General Lee emphatically made it known that he would accept no money for services which he did not render. Later he was offered $50,000 a year to take the presidency of an insurance company. He preferred to remain at Lexington on his small salary.

The Washington college board built a residence for the occupancy of the president, making the appropriation without the knowledge of Lee, and after the house was built they sent to Mrs. Lee a deed to the property, also settling upon her an annuity of $3,000. General Lee, in his wife's behalf, wrote a letter declining the gift. He had acted similarly during the war when it was proposed to donate a house to him in Richmond. He advised that any funds that had been raised for the purpose should be turned over to the aid of the sick and wounded or go toward the better equipment of his ill clad soldiers. He died at Lexington in his $3,000 position.

General Lee's self abnegation in wartime was well known to his army, but it is not so well known to the world as it should be. As commander he was in a position to make a splurge in gold lace, occupy commodious quarters when offered and enjoy all the pomp and circumstance of war to the utmost, but he never did. Practically throughout the war he wore the uniform of a colonel, he seldom slept in a house, and at his headquarters there was the acme of simplicity.

A British military attache once found General Lee encamped in a fence corner, though close by was a commodious mansion which he might have occupied. Upon one occasion a Virginia lady invited hm to a dinner with other guests, rich viands being served in courses. General Lee ate only beef and bread. He explained to the hostess that he could not conscientiously partake of the luxuries she offered while his poor boys in the ranks were living on less than half rations.

General Horace Porter, who served on General Grant's staff and was present during the historic conference at Appomattox, relates that after the terms of surrender had been signed General Lee's first thought was for the comfort of his men. He remarked to General Grant that they had been living for the last few days principally upon parched corn and were badly in need of rations. When Grant immediately suggested the sending of 25,000 rations to the surrendered soldiers, Lee's countenance showed that he felt greatly relieved.

General Lee possessed the stoic devotion to duty of a Spartan mother. The charge of nepotism never could be laid against him. He had three sons in the army, two of them generals and the other a captain. At one time President Jefferson Davis thought of sending General Lee to command the western army. The leader's son, General Custis Lee, was then on the personal staff of President Davis. The latter held young Lee in such high regard as a soldier that he decided to appoint him to succeed his father in command of the Army of Northern Virginia. He instructed another officer to visit General Robert E. Lee and ask him to assign General Custis Lee to that command. The old chieftain replied:

"I am very much obliged to Mr. Davis for his high opinion of Custis Lee, but he is an untried man in the field, and I cannot appoint him to that command. I cannot pass by my tried officers and take for that position a comparatively new man, especially when that man is my own son. Mr. Davis can make the assignment if he thinks proper. I certainly shall not do so."

A Federal general was confined in Libby prison. At the same time General W. H. F. Lee, another son of the commander, was a prisoner of war at Fortress Monroe, having been captured by the Federals while lying at his home severely wounded. The Federal general conceived the idea of having himself exchanged for the young Confederate, but General Lee declined to ask any favor for his own son that he could not ask for the humblest soldier in his army.

During the battle of Gettysburg General Lee turned aside a moment from pressing duties to rebuke an officer who was beating an unruly horse. On a train near Richmond a private Confederate soldier with a wounded arm in a sling on a cold day was trying vainly to put on his overcoat, using his teeth to aid his one good arm. An officer stepped forward from the other end of the car and helped the wounded man put on his coat, then buttoned it around him. The officer was Lee.

Hundreds of such stories are told. He was the soul of courtesy and consideration. Unbiased writers and orators have named him with Sir Philip Sidney. His place in history as a soldier is secure, while it cannot be doubted that in his own native state of Virginia, which he defended to his utmost strength and deserted not in the hour of her adversity, he shares with that other great Virginian to whom he was related by marriage the honor of being first in the hearts of his people.

Why Run the Hazard

of accepting personal security upon a bond, when corporate security is vastly superior?

The personal surety may be financially strong to-day and insolvent to-morrow; or he may die, and his estate be immediately distributed. In any event, recovery is dilatory and uncertain.

Because of its greater stability, the United States Government prefers Corporate Suretyship; and many firms require it of their bonded employees.

The American Surety Company, capitalized at $2,500,000, is the strongest Surety Company in existence, and the only one whose sole business is to furnish Suretyship Bonds. Apply to

The Directors of the YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION of Quincy, with a firm faith in the great value of the work which is being done for the young men and boys of our city, make their appeal for donations and bequests toward paying the mortgage indebtedness on the new Association Building. When the building is free from debt it will serve as an Endowment, as there is a goodly income from the dormitories.

Should the Donor prefer, such sum as might be given could be used as an Endowment for an educational class or classes, the Boys Department, or as a special fund in other ways, and could be designated with the name of the Donor.

The Treasurer, WILLIAM F. CUMMINGS, 7 Clive Street, Quincy, or the General Secretary, ERNEST G. GAY, will be happy to answer inquiries.

VALUE OF OLIVE OIL.

It Is Good Either Taken Internally or Used Externally.

Various forms and kinds of oils form a large stone in the foundation of beauty culture. Only the thoughtful observer realizes their importance and that they were indispensable to the belles of old time—to the Greeks and Romans and eastern beauties of ancient days.

Olive oil was the most luxurious, as well as the most common. It was taken internally and externally; they rubbed with it, bathed in it, drank it and used it in a hundred ways. Olive oil is still olive oil, though not so many people recognize its value except as an ingredient of salad dressing.

It is excellent for the digestion and may be taken in doses of from one to nine or more teaspoonfuls a day. Some people find it is distasteful taken clear. In that case it may be disguised in wine or lemonade or some pleasant drink, which of itself should agree with the individual's system.

Olive oil is a good flesh builder. If rubbed into the skin, it not only accomplishes this with faithful applications, but makes the skin soft and velvety. Being a vegetable oil, it has absolutely no tendency to stimulate a growth of hair.

Olive oil is used in a hundred other ways, but the sum of its virtues lies simply in this—it is gentle in its action, soothing, nourishing and strengthening.

THE ALFALFA PLANT.

It Was Cultivated In Asia Long Before the Christian Era.

Alfalfa is a native of southwestern Asia and five centuries prior to the Christian era had been carried to and cultivated in southern Europe. The Romans used and appreciated it as a feed for their chariot and war horses before the birth of Christ. From Italy, in which country its growth has been maintained continuously to the present day, it found its way into Spain and France.

The Spaniards during the Spanish invasion carried it into South America and Mexico. During the middle of the nineteenth century it was introduced into this country through California by the Chileans. Since then it has gradually spread eastward until today there is probably not a state or territory in the Union in which this oldest of cultivated forage plants is not grown to some extent. Where this plant has come to us from Spain, directly or indirectly, it is known as alfalfa, while if brought from other countries of Europe (and it is in isolated instances here and there) it is generally called lucerne, from a valley in Switzerland by the same name in which it grows well and in large quantities.—St. Louis Republic.

Pretty Names For Books.

The following are some of the curious titles of old English books:

"A Most Delectable Sweet Perfumed Nosegay For God's Saints to Smell At."

"Biscuit Baked In the Oven of Charity, Carefully Conserved For the Chickens of the Church, the Sparrows of the Spirit and the Sweet Swallows of Salvation."

"A Sigh of Sorrow For the Sinners of Zion Breathed Out of a Hole In the Wall of an Earthly Vessel Known Among Men by the Name of Samuel Fish" (a Quaker who had been imprisoned).

"Eggs of Charity Layed For the Chickens of the Covenant and Boiled With the Water of Divine Love. Take Ye Out and Eat."

"The Spiritual Mustard Pot to Make the Soul Sneeze With Devotion."

Most of these were published in the time of Cromwell.

Lawyers at Westminster.

Of the professions and trades represented in the house of commons the law holds first place, but in early days no class of men gave greater trouble than the lawyers, and many were the attempts made to keep them out of the house. James I., when the parliament of 1624-25 was to be chosen, advised electors "not to choose curious and wrangling lawyers, who may seek reputation by stirring needless questions." This and other antagonistic counsel in the past and present has, however, done little to stem the tide of lawyers which flows at each election into the house.—Strand Magazine.

The Ideal Life.

To live content with small means, to seek elegance rather than luxury and refinement rather than fashion, to be worthy, not respectable, and wealthy, not rich; to study hard, think quickly, talk gently, act frankly; to listen to stars, babes and sages with open heart; to bear all cheerfully, do all bravely, await occasions, hurry never—in a word, to let the spiritual, unbidden and unconscious grow up through the common.—William Henry Channing.

Those Good Old Days.

"Dear, I wish you would lay down your novel and come and button my shirt for me."

"Dear me, I never saw such a helpless man! I'd like to know how you buttoned your shirts before you were married."

"My shirts had buttons on them in those days."—Indianapolis Star.

Modest.

"Is that all the work you can do in a day?" asked the discontented employer.

"Well, suh," answered Erastus Pinkley, "I s'pose I could do mo', but I never was much of a hand foh showin' off."—Washington Star.

Absence of occupation is not rest; a mind quite vacant is a mind distressed.—Cowper.

Men's Club At Braintree

The men of All Souls' church have organized an unusually strong and promising club. Although the movement was initiated less than two weeks ago the club has a membership of 59 with every indication that the number will be increased to 75 before the first regular meeting.

The first call was for a gathering on Monday evening, December 31, and although the night was very stormy twenty-four men of the parish came together and listened to an outline of the plan by the minister of the church who spoke on behalf of a special committee which has been considering the plan for some months. This committee included Rev. F. R. Griffin, Mr. G. A. Arnold, Mr. D. G. Doane and Mr. W. S. Stone. After the general outline was given, every man present expressed his opinion of the project and the feeling being unanimously in favor of organization, the meeting then proceeded to form itself into "The Men's Club of All Souls' Church." A code of by-laws was adopted and then the meeting adjourned to Monday evening, January 7, 1907.

At this second meeting the attendance was thirty-eight while many who could not be present sent word expressing a desire to be enrolled as members.

The club perfected its organization by the election of the following officers:

President,—Mr. Herbert F. Kneeland.

Vice president,—Mr. Horace R. Drinkwater.

Treasurer,—Mr. George A. Arnold.

Secretary,—Mr. Alva Morrison.

Executive committee,—Mr. E. L. Emerson, Mr. Charles A. Boyce, Mr. Frank P. Rhoades, Mr. George E. Williams and Mr. H. W. Macomber.

The object of the club is to strengthen fraternal relations among the men connected with All Souls' church, and to stimulate an interest in questions of public welfare.

Meetings will be held each month from October to April inclusive and will include a supper and an address on some theme of general interest.

While the club is an organization allied with All Souls' church its membership is open to any man who is in sympathy with its spirit and purpose. Its purpose is the natural expression of a human, rational and progressive religious faith. It will aim to bring men into closer and sympathetic relations, to foster the spirit of good-will and generous hospitality. It will also aim to educate men along the lines of the great political, industrial, sociological and charitable movements of the day: to develop a finer ideal of citizenship and a higher sense of civic responsibility. For the attainment of these worthy aims, All Souls' church is peculiarly fortunate in its large and representative following of men. The club already includes teachers, lawyers, doctors, manufactures, mechanics, clerks, students, business men and others of various and well diversified occupations.

The club will be sustained by an annual membership fee of three dollars. Applications for membership may be made to the secretary or to any other officer of the club.

BLUEBEARD.

Two Different Stories as to Who Was the Original.

Like many of the other heroes of the nursery tales, Bluebeard once lived in the flesh and blood, if the old chronicler Holinshed, from whom Shakespeare got so much of his material, is to be believed. According to that writer, the original Bluebeard was Giles de Retz or de Raiz, marquis of Laval, who became marshal of France in 1429. He is described as an impious and debauched man, a devotee of the black art, who enticed young men and women to his castle and killed them in order to obtain innocent blood for his magical enchantments and who also murdered six or seven of his wives. His crimes were discovered, and he was burned at the stake in 1440 at Nantes.

According to an old French legend, however, the original Bluebeard lived in Britanny in the sixth century and was known as Count Conomer. After seven of his wives had disappeared he became enamored of Triphyna, the daughter of Count Guereck of Vannes. The wedding was celebrated at Vannes, and Conomer took his bride home.

Before a year had passed Triphyna noticed a change in her husband's manner, and, fearing the same fate that had met her predecessors, she fled from the castle, but was overtaken by Conomer, who struck off her head with a single blow. St. Gildas, by whom the unfortunate wife had been educated, happened to pass the spot soon after, and, seeing the body, he tenderly replaced the head and by prayer restored Triphyna to life. The story does not relate the end of Conomer.

PHYSICAL EXERCISE.

Boxing is an exercise which is not only of the most marked benefit in a purely physical way, but it is of the utmost value as a means of training the mental and moral faculties. One of the most unfortunate whimsicalities of our very whimsical day is the prejudice against boxing as a sport and exercise. There is no sport in which there is provided such splendid exercise for body and mind and spirit as in boxing.

The physical influence of boxing is superb. Every muscle and organ is brought into active use. So far as mentality is concerned, the perception, imagination, judgment, discretion, self confidence, aggressiveness and will are all brought into active and rapid use. The boxer who fails in perceiving his opponent's intention, who misses in judging the power or reach of his blow, who is lacking in self confidence, will power or aggressiveness, who fails for one moment to remember all the weak points of the man against whom he is working—that boxer is likely to fail, to lose what we all value—that is, reputation, public confidence and income. Among the many sports and games which are of value in training the mind I place boxing as by all means the most valuable.—W. R. C. Latson, M. D., in Outing Magazine.

An Extraordinary Migration.

One of the greatest mysteries to scientists, one for which there seems to be no reasonable explanation, is that concerning the migration of the lemming, or Norway rat. Instead of taking place once a year, these migrations occur only once in eleven years. When the time comes for the exodus the little animals journey westward from Scandinavia, allowing nothing to stop their movements, which virtually amount to a headlong flight. They swim the lakes and rivers and climb the highest mountains in incalculable numbers, devastating the whole country through which they travel. Naturalists attribute the movement to some inherited memory of a flight to escape an expected cataclysm, but this seems somewhat far fetched.

An Old Roman Mint.

A completely equipped Roman mint was discovered in a cave in the neighborhood of Kayosovar, Hungary. Besides crucibles, which still contained bronze, there were three dies for the production of gold coins, dies of silver, bronze and iron ore and 300 coins. The investigation made showed that the workshop dated from the first century of the Christian era. A number of neatly worked earrings, bracelets and other objects of bronze, as well as tools, such as hammers and tongs, were also found.

The Yankee In German Eyes.

The Yankees are a joyous people. They are before everything optimists. Why should they not be? They dwell in a spacious land full of the treasures of the earth. They are not overladen with knowledge, but learn for practice, and during the greater part of the year a blue heaven stretches over them. For all those reasons the Yankees may well laugh. The Americans are, moreover, born humorists.—Berlin Woche.

Her Cost.

Young Jobson is of an exceedingly statistical turn of mind. He got married lately, and at the railway station he had his wife weighed; then he took out a little hand book and made some calculations, muttering: "Wedding expenses, ——; railway expenses, ——; divide by ——. I say, my dear, you have cost me exactly fourpence halfpenny a pound."—London Tit-Bits.

Not That Strap.

"Why don't you get up and give that seat to your father, Bobby?" reprimanded the woman. "Doesn't it pain you to see him reaching for a strap?"

"Not on a train," chuckled Bobby.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Traitors are hated even by those they favor.—Tacitus.

BOSTON AMUSEMENTS.

BOSTON THEATRE.

When the curtain is drawn at the big Boston Theatre, New England's historic playhouse, on next Monday evening, January 14, the most elaborate, magnificent and historically correct production will be disclosed that has ever charmed and enthralled a theatre audience, for this will be the premiere of the Boston Theatre production of "Ben Hur." This amusement temple has one of the greatest stages of the world and the largest in this country. It has many facilities not possessed by any other stage, and these will be taxed to their utmost by the requirements of this new presentment of General Wallace's biblical romance. Without publicity, for nearly a year, scenic artists, electricians, mechanics, costumers and property makers have been busily engaged in the work rooms of Klaw & Erlanger originating, designing and creating their respective contributions to form this surpassing spectacle.

KEITH'S THEATRE.

Even greater than the sensation he made last season at Keith's is the stir Houdini is creating with the new tests he is presenting during his present limited engagement. He will perform a number of fresh feats next week. Arrangements are being made for special tests, due announcements of which will be made from time to time. A most admirable surrounding bill has been prepared for Houdini's second week, with plenty of comedy acts on the list. Louis Simon, Grace Gardner and company are to be seen in that uproariously funny farcelet, "The New Coachman;" Frank Bush will tell droll stories in his inimitable way; Dan Burke and his School Girls are to appear in one of the cutest of singing and dancing turns; the Sutcliffe Troupe, a great family of Scottish pipers, dancers and acrobats, are to make their first appearances in America, and Louise Raffin will exhibit her remarkably clever trained monkeys for the first time in Boston. Other entertainers on the program will be McCue and Cahill, remarkably good vocalists; the Musical Johnstons, the premier xylophonists; the Holdsworths, singers, banjoists and dancers; Nora Kelley, "The Dublin Girl;" Brazil and Brazil, acrobatic comedyists; the Alpha Trio, hoop rollers; the La Tour Sisters, chic comediennes, and the kinetograph.

MAJESTIC THEATRE.

Next Monday evening the Massachusetts Press Association will attend in body the performance of James T. Powers in "The Blue Moon," which enters upon the second and last week of its stay in Boston. During this last week the new policy of the Majestic of giving the mid-week matinee on Thursday in place of Wednesday as heretofore will be continued. "The Blue Moon" has been playing to packed houses for the past weeks, houses which it has won merely on its merits as an entertainment. There is no comedian on our stage today so well equipped to give a performance that will catch the amusement loving public as is James T. Powers. In "The Blue Moon" he has a role which gives full freedom to all his abilities for legitimate fun making. The secret of Powers success does not lie in buffoonery or low comedy antics, but in clear, concise and logical comedy. He wins his audience every time and always manages to make them see every joke and every ludicrous situation without apparent effort.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

Few plays of the present day have aroused the lasting interest that has been the award of "Leah Kleschna." Produced originally by Mrs. Fiske with extraordinary success, it was later given by Leah Kleschna Aswell in London, and both in America and London it has won the hearty commendation of press and public. Its title character is a girl of the people, and its dramatic theme is her struggle against the unhappiness of her early surroundings as the daughter and accomplice of a professional thief, until she merges honorable and pureminded under the influence of friends who bring out the latent good in her. Mrs. Fiske made one of the most striking characterizations of her career in the role of this unfortunate Leah Kleschna.

HOLLIS STREET THEATRE.

One of the most important theatrical events this year in New England, will be the engagement at the Hollis Street theatre in Boston for two weeks beginning Monday, January 14, of the eminent English actor, Mr. Forbes-Robertson and the charming American actress, Miss Gertrude Elliott. The first week will be devoted to the presentation for the first time in New England of George Bernard Shaw's delightful comedy "Cæsar and Cleopatra." This, the latest of the Shaw plays to be produced in America, was given for the first time in English on any stage at the New Amsterdam theatre, New York, where it has just concluded a long, auspicious and successful run, and from which it comes direct and intact to Boston. Mr. Shaw was first recognized as a practical as well as a most amusing dramatist in America, his plays first receiving general production in this country after he had endeavored for years to gain recognition in his own, London, and had at last been compelled to publish his plays. "Cæsar and Cleopatra" appearing under his general title of "Plays for Puritans." While it was written especially for Mr. Robertson and Miss Elliot, neither found opportunity to appear in it until Klaw & Erlanger brought them to America for the precise and only purpose of having this most delightful of all the Shaw plays given a public hearing. Since the time of its presentation it has proved a positive delight. The second week will be devoted to "Hamlet," "The Merchant of Venice," "Mice and Men." The arrangement of the second week's repertoire will be announced later.

CHURCH WITHOUT DEBT

Collections at St. John's Church Amounted to $13.007.75

St. John's Catholic church is now free from debt. The Quincy correspondent of the Globle says: The announcemeat was made Sunday in the reading of the financial statement of the past year which Rev. Fr. Coan makes to his parishioners at the beginning of every year. The achievement was noteworthy on his part, inasmuch as no special collections have been taken for the purpose of freeing the church from debt, the contributions consisting of the usual pew rents and a church debt collection of 25 cents a month.

The total collections for the year, including $660.50 from collections ordered by the archbishop and $1472.19 from pew rents from the Houghs Neck church, amounted to $13,007.75, and total expenditures, including the payment of $4000 on the remaining principal of the mortgage and $73.75 interest upon it, were $10,839.42, leaving a balance, over and above all indebtedness paid, of $2168.33. In addition to $4000 paid on the mortgage of St. John's church, there was also paid a note of $824.43 on the Houghs Neck church.

Rev. Fr. Coan came to Quincy as the second pastor of the present St. John's church three years ago last September, and during those three years he has paid off a debt of $13,000 without any special collections. In reading the statement Rev. Fr. Coan said the church was freed from debt three months ago, but that he delayed the announcement until he could give the entire financial condition of the parish for the past year. He thanked his parishioners for the cordial support given him and he hoped the same good feeling would continue.

The present St. John's church was enlarged from an older structure in 1873, the cornerstone having been laid in November, 1872, by Archbishop Williams. The first pastor was the late Rev. Fr. Francis A. Friguglietti, who had been assistant to the late Rev. Fr. James Sullivan, pastor of the older church. Rev. Fr. Sullivan was an uncle of Rev. Fr. Ambrose F. Roche, the present pastor of St. Mary's church, West Quincy. Rev. Fr. Friguglietti was pastor till his death three years ago last June, and Rev. Fr. Coan came as pastor three months later. Since then Rev. Fr. Coan has won his way to the hearts of all his parishioners and is held in high esteem by many not of his congregation.

Before Rev. Fr. Coan came here, West Quincy, Atlantic and Braintree, which had been parts of St. John's parish, were set off in parishes by themselves. Rev. Fr. Ambrose F. Roche was appointed pastor of St. Mary's church in West Quincy, Rev. Fr. John P. Cuffe went to the Sacred Heart church in Atlantic as pastor and Rev. Fr. Mathew F. McDonnell was appointed as the first pastor of St. Francis' church, Braintree.

F. H. Crane Passes Away

Francis Henry Crane, one of Quincy's well known business men who retired a few years ago, passed away at his home 146 Elm street Sunday evening, aged 69 years. Mr. Crane has been in poor health for upwards of ten years, but it was not until recently that he has been confined to his home. For the past week he has failed rapidly and but slight hopes have been entertained for his recovery.

Mr. Crane was born in Weymouth, Sept. 12, 1837, and was the son of Francis and Mary Crane. He received his education in the public schools, after which he entered business with his father in the marketing line under the name of F. Crane & Son.

In 1892 he came to Quincy and bought out the grain business of Edward Russell and with his two sons Frank W. and H. Everett formed the firm of F. Crane & Sons. In 1898 the firm built a large grain elevator at South Quincy on the line of the railroad. They have offices at Quincy and South Quincy.

Nov. 19, 1863, he married Miss N. Delia Perry, who survives him with two sons and grandchildren. Funeral services will be held from his late residence Wednesday.

Vehan Bedigian fell into the hands of the police again on Sunday for violation of the liquor law. Bedigian was in court last December and fined $50. A week ago he was fined $100 for second offence. He appealed and being unable to furnish bonds was sent to jail. Friday he was bailed out and Sunday afternoon he again fell into the hands of Officers Larkin and Phillips. The police took him to the woods off Winter street where they had been informed that he had some bottled goods hidden.

When they arrived they found that parties had been there and taken away all but one full bottle of whiskey and a partly filled bottle. These the police confiscated. Bedigian was arraigned in court this morning.

Accident.

William Wilson of Squantum street was quite badly hurt last week. Mr. Wilson was passing the new school building on Botolph street and Newbury avenue when the sudden unloading of a heavy load of lumber frightened his horse and Mr. Wilson was hurled violently to the ground. At first it was thought the accident would assume a very serious nature, but fortunately it has proved that aside from many bruises and a bad shaking up no other injury was done, however Mr. Wilson was confined to his bed for a few days in consequence of the fall.

Quincy Coliseum.

There is always something new and interesting at the Coliseum. The very best moving pictures that can be had will be seen tonight, tomorrow, Wednesday and Saturday. Also tomorrow night there will be a big 2 mile race to decide the championship of Quincy. The manager will present the winner with a handsome gold medal finely engraved for this race.

☞Representative Luce, who is supposed to know more about the election laws of the State than anybody else, has introduced a bill in the House for a single headed commission, to be named by the Governor, to codify and revise those laws. There is need of it. They should be simplified, and brought nearer to the understanding of the voter, leaving no doubt as to their meaning or their application. They are not as perfect as they might be, and a careful revision would improve them. There are several points yet to be covered to bring the laws up to a standard of excellence that has been the ideal of those who wrought the changes thus far. The bill ought to go through.—Lynn Item.

CHOOSING A WIFE

Some of Tests Dr. Perkins Would Apply In Selection

Sunday evening was given the second of a series of lectures at the Universalist church on "The Family" by the pastor, Rev. Dr. Perkins,—The subject was the "Choosing of a Wife."

The quotation used as a text was from Sinonides, a Greek poet, who was born 556 years before Christ, and had among others distinctions that of being the first poet to receive pay for his writings:—

"Of earthly goods the best is a good wife,
A bad, the bitterest curse of human life."

The belief was that every man should chose his own wife and no one else should. The questions discussed were whether a man should marry a maiden or a widow? Should a man marry a divorced woman? Is it safe to marry a flirt?

Both sides of these questions were well presented and were finally summed up in the question of love adequately tested. The tests given by Joseph Cook and quoted, were:

Willing to renew an engagement once supposed to be broken.

To be willing to belong to each other and no one else.

Transmutation of self sacrifice.

Interchange of eyes in many moods.

Opinion of friends who are well acquainted with all circumstances. This being the method in most common practice in eastern countries.

The effect of absence, for a time, or of rivalry.

The knowledge of temperment of each other.

Knowledge of the position in life you expect to fill before you choose your wife.

The consent of the other powerful passions.

The opportunity to know the worst of each other.

These tests were ably presented and discussed. It seems that theory and fact do not always agree.

A test further added that of beauty. That although the face might not be pretty, the woman that a man should chose for his wife should appear to him as the most beautiful of all women in the world. But that the true tests of affinity cannot be fully made before marriage.

The subject for the lecture next Sunday evening will be "The Choosing of a Husband."

Break in Long Married Life

Mrs. John J. Sherman passed away this morning at the home of her son, Dr. C. T. Sherman of Greenleaf street, where she has resided several years.

Mrs. Sherman is survived by her partner in life for 62 years, John J. Sherman and two sons, Dr. C. T. Sherman of Quincy and Mr. S. A. Sherman of Providence.

Mr. and Mrs. Sherman were both born in 1826, Mr. Sherman at Fairfield, Vt., and Miss Martha E. Tyler at North Brookfield, Mass. They were married at the age of 18 years, and for fifty years lived in North Brookfield. Of the eight children who blessed the union only two are living. They had eight grandchildren, five in Quincy and three in Providence.

Mrs. Sherman enjoyed good health until recently. On Sept, 1904, Mr. and Mrs. Sherman observed their 60th wedding anniversary and it was an enjoyable occasion. Many friends called and others sent congratulatory letters. Miss Alice Claflin read a poem.

AN APPROPRIATION

in 1907 for a

NEW CODDINGTON

GOOD AFTERNOON.

If Quincy had no municipal debt, it could make appropriations to the amount of $100,000 annually for improvements and pay for the same in the tax levy of the year, as the city now pays about $100,000 annually for maturing debt and interest. Then it would not be difficult to build a schoolhouse, if necessary, each year. It would be an ideal condition. Now an enormous sum goes to pay interest which does not benefit the taxpayers or the city.

There is a possibility that Mayor Thompson may announce his appointments at tonight's meeting of the City Council. The probabilities, however, are that they will not be announced until the regular meeting of the City Council next Monday evening. There are many rumors of possible changes but the Mayor has dropped no hint as yet of what he intends to do.

One of Norfolk County's represesntatives in the Legislature, Joseph Walker of Brookline, will be president of the Republican Club of Massachusetts. Mr. Walker's experience on the Republican State Committee and in the Legislature admirably equip him for the position.

It is expected that the new fire alarm boxes between School street and Russell park will be cut into the circuits ready for service this week.

It is well to again call attention to the fact that the meetings held last week in Memorial church, Atlantic, were so healthful—if the word may be used to mental stimulation as well as to physical—that Rev. Jason G. Miller has decided to continue them every evening this week.

BURDEN OF WRONG

Still Rests With Crushing Weight Upon Congo People

PLEA FOR DEFINITE STEPS

Foreign Missions Board Asks President and Senate and King Eot England to Do Something to Ameliorate Terrible Conditions

Philadelphia, Jan. 14.—At a meeting of the conference of the Foreign Missions Board of the United States and Canada, held in this city, it was unanimously agreed to forward to President Roosevelt, the United States senate and King Edward an appeal on behalf of the stricken people of the Congo State. The appeal follows:

"The conference of the foreign missions boards of the United States and the Dominion of Canada would most respectfully and earnestly bring to you an appeal on behalf of the stricken people of the Congo State. We do this in the name of 40 missionary organizations whose work is prosecuted in all sections of the world, and we are persuaded that the petition interprets faithfully the sentiment of their consituency of upwards of 20,000,000 Christian men and women. We are not forgetful that recognition has been given by both governments to international duty in relation to this unhappy people, but the heavy burden of wrong continues to rest with crushing weight upon the Congo people and we recognize that the first definite step toward just international action has not yet been taken.

"We speak with deep conviction concerning this issue, because we are intimately associated with many residents of the Congo State by whom the conditions to which we refer have been disclosed. We are constrained to accept their testimony; we know that the earth does not hold men of more sensitive honor or more self-sacrificing devotion.

"But you will not need to be reminded that other testimony than ours has been given to the character and the credibility of these witnesses. A commission selected by King Leopold himself has said of them and of their fellow missionaries in the Congo State that they constitute for the native the sole representative of equity and justice. Of their testimony, dreadful as it has been, the commission has declared that they found it to be 'supported by a multitude of witnesses' and 'established by a mass of evidence and official reports.'

"The request which we, like the great company of petitioners of both governments outside our constituency are urging, is obviously fair to all interests, since it asks only for such impartial action as shall give authoritative revelation of actual facts and insure correction of such wrongs as shall be disclosed. We submit that the simple issue thus presented involves a primary test of national and international honor, and that longer withholding the manifestation of this measure of international concern for these wards of nations would leave upon all powers responsible for it a lasting reproach.

"We would earnestly urge that no device of the ruler of the Congo State shall be allowed to cloud the issue of international responsibility for immediate ascertainment of conditions and correction of wrongs. The issue, as you are well aware, is not of motive, but of fact, and the duty of guardianship binding the powers to protection of the people of the territory of the Congo basin is independent of political relations.

"Moreover, we would respectfully urge our conviction that if the king is a trustee he cannot transfer his trust, except by international sanction. If the convening of an international conference was important in the opening of the Congo territory it would seem that a conference for review of the issue in all its phases is indispensable for wise and just dealing now.

"In the name of humanity, of international justice, of regard for the primal rights of man, we would ask that you will use the full power reposed in governments by the supreme ruler in the interest of an immediate discharge by the nations of their responsibility of guardianship over the remnant of the humble people who, a generation ago, without choice of their own, were brought out of their isolation into relations with the world of man and states."

ALLEGED BUNCO MEN

Washington Doctor Says They Tried to Get $5000 From Him

Washington, Jan. 14.—What is charged by the police to be a scheme to defraud a Washington physician out of $5000 led to the arrest of Frank F. Homans and David T. Tanner on the charge of conspiracy.

The men were taken into custody in an up-town hotel after Dr. Thomas J. Kemp of this city had reported to the police that Tanner had made a proposition to him to enter into a "deal to put a New York gambling house out of business."

Dr. Kemp declares that the men assured him that by investing $5000 he could easily win from $200,000 to $300,000 within a week. The physician says he did not put up any money, but encouraged the men in order to secure evidence.

The "get-rich-quick scheme," according to Kemp's report to the police, was that Kemp was to pay $5000 and Tanner, who claimed to be manager of the gambling house, was "to tip Homans and the physician off on the run of the cards in a faro game." Tanner and Homans were locked up. Both men deny the charges.

Weather Sharps Were Mistaken

Pittsburg, Jan. 14.—The dangerous flood stage anticipated in the rivers here by the United States weather authorities failed to materialize and the stage of water is stationary after reaching a little over 20 feet, no serious damage being done. Hundreds of industries and thousands of families made preparations for the flood by moving all goods to places of safety, while the police department had hundreds of skiffs in readiness to convey the people residing in the flood district from their homes.

Charges Cancelled by Death

New York, Jan. 13.—Frank H. Barlow of Boston, 22 years old, who was arrested recently on the charge of embezzlement, died of consumption without having had even a preliminary arraignment. It was charged that while employed here as a cashier by the Adams Express company Barlow took $200 of the company's money. He surrendered to the authorities at Boston. On his arrival at New York in the custody of a detective, Barlow fell in a faint and he was removed to a hospital.

Adulterated Food From France

Washington, Jan. 14.—Olive oils and wines coming from France to the United States are adulterated and misbranded, states Consul Murphy of Bordeaux, in a report to the bureau of manufactures. False brands and fictitious names are used and authorized by the laws of France. French packers of preserved fruits and vegetables and wine merchants are also addicted to using their proper names only for their goods of first quality.

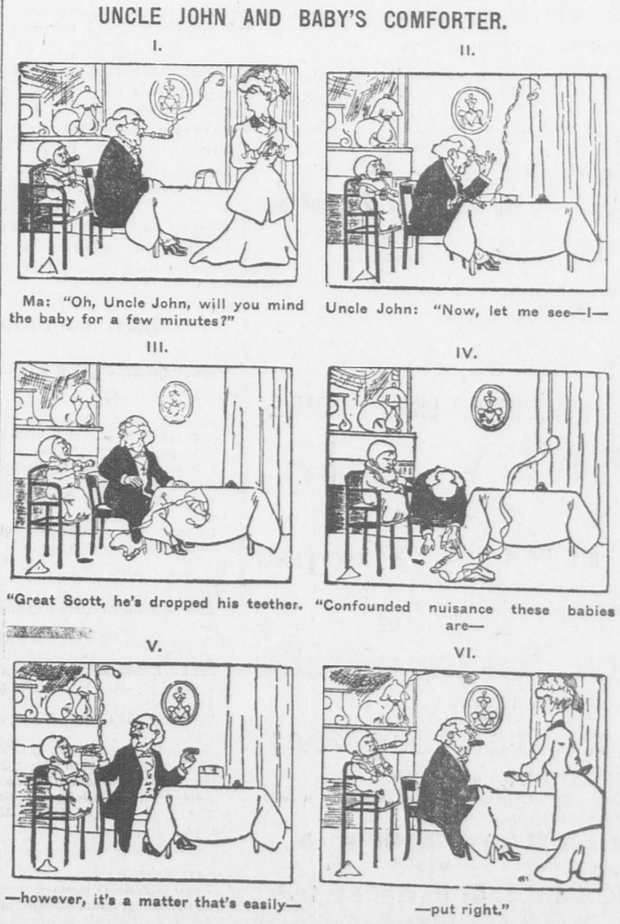
UNCLE JOHN AND BABY'S COMFORTER.



ADMITS HER IDENTITY

Clara Bosse Held at New York on Charge of Being a Thief

New York, Jan. 14.—Clara Bosse, formerly of Chicago, where, according to the police, she is now wanted for forgery, and who, as "Margaret Maillard," has attained some notoriety here and caused police headquarters considerable anxiety, was arrested yesterday on the charge of being a house thief. The police allege that when taken into custody at her apartments Miss Bosse admitted her identity and named a man for whom the police are looking as her accomplice in questionable practices.

Miss Bosse last fall interested the police in a search for her father, who, she said, had left his Muncie, Ind., home because of his daughter's engagement to a man of whom he did not approve. On Christmas eve the woman exhibited a telegram purporting to come from her father and she accepted the congratulations of the police upon a family reunion soon to be held at Muncie.

Nothing more was heard of the woman until a few nights ago, when she was found bound and gagged in a lonely spot on the outskirts of the Bronx. She said that she had been attacked and robbed by four Italians and subsequently in court claimed to identify one of two Italian suspects who had been arrested, as one of her assailants. The prisoners had many witnesses to prove an alibi, but so convincing was the woman's story that the prisoners were held in $3000 each for further hearing.

In her confession Miss Bosse is alleged to have said that her purpose was to "shake down" the Italians who, she was satisfied, would make good the $26 of which she asserted she had been robbed. Her arrest was brought about by a man who claimed to have recognized her photograph as it appeared in the papers as that of a woman who had robbed his house.

Long and Unprofitable Trip

Halifax, Jan. 14.—After a stormy passage from Barbados, during which she had her sails badly torn, schooner W. H. Baxter has arrived in port. The schooner is completing a voyage which she started in October last, when she sailed from Philadelphia with a cargo of managanese for Sydney, N. S. The vessel put into Ship Harbor, N. S., on Nov. 2 through stress of weather, sailed again on Nov. 4 and was not heard of again until Nov. 22, when she turned up at Barbados with her sails gone and leaking. After repairing and securing new sails she started north again on Dec. 22.

MERGER OF CITIES

Chelsea Is Likely to be Swallowed by Boston

PROJECT TAKES A START

Hub's Mayor Cherishes Dream of Community of Interests Which Will Take In Several Cities In Close Proximity

Boston, Jan. 14.—A delegation of Chelsea citizens have called upon Mayor Fitzgerald, asking him to aid the furtherance of the plan to merge Chelsea with Boston. The mayor, who is heartily in favor of a greater Boston plan, informed them that the matter is of too deep importance to be passed upon without careful consideration, and that he could not express himself till he had weighed the matter carefully.

Chelsea people, who are very much in earnest in the matter, have formally organized, and it is stated that the chief aim of the newly organized Enterprise Associates is to prepare legislation which shall bring the matter to a head quickly.

They hope that within two years Chelsea will be part of Boston, coming into the union as did Brighton, Dorchester, Roxbury and East Boston.

Some present members of the legislature, who have long cherished the hope that Greater Boston will soon have centralized power in the city proper, with Cambridge, Somerville, Chelsea, Everett, Malden, and in fact all the metropolitan district, as part of the new, great city, are said to be greatly interested in this initial project.

The mayor said last night: "I approve the Greater Boston idea. It seems to me that where the metropolitan district practically has a common water, lighting and sewerage system it ought to have centralized authority.

"So far as Chelsea is concerned, it seems as if the men who visited me are on the right track, so far as the idea goes. The details will require careful preparation. More than half the citizens of Chelsea are employed in Boston, and it looks as if they should have a voice in shaping the conditions under which they labor.

"On the other hand, the people of Boston who furnish the money that pays the Chelsea men ought to have some part in the direction of affairs in Chelsea.

"Greater Boston is bound to come. We ought to have a community of interests, where our interests all are in common. Perhaps there would be equal apportionment of taxation and civic burdens under a Greater Boston charter, but perhaps it is too much to hope that the tax-dodger can be eliminated.

"New York has progressed amazingly under its new charter. The mayor is the head of authority, and is directly responsible for his administration. His 'cabinet' is composed of the borough presidents.

"Thus, if Chelsea and the other cities were in Greater Boston they would have their chosen representative in the final council of the great city. There would be vast economy all round, and the state would not bleed the cities as it does now.

"It is expected that legislation, either an opening wedge to allow the people of Chelsea to vote on the matter, or to pave the way for a Greater Boston referendum, will be introduced very soon."

It was taken to the morgue and the coroner is investigating the murder theory.

POISON BERRIES BY MAIL

Evident Attempt to Poison Inmates of an Orphan Asylum

Burlington, Vt., Jan. 14.—No clue to the sender, nor any hint of a motive, can be discovered by the police in their investigation concerning a box of mountain ash berries sent to the St. Joseph's orphanage, this city. The berries were positively identified as the fruit of the mountain ash, known to possess poisonous properties.

The arrival by mail of the berries at the orphanage asylum not only by itself gave rise to a mystery, but at the same time recalled the fact that in October, 1905, three little girls, inmates of the institution, died from poison received by them in some strange manner and that 17 other orphans were gravely ill.

The berries were encased in a pasteboard box with a paper wrapping and the parcel bore the postmark of Lyndonville, Vt. It bore, also, the label of a chemical manufacturing house of Boston. There was nothing to indicate the name of the sender or the reason for forwarding the berries to the asylum. Recalling the mysterious deaths at the asylum in 1905, the authorities at the institution turned the box of berries over to the state laboratory of hygiene in order that the berries might be analyzed.

Scarlet Fever Spreading

Boston, Jan. 14.—The scarlet fever epidemic in this city and its vicinity has increased considerably during the past few days, but with apparently few fatalities. The authorities in this city have found the accommodations at the local hospitals inadequate to care for the cases and arrangements have been made for reopening the smallpox hospital and for using some of the polling booths used at the last election. It is estimated that there are over a thousand cases of scarlet fever in this city.

Growth of Machinists' Union

Boston, Jan. 14.—A remarkable increase in membership in machinists' unions was reported at the annual convention of the district council of eastern New England held here. Many cities show increases during the year of nearly 100 percent. William H. Johnstone of Providence was re-elected president.

HIGH ON A BEACH

Freighter Onondaga Left Her Course Off Cape Cod

TWO MILES OUT OF WAY

Captain Misjudged Vessel's Position and Hauled Inshore to Pick Up Lights, Which Lifesavers Say Were Visible

Chatham, Mass., Jan. 14.—Straying from the beaten track, the Clyde line freight steamer Onondaga, Captain Bunnell, Boston for Charleston and Jacksonville, fetched up on Orleans beach yesterday. Although surrounded within 15 hours by a good sized wrecking fleet, the chances of the vessel's laying her iron bones beside the thousand or more other Cape Cod wrecks are considered about even. At low water the Onondaga is nearly high and dry.

The Onondaga left Boston late Saturday afternoon with a miscellaneous cargo for the southern states. The storm had cleared before the end of the cape was reached and Highland light flashed on the steamer's deck as she speeded on to the southward. The storm had left an unusually heavy roll, so that the outside of the cape was fringed with a broad band of white which marked the shore even in the darkness.

The south patrol of the Orleans station had just exchanged checks with the north patrol of the Old Harbor station, at 1:30 o'clock Sunday morning, when he sighted both side lights of a vessel and knew that she was heading straight for the beach. He burned his signal, but it was too late. He immediately called up both stations on the telephone beach line. Captain Doane, with the Old Harbor crew, and Captain Charles, with the men of the Orleans station, were soon on the scene, and a line was shot across the vessel. No one came ahore nor was any attempt made to haul the breeches buoy aboard. The lifesavers waited on the beach until dawn disclosed the identity of the vessel. During the forenoon the incoming tide and a heavy sea drove the Onondaga gradually up the beach and at the same time twisted her stern around until she was heading about north.

Captain Bunnell said that he did not see the Nausett lights when he came by them, although he had made Highland light an hour or two before. He judged his vessel to be a considerable distance to the south, and hauled inshore to make a land fall or pick up some light. The lifesavers state that the night was clear and that the Chatham lights and even the little lights on the Pollock Rip shoal lightship, eight miles off to the southeast, could be seen. The course around Cape Cod is a familiar one and vessels cover a well beaten track along the cape from Highland light to Nausett lights, when their course takes them gradually off shore to the entrance of Pollock Rip slue, which is marked by the Pollock Rip shoal lightship. The Onondaga was about two miles inside the regular course when she struck the beach.

The greater portion of the inhabitants of this portion of the cape spent Sunday on the beach conjecturing how a full-powered vessel could have wandered two miles off the course in the 15-mile run from Nausett lights to Pollock Rip shoal lightship.

The Onondaga is nearly new, having been built in Philadelphia in 1906. She is 2155 tons net burden, 276 feet over all, 40 feet beam, and 19 feet draught. Her engines have an indicated horsepower of 5000, and she carries a crew of 28 men.

Burglars Used Their Guns

New York, Jan. 14.—Patrick Conelly, 60 years old, and his son-in-law, Clarence Hilleck, were shot by two burglars who attempted to break into their home in Mamaroneck. One of the bullets pierced Conelly's lungs and he is in a serious condition. The younger man will recover, as the bullet struck a rib and glanced off. Conelly and Hilleck had attacked the burglars on the veranda, where the latter were discovered while forcing a window.

They Didn't Care to Take Any Chances

IT was a new bank in a new town in Colorado. As the "institution" opened for business in the morning a crowd of 200 men gathered, and when the banker asked what was wanted the man who had been appointed spokesman replied:

"It's jest this, Jim. We can't make out that monthly statement you got out yesterday."

"What's wrong with it?"

"She says deposits amount to $7,000 and cash on hand $9,000."

"Well, that's correct, and I can't see where you have any fault to find," said the president.

"Yes, but the boys don't go much on figgers. Figgers kin be twisted all around, you know. Have you got them 'ere $9,000 handy by?"

"I have."

"Waal, won't you jest stand up on a chair and wave that money in the air a few times and let the boys see the color of it? Don't want to put you to any special trouble, you know, but the crowd kinder wants to feel sure about it."

The banker got the money from the safe and followed the suggestion and asked if they were satisfied.

"That's all right," replied the spokesman. "We ain't much on figgers, but we know money when we see it. Them deposits is $7,000, and you've got $9,000 to pay 'em. That's chuck up and no discount."

"Anything else?"

"Jest one little trifle. It's kinder got around town that you are goin' to Montana tomorrer. Before you start jest count them $9,000 into the safe, lock 'er up as tight as a drum and then call in two or three of the boys to watch 'er while you're gone. We ain't showin' any lack of confidence, Jim, but we is givin' you a p'inter on how to run a bank in this town without gettin' yer neck into a slipknot."—Detroit Free Press.

One day mamma told Milton that he was older than the baby and must let the baby have his toys if he wanted them because the baby was the littlest.

Milton was very good and went in search of other amusements all day.

The next morning we heard a cry from the children, and, going to find the cause, Milton was found endeavoring to collect all the toys in the room and at the same time keep the baby away from them. Upon inquiring the trouble Milton said:

"I let him have my toys and be the littlest yesterday, and now I'm going to be the littlest today."—Little Chronicle.

The Girl From the West

By OTHO B. SENGA

Copyright, 1906, by C. H. Sutcliffe

Paul Alger looked firmly into Mrs. Elliott's face.

"You don't realize what you're asking, Aunt Ruth," irritatedly.

"I'm not asking," calmly. "I'm simply telling you what I expect of you. The girl will be here tomorrow. My will is made with these plans in view. If you don't fall in with them, you're disinherited absolutely; that's all."

Alger rose.

"Aunt Ruth, you've been more than a mother to me, and I'd like to do everything I can to please you, but this is expecting too much. I must reserve the right to select my own wife."

Mrs. Elliott was stubbornly silent, and after a moment the young fellow said earnestly, "Aunt Ruth, give the money to the girl if you want to, but don't let her come between you and me!"

"Don't talk to me, Paul," impatiently. "I shall give it to you two—together or not at all!"

"Who is this girl," Alger demanded with heat, "that she should be thrust upon me in this style?"

"She is the daughter of my husband's brother. When this girl and my Frederick were little children the brothers promised each other that the children should marry when they were old enough. Frederick died, and after your mother's death I adopted you. You have taken Frederick's place in everything else. You must in this. Promise, Paul!"

"It is utterly impossible!" firmly.

"Paul," temptingly, "she is very pretty."

Alger smiled and shook his head.

"And, Paul," playing her trump card, "she is musical."

Music was Alger's passion.

"Yes?" indifferently.

"Yes," emphatically. "She plays the violin."

"What insufferable presumption!" impatiently. "A girl from the wild west, brought up on a cattle ranch, you said. Doubtless she can ride a broncho or lasso a steer, but she shouldn't meddle with the violin. She probably never heard of Bach or Mendelssohn and wouldn't know a sonata from a sandwich. Aunt, I can fancy her bringing her violin in her arms and playing for the delectation of the other passengers in the Pullman. Ugh!"

"You refuse, then?"

"Most decidedly."

"Very well," icily. "I accept your decision as final."

The next day Alger from his desk in the library saw the girl as she entered the adjoining room, where Mrs. Elliott waited to greet her. She was tall and graceful, with a high bred air of ease that surprised him. Her voice was clear and well modulated.

"Upon my word," he muttered, "I expected her manner of speech to be a cross between a cowboy's yell and an Indian warwhoop."

He saw the servant come in with a violin case.

"Will madam have this in the music room or"—

"Oh, no; here." And Vera held out her hands.

"You brought this yourself, Vera?" Mrs. Elliott's tone held the slightest suggestion of annoyance.

"In my arms literally," laughed Vera.

Alger in his dim corner smiled.

Vera gently placed the case on the floor and lifted out the instrument as tenderly as a mother lifts her babe from its cradle.

"Oh, Aunt Ruth," fervently, "when you see it you will understand—my beautiful violin!"

She clasped it to her bosom with a gesture of tenderness. The beauty of the girl, the unaffected grace of her pose and her evident artistic appreciation stirred Alger to instant admiration.

He met the girl at dinner. She gave him one long, earnest look that he felt at once an inquiry and a challenge, and then she directed her conversation to Mrs. Elliott.

Alger was piqued. He was accustomed to more attention from young women. She related some of the incidents of her trip.

"We had a concert each evening. There were three girls in our Pullman coming to Boston to study music. They sang well."

"And you played, I suppose, Miss Elliott?" Alger could not forbear the question.

She turned her glance upon him briefly. "Oh, I scraped my little best," coolly.

Alger felt the rebuff, but he shot a triumphant glance at his aunt.

As the evening progressed Alger began to wish that he could win some pleasant look or word from the girl and to deeply resent his inability to do so.

"Will you play for us, Miss Elliott?" he asked, more humbly than was his habit.

She was about to decline, but Mrs. Elliott added quickly: "For me, Vera, dear. I am so anxious to hear you."

The instrument with which Vera returned to the room caught Alger's discriminating eye at once.

"Where did you get this, Miss Elliott?" almost abruptly as he recognized its rarity and value.

"It is a gift from my master. He had owned it for many years. He has also a Guarnerius and an Amati. But this was his 'sweetheart.' He always called it so."

"A master of the violin does not present the instrument he loves best a Stradivarius almost beyond price—to a pupil who merely 'scrapes,'" thought Alger.

"Did he have many pupils, Miss Elliott?" experimentally.

"No one but myself. He is old and can no longer play. Age has stiffened his fingers. But he played once—oh, how he could play! He taught me from a little child, and when I could play—to please him—he gave me this."

"Your teacher was a German?" tentatively.

"A Belgian," quietly. "Now you shall hear the voice of the Stradivarius."

She tuned the strings and played. There was certainty of chord fingering, a strength, an almost manliness, combined with emotional warmth, about her interpretation of the difficult Bach sonata that amazed Alger.

"Bach's D Minor Sonata is not for amateurs," he said gravely to his aunt. "Miss Elliott's gift is beyond question. She would rank with the great violinists of the present day."

"I think John possessed some musical ability," replied Mrs. Elliott serenely.

The girl raised her bow with an indescribable gesture of reverence. "My mother," proudly, "was a De Beriot. My master is my grandfather. I did not wish to seem to boast. He is Francis Auguste de Beriot."

As the days went by he found himself desperately in love with the girl and unable to win from her anything more than the most chilling courtesy. He had not even the satisfaction of confiding in Mrs. Elliott. Once when he tried to speak of Vera, meaning to confess his love for the girl, his aunt interrupted him coldly: "Say no more, Paul. I accepted your decision as final, you will remember, and a later will leaves all I possess to the Home For Aged Men."

She swept angrily from the room. Alger stood for a moment as if stunned; then he laughed aloud. "That's good news! Now there's no money in the way, and I'll move heaven and earth to win the loveliest girl that ever"—

"'Came out of the west,'" quoted a merry voice, and the portiers parted and Vera stepped from the window seat into the room.

Alger sprang forward hastily.

"Vera," eagerly, "you've known all the while that I love you"—

"A girl from the west, brought up on a cattle ranch?" she questioned, holding him back with her hand on his breast.

"I don't care where you're from, or anything else, if you'll only say you love me, Vera," pleadingly.

"A girl who doesn't know a sonata from a sandwich?" mischievously.

"Vera, forgive me for that and say you love me."

"Paul," seriously, "I've loved you ever since I was a little girl. See!" She drew a locket from her bosom and pressed back the cover.

Alger gazed in bewilderment. It was his own face that looked up at him.

"Aunt Ruth sent that to my father. I claimed it as mine and have worn it always."

"Vera," with his arms about her, "why have you been so cruel to me when I've tried so hard"—

"I feared you might propose to me to please Aunt Ruth and—and because of the money."

"Here, here! What's all this about?" Aunt Ruth's voice sounded harshly at the door.

They turned toward her together.

"Vera has promised to marry me, Aunt Ruth."

"And my latest will"— She fairly hurled the words at them.

"We don't mind!" they cried together rapturously.

—"was never signed," added Aunt Ruth in a changed voice, and they heard her laughing as she softly closed the door and left them to their happiness.

Burns and Picric Acid.

Dr. Thierry, one of the surgeons in attendance at the Paris Charity hospital, was in the habit of using picric acid as an antiseptic, and his hands were therefore impregnated with the solution. One day in lighting a cigarette a portion of the burning match fell on his hand; but, instead of feeling it, he did not notice the slightest pain. A short time afterward, while in the act of sealing a valuable letter, a portion of the burning wax stuck to his finger, and, though it cauterized the skin, it was no more painful to him than if it had fallen on an armored glove of steel. This curious lack of feeling set the doctor's wits to work, and he soon arrived at the conclusion that the acid had, to use his own words, acted upon the tissues and tightened them. He then began a series of experiments in treating burns with a saturated solution of picric acid. In every case he treated all pain was instantly suppressed.—Philadelphia Record.

"Chap" as a Man.

Not until the end of the sixteenth century did "chapman," a trader or peddler, get contracted into "chap' even in vulgar speech, and even then for a long time it did not advance beyond the meaning of buyer or customer. In this sense Steele speaks of "hunting after chaps," and Wilkes writes that "perhaps Mrs. Mead would buy, but she would be a hard chap." "Chap" seems to have reached its ultimate stage as a casual equivalent of "man" through the intermediate sense of a man with whom one has dealings, not of business, but of good fellowship. The case of "customer" is very similar. Shakespeare used it to mean a boon companion, but "a queer customer" now means little more than "a queer man." There is a trace of the old companionship idea, however, when a young woman speaks of "my chap."—London Chronicle.

Horse Killed By Electric Car

A two-horse express wagon of George E. Fogg was struck by an electric car on Quincy avenue Saturday night near Haywards grove on the Braintree side. The driver did not see the car until it was close upon him, and as the car was coming down the grade the motorman was unable to stop it in time to avoid collision. James Delory the driver, jumped and saved himself, but one of the horses was killed outright and the other was severely injured.

Grand Rapids Press

Grand Rapids, Mich., has the reputation of being the biggest city of its size in the country, and the Grand Rapids Press, which has issued a 68-page edition to celebrate its entrance into its new building, is evidently living up to the very limit of the Grand Rapids reputation. The edition is a "corker," as its newsboy writer would say, and in full keeping with its building, which in equipment, and in provisions for the welfare of the staff who who make and sell the paper, is without any question the ideal. The Press is evidently prosperous and as evidently deserves all the prosperity it has secured.

ALL NOW IN UNION

Installation of Officers of Quincy Division Street Ry. Men

The officers of the local division of the Amalgamated Association of Street Railway Employees were installed Monday evening at Wilson's hall. The day men met at 8 o'clock and the night men at midnight, coming in special cars from all over the division.

William J. Walsh of Quincy was installed as president for the fourth year by Treasurer John B. McCormick. The other officers were then installed by President Walsh as follows:

Vice President,—George Slavin, of Braintree.
Financial Secretary and Treasurer,—John B. McCormick of Quincy.
Recording Secretary,—Richard H. Little of Quincy.
Warden,—James Brady of Quincy.
Conductor,—John Shatzel of Quincy
Executive Committee,—J. Dunn, John Faircloth, George Slavin, Thomas Britson, Patrick J. Walsh, James Ford, Arthur Blanchard, E. P. Condrick.

At the business session a motion was made to pay the president a salary. This motion was vigorously opposed by President Walsh and it was withdrawn.

It was voted to endorse the 9-hour bill.

Thirty members were initiated, bringing the total membership up to 230. It was announced that every employee between Quincy and Brockton was now a member of the union.

The treasurer's reports showed the union to be in an excellent financial condition. Sick and disabled members will hereafter be paid $7 per week.

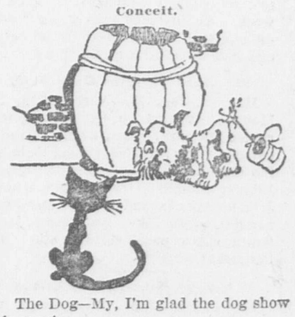
A vote of thanks was extended to the officials of the Old Colony Street Railway for the use of special cars to bring members to the meeting. Refreshments were served, and there was a musical entertainment.

Opposed to Plan

When interviewed on the greater Boston movement, ex-Mayor Quincy said: "I am not in favor of the idea of combining Boston and the surrounding cities and towns into one municipality. It seems to me that there are many grave objections to the idea, and I believe that it would be decidedly against the financial interests of Boston.

"On the other hand, I think there is great need of some form of Metropolitan government. It should be a government with limited powers, which without superseding the present municipalities, would exercise the powers now vested in Metropolitan commissions and such other powers as may be exercised by a metropolitan authority.

Conceit.



The Dog—My, I'm glad the dog show is over!

☞The dogs are receiving a good deal of attention by those who own dogs and those who do not. People who own dogs anxiously watch to see if the neighbors' dogs are all muzzled and people who do not own dogs gaze and wonder. Strange sights meet the eye. A few dogs muzzled, others wearing muzzles hung on the collar like a locket on a chain, and many dogs leading their owners by a string, and there are some careless dogs roaming the streets unencumbered.—Weymouth Gazette.

—Lent commences February 13 and continues for a period of 40 days to March 31.

Talk of Day About the City

An athletic meet for Jan 24 has been arranged by the Y. M. C. A. of Quincy and Cambridge, to be held at Quincy.

After the Council meeting Monday night the City Messenger passed a box of cigars among the members and City Officials with the compliments of President Piper.

Councilman Sawyer arrived at City Hall just as the meeting of the City Council closed, having been delayed by his train being late.

The Ladies' Aid Society will meet at the Memorial church tomorrow at 3 P. M., and will be addressed by Mrs. E. S. Tenney of Wollaston.

Councilman Hobbs has been confined to the house several days by the grip, and was unable to attend the meeting of the City Council this week.

The Committee on Ordinances of the City Council was the first of the standing committees of 1907 to meet, having held a session after the Council meeting Monday night.

A 6 o'clock session of the district court was held Monday night to hear the specially assigned case of Geromino Santanelli for larceny at Quincy. He was fined $10.

—Rev. Oliver Dyer died Sunday afternoon at the Homœopatic Hospital, Boston, after an illness of two weeks, from bronchitis. He was born April 26, 1824, at Porter (near Niagara Falls), N. Y. Rev. Mr. Dyer had quite a remarkable career. He is said to have introduced stenography into the United States, having mastered in England the principles of the science, under Isaac Pitman, the father of modern shorthand. He spent the greater part of recent years with his daughter, Mrs. John Henry Watson, at Beverly Farms.

—Old age pensions crop up again in the present session of the Massachusetts Legislature. Representative Ferber of Boston, has a bill in the House to provide for them.

—Southern negros it is now said will be employed to dig the Panama canal.

GOOD AFTERNOON.

Secretary Taft frankly says that he is not attempting to lift the lid of a presidential boom, but that he certainly will not sit upon it.

John D. Rockefeller's favorite maxim is "lay aside something for a rainy day." So that we may have our lamps trimmed and burning Standard oil.

Do not be too hard on the railroads about wrecks. How can they pay increased dividends on watered stock, if they have to spend a part of their hard-earned savings on trackage and equipment?

By the committee appointments of President Piper, all the wards get a chairmanship. Wards Three and Six have two, but the most important, that of Finance, goes to Ward Five. Perhaps the most interest was in the Committee on Licenses; Councilman Ferguson continues at the head, but he has with him two new men who believe in reform both in express licenses and in licenses to common victuallers. It is safe to predict that fewer expressmen will be licensed, and also fewer common victuallers, and the lid will be shut down on stores doing a Sunday business. This is the only committee upon which the Democrats have no representation, so that it is up to the Republicans to make the reforms demanded at the last City election.

Those who have read "Cap'n Eri" or the "Cape Cod ballads" will be pleased to learn that the Daily Ledger has made arrangements to print Joe Lincoln's latest story "Partners of the Tide." The perils of the hero's love affair added to the perils of the sea, furnish plenty of action and make a story of most fascinating interest.

"Partners of the Tide" appear so real, "reads so natural" that you feel the mantle of Defoe must have fallen on the author, or else he has sketched his quaint characters from life. Perhaps both are partly true. A brilliant New York woman, who has summered on the Maine cost for years, has a notebook full of sketches of these people whom she intends to put in a book after they are dead. It need hardly be said that she is not a professional writer or she would be less Quixotic. Joe Lincoln has put them in his story and lives to tell the tale, though he has doubtless made composite characters from many individual types.

Local and City Brevities

Hultman—Blake wedding at Newton this afternoon at 4 o'clock.

"Partners of the Tide," by Joe Lincoln, will appear in the Daily Ledger as a serial.

A musicale will be given at the Quincy Point church on Thursday evening when Mr. Erastus Osgood, the impersonator, will assist.

The water services of the city which have meters have not received their Jan. 1 bills. Last year in January the receipts were over $22,000.

The Squantum Yacht club has inaugurated a bowling tournament at its winter quarters at Wollaston. Four teams have entered. Team one represents Wollaston Park; team two is from Wollaston hill; team three from Atlantic and team four Norfolk Downs.

NEED OF NATION

Commercial Development Depends Upon Merchant Marine

SHAW GIVES HIS IDEAS

The Twentieth Century Will Be Characterized by the Intense, Though Bloodless Contests For Markets--Philippines Are Ours

Cambridge, Mass., Jan. 15.—The need of a merchant marine as a means to the end of greater commercial development of the United States was urged by Secretary of the Treasury Shaw in an address before Harvard students at the Harvard Union, the assembly hall of which was crowded. His subject was "Evolution of Self Government."

"The Philippine islands, which are ours," said the secretary at one point in the course of his address, "Hawaii, which is ours, and the isthmian canal, which is going to be ours, plus a merchant marine which we must have, will enable us to send our matchless resources of farm and factory to every clime and into every port."

Secretary Shaw's discourse was largely of an academic nature. Sketching the evolution of the United States, he said: "Those who study only the facts of history to the neglect of logic miss the most important as well as the most interesing points. The number of battles fought in a given war, their dates, and the officers commanding are not essential; but the causes and the unexpected results of the war are of timely interest. No distinct civilization was ever planned by man and none was ever evolved as expected. It always developed logically. No man planned this great republic as it exists today. The fathers established principles in harmony with which our civilization has been evolved.

"The eighteenth and nineteenth centuries," continued Shaw, "were characterized by contests for territory, and I predict that the twentieth century will be characterized by contests for markets. These contests will be more or less intense, even if they are bloodless. Our commanding position among the nations of the world, our opportunities to secure a fair share of the commerce of South America and South Africa will afford a market for $650,000,000 of imports for those countries, of which the United States furnishes only 12 percent, and $1,000,000,000 of imports consumed by Oriental countries to which the United States contributes but 10 percent."

"In conclusion the speaker said: "I believe that the Panama canal would be an important factor in securing our full share of these imports and believe that we are in great need of a merchant marine. I do not advocate subsidy or any other specific method, but I urge the necessiey of the thing itself."

McClellan Sticks For Courtesy

New York, Jan. 15.—Mayor McClellan has refused to receive a letter written to him by Attorney General Jackson and addressed "Hon. George B. McClellan, at the Mayor's Office." The mayor says that he does not think the envelope in question bore a proper address. This was a letter in which Jackson asked McClellan to aid in the efforts being made for a recount of the votes cast in the last mayoralty election by refraining from further court proceedings.

Some Trainmen Are Hogg sh

Washington, Jan. 15.—Investigation into the block signal system in use on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad showed that men engaged in the operation of trains work an excessive number of hours without a sufficient period of rest. It was developed that trainmen take advantage of the opportunity to increase their compensation by extra work. An instance was given where an engineer had worked for 36 hours and had no rest during that time.

Big Guns Were at Cock Fight

Havana, Jan. 15.—A cock fight in Marino, attended by 400 persons, was raided by rural guardsmen. Twenty persons were arrested, among them being General Guerravo, Jose M. Gomez, Liberal candidate for the presidency; J. Monteagudo and Carlos Mendieta, candidates for the governorship of Santa Clara province, and other less important leaders.

Alleged Receivers of Bribes

New York, Jan. 15.—George W. Lederle and John West, employes in the general storekeepers' department at the Brooklyn navy yard, were arrested on a charge of receiving bribes in their official capacity as inspectors of materials furnished under contract to the United States government. They were held in $2500 bail for examination.

The Guinn Murder Case

Blue Ridge, Ga., Jan. 15.—Mrs. W. A. Guinn, accused of having hired assassins to slay her husband, was released from custody on $1500 bond to await trial in the superior court. Nearly 1000 people had gathered, expecting to hear sensational testimony regarding the murder of Colonel Guinn in front of his home.

GIVEN TO STATE POLICE

Death of the Fernalds to Be Investigated In Massachusetts

Boston, Jan. 15.—District Attorney Sanderson of Middlesex county has turned over to the state police a communication which he received from County Solicitor Abbott of Carroll county, N. H., concerning the condition of the bodies of George M. Fernald and his son, Elmer E. Fernald, who died in Everett recently. The bodies of the two Fernalds were exhumed last week and an autopsy held at the request of Abbott. The vital organs were sent to Dartmouth college for chemical analysis.

Mr. Sanderson would not disclose the contents of the letter from Abbott, but said that it was due his fellow prosecutor that the Massachusetts authorities should make every effort to investigate the case.

The medical examiner who was called after the death of the two Fernalds decided that the younger was burned to death and that the older succumbed to apoplexy.

It is understood that the New Hampshire physicians held a different view of the cause of death after making the autopsy. The report of the chemical analysis will also be sent to Sanderson for his use. No orders have been issued for the exhuming of the body of Mrs. Elmer Fernald, who died, it is said, from natural causes after her husband's death, and whose body was buried in Everett.

Steamers Near Rocky Shore

Scituate, Mass., Jan. 15.—The lifesaving patrol of the North Scituate station had a busy time last evening warning incoming steamers from off a rocky coast. The weather during the day and evening was very thick and navigation in Massachusetts bay was hazardous. For more than an hour during the evening the air along the beach was filled with soft coal smoke, indicating that quite of fleet of steamers had for some reason been drawn several miles off their course and were assembled not far off shore.

Senatorial Contest In Rhode Island

Providence, Jan. 15.—Three of the best known men in the state claim a majority of votes in the election of a United States senator by the Rhode Island legislature. The candidates are Senator Wetmore, Samuel P. Colt and R. H. I. Goddard. Wetmore and Colt are Republicans, while Goddard, although an independent Republican, has been selected by the Democrats. The contest looks so uncertain that several days of balloting seems probable.

Fatal Fall From Bob-Sled

New Hartford, Conn., Jan. 15.—Michael Stanlisky, a farmer, was coming down a mountain side with a pile of wood on a bob-sled drawn by a horse when he fell between the horse and the sled, which runs close to the ground, and was turned over and over. Both legs were broken, there was a deep wound in the scalp and injuries to his back. He cannot recover.

Carroll Will Get Complimentary Vo e

Boston, Jan. 15.—The Democratic minority of the state legislature held a caucus and decided to vote for James B. Carroll as the party candidate for United States senator. The Republicans, who control both branches, will re-elect Senator Crane, who is at present completing a short term for which he was chosen after the death of Senator Hoar.

Perhaps Fatally Scalded

Winsted, Conn., Jan. 15.—By the bursting of a large steampipe near the firebox in the boiler room of the Gilbert clock factory, Patrick Fitzgerald was perhaps fatally burned and scalded. He took refuge in a large tunnel. On account of the escaping steam men who were laboring to rescue him could not reach him for half an hour.

Engine and Cars Derailed

Leominster, Mass., Jan. 15.—An express freight train overtook a light engine here last evening running slowly in the same direction and in the collision which followed the express engine and four cars were derailed. The tracks were torn up and traffic delayed for four hours. No one was seriously injured.

A Defiant Archbishop

Reims, Jan. 15.—Archbishop Lucon has addressed a vigorously worded protest to the municipal registrar in the matter of the sequestration of church property by the state, in which he designates the separation law as unjust, impious and sacriligious. He further declared that neither the clergy nor the faithful of Reims would co-operate with the state in any way and would yield only to force.

939 INDICTMENTS

Against Alleged Oil Trust and Several of Its Officials

Findlay, O., Jan. 15.—When the January grand jury of Hancock county came into court with its report last night the foreman handed down 939 separate indictments against the Standard Oil company of New Jersey, the Standard Oil company of Ohio, the Ohio Oil company, the Buckeye Pipe Line company, the Solar Refinery company, the Manhattan Oil company, John D. Rockefeller, H. H. Rogers, Wesleyan Tilford, J. D. Archbold, F. O. Barstow, William Rockefeller and F. T. Cuthbert. They are formally charged with being members of a trust for conspiracy against trade.

There are 525 words in each indictment, or a total of 452,975 words. Each case will be docketed separately, and the county clerk and sheriff's office will be swamped for some months to come. Sheriff Groves and his deputies will begin at once to serve a copy of the indictment on each of the defendants.

If Hancock county wins in each case when they are tried fines can be assessed aggregating $58,000,000.

An Unexpected Appointment

Albany, Jan. 15.—Governor Hughes sprung a sensational surprise last night when he sent to the state senate for confirmation the nomination of Frederick C. Stevens for superintendent of public works, in place of Nicholas V. Franchot. The nomination was immediately confirmed. Ex-Senator Stevens was chairman of the special legislative committee which investigated gas and electric lighting conditions in New York and of which Hughes was counsel. It was in this connection that Hughes was first brought conspicuously to public notice.

United States Cannot Interfere

Washington, Jan. 15.—There is no disposition on the part of the administration to take any steps in addition to those already taken relative to the Congo question. The Belgian government has strenuously declined to recognize the right of even the powers signatory to the Congo convention to interfere in the administration of that territory, so that there is still less warrant for intervention by the United States, which is not a signatory power.

Allee Fails of Renomination

Dover, Del., Jan. 15.—Henry Richardson was last night declared the Republican nominee for the United States senate on the ninth ballot in the caucus of the legislature. The ballot resulted: Richardson 20, Allee 10, Burton 1, Marshall 1, Addicks 1, Layton 2, Pennewill 1. Allee's supporters stood by him to the last, but the gradual defection of the Addicks men to Richardson made the present senator's selection by the caucus practically impossible.

Two Men Shot to Death

Steubenville, O., Jan. 15.—Mike Bolinsky, a night watchman, was returning home on a speeder with a loaded shotgun. He dropped the gun from the speeder on the crossing near Parlett station and the weapon was discharged. The contents of the gun went into a crowd near the station, but William Smith and John Jones received almost the entire load and were torn to pieces. Bolinsky jumped from the speeder and escaped.

The two brothers have not been on good terms for a long time past.

THE PURDY REPORT

Fixes Blame For Brownsville Outrage Upon Negroes

PRESIDENTIAL MESSAGE

Troops Referred to as Midnight Assassins--None Can Be Ignorant of What Occurred--Backdown In Attempt to Exclude Them From Federal Service

Washington, Jan. 15.—The widely heralded Purdy report on the Brownsville affray reached the senate yesterday, accompanied by a special message from the president. The president declares that the evidence obtained fastens the responsibility for the murder and riots of Aug. 13 upon the discharged soldiers of the Twenty-fifth infantry, "beyond the possibility of least question."

The president gave notice that he had revoked that part of the order debarring the discharged soldiers from employment in the civil branch of the government service. This was received by the senate generally with satisfaction. Senators Lodge and Crane joined with Secretary Taft in calling the president's attention to the punitive spirit of this part of the order, as well as to its probable illegality.

The president's message gives the additional evidence collected by Assistant Attorney General Purdy and Major Blocksom, who were sent to Texas by the president to investigate the affair. The president submitted with his message various exhibits, including maps of Brownsville and Fort Brown, a bandoleer, 33 empty shells, seven ball cartridges, picked up in the streets a few hours after the shooting; three steel jacketed bullets and some scraps of the casings of other bullets picked out of the houses into which they had been fired.

The president declares that evidence is positive that the outrages of Aug. 13 were committed by some of the negro troops that have been dismissed and that some or all of the members of the three companies of the Twenty-fifth infantry had knowledge of the deed and have shielded the guilty ones.

The negro troops are referred to by the president in his message as "midnight assassins," and he declares that very few, if any, of the soldiers dismissed "without honor" could have been ignorant of what occurred.

That part of the order which bars the soldiers from all civil employment under the government is revoked by the president. This clause, the president says, was lacking in validity. The discharged troops, however, will be forever barred from re-enlisting in the army or navy, and as to this the president says that "there is no doubt of my constitutional and legal power."

Secretary Taft's report, giving the sworn testimony of witnesses, is transmitted with the message. The testimony of 14 eye-witnesses is given, and the president declares that the evidence is conclusive that the weapons used were Springfield rifles now used by the United States troops, including the negro troops who were in the garrison at Brownsville.

Taking but a brief time to pass the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill, carrying nearly $31,000,000, the senate devoted the remainder of the day to the Brownsville affray. Senator Mallory, endorsing the action of the president, opened the discussion. He held that the president might have gone too far in preventing the re-enlistment of the soldiers involved, but otherwise he approved the president's order of discharge.

When Senator Clay, who followed, took the floor, the debate was given a lively turn by Mr. Tillman's interruptions. Clay said the people of Georgia heartily endorsed the president's order. Senator Bacon followed with what he said was reported as a precedent for the Brownsville order in the discharge of a company of South Carolina National Guardsmen by Tillman when he was governor. This involved Tillman again in the debate.

Senator Spooner was in the midst of a constitutional discussion of the authority of the president in the case when adjournment was taken. Mr. Spooner holds that when the president exercises his powers as commander-in-chief of the army the senate has no jurisdiction to review his actions. He also contended that congress has no power to legislate specifically to restore the soldiers discharged in the present case, declaring that review can only be had by impeachment proceedings, which must originate in the house of representatives.

Several senators have indicated that they intend to discuss the question and the Brownsville debate is therefore likely to take the attention of the senate for several days.

SLAVERY STILL EXISTS

Mississippi Farmer Sold a Whole Negro Family For $1000

Washington, Jan. 15.—The department of justice gave out a statement regarding a peculiarly atrocious case of peonage alleged to have occurred in Rankin county, Miss. According to the testimony before a United States commissioner, Dan January, a negro, in debt to Levi D. Carter, a white farmer, was seized, bound and beaten into unconsciousness by Carter and some companions. The next day Carter threatened to hang January unless he consented to be sold with his entire family, and Patrick, another white farmer, made the purchase, paying Carter $1000. Carter and two accomplices were held for the grand jury, but Patrick was discharged, as he had not "forcibly detained" the Januarys.

The statement says that in Mississippi the victims of these outrages appear to be all negroes, but in Florida Assistant Attorney General Russell is prosecuting cases where white laborers, mostly immigrants, have been held in captivity and barbarously treated. The statement declares that communities which would tolerate these cases are about 3000 years behind our civilization and warns federal officials against any lukewarmness in aiding prosecutions of such cases.

Guggenheim Charges Sidetracked

Denver, Jan. 15.—By a party vote of 20 Republicans to 11 Democrats, the state senate defeated and then expunged from its records a resolution for an investigation of the so-called smelter trust. The preamble to the resolution declared that "Simon Guggenheim is now and has habitually been engaged in violating the laws relating to the receiving of rebates, specific testimony whereof is offered to any court." Guggenheim has been nominated by the Republican caucus for the United States senate.

For Removal of Disabilities

Boston, Jan. 15.—A petition signed by 75 white citizens has been sent to Congressman Keliher by Thomas E. Little, who was a private in the Twenty-fifth infantry for 12 years and who left the service with an honorable discharge in 1898, asking the congressman to assist Congressman Roberts to get a bill for the removal of the military disabilities from the discharged soldiers of the Twenty-fifth regiment before the house and to secure its passage at this session.

The greeting between the czar and Motono was watched with especial interest, but there was no incident worthy of recording.

A Brooklyn Mystery

New York, Jan. 15.—With her ears lacerated as if rings had been snatched from them, and her hands cut and bruised, a handsomely gowned woman, about 27 years of age, was found unconscious in a vacant lot in Brooklyn. All around her were evidences which made it appear that she had been assaulted and robbed. She is in a serious condition. The physicians believe the woman was drugged before being attacked.

Raisuli Out of the Way

Madrid, Jan. 15.—The cabinet has resolved to consult with the government of France relative to the withdrawal of a portion of the Franco-Spanish fleet at Tangier. The secretary of state has been instructed to point out that since the disappearance of Raisuli there is no longer necessity for such naval strength in Moroccan waters.

New York, Jan. 15.—After Edward J. Russell had finished his argument in the supreme court in his efforts to secure his release from Dannemora prison for the insane, Justice Truax ruled that Russell was still insane and remanded him to the prison. Russell made a dramatic plea in his own behalf.

Alma, Kan., Jan. 15.—J. H. Shoemaker, dispatcher at Topeka, and John Lynes, operator at Volland, were held by a coroner's jury as being in a measure responsible for the Rock Island wreck near Volland, in which 32 persons were killed. It is not probable that any prosecution will follow.

A 3-year-old daughter of Antione Muncie of Cambridge, Mass., was burned to death under her bed, beneath which she had crawled after her mother had set fire to it by dropping a lamp.

The Maine senate receded and concurred with the house in indefinitely postponing the order that the state reimburse the railroads for the mileage of the legislators.

IF MOTHERS ONLY KNEW

When children are cross, irritable and peevish it does not signify that they have bad tempers; it shows that there is something wrong with the child which it is not able to explain, and which the mother—If She Only Knew—could easily and quickly cure. Mothers, study your child's symptoms; if cross, peevish, nervous, grits the teeth, wets the bed, picks the nose, has variable appetite or bowels, suffers with wind-colic or headache, is irritable and restless, has furred tongue or offensive breath, you may be sure that child is troubled with worms, which cause nearly all the ills of childhood.

Don't delay—disease comes suddenly—a few doses of the wonderful old-time remedy—will give your children that vigorous health which is so important to their future happiness.

Dr. True's Elixir expels the worms, if there are any—if not it acts as a gentle laxative and tonic. RAILROAD DELAYS

President Hill Points Out the Causes Leading Thereto

INCREASE IN BUSINESS

Amounts to Over 110 Percent In Last Ten Years--Plenty of Cars, but Lack of Trackage--$5,500,000,000 Is Needed

St. Paul, Jan. 15.—President Hill of the Great Northern railroad has sent a letter to Governorr Johnson, in which he gives his views of the various phases of the railroad situation in the United States. He gives the reason for existing conditions and points out a remedy. The letter says in part:

"The business of the United States is today so congested that from every portion of the country arises clamor for relief. The railroads everywhere are taxed beyond their power. The people of the United States, therefore, are face to face with the greatest business problem that has ever threatened the nation. During recent years the volume of business has increased, and is increasing with extraordinary rapidity, while the necessary additional trackage and terminals have not been equal to the demands upon them. The resulting situation is a freight blockade of enormous proportions, especially at all terminal points. How to remedy this is a problem, financial, mechanical and physical.

"Within the last 10 years the volume of railroad business in this country has increased over 110 percent. Meanwhile, the railroads have endeavored to meet it. Equipment is being increased as rapidly as capital and labor can do it. There are and will be cars enough to carry the country's traffic if the cars can be moved, but engines and cars must have tracks upon which they may run.

"Not only is it true that there has been in the 10 years ending 1906 an increase of but 21 percent in mileage, but the most impressive fact is that railroad building has within a generation fallen off just as the demand upon trackage has increased. At this moment, when that demand is greatest and the whole country is clamoring for relief, it is the smallest in years.

"The disparity between the growth of traffic and the additions to railroad mileage and the extension of terminals, shown by new mileage of less than 1½ percent a year since 1904, to take cars of a traffic increase averaging 11 percent a year for 10 years past, presents and explains the real problem.

"Investigations recently made by public officials and facts accessible before those investigations disclose that the railroads of the country have been endeavoring to meet the growing demand on them. In order to handle this enormous addition of 110 percent in business with only 21 percent more track, they have utilized as never before the carrying capacity of each mile.

"Suppose that only 25 percent additional track with necessary terminals and equipment, making 33 percent, is to be built during the next five years; or, say, in round numbers, 75,000 miles of tracks as the requirement of the country to meet immediate needs.

"No practical man would furnish the facilities required, including additional equipment and terminal facilities, for less $25,000 a mile. The question of terminals alone is almost prohibitive. Terminals now in use were acquired when property was cheap and can be enlarged only by heavy outlays. In many cities it is not even a question of cost, since the area necessary to handle railroad business properly is not to be had at any price.

"The new work, then, would amount to $5,500,000,000, in round numbers, or a yearly average of $1,100,000,000. That is the sum which should be spent before the commerce of the country can be moved properly. It is just twice the total amount of the bonded debt of the United States after the close of the Civil war. It is more than twice the entire currency in circulation in the country.

"Two remedies must be found. The prohibitory expenses now attached to enlargement of terminals at many points and the absolute lack of available space at any price, may be met by a decent realization of traffic. There must be more points for export, more interior markets. A 15-foot canal or channel from St. Louis to New Orleans would go further to relieve the entire middle west and southwest than any other work that could be undertaken. With such a depth of water, a single powerful towboat would carry from 30 to 40 trainloads.

"It is not by accident that railroad building has declined to its lowest within a generation, at the very time when all other forms of activity have been growing most rapidly. The investor declines to put his money into enterprises under ban of unpopularity, and even threatened by individuals and political parties with confiscation or transfer to the state. This feeling must be removed and greater confidence be mutually established if any considerable portion of the vast sum necessary is to be available for the work."

Heavy Taxpayers In Gotham

New York, Jan. 15.—Andrew Carnegie will be the heaviest personal taxpayer in New York if the list of assessments is not amended. The value of his personal property is fixed at $5,000,000, and that of John D. Rockefeller at $2,500,000.

A CAMPHOR FARM.

Drug to Be Secured In Large Quantities In Texas.

A camphor farm is being established near Floresville, Tex., under the auspices of the bureau of plant industry of the United States department of agriculture, says a Floresville special to the New York Tribune. The government already has a large camphor experimental farm in operation near Wharton, Tex. It is believed by Dr. W. J. Watkins, who is in charge of the experiments in Texas, that the new industry has wonderful possibilities and that the time is not far distant when this state will be one of the greatest camphor producing regions in the world. That title is held by the island of Formosa, which is now under the control of the Japanese government. The world's supply of camphor now practically comes from Formosa, Dr. Watkins says.

The demand for camphor has increased to such an extent in the last few years that the attention of not only the United States government, but of all of the leading foreign governments, has been attracted to the product, and they are making efforts to open up a new source of supply. This is made necessary by the fact that in the manufacture of modern explosives, which are used in high power guns, camphor forms an important ingredient. Now that the Japanese government controls the world's supply of the product it is by no means certain that it may be obtained in the desired quantities at all times in the future. In order to provide against any such contingency as this the growth of the camphor shrub is being encouraged in Texas and Florida.

The camphor experimental farm at Wharton was established nearly a year ago. The shrubs have grown wonderfully well. They are now as high as a man's head, and it is believed that they will quickly attain the size of a tree if permitted to stand. In Formosa the camphor tree grows to a size of three or four feet in diameter. The process in operation there for extracting the camphor is to chop the trees down and cut them into small pieces, from which the camphor is then distilled.

Dr. Watkins says that he will adopt a different method of operation. He sows the camphor seeds like wheat or oats, and the shrub quickly sprouts. When it has attained a height of about three feet it will be cut down by a mowing machine at a height of about one foot from the ground. The severed portion will be put through the distilling process and the camphor extracted. From the tender stubble other shoots will spring up, and the cutting process can be repeated once a year for several years. It is said that more and a better quality of camphor can be obtained by this method than by the process that is in use in Formosa. The crop requires no attention except the sowing and harvesting.

It is said by Dr. Watkins that at present prices one acre of camphor would yield a profit of about $450.

ANTI-APPENDICITIS CLUB.

Organization Whose Members Are Pledged to Drink Olive Oil Freely.

Coatsville, Pa., has an anti-appendicitis club, the avowed object of which is the prevention of the disease, which has become alarmingly prevalent in Coatesville, says the New York Mail. One of the requirements of membership is a liberal consumption of olive oil.

A barrel of the oil has been ordered by the club, and a bylaw provides that each member shall partake of a tablespoonful before each meal.

F. L. Campbell is president, James Jackson secretary and Frank Soule treasurer of the club, and more than 100 noted men of the town have joined.

Within the last few weeks twelve cases of the disease have developed in Coatesville, and that number of operations have been performed at the local hospital.

Lincoln and the Bible.

Mr. Lincoln, as I saw him every morning in the carpet slippers he wore in the house and the black clothes no tailor could make really fit his gaunt, bony frame, was a homely enough figure. The routine of his life was simple, too; it would have seemed a treadmill to most of us. He was an early riser. When I came on at 8 in the morning he was often already dressed and reading in the library. There was a big table near the center of the room. There I have seen him reading many times. And the book? We have all heard of the president's fondness for Shakespeare, how he infuriated Secretary Stanton by reading "Hamlet" while they were waiting for returns from Gettysburg. We know, too, how he kept cabinet meetings waiting while he read them the latest of Petroleum V. Nasby's witticisms. It was the Bible which I saw him reading while most of the household still slept.—Harper's Magazine.

An Opium Cure.

A cure for the opium habit has at last been reported from China to the department of commerce and labor, says the Springfield Union. It is found in a plant which grows wild in the vicinity of Lampur, and its use is said to destroy all appetite for the drug within a week. The leaves of the plant are exposed to the sun for a day after being gathered and are then chopped fine and roasted, after which a tea is made from them, and the specific is ready for use. In Lampur alone the applications number 2,000 daily, and it is claimed that in the few short weeks since the plant was discovered over 14,000 persons have been cured of the opium smoking habit. So great is the demand for the plant that the natives are asking $10 a picul (133 1-3 pounds).

ADVERTISE

CONGRESSMEN'S LUXURIES.

Official Property Lists Which Would Have Delighted Mrs. Trollope.

Dear old Mrs. Trollope, who was so bitter with us a long time ago that she wrote an entertaining book scoring us for our domestic manners, would be hugely delighted if she could read the lists of public property in possessoin of the sergeant at arms of the senate and the doorkeeper of the house, writes a Washington correspondent of the New York Post. The two favorite vices of American men, Mrs. Trollope found, were spitting and sitting with their feet cocked higher than their heads. In the lists of property belonging to the senate and house she would perhaps find corroborative testimony to bear out the first charge. In the committee room of Representative Sereno E. Payne are thirteen cuspidors, of which five are china. He has forty-four chairs, not including five of another kind described as "easy." All of the other committee rooms are provided with the Trollope abomination, but not so lavishly.

The sergeant at arms of the senate has among his stores a number of things which bespeak comfort if not absolute luxury. He carries quantities of violet and white rose and Jockey Club soap, hair tonics, bottles of cologne, oil for massaging, chamois skins, bay rum, witch hazel, sea salt, silver nail polishing brushes, large lemon squeezers, snuff, two and three grain quinine pills, bath sponges and, most curious entry of all, "twenty-four bottles pond lily." No less than twenty-one different sorts of soap are on the list for the use of senators.

PHONING AROUND THE TABLE

Novel Feature of a Tin Wedding Celebration.

The merriest dinner party entertained in many seasons at the Chevy Chase club took place there the other evening when Mr. and Mrs. Nevil Monroe Hopkins invited a company of fifty friends to celebrate the tenth anniversary of their marriage, says a Washington special dispatch to the New York Times.

The company, chiefly contemporaries of the hosts and some younger friends, was seated at one large table, but that no one might miss an opportunity of conversing with everybody else a telephone was placed at each cover, with a regular switchboard and a trained operator installed for the evening.

The repast began soon after 8 o'clock with a cocktail drunk from little red tin cups. The poinsettia blossoms decorating the table were in tin bowls and loving cups made for the occasion and all courses possible served from tin plates.

An orchestra played in the musicians' gallery throughout the evening, but at times was almost lost in the din made by fifty odd musical instruments, all of tin, which were souvenirs. Congratulations by wireless added to the novelty and interest of the evening, as also did the sudden appearance of several fake policemen, who came to enforce the Maryland license law, which prohibits cocktails and champagne even in tin cups.

To Make Garden on Seashore.

Long ago it was said an American could do almost anything if he had the money. A man who has refused to join the brigade of rich Americans who "would rather live in England" finds Long Island satisfactory and is planning to show that a garden may be made to grow on the exposed seashore, says the New York Press. He has sunk an Italian garden on the west side of his house and built a glass wall on the east side, so that only balmier breezes may toy with the shrubs and flowers. The view from the windows will have the charm of variety, for while on one side it is rugged and wild, on the other will be the beautiful and picturesque garden.

Nursemaid Motorist.

A motorist's wife recently advertised for a nursemaid, and the young person engaged was told that she would be required to take the children out in the car now and then, says the London Autocar. "Very well, ma'am," was the reply. "I have my own motor costume." "And on one of the first drives," said the mistress, "she volunteered to relieve my driver at the wheel."

The Still Life.

Still life upon the farm—
What sylvan charm!
Now let us sing,
Loud let the chanson ring,
Not of the simple life
And simple wife,
But of the manly hands that till
The soil and tend the still!

For with denatured alcohol
The farmers, each and all,
May still
The wolf across the sill
Keep; any rural swain who's willing
May do a little home distilling
And sell his distillation
Throughout creation,
And, thus replenishing his till,
He may be happy still.

Still—
And here's a bitter pill—
He cannot quench his burning
Thirst and ease his yearning
For red eye forty rod,
Though from his private sod
He takes
The stuff that makes
Large alcoholic lakes,
For all
His alcohol—
Oh, bitterness and gall!—
Is locked within a tank
Strong as a vaulted bank
Till Uncle Sam comes round and dopes
The spirits, blasting thus his hopes.

But still
Not all is fil;
Some joy is left;
He is not all bereft;
Some comfort still abides,
Because the law provides,
Though tedious labor mar
And joy be flown afar,
Each farmer, if he will,
May keep a little still.

STORIES OF THE SHAH

Instances of Persia's Late Ruler's Kind Heartedness.

HOW HE AMUSED HIMSELF ABROAD

Prank Played by His Majesty on an Old Woman Selling Toy Balloons. His Experience With a Dentist In Paris—A Sample of His Marksmanship and Obstinacy—Features of His Wonderful Globe of the World.

Muzafir-ed-Din, the late shah of Persia, was extremely kind hearted, says the Philadelphia Public Ledger. Once he had to sign the death warrant of a gang of hill robbers. He inquired into their case and learned that they had been leading a hard life, and, turning to them, he said: "Poor fellows! I suppose you robbed because you wanted something to eat," and he ordered their release. The late shah's father was very severe. Once his buffoon's antics were too much for him, and he ordered his instant execution. In his agony the poor fellow remembered the words of a Persian poet, "Fear kings, women and poets." But in his case it was not too late. He was saved by the intercession of the sadr-azam (grand vizier), thus learning by bitter experience not to jest with kings.

The fate of his court poet laureate was also not to be envied. On one occasion Muzafir-ed-Din read to him one of his own poems and asked for his opinion. "Even if I deserve your majesty's anger," said the candid poet, "I must say that it is anything but poetry." The shah, feeling insulted, cried out to those who waited on him, "Take this ass to the stable!" After a little while, becoming calmer, he tried the poet once more, this time with a fresh set of verses. When he had finished reading, the poet started to go away. "Where are you going?" asked the shah. "To the stable, your majesty," was the reply of the poet. This time the shah enjoyed the joke, and the poet was forgiven.

Muzafir-ed-Din was also open handed. Once when he was walking in the public gardens at Contrexeville, in France, a little child gave him a flower. The shah took it and gave him a magnificent diamond in return. He once paid an English dentist £1,000 for removing an aching tooth.

Flanked by a large retinue and followed at some distance by a gendarme or two, the shah while in Ostend entered into the spirit of fun to the fullest extent, smiling at the children, laughing heartily at the sport in the water, admiring the beauties and all the while in a good humor that seemed to be contagious. He was fond of a joke and would often worry the hawkers by pretending to sneer at their wares and then buy the whole lot for the sake of seeing the surprise in their faces, says the New York Tribune. On one occasion he cut loose a whole bunch of balloons, the entire stock in trade of a respectable old lady, whose goods were the delight of little children. The shah watched the liberated colored balls floating out to sea, then, as if he had forgotten, turned suddenly on the startled old lady and rewarded her handsomely with gold.

The shah of Persia suffered from toothache soon after his arrival in Paris, and a professional extractor of high class molars was sent for, says the New York Commercial. The professional looked at his majesty's teeth and advised the extraction not of one, but of several. The operation was postponed for a day, but when the dentist returned to the Elysee Palace hotel he found the shah all right and in a playful mood. The toothache had gone, and there was no longer any need for the dentist's services. As the professional was preparing to leave the shah called him back, saying:

"I do not like to have troubled you for nothing, so, as you have come, you had better draw a molar from each of my counselors."

The shah spoke with his eyes fixed on the ground and in a meditative manner. When he looked up, all the counselors had vanished, with the exception of the grand vizier, who manfully stood his ground, unmindful as to whether his all powerful master was in joke or in earnest. The other counselors evidently believed in the earnestness of the master's utterances. The anecdote is something like that old one told of the late shah's predecessor, who when in Paris asked to see M. Deibler at work with the guillotine. When he was informed that there was nobody in La Roquette at the time waiting for execution, he proposed that one of his suit should be handed over to Deibler and decapitated in the Champs Elysee.

Muzafir-ed-Din was a great shot. On one occasion a copper coin was thrown into the air, and he shot a hole through its center. His strongest trait was obstinacy. When halfway to Vienna he declared he would take a rest before resuming his journey. It was no use telling him the emperor was waiting for him at the station. "What is the telegraph for?" he asked. He had a globe of the world made of seventy-five pounds of pure gold, studded with 51,366 gems. Persia is made of turquoises, England of diamonds, India of amethysts, Africa of rubies and the sea of emeralds. It is valued at $4,750,000. The throne he sat on is a wonderful work of art, and it is valued at $25,000,000.

Neglected Rheumatism Causes Paralysis

A Uric-O Treatment Will in All Cases Remove the Cause.

Paralysis is a disease whose cause is shrouded in mystery. If you were to investigate carefully all cases of Paralysis you would find that at some time previous to the attack, the patient suffered from some form of rheumatism. Possibly like so many others, he thought it was only a slight matter of temporary inconvenience and paid no further attention to it. Rheumatism is not to be neglected with impunity. The Uric and poisonous Rheumatic Acid must be neutralized and driven from the system as soon as they put in an appearance. Do this with Uric-O.

It is a harmless vegetable preparation and does not contain a single drop of alcohol. It operates by its action upon the blood, muscles and kidneys and cures Rheumatism to stay cured. We might give you testimonials from thousands of people in all parts of the country, but we would rather have you talk with some one whom you know and can believe. Next time you are down town, just drop into the store of E. J. Murphy, Quincy's popular druggist, and ask him about Uric-O. We won't predict what he will say, but we have confidence enough in the remedy to leave it to him.

Uric-O is not a cathartic, nor does it affect or distress the stomach in any way. Uric-O is a cure for Rheumatism and for Rheumatism only. That is why it is such a great success. It does one thing and does that one thing perfectly. Most druggists sell Uric-O at 75c and $1.00 the bottle, but you can have a sample bottle free if you cut out this advertisement and send it with your name and address to the Smith Drug Co., Syracuse, N. Y. Sometimes they send an order on your druggist for a 75c bottle free of charge in reply to those requests for a sample.

Found Dead

Dominecio Desperlatti employed at the Fore River shipyard, was found dead in bed Monday at his boarding house, 164 East Howard street. About 2 A. M. a noise was heard in the man's room but nothing was thought of it. Late in the forenoon he was found dead in bed. The police were notified and they in turn notified Medical Examiner Jones. There were some marks on the man's head which were at first thought to be wounds and there were thoughts of foul play. Medical Examiner Jones, however, said the wounds were old ones and that heart trouble caused the man's death.

VISIONS OF DEAD CHUM

Lawyer Tells How He Twice Saw Former College Mate.

SAYS IT IS A HARVARD PACT.

While Students at the University Each Agreed That First to Die Would Communicate With the Other — Attorney's Former Companion Tried to Speak — Psychical Research Society to Investigate.

Strange visions that appeared to him twice on consecutive days have led a noted lawyer of New York to invoke the aid of the American Society of Psychical Research in an investigation to find an explanation of the phenomenon, says the New York Herald. To convince the scientists of his sincerity he has sworn to an affidavit which describes in detail the visions which he saw, not in a dream, but during the activities of business.

While a student at Harvard the attorney in question entered into an agreement with a classmate that the one dying first should appear to the other after death. His chum has since died, and in the picture that has now twice presented itself he has vividly seen the youth of his college days. He believes that the psychic vagary is a result of the pact made at Harvard. Professors William James and Josiah Boyce of Harvard university are taking part in the investigation. The lawyer asserts that he is not a spiritualist and has never believed to any extent in the mystic.

In the affidavit the dead friend is referred to as W. and another chum who also appeared in the visions as C. The affidavit reads in part as follows:

"I retired to my apartment about midnight night before last (Jan. 5) and was then in full possession of my normal senses. Nevertheless, without any transitory state, I found myself in a strange city, with my friend C., walking along a brick sidewalk beside a row of low two story wooden houses painted a greenish gray. I appeared to be looking at the backs of these houses, and the back yard of one of them was arranged in a sort of bower, with tables and chairs, evidently for the refreshment of passersby. C. and I sat down and ordered and drank a glass of beer. We then noticed that there was a passageway through the house, and a greensward and sunlight were visible at the end, so we walked through.

"We found ourselves in an oval, possibly 300 yards long, entirely surrounded by the same style of house.

"We continued our walk around the oval, and to the astonishment of both of us we saw W. coming toward us. I was so astonished that I took no notice of his clothes, but he had the well remembered smile upon his face, his cheeks were ruddy, and his eyes were bright, and I remember that his hair continued down beside his ears rather farther than I had ever seen it before, so as to form a sort of curly side whisker for just an inch or two. He extended his hand and his jaws moved as if he were trying to say something, but could not articulate. Both C. and I were too much astonished to say a word, and that emotion or perhaps a less creditable one kept our hands at our sides. W. again extended his hand and again tried to articulate, his eyes gleaming with the interest of what he was about to say and the color becoming still more brilliant in his cheeks as he found himself unable to say it.

"I said to C. in a low tone, 'W. died five years ago.' Then I remember reaching forward my hand to grasp W.'s. Then I found myself again. I was in my study, wide awake, my brain as clear as it ever had been. The whole occurrence was so vivid that I felt that it was a visitation, and I rejected the idea that it was a dream. I was rather busy next day and had no opportunity of referring to the matter in conversation to any one. Last night I did nothing unusual and as before retired to my apartments without having had anything to eat or drink. Immediately the vision of the previous night came back to me.

"This time C. and I were again in the oval. The sun was even brighter than before and the grass a deeper and more brilliant green. The noises of the factories could still be heard with the same resonance as before, and we decided that we must find out where we were. With that end in view we kept on toward the exit of the oval. Here we found a passageway roofed over so that the roof made a continuous line with the roofs of the houses on either side. The passageway was apparently twenty or thirty feet long. The sun was high in the heavens, so that one side of the passageway was in shadow, and as we turned in we saw W. standing in the shadow. His back was toward the wall, and this time I noticed almost with terror that he wore a suit of evening clothes. He had no hat on, and his well remembered bald spot, with its curly boundary, was plainly visible even in the shadow. His face was ruddy, and the brighter light on the other side of the passage was reflected brilliantly in his brown eyes.

"Again I found myself with my brain active and absolutely clear, but with my eyes almost unseeing as a result of the sudden change from that brilliant noonday sun."

The lawyer, whose attested statement was drawn by Henry Quimby, immediately communicated with his friend C. to learn whether he had experienced anything out of the ordinary on the nights of the two visions. His perplexity was increased when he learned that C. had been strangely ill and during the forty-eight hours in which the two visions occurred he had been unconscious.

Lloyd Chamberlin Of Brockton Endorses Boards of Trade

One of the best meetings ever held under the anspices of the Board of Trade was that of Tuesday night at Colonial hall. It was the beginning of its seventh year, and Judge Lloyd E. Chamberlin of Brockton was the speaker of the evening.

Special invitations were sent to a number of city officials but the press committee overlooked the important matter of giving notice beforehand of what was going on, and the attendance was not large.

Among the city officials present were: Mayor Thompson, Assessor Johnson, Chief Engineer Litchfield, Chairman Teasdale of the Board of Health, President Piper and Councilmen Hunter, Sawyer, Hull, Gelotte, Ferguson and Walsh. Representative Sandberg was also present.

T. L. Williams, president of the organization, presided, and after a few introductory remarks introduced Mayor Thompson.

His Honor thanked the Board of Trade of the courtesies shown him. It was assuming and performing a duty in bringing business industries within our borders.

Anything that will further the prosperity of our city is to be commended and encouraged. We can not expect a Fore River River plant every day. The efforts of this and kindred organizations should be to encourage small industries to locate here.

Mayor Thompson then briefly referred to the Boston Gear Works and the Hall Lock company which had recently located in Quincy.

He paid Mayor Fitzgerald a compliment for his energetic efforts for a bigger Boston. Viewed from Third hill, Boston more than compares, in beauty with the Bay of Naples.

Mayor Thompson spoke of the recent visit to Quincy of the Mayor's club, and his description of the places visited in Quincy by that club was very flattering although true to the letter.

He believed matters before the City government should be discussed by such organizations as the Board of Trade. He did not mean that they should "but in," but let the men delegated to consider these matters have some say.

Mayor Thompson also referred to the street railway power house as second to none in the country, the power plant of the Electric Light company which was one of the most modern and best equipped, and the Gas company which was extending its mains throughout the city.

Judge Chamberlin was then introduced and gave a rattling address on Boards of Trade in general, and the work that they could accomplish. He said Trades were one of the greatest factors in the growth of civilization. They were the mainspring and inspiration of the country and were a most fascinating study. All great public works such as railroads, telegraph, telephone, and the like are carried out in the interest of trade.

In the very magnitude of these there is danger that we shall loose sight of the problems that lie at our own door yard. We should see that questions at home should be solved as that is the great question for weal or woe of a community.

It is the desire of every city to have a bigger, busier and better city. The most important of these is to have a better city. Success is not measured by its population, but are you faced in the right direction. If you are, you are all right. You want industries to flourish in your midst. An employed people is a peaceful people. We want a clean attractive city, morally as well as physically. We want a happy and prosperous people. You can have these things for the asking.

If you want it beautiful you can have it as every citizen will see that his own house and grounds are made so. In this way it becomes contagious. The way to accomplish good results is to have citizens who are determined to have it so, and when you have this you have accomplished what you want. Hustle is the word, done by a well laid out plan. Why not have a center of industry. A Board of Trade to whom you can look for results for the best interests of the city?

There is a time in the life of every city when there are men looking for a place to do business. If there is a Board of Trade to go to they may come to you. He believed thoroughly in a Board of Trade. They are interested in the good of the whole city. Untiring, unselfish and with no axe to grind. They keep their ear close to the ground and find out what the citizens are thinking about and discuss these questions. Not necessarily to direct but to watch and build up the weak spots.

To develope the proper public sentiment. Local pride is a good thing. Talk up your city. A man is contemptible who will go outside and talk down his own city. Go out and try and do good instead of throwing mud. It is advisable to have a wide diversity of industries. It is sometimes, however, a good thing to put your eggs all in one basket and watch that basket carefully. While it is desirable to have new industries it is well to keep what you have got. If you have an old industry seek to develop and maintain it. Do not forget the struggling industries in your city.

He then spoke of the Board of Trade of Brockton and what it had accomplished. The trolley freight had been one of the best things that Brockton had ever had. Contrary to what was said about its blocking streets. It had not done so.

No organization can be a really good organization in the proper sense of the word unless it takes an active interest in political affairs. If a man is a true citizen he should go to the primaries. He should be content to hold office and he should be content to be a private. We have received something and we should be willing to pay it back.

The whole success of municipal life is bound up in its Board of Trade. You are all in the same boat. There is a duty devolved upon you. Every man is important to the success or the failure of his community. The largest taxpayer is not always the best citizen, but he who is willing to contribnte the best that is in his life for the community.

Charles H. Johnson, Principal Assessor, was the last speaker and told of the aims and objects of the Board of Trade and extended an invitation to all who were not members to join.

A vote of thanks was extended to Judge Chamberlain for his able address.

A collation of sandwiches, coffee, cake. ice cream and cigars was then served.

Anxiety for Safety of Miss Parks Of This City

There is deep anxiety in the family of C. W. Guy of Butler road for the safety of Miss Addie J. Parks, a well known young lady of the city, who was probably at Kingston, Jamaica, at the time of the disastrous earthquake.

Miss Parks sailed from New York on Saturday, Jan. 5, with B. E. Guy, a relative of Worcester, on a steamer of the Hamburg-American line, and was due at Kingston on Saturday last.

No intelligence can be obtained in answer to cablegrams.

Miss Parks makes her home with Mr. Guy, and is prominent in the work of Bethany church and its organizations.

It was the intention of Miss Parks to remain at Kingston until next Wednesday, Jan. 23.

A cablegram to a Boston paper reports that no Americans are missing, which is good news if confirmed.

It was rumored that a family named Blake of Wollaston was at Kingston, Jamaica, but the Daily Ledger has been unable to verify the report.

Franklin Jacobs Passes Away

Word was received this morning of the death at the Soldiers' Home at Chelsea of Franklin Jacobs of Quincy.

Mr. Jacobs has been in poor health for a number of years, being obliged to resign his office as superintendent of the Quincy Home on account of poor health.

Mr. Jacobs came to Quincy from Norwell in 1887, and was appointed superintendent of the Quincy home. He continued to hold that position until succeeded by George Wilson during Mayor Bryant's term of office.

He joined Mt. Wollaston lodge of Odd Fellows in 1888 and filled all of the chairs of that lodge including that of Noble Grand in 1890. He was also its secretary for many years. He joined Manet encampment at its institution and has practically filled all the offices in that order. He was also a deputy, and once a candidate for a Grand lodge office.

During the Civil war he served in the 4th Mass regiment and was honorably discharged. He was a member of Paul Revere Post 88, G. A. R., and for several years was its chaplain. He leaves a widow, a son and daughter.

NEW POLICE

The Mayor Appoints E. H. Bishop Charles Olson

Mayor Thompson has appointed Ernest H. Bishop and Charles Olson as members of the permanent Police force, the appointments to date from Jan. 12. The announcement of the appointments was made at roll call at police headquarters Tuesday night. Both men have seen service during the past few years.

Ernest H. Bishop was born in Guilford, Me., July 19, 1871. He received his education at the Monson academy, Monson, Me., graduating in 1887. The following year he came to Quincy and has resided here ever since. He learned the granite cutters trade at which he was employed until April 12, 1901, when he was appointed a member of the permanent fire force of the city. He had previously served as call man for nine years.

In 1905 he resigned from the fire department to do police duty. In all he has done police duty for over four years, the past two years substituting for one of the regular officers. In June 1906, he was appointed from the civil service list as a member of the reserve force and his appointment to the regular force is in the nature of a promotion from the reserve force.

Charles, Olson was born in Sweden August 7, 1870. He attended school in his native town until arriving at the age of 14 years when he went to work for his father. At the age of 15 years he came to America, locating in Quincy, where he was employed as a stone cutter about 16 years. He has been doing police duty for several years and for the past three years continuous duty as a substitute for a regular officer. In June, 1906, he was appointed a member of the reserve force under the civil service rules, from which he has now been promoted to the regular force.

These two men have been doing permanent duty on the beat formerly taken by Chief Burrell before his appointment as chief, and for Officer Golden who has been sick. It therefore became necesesary to assign two men to these places, and Mayor Thompson has designated Officer Daniel H. Doran and Henry J. Reily, who will go in duty Saturday night.

It is also rumored that there will be a general shake up in the department at that time, and that there is to be a new day man assigned to the City Square beat.

WANTED.

AN APPROPRIATION

in 1907 for a

NEW CODDINGTON

GOOD AFTERNOON.

The order for the printing of the City Book has been introduced into the City Council this year several weeks ahead of last year, and there is a possibility that the reports may be issued before they become ancient history.

It would seem as though Representative Hultman was a little contrary. Last year Quincy was in a double Representative district, but he remained single. This year it was decided to have two single districts but Mr. Hultman has decided that double harness is best. Undoubtedly his later decision is the best so the voters will not ask him to resign, but extend congratulations.

It is a little early to begin to tinker the new Building Ordinance before it has had any trial. Give the board of appeal as constituted a trial, and see what the practical workings will be. There are not many practical builders in the city, and the two the Mayor might name if the ordinance was amended would possibly be interested parties in the building construction proposed.

The city of Newton finds itself near the limit of its water supply, but the mayor recommends that the taking of water from the Metropolitan system should be deferred until the last possible moment owing to the expense. Why should the rich city of Newton be favored? Why is it not forced into the Metropolitan district as was Quincy and other cities? If the expense of the Metropolitan system was apportioned over more cities the assessment on each would be less.

The new system of water at meter rates did not go into effect until this month, and the first meter bills have not yet been issued from City Hall. This should be remembered in comparing water receipts of 1906 with past years. The water receipts of 1906 under old rates were $105,053.50, an increase of $10,214.45 over 1905. With an annual increase like this the Metropolitan assessments would cease to become a bugbear.

Under a meter system, however, there is a possibility that the receipts may decrease, especially if the services metered pay only for the water used. The city would not dare to abolish the minimum rate. The Daily Ledger knows of some fully plumbed houses where the city has just established meters, where the owners expect to have the use of the lawn hose free, that is they will be required to pay only $18 for all the water they want instead of $23. How will the city gain?

Those who have read "Cap'n Eri" or the "Cape Cod ballads" will be pleased to learn that the Daily Ledger has made arrangements to print Joe Lincoln's latest story "Partners of the Tide." The perils of the hero's love affair added to the perils of the sea, furnish plenty of action and make a story of most fascinating interest.

"Partners of the Tide" appear so real, "reads so natural" that you feel the mantle of Defoe must have fallen on the author, or else he has sketched his quaint characters from life. Perhaps both are partly true. A brilliant New York woman, who has summered on the Maine cost for years, has a notebook full of sketches of these people whom she intends to put in a book after they are dead. It need hardly be said that she is not a professional writer or she would be less Quixotic. Joe Lincoln has put them in his story and lives to tell the tale, though he has doubtless made composite characters from many individual types.

TILLMAN'S "MANIA"

Has Developed Into Persistent Attacks Upon Roosevelt

IS SCORED BY SPOONER

Wisconsin Senator Says South Carolinian Has Encouraged Lynching, Murder and Lawlessness--The Latter to Reply

Washington, Jan. 16.—Goaded by frequent interruptions from Mr. Tillman, the speech of Mr. Spooner in the senate on the resolution for an investigation of the affray at Brownsville was changed from a defense of President Roosevelt's course in discharging a negro battalion of the army to a severe arraignment of the South Carolina senator. Spooner quoted from Tillman's utterances defending lynching as a means of controlling negroes and said that to encourage such mob violence was a disgrace to civilization.

The bitter feeling provoked by the controversy between the senators makes it impossible to say when a vote can be had on the resolution. Spooner took the position that article 4 of the articles of war gives to the commander-in-chief of the army the power to dismiss troops. He referred to the affray at Walla Walla, Wash., during President Cleveland's administration, and said that the investigation of that disturbance resulted in a recommendation that the four companies be dismissed. He said the only reason these men were not dismissed was because there was then no authority for such action. The order providing for dismissal "without honor," said Spooner, was made to meet just such cases.

Mr. Tillman asked why the president had not adopted Major Penrose's recommendation for the ferreting out of the guilty.

"The president will never require any defense from the attacks of the senator from South Carolina," was Spooner's reply. "He has developed a mania for attacking the president. He is so filled with animosity for the president and has so often taken occasion to express it that I do not believe his attacks will be taken seriously by the people."

Mr. Spooner quoted from Tillman's utterances defending the burning of negroes at the stake, and said:

"No man ought to encourage such a horrible thing as that. It is a crime against civilization to encourage it. I have been shocked by the attitude of the senator from South Carolina on more than one occasion when he has spoken here in justification and support of the continuance of lynching. If there is one man who ought not to encourage it, it is the man who sits here as the maker of laws."

Disclaiming any intention to abuse Tillman, the Wisconsin senator said it was his purpose only to make a plea for good government.

"And I want to say here," he continued, "that any man who encourages lynching, murder and lawlessness will have much to answer for and the higher his position and the mightier his influence, the more will he have to answer for. No man can come here with good grace to impeach the president for his dismissal of men because they were not identified as criminals, who comes to that accusation from a lynching bee or who justifies one."

After again stating his belief in the legality and justness of the president's action, Spooner concluded his speech with a brief discussion of the race question, declaring his belief that the majority of the people of the south did not entertain the radical views which had been expressed by Tillman. He admitted the difficulties and hardships of the race problem in the south and said the people of the north felt the best way to aid in the solution of these difficulties was for them to refrain from discussing them. In this connection he did not believe the agitation of Tillman could have the effect to quiet the situation. Spooner quoted a newspaper report of one of Tillman's lectures, in which he referred to negroes as baboons and said when asked "How about the law," replied, "To hell with such laws."

Mr. Spooner said he knew of no better way to perpetuate the struggle between the two races than to be constantly and violently declaring such trouble to be imminent and unavoidable.

When Spooner took his seat Tillman remarked that he had expected to have a few words to say to the senator from Wisconsin "in view of the direct personal attack he has made upon me. But the latter part of his speech has widened the scope of the reply I wish to make and therefore I will take occasion in the near future to have something to say on this question and in answer to some of the insulting allusions he has made."

KEEP HANDS OFF

Policy of United States Toward Latin-American Countries

Washington, Jan. 16.—Secretary Root received an ovation when he addressed the session of the national convention for the extension of foreign commerce of the United States. Mr. Root explained the resources of the Latin-American republics and made a plea for closer trade relations with them, saying that the attitude of the United States toward these countries could be put in three sentences:

"First, we don't want to take them ourselves; second, we don't want any foreign nation to take them for themselves, and, third, we want to help them and we will."

"There was," he said, "much talk about annexing Cuba, but never, so long as the people of Cuba do not themselves give up the effort to govern themselves."

Touching upon the tariff, he said, speaking for himself alone, that he favored the policy of maximum and minimum rates. To this view, he said, the country, and for that matter, the whole world, was advancing.

On the subject of reciprocity treaties Secretary Root said there were some countries with which he would like to negotiate such treaties, and this led him into a discussion of the tariff question, in the course of which he favored a maximum and minimum tariff, to which he said the country was coming.

Bryce Glad to Be With Us

Newcastle, Eng., Jan. 16.—In a speech here last night, James Bryce said he had undertaken the difficult and responsible mission of ambassador to the United States with some hesitation. He felt reluctant to leave the work in which he was engaged in this country, but he was sure that there is no task to which a man should be more ready to devote the remainder of his life than that of trying to cement the ties of friendship between Great Britain and the United States.

Stick May Be Too Big

Washington, Jan. 16.—Speaking on the fortifications appropriation bill in the house, Mr. Smith (Ia.) remarked that to man the guns proposed to be mounted by the Taft board would take more than 55,000 men and to do so would cost $66,000,000 a year. "I am a hearty believer in the 'big stick,'" said Smith, "but I do not believe in carrying a stick so large that we will be worn out with its mere weight and cannot wield it when the hour of emergency comes."

Filipino Politicians Uneasy

Manila, Jan. 16.—Governor General Smith has received an address from Mariano Crisosotomo, who arraigns the government for coddling the Filipinos and charges that its conciliatory policy is making the people a nation of weaklings unfit to govern themselves. He asks the government to adopt vigorous measures to restore self-reliance. Politicians fear the address may mean the organization of a new party.

To Check Auto Speeding

New York, Jan. 16.—President Hoyt of the Automobile Club of America and four other members of that organization have constituted themselves a "committee of safety" for the prosecution of automobile speeders and have applied to Police Commissioner Bingham for appointment as special policemen. The applications of Hoyt and of Vice President Scarritt of the club already have been granted.

Judge's Withdrawal Asked For

Frankfort, Ky., Jan. 16.—State Attorney Adams will present to Governor Beckham a petition requesting him to call upon Judge Carnes, the governor's appointee for the case of Judge Hargis and four others, to resign his commission. The petition recites that Carnes "could not try any of the cases without running great risk of being the cause of bloodshed."

Received Retainer Lawfully

Albany, Jan. 16.—Joseph H. Choate was re-elected president of the State Bar association at its annual meeting here. The report of the grievance committee upon its investigation of the annual retainer paid up to 1905 by the Equitable Life Assurance society to David B. Hill approved the findings of the sub-committee, which fully exonerated Hill.

THE TUCKER BORDEREAU

Court Restrains a Newspaper From Using Harris' Story

Boston, Jan. 16.—An injunction was ordered issued by Judge Gaskill of the superior court restraining the publication of a statement by Dr. Harris relating to the Tucker case in the Boston American. Harris complained that the paper was publishing a series of articles purporting to be abstracts from a manuscript of his which he gave to Mr. Vahey, who acted as counsel for Tucker.

Judge Gaskill, in his finding, makes the following comment:

"It appearing that the letter in question was delivered to Mr. Vahey only for use in such ways as he thought advisable toward securing the commutation of the sentence of Tucker, and it having been used by him at a hearing not public before the governor, and a copy having come into the possession of the defendant without authority of Dr. Harris, or Mr. Vahey, I think that its further publication after the execution upon Tucker, should, upon the request of Dr. Harris, be restrained."

KINGSTON'S DOOM

Capital of Jamaica Devastated by an Earthquake

LOSS OF LIFE IS HEAVY

Meagre News of Disaster Which Has Overtaken City of 50,000 Population and Containing Many Fine Buildings

New York, Jan. 16.—Kingston, the picturesque capital of the Island of Jamaica, has been devastated by a violent earthquake. Details of the disaster are lacking, as direct communication with the stricken city has been cut off. The land lines had been reconstructed to within five miles of Kingston Tuesday evening, and from meagre reports received through such channels as were open, it has been learned that many of the most important buildings have been destroyed and that there has been serious loss of life.

So far as the reports indicate, the fatalities number less than 100, though the hospitals are filled with injured and the list of victims may be materially increased.

Kingston and the other points of interest of the island are at this season of the year thronged with tourists from both America and England, and the greatest apprehension is felt for the safety of many persons who had recently arrived at the Jamaican resorts.

The most distinguished of these were members of a party of English statesmen, agricultural experts and men of affairs, who, under the leadership of Sir Alfred Jones, had arrived in Kingston within the past few days to attend an agricultural conference there. Among those in the company were Hall Caine, the novelist; Viscount Montmorres, H. C. Arnold-Forster, M. P.; Sir Thomas Hughes, Sir Thomas Shann, and others of equal prominence. The Earl and Countess of Dudley were also passengers on the steamer which carried out the Jones party.

The first great shock was felt about 3:30 o'clock Monday afternoon and, as in the San Francisco and Valparaiso disasters, flames immediately sprung from the wreckage to carry on the work of destruction. Tuesday afternoon the fire was still burning, although it was believed to be under control.

The Murtle Bank hotel, the principal hotel at Kingston, which probably sheltered the great bulk of visitors on the island, is reported destroyed. The great military hospital was burned and 40 soldiers are reported dead.

Sir James Fergusson is said to have been instantly killed, but, according to London reports, no other Englishman, Canadian or American is believed to be missing.

The extent of the destruction which has been wrought in Kingston, a city which already bears the scars of a number of disastrous visitations of fire, earthquake and cyclone in years gone by, is still left largely to the imagination. The city is one of low-lying buildings, clustered along the shores of one of the finest and most securely land-locked harbors in the West Indies. The population, which numbers 50,000, is largely made up of native blacks.

Many steamers carrying tourists to Jamaica were en route to the island when the earthquake occurred, but it so happens that, according to schedules, none of the ships from New York or Boston was in Kingston harbor Monday afternoon.

Kingston is the capital and principal commercial city and seaport of Jamaica, on its south coast, on the north side of a fine harbor, 10 miles by rail east of Spanish Town. It stands on a gentle slope, and is regularly laid out, its houses being mostly of two stories and furnished with verandas.

The principal buildings are the churches, chapels, synagogues, a hospital and other charitable institutions, a free school, the workhouse, penitentiary, a collegiate and a university school, a Baptist college and a theatre; here are also an athenaeum, a society of arts and banks.

Kingston has five daily and several other newspapers. It is an Anglican bishop's see.

Kingston harbor, a landlocked basin, available for the largest ships, is enclosed on the south by a long tongue of land, at the extremity of which is Port Royal, which was destroyed by an earthquake in 1693. The entrance to the harbor, and the harbor itself, are defended by forts. The inclined plane on which Kingston stands is enclosed on the north by the loftiest ridge of the Blue mountain chain.

The third hottest city in the world—that is what Kingston is called, and no traveller visiting the city and hearing that remark has ever asked the names of the other two.

In spite of the heat, however, the city is habitable, chiefly through three agents—the rains, the "doctor" and "John Crow." By the "doctor" the Jamaican means the cool breeze that pays a morning and an evening visit to the city, laden with comfort and life. "John Crow," the first seen as one enters the city, is black of coat, ragged of wing and red of head; but he is a scavenger of such value that the people call him the street cleaner. Nothing that is thrown into the street escapes his attention, and he keeps the thoroughfares clean of refuse.

Kingston in itself is a city of moderate attractions to one who is accustomed to tropical ways and growths. The foliage, of course, is very beautiful, tall palm trees towering everywhere with their long blanch-like leaves incessantly moving. The buildings are totally different from anything seen anywhere else, being squatty, of a dazzling whiteness, and with queerly peaked roofs.

Then the manners and customs of the people are quaint and interesting. The women work in the streets with hoes and shovels; lazy negro messengers stroll along with their burdens on their heads, and the black policemen are ever willing to oblige the traveler with useful information and are not loath to take a "tip" for their pains.

Pretty Creole girls lounge on the verandas during all hours of the day or night, and wrinkled fruit or sweets venders linger in the deep shadows that the porches mark on the white, glaring streets.

The street cries are novel and strange. Every pedler crying his wares in the streets winds up with the inevitable "Gwine by," which, drawled out in a sing-song way, penetrates every room in the house and brings the housewife to the door as quickly as a bell would.

Kingston was first built in the shape of a cross, owing to the religious fervor of its incorporators, King street running north and south and crossing Queen street running east and west. At the juncture is the "parade ground," a pretty little park with trees and a fountain, pleasantly arranged walks and flower gardens, a favorite resting place for the people after the heat of the day. Each street is 60 feet wide. Since they were laid out the city has grown largely towards the east and towards the north.

Not only is Kingston the metropolis and capital of Jamaica; it is also the most important city in the British West Indies. Its population is cosmopolitan, the English nd Americans predominating among the whites. It was built directly after the destruction of Port Royal. For years it possessed a charter and a seal, but gave up both when the ancient rights of the island were surrendered in Governor Eyre's time.

Perjury Charge Against Fairbanks

Steubenville, O., Jan. 16.—The grand jury returned a verdict for perjury against F. C. Fairbanks, son of Vice President Fairbanks, for perjury in swearing in relation to his marriage to Miss Scott of Pittsburg. The charge is that Fairbanks disguised himself as a working man and said that he was a working man of Adams county and that Miss Scott was a resident of the county. On this statement he secured a marriage license and they were married.

Red Cross Aid If Needed

Washington, Jan. 16.—Secretary Taft announces that the Red Cross society will take immediate steps looking to the relief of the sufferers if the conditions at Kingston prove to be sufficiently serious to justify a call for contributions. No word has reached the war department regarding the earthquake and he cannot tell what the war department may do in the matter until the situation is ascertained.

Terribly Severe Weather

St. Paul, Jan. 16.—Deep snow still covers the tracks of railroads in the northwest and the wind continues to blow a gale. Thermometers registered 55 degrees below zero yesterday at Browning, Mont. There is no point between Grand Forks and Spokane where the temperature is higher than 38 degrees below. Many trains are lost and all telegraph wires are down.

Many Applicants For Marshalship

Washington, Jan. 16.—Interest in the Boston United States marshalship is becoming evident here, as the time draws near for the appointment of the successor to Marshal Darling, whose term expires next month. The fact that Darling has given a good administration does not operate to reduce the number of applicants for the office.

New York, Jan. 16.—George Burnham, Jr., vice president and general counsel for the Mutual Life Reserve Fund Insurance company, who was convicted of grand larceny and sentenced to two years in state prison, must begin his term immediately, the motion for a stay of execution of sentence having been denied.

Objects to Channel Tunnel

London, Jan. 16.—In compliance with a necessary formality in connection with certain private bills submitted to parliament, War Secretary Haldane has announced his dissent from the scheme to construct a tunnel under the British channel to connect England and France.

Turkish Ruler's Cordiality

Constantinople, Jan. 16.—The sultan was extremely cordial to Mr. Leishman, the American ambassador, and the staff of the embassy at the audience and dinner at the palace last night. After the dinner the party attended a theatrical performance in the palace.

Higher Wages For Engineers

Chicago, Jan. 16.—Committees representing railroad managers and locomotive engineers entered into an agreement here which will affect about 27,000 engineers. The agreement provides a general increase in wages and readjustment of hours.

Mourning Period of Six Weeks

Partners of the Tide

BY JOE LINCOLN

Author of "CAP'N ERI," "CAPE COD BALLADS" Etc.

If you read "Cap'n Eri" you will want to read "Partners of the Tide;" if you did not read "Cap'n Eri" you ought to read "Partners of the Tide." But whether you begin to read from motives of duty or pleasure, you cannot escape the pleasure in store for you.

Mr. Lincoln seems to have an inexhaustible fund of quaint Yankee humor with the twang of the salt sea in it. His new story not only sparkles with this indigenous fun but throbs with an undertone of tenderness, so that you are in doubt whether tears or smiles are the proper tribute to pay and you pay both.—Nashville American.

AGREE TO SUBSIDY

House Committee In Favor of the Littauer Subs itute

BUT TWO CHANGES MADE

Seven Subsidized Mail Lines With Annual Subvention of About $3,750,000 -Thirty-Five American Ships Required

Washington, Jan. 16.—After a fight which lasted all day and extended to the floor of the house, threatening to bring about much filibustering at one time, the house committee on merchant marine and fisheries finally decided at 6 o'clock p. m., by a vote of 8 to 7, to make a favorable report on a ship subsidy bill prepared by Representative Littauer of New York as a substitute for the Grosvenor bill, which has been under discussion for many weeks.

The members of the committee who supported the measure were Grosvenor, Minor, Littlefield, Fordney, Wachter, Humphrey, Watson and Littauer, all Republicans. The negative votes were cast by Birdsall, Wilson and Hinshaw, Republicans, and Goulden, Maynard, Sherley and Patterson, Democrats.

Seven subsidized mail lines are provided for in the bill to be reported, with an annual subvention estimated at $3,750,000. Two of the lines are to be from the Atlantic coast to South America, and one from the Gulf of Mexico to Colon. From the Pacific coast there are to be three lines to the Orient and one line to the west coast of South America.

Only two changes were made by the committee in the bill as originally drawn by Littauer. Instead of actually fixing San Francisco and the Puget sound as the points of departure of the two lines to Japan, China and the Philippines, the committee amended Littauer's bill so that one of the lines is to start from a point north of Cape Mendocino and the other from a point south of Cape Mendocino.

The substitute bill provides for a naval reserve fleet along the lines of the senate subsidy bill. The bill requires that all ships be of 16-knot speed, except that from the gulf to Colon, which is to be 14 knots. It requires that the ships be built in America and owned by Americans and repaired in American drydocks and that they shall be available as auxiliary cruisers in time of war. To meet the requirements of the bill about 35 ships would be required, and most of these would have to be built. It will require four years to build the ships.

With a fortnightly service established, this being provided in the bill, the line to Rio will receive $600,000 annually, to Buenos Ayres $800,000, the west coast line $600,000, and two Oriental lines $700,000 each, and the Colon line $75,000. The Oceanic line from San Francisco to Australia will receive $200,000 in addition to the $300,000 now paid.

Girls Sold to Highest Bidders

La Crosse, Wis., Jan. 16.—The county authorities have begun an official investigation of charges that girls under the age of consent, which in Wisconsin is 14 years, are being sold to the highest bidders in the Syrian colony at North La Crosse. Evidence has been submitted that a 13-year-old girl had been bid in for $300 in behalf of the prospective groom, and that her parents, receiving a bid of $450 later, are attempting to repudiate the first sale.

Attitude of French Bishops

Paris, Jan. 16.—The answer of the French bishops in reply to the pope's question as to what attitude the episcopate would adopt in the event of further prosecutions is reported to be as follows: The development of events must be awaited. In the meanwhile worship will continue provisionally, without provocation and without yielding. No arrangements for the future will be made, and the new laws simply will be ignored.

Testimony Wanted at Gloucester

St. Johns, Jan. 16.—The supreme court has again adjourned the hearing of argument in the herring fishery appeal case in order to determine if it is permissible to form a commission to take evidence at Gloucester, Mass., respecting the terms upon which the Newfoundland fishermen had shipped on board the American herring vessels outside the three-mile limit.

Cabinet Officers Confirmed

Washington, Jan. 16.—The senate, in executive session, confirmed the nominations of Messrs. Cortelyou and Garfield. The nomination of George Von L. Meyer, to be postmaster general, was also confirmed, as was that of Herbert K. Smith to be commissioner of corporations. None of the nominations, except that of Smith, will take effect until March 4.

Insurance President to Retire

New York, Jan. 16.—The Herald says that Alexander E. Orr will retire from the presidency of the New York Life Insurance company when the new trustees have been granted their certificates of election. Vice President Kingsley will be his successor, it is stated on the best authority.

New Senator From Idaho

Boise, Ida., Jan. 16.—The Idaho legislature elected William E. Borah United States senator to succeed Mr. Dubois. Borah received 50 votes as against 18 for Dubois.

FAMILY INTERFERENCE.

Rock on Which Many a Happy Marital Ship Has Been Wrecked.

Many a good matrimonial ship, with its sunlit cargo of happiness and hope, has been wrecked on the rocks of family interference.

It is in the first years of married life that foreign interference is most trying and dangerous, and it is this very time when it is most conspicuous and dominant.

These early years are time of gradual adjustment to new conditions, the formative period of harmonizing with a new environment, of growth in mutual understanding, perhaps of meeting disappointment and of rising superior to it or of sadly revising golden dreams and unrealized ideals, of taking trial balances on the ledger of happiness, of awakening to the wisdom of mutual concessions, of learning new lessons in the school of experience that can never be learned vicariously.

These are the problems of two that must be solved by them. They need only kindness, sympathy, generous cooperation.

There is no need for the family to remind the wife that the husband is not eighteen carat, that he will never make a fortune, that they fear greatly and then let their fear expand into a long catalogue of detail that fades away into the dim perspective of the unspoken.

After the goods are bought and sent home and cannot be returned what is the use of discouraging the purchaser? Why not point out some good points, something helpful and inspiring?

Sometimes the interference of families becomes even more active and aggressive than this, and because of a fancied grievance or a genuine opposition it actually comes between husband and wife and lay harsh criticism or condemnation seeks to plant the seeds of discord between them.

Here instant loyalty of the one to the other should assert itself and refuse to listen to the voice. In an instinctive spirit of protection there should be a calm, dignified protest of what if unessential should never be spoken and if of serious import should be expressed only in the presence of the one thus charged with what he or she should have the opportunity of denying or disproving before the weeds of suspicion have time to root themselves in the heart of the other.—Delineator.

WINDOW DRAPERY.

An English Scheme of Artistic Interior Decoration.

The following illustration with explanation from the fashionable English ladies' home paper, the London Queen, is presented here because of the suggestions it contains in the always interesting matter of window drapery:

"Here is a little sketch which I hope may be of use to you in the arrangement of the side curtains and casement blinds, which seems to puzzle you so much. It is from a window treated by Messrs. Story of High street, Kensington, with curtains and valance of shadow damask (a delightful all wool fabric reproduced from an old textile), with casement blinds of printed challis cloth. You see, one set of curtains does not interfere in the least with the other set, as they are hung from different rods. The casement blinds have their own pulley arrangement for drawing and undrawing."

Naughty Children.

There is doubtless much truth in the statement made by the Lancet, the authoritative English medical journal, that most naughty children are sick children. "A large amount of the so called naughtiness of children," says the Lancet, "may be accounted for upon grounds which quite exclude the desirability of punishment for its correction." Among these "grounds" are insufficient sleep, excitement, overflowing animal spirits or actual disease in the form of supersensitive nerves. Further, the Lancet adds, "The faculty of imitation is strongly developed in some children, and they may copy unconsciously a bad habit in deed or in word of a parent or a teacher."

A Laundry Hint.

It is advisable when folding and damping clothes for ironing to spread first a large linen handkerchief or napkin and sprinkle it, then spread a layer of cotton or part cotton handkerchiefs, then another napkin, then damp again. Alternate this way until all are done, then roll in a towel. Linen absorbs moisture more easily than cotton or lawn, so in this way all become dampened evenly.

QUINCY WOMEN'S CLUB.

The Quincy Women's club received a very acceptable present recently from one of its members, Mrs. Charles M. Bryant, who presented the club with a die and stationery. The stationery is printed in blue ink and is very pretty and something the club needed.

Mrs. Bryant's gift will probably receive due recognition at the board meeting in February as the officers appreciate the gift.

The club is indebted to Mr. William A. Bradford for a very charming calendar.

FIRST CHURCH ALLIANCE.

One of the best meetings of the Quincy Alliance was held on Monday afternoon in the parish parlor of First church. The speaker was Rev. Adelbert Hudson of Newton who spoke on the Mormon question. Mr. Hudson was for several years pastor of the Unitarian church in Salt Lake city and had many reformed Mormons in this church. He gave the ladies a clear insight into the belief and and life of these people presenting many new facts. The worst feature, polygamy was dying out and would soon be only a matter of history. Mr. Hudson talked for nearly an hour and many regretted that they could not meet him personally as he was obliged to catch a train.

A short business meeting was held after the address, which was followed by a social hour and refreshment. Mrs. Leonard and Mrs. Saville poured chocolate. The meeting was a small one probably on account of the weather but it was a particularly social one, the ladies lingering over the teacups and chatting in a neighborly fashion.

CLUB NOTES.

The Worcester Woman's club one of the largest in the state, recently voted $500 toward the expenses of the biennial meeting of the General Federation of Women's clubs to be held early in 1908 in Boston, plans for which are already being made by the State Federation.

At the home afternoon of the Milton Woman's club on Jan 7th it was voted to establish a college fund for the use of Milton girls who may need assistance in meeting their college expenses. A musicale is to be given in February to raise funds for this purpose. The club also voted $100 for the biennial to be held in Boston.

The Woburn Woman's club observes gentlemen's night on Jan. 18th with a reception; a humorous recital by Mrs. Emily Gregory of New York entitled "Calvin Days in Dixie," assisted by the Misses Turner in southern songs; followed by dancing and refreshments.

Dr. Benjamin F. Trueblood is to speak on "The Federation of the World" at the next meeting of the Old Colony club of Weymouth on Jan. 24th.

Guest night of the Dorchester Woman's club is observed tonight. The entertainment will be "My Ladies' Ring," by Miss Katherine Jewell Evarts. There will be a reception and dancing and whist.

On Jan. 22d the Brighthelmstone club Brighton will hold the last of a series of evening whist parties, which the club members have found very social and enjoyable.

The Brockton Woman's club is preparing for an arts and crafts exhibit.

Miss Grace Chamberlain gave a dramatic recital of "King Rene's Daughter" on Friday evening Jan. 11th, under the auspices of the Ousamequin club of Bridgewater.

☞ Tainted money evidently has no terrors for the political parties of Boston. The treasury of the Hotel Men's association furnished $2500 to each of the leading political committees for the last municipal campaign, the Democrats and Republicans sharing alike, and the fact is reported without a suggestion of a blush on the face of the party managers. This was done, presumably, after the midnight law had been passed and as a sort of a thank offering for the favor that had been extended.—Haverhill Gazette.

PREVENTION OF FIRE

Numerous Recommendations Made By the Underwriters

The Committee on Fire Prevention of the Insurance Underwriters, with headquarters at New York, have just issued the following report of their investigation in Quincy last summer, and they have asked the co-operation of the insurance agents of the city to secure the improvements recommended.

When viewed from a New York standpoint our fire protection may seem inadequate; much the same as Quincy people would view the protection in many country towns in New England which have no fire apparatus and no water service. Quincy people have, however, been proud of their Fire department and its record in recent years and the very small losses show the practical workings.

There are chances for improvement, and they are being made annually. Many of the improvements recommended have been voluntarily adopted before the report was made, such as the adoption of a building ordinance providing for an inspector and for fire districts, etc, etc.

However, the Daily Ledger prints the report in full below that readers may form their own opinions:

WATER SUPPLY.

1. That all possible measures be adopted to prevent waste and unnecessary use of water.

MAINS.

2. That the distribution system be reinforced by the installation of the following additional mains:

12 inches along Atlantic and Squantum streets and Faxon road, from Hancock street to Edwin street.

12 inches along Granite, Fort and Pleasant streets, from Hancock street to Water street.

10 inches along Washington and Wharf streets, about 400 feet south of South street to Town River Bay.

8 inches along Sea street from Babcock street to Dead end.

3. That the following be adopted as the standard minimum sizes of mains used for hydrant supply; mains of the sizes named can be considered satisfactory only when forming a part of a well gridironed and cross-connected system:

a. For outlying residential districts not likely to become closely built up, 6-inch.

b. For closely built residential districts, 8-inch.

c. For manufacturing and mercantile districts, 12-inch.

4. That all mains supplying hydrants, which are not more than 4 inches in diameter, be forthwith replaced according to the foregoing recommendations.

5. That the distribution system be further strengthened by the installation of additional mains so located as to give fire engine supply as follows; this supply to be in excess of domestic consumption and to be available within such distance of any point that the average distance to hydrants will not exceed 350 feet:

a. In outlying residential districts, a minimum of 2,000 gallons per minute.

b. In closely built residential districts, from 3,000 to 5,000 gallons per minute.

c. In manufacturing and mercantile districts, from $5,000 to 7,000 gallons per minute.

6. That dead ends of mains be eliminated wherever practicable.

Note.—The National Board believes that it is essentially the business of each municipality to lay out its own system of distributing water mains, as it is best able to judge of the present and future consumption in each district, and of other local conditions involving pressures, size and type of hydrant, etc.; but practical experience has shown that the above quantities are required for good fire protection in districts such as are found in this city, and that a gridiron system of mains of the sizes recommended above is satisfactory only when cross-connected at all intersections, free from dead ends and with larger secondary cross-feeder mains at frequent intervals.

GATE VALVES.

7. That at least one employe of the water department, familiar with the distribution system, be detailed to attend all second alarm fires, to operate gates and otherwise co-operate with the fire department.

8. That the distribution system be equipped with a sufficient number of gate valves, so located that no single case of accident, breakage or repair to the pipe system in important mercantile or manufacturing districts will necessitate the shutting from service a length of main greater than the side of a single block or a maximum if about 500 feet, or in other districts lengths greater than two sides of a single block or a maximum of about 800 feet.

9. That all gate valves be inspected at least once in six months and kept in good working order, and records be kept of inspections and condition.

HYDRANTS.

10. That all future installations of hydrants have at least one 4 1-2-inch steamer outlet and one or more hose outlets, each provided with independent gate, not less than 6-inch barrel and connected with main by pipe at least 6 inches in diameter, the latter fitted with gate between street main and hydrant.

11. That the interval between adjacent hydrants in important mercantile manufasturing and warehouse districts shall not exceed 250 feet, and in residential districts 350 feet, except in thinly settled outlying sections.

12. That threads of hydrant outlets conform to the National Standard, which is as follows:

	In.	In.
Normal size of connection,	2 1-2	4 1-2
Outside diameter male thread,	3 1-16	5 3-4
Threads, per	7 1-2	4

13. That all hydrants be inspected at least once in two months and records kept of inspections and repairs.

14. That measures be taken to prevent damage to hydrants resulting from the present indiscriminate use by the street and sewer departments.

FIRE DEPARTMENT.

15. That additional full paid and part paid call men be provided so that the strength of the companies will be as follows:

Companies.	Full Men.	Paid Call Men.	Least No.*
Central Station, Engine, Ladder and Combination Hose,	13	10	8
Double, Ladder and Hose,	7	5	5
Double, Ladder and Proposed Engine,	11	8	7
Hose, plain,	4	4	3
Hose, combination,	4	4	3

*Least number of men to be in quarters at any time.

16. That chief, assistant chiefs, captains, lieutenants, drivers, engineers and stokers be full paid men.

17. That the chief be appointed to serve for an indefinite term, and be removed only for cause.

18. That provision be made for call members to sleep in quarters and they are encouraged in taking advantage of it.

19. That members be retired from active fire duty on reaching the age of 62 years, unless at that time they are unusually efficient.

20. That one of the more competent members of the department be designated supervisor of engines and be held responsible for the condition of all engines and the training of engineers and stokers.

21. That a member of each engine company, in addition to the engineer and stoker, be regularly drilled in stoking the engine.

22. That candidates for the positions of engineers and assistant engineers be thoroughly examined as to their ability in running and caring for the engines and only those who are fully competent be appointed.

ADDITIONAL COMPANIES.

23. That the engine located at central station be replaced by a second size reciprocating engine.

24. That the hose company in Wollaston be replaced by an engine company equipped with a second size reciprocating engine and a combination hose wagon carrying two 35 gallon chemical tanks, 250 feet of chemical hose and 1,000 feet of 2 1-2 inch hose.

ENGINES.

25. That every engine be given an exhaustive test twice a year, pumping for half an hour or more against a water pressure of 100 pounds in excess of hydrant pressure. Engines when properly handled to maintain a discharge of at least 90 per cent. of their reasonable rating, develop not more than seven per cent. slip and disclose no serious defects. Engines which when recently tested by the National Board failed to meet these requirements should be immediately put in good condition, their crews efficiently trained or both.

26. That those engines which at any test fail to meet the requirements of recommendation No. 25 be overhauled, their crews drilled, or both, until such deficiencies are corrected. Continued failure to meet the requirements to be followed by rebuilding or discarding the engine.

27. That no engine, which when tested after overhauling, is unable to maintain a discharge of 500 gallons per minute be retained either for service or in reserve.

HOSE AND HOSE WAGONS.

28. That every hose wagon carry at least 1,000 feet of 2 1-2-inch or larger hose and that the same amount of hose be held in reserve at each station, and that the hose be shifted weekly.

29. That all hose couplings conform to the National Standard.

30. That all hose be tested twice a year at a pressure of 200 pounds and defective sections discarded.

31. That each hose wagon be equipped with two 35 gallon chemical tanks, 250 feet of chemical hose and at least one 20 foot extention ladder.

MINOR EQUIPMENT.

32. That engines be provided with a compound pressure gage on the suction side of the pumps.

33. That each engine company be equipped with a deluge set or other device for conveniently handling powerful streams, and that their use be a part of the regular routine at serious fires.

34. That ladder trucks be provided with door openers and pompier ladders, and carry salvage appliances including at least six waterproof covers.

35. That hose wagons carry burst hose jackets, and in addition to the two shut-off nozzles, at least two smooth nozzles, a cellar pipe and distributing nozzle.

OPERATION.

36. That companies be drilled weekly under the supervision of competent officers. In engine companies drills should include the steaming of engines and throwing of water, and the use of deluge sets; and in the ladder companies the stripping of trucks and raising of ladders.

There is a condition in the will that provides if there is not enough property to carry out the provisions, a less amount shall be given the hospital. Graves Robbed Women Fined Inez Berry and Anna Woods, two Holbrook women, were arraigned in court this morning of removing memorials from graves at the Union cemetery at Holbrook.

Numerous complaints have been made to Chief of Police Crooker of the removing of flowers and memorials from graves at the cemetery. The last case was early in the present year, when it was reported that ribbon had been removed from flowers on the grave of a young son of Charles Mills.

State Officer Scott was called into the case, and from information received the Berry and Woods women were called upon, and after some conversation they admitted that they had taken the ribbon which they produced. The Woods woman wearing at the time about her neck a piece of white ribbon taken from the grave. A fine of $20 was imposed upon each of them.

NEW CODDINGTON

GOOD AFTERNOON.

Possibly that York, Pa., prophet who predicted the end of the world in two years, merely wanted to start Mr. Rockefeller to worrying about his property.

Wonder what the Mayor meant when he said at the Board of Trade meeting that "he did not mean that they should butt in." Has the Board been guilty, or was he knocking the Citizens Association?

Good for Mr. Chamberlin of Brockton! He said in his address at Quincy this week that "a man is contemptible who will go outside and talk down his own city." Quincy could learn much in this direction from Brockton. Our city has a bright future, and is making remarkable progress, and the sooner our people realize it the better.

President Roosevelt has won immortal fame and undying gratitude by his vigorous fight against the Standard Oil Co. This mighty monster that has made and unmade our government officials at their desire, is at last about to receive long-delayed justice. Their stock has already shrunk more than $140,000,000 and is still shrinking. They have been invoking the law, when it served them, and nullifying it when it suited their purpose. Now we have them on the rack and it is thought that this hideous monster will be destroyed from the face of the earth.

Per capita statistics are almost proverbally deceptive. One reads of so much money "per capita" being in circulation. Consulting one's pocket-book it is found not to indicate the possession of all this money. "Somebody has it who has no right to it," says the Anarchist, and he starts out with a bomb to make trouble for people generally. The Socialist says that what is necessary is to collect all the wealth into a common fund and then sit down and enjoy it.—Lynn Item.

Per capita consumption of water makes it appear that everybody is wasteful, when really it is the shipyard and other large plants which use the water.

It would be very nice if the city could adopt all the recommendations of the committee of the underwriters, but inasmuch as every dollar allowed by law is annually appropriated by the city for current expenses it will not be easy to provide the means. Quincy needs more police, but must increase the force gradually. It needs more street lights, more sidewalks, more school teachers, more schoolhouses, and should teach manual training as required by law. In fact there are no limits to the imperative wants. The city has been as liberal to the Water department and the Fire department as it could afford, and for a city as widely scattered as Quincy the demands of the insurance underwriters seem unreasonable.

Local and City Brevities

James H. Webb, who was appointed janitor of the High school building, finds that it is quite a job, two men at least are required all of the time and there is work enough for three men.

Mr. Sumner B. Pearman, of the well known firm of Pearman & Brooks, will be the speaker on Tuesday evening at the Congregational club of Wollaston. His subject will be "The Stock Exchange," of which he is a member.

AMERICANS SAFE

Were Two Thousand In Kingston at Time of Disaster

SITUATION VERY SERIOUS

People Panic-Stricken and Food Short and Medical Supplies Exhausted--Conditions Appear to Be Worse Than First Reported

New York, Jan. 17.—Very few messages, and these meagre and lacking in detail, have been received direct from Jamaica to give additional information of the devastation and death wrought by the earthquake that ravaged Kingston on Monday afternoon. Such intelligence as has come through, however, shows the situation to be apparently more serious than was outlined in the first official reports received at the colonial office in London.

Cable communication with Jamaica seems to be almost impossible, either on account of the local disruption of the lines and system, or possibly because of the absolute precedence given in British colonies to official dispatches.

The devastation would appear to have been confined to the vicinity of Kingston, one dispatch giving 10 miles as the radius of damage. The rest of the island, including Port Antonio, does not seem to have suffered severely. The estimates of dead range from 100 to 1000, but with the exception of Sir James Fergusson and half a dozen other white men, there is no mention of fatalities to foreigners. The American tourists who were at Kingston at the time, estimated at about 2000 persons, appear to be safe.

The estimate of persons injured is placed in the thousands. It is feared that when the ruins of the city are searched the casualty list will be materially increased. A large majority of the 50,000 population of Kingston is black and it is probable that nearly all the casualties were among the people. It is reported that about 40 black soldiers were burned to death in a military hospital near the city

Looting and disorder, including raids on rum shops by the blacks, followed the catastrophe, but prompt repressive measures restored order. Panic prevails, however, and especially as the earth shocks occurred Tuesday and yesterday, and a great number of the city's population have fled to the neighboring countryside. Food supplies are beginning to be urgently needed and the demand upon medical supplies has exhausted the stock on hand.

The fire that followed the disaster would appear to have been confined to that section of the city bordering on the waterfront. The flames were supposed to have been checked, but a later dispatch indicates that they may have again broken out. The shipping in the harbor is said to have escaped undamaged.

The navy department has sent the battleships Missouri and Indiana from Guantanamo, Cuba, to Kingston to render all the aid possible.

Any reliable estimate of the property damage is impossible. It is reported that the business section is in ruins and that a large bank building and a big hotel have been destroyed, while other messages say that almost all the houses of the Jamaican capital have been destroyed and those in a radius of 10 miles damaged.

The very much more serious aspect of the situation given by the messages received from Jamaica itself have not been confirmed by official reports.

Some of the messages emanating from Jamaica are without date and it is thus impossible to tell whether they refer to the panic of the first hours and give exaggerated reports of casualties or are sent at a time when greater calm prevailed and actual estimates of the situation have been made.

That the conditions in Jamaica are more serious than was supposed yesterday morning is attested by the fact that a message received at the state department in Washington dated Jamaica, Jan. 16, 3:31 p. m., said, among other things, "Kingston destroyed. Hundreds of lives lost."

"Thousand Persons Killed"

St. Thomas, D. W. I., Jan. 17.—Reports received here from Jamaica say it is estimated that 1000 persons have been killed by the earthquake and fire, and that 90,000 persons are homeless. The damage to Kingston alone is placed at fully $10,000,000.

The stench at Kingston is described as awful. There is no fodder for animals and famine is imminent. Money is useless. The banks have been burned, but the vaults are supposed to be safe. The misery on all sides is indescribable.

United States to the Rescue

Washington, Jan. 17.—Official news of the disaster at Kingston, Jam., reached Washington slowly. The first report arrived well along in the afternoon when a dispatch received at the state department was regarded as warranting the taking of instant measures for relief.

The appeal for food supplies directed attention to the fact that under ordinary conditions none of the government supplies could be used for outside relief, save by special authority of congress.

That fact, however, did not prevent Secretary Metcalf from ordering two supply ships with full cargoes of food at once to Jamaica, leaving for tomorrow the question as to how the supplies are to be given to the needy inhabitants.

The war department, up to the close of business, had not acted upon the application for food, but it is assumed that in anticipation of the passage of the necessary legislation by congress it will at least take care to get supplies to the island ready for the distributing agencies.

There are stores of food at San Juan, P. R., and at Havana that might be used for emergencies, leaving the department to draw later on upon larger stocks at New York.

Eastern Part of Town Saved

Halifax, Jan. 17.—C. F. Longley, a Halifax shipping broker, received a cablegram from Kingston last night stating that his relatives in the stricken city were safe. The dispatch stated that the eastern part of the town largely escaped the general destruction.

Mount Etna Waking Up

Catania, Jan. 17.—The earthquake at Kingston was coincident with increased activity of Mount Etna and slight earthquakes in the Medonian mountains. The volcano is throwing out a considerable quantity of ashes and subterranean detonations are heard. The present phenomena are similar to those of 1893, when one of the most severe eruptions occurred.

Mount Vesuvius Affected

Naples, Jan. 17.—Professor Matteucci, director of the observatory at Mount Vesuvius, reports increased agitation of this volcano coincident with the Kingston earthquake.

Suicide an Alleged Defaulter

Philadelphia, Jan. 17.—The late Congressman Robert Adams, Jr., of this city, who committed suicide in his apartments in Washington by shooting, was declared in the orphans court here to have been a defaulter to the amount of $70,000. The assertion was made during an argument in surcharge proceedings brought against H. C. Adams, surviving executor and trustee of the estate of his father, Robert Adams, Sr., by his stepmother and his stepsister.

Investment Scheme Collapses

Indianapolis, Jan. 17.—George F. Hull has been appointed receiver of the "1904 Georgia Colony company," an investment scheme operated by P. H. Fitzgerald. The plaintiffs allege that $70,000 came to Fitzgerald and that he used only $20,000 in improving the property. Fitzgerald was indicted by the federal grand jury some time ago for using the mails to defraud in connection with the colony company.

Calm Prevails In Venezuela

Caracas, Jan. 17.—New Year's week has passed without noteworthy incident in Venezuelan history. Two coups d'etat were predicted for the beginning of 1907. One would have made Vice President Gomez dictator, the other would have given the dictatorship to Dr. Revenga, President Castro's private physician. Neither rumor seems to have had any foundation in fact.

To Examine Tuskegee Books

Montgomery, Ala., Jan. 17.—In the house, a resolution was presented authorizing the governor to examine the books and accounts of the Booker Washington negro school at Tuskegee and to report to the state. This school receives a small appropriation from the state, but is supported by contributions from philanthropists of the north.

Complaints by Telephone

Teheran, Jan. 17.—Owing to complaints of inability to approach the shah with grievances because of his entourage, the shah has ordered that telephonic communication be installed between the palace and a public square, and has invited his subjects to use this telephone in order to enter into direct communication with himself.

Ohio Town Flood-Stricken

Portsmouth, O., Jan. 17.—A state of alarm has seized the city over the discovery that the flood tide outlets are out of working order. The water from overflowing sewers has filled the basements in many business houses. Much damage to property is expected. Many families have been forced to flee from their houses.

Escaped Officer and Met Death

Boston, Jan. 17.—In trying to escape from an officer of the hospital for inebriates and dipsomaniacs at Foxboro, from which institution he had left without permission, Patrick McMahon, 45 years old, was killed last night by a fall from a three-story window of a house on Milford street.

Fraudulently Used Mails

New Orleans, Jan. 17.—N. C. Collins and J. F. Barrett, recently convicted of using the United States mails for fraudulent purposes in connection with the operation of the "Co-operative Turf association," were denied a new trial and sentenced to one year in prison and to pay a fine of $250 each.

Aged Spinsters Suffocated

Cleveland, Jan. 17.—Misses Anna A. White, aged 76, and Mary L. Blair, aged 60 were found dead at their home here last night by a neighbor. The house was filled with natural gas fumes and asphyxiation evidently caused the death of the aged women.

Arkansas Senator Bounced

Little Rock, Jan. 17.—Senator Reuben R. Adams was expelled from the senate and in his stead William Lambert was appointed by the governor. When Senator Butt was convicted of bribery, Adams admitted accepting a bribe.

The Weather Forecast

A NEW RESOLUTION

Foraker Substitute For Investigating Brownsville Affair

ACCEPTABLE TO SENATE

Carmack Defends President's Action and Pays Respects to Tillman, Foraker and the Cultivated Negroes of the North

Washington, Jan. 17.—Senate leaders regard the end of the Brownsville discussion in sight and it is expected that before the close of the week a compromise resolution offered by Senator Foraker just before the close of yesterday's session will be adopted. Mr. Foraker has the floor to make what he expresses the hope will be the concluding speech on the subject. Whether he speaks today or tomorrow, it is expected that a vote will soon follow.

Mr. Foraker offered a substitute for all of his previous resolutions on the Brownsville affair, as follows:

"Resolved, That the committee on military affairs is hereby authorized and directed, by sub-committee or otherwise, to take and have printed the testimony for the purpose of ascertaining all the facts with reference to or connected with the affray at Brownsville, Tex., on the night of Aug. 13, 1906. Said committee is authorized to send for persons and papers, to administer oaths, to sit during the sessions of the senate and, if deemed advisable, at Brownsville or elsewhere, the expenses of the investigation to be paid out of the contingent fund of the senate."

The language of the provision is satisfactory to supporters of the administration in the matter of the discharge of the negro troops, and it is believed by senators that it will be quite unanimously accepted.

The feature of the debate yesterday was the arraignment by Senator Carmack of Republican senators who have criticised the president for his action in the Brownsville matter. He regarded it as an attempt to "dethrone" the president as the leader of the party.

Senator Carmack referred sarcastically to Senator Tillman's recent speech attacking the president, and said: "With all due respect to my friend from South Carolina, it seems to me his premises were on one side of the earth and his conclusions on the other."

Mr. Carmack paid his respects to the president as follows: "I think it proper to say that any report that senators may have heard that the president personally solicited my support in this matter, that he urged me to forgive and forget certain energetic personal remarks and begged me to stand between him and those twin enemies of his administration, the senators from South Carolina and Ohio, is a gross exaggeration. Nor is it true that I have been moved to undertake the president's defense because of my infatuated devotion to the man."

He declared that the resolution adopted at a Massachusetts meeting in Boston of negroes came from the most educated men of the race. He charged that this illustrates that even the most educated and cultivated of the race defended the guilty among them. He indirectly impugned the motives of Foraker. He said he could not understand what motive the president could have to deal unjustly with the discharged soldiers, but he could understand the motive which might prompt the attack of Foraker upon the president.

Mr. Carmack referred to Foraker's criticism of Major Blocksom, which, he said, was due to the fact that "his father was a Democrat." Continuing, he said:

"I can remember with what frantic energy he used to wave the bloody shirt—a shirt dyed with the crimson current of his own rhetoric. I should not have to go back 40 years or make any inquiry into the senator's pedigree to prove by such evidence that the senator from Ohio is the last man to sit in judgment in a case of murder where a negro was the murderer and a southern white man was his victim. But I will not do the senator such gross injustice as to judge his heart by the testimony of his own mouth."

Maintaining that the president had no alternative in his action, Carmack said: "It may be a sound maxim in criminal jurisprudence that it is better that 99 guilty men should escape than that one innocent man should be hanged, but it is not true that it is better that 99 murderers shall wear the uniform of the United States and carry its guns to slaughter peaceful citizens than that one innocent soldier shall be discharged. Such a maxim would destroy the discipline of any army."

The conclusion of Carmack's speech was a sensational attack on the Republican party, which he charged with turning against the president because of the latter's attack upon the trusts. The attitude of certain Republican senators in the Brownsville affray were, he declared, due to their general opposition to the president.

Addressing the Republicans, he said: "You have got to nominate Theodore Roosevelt or give the Democrats back their platform."

May Have Stolen $50,000

Montreal, Jan. 17.—W. J. McGee was arrested for the misappropriation of funds in his possession as secretary of the Mutual Loan and Building society. The amount involved, it is alleged, may reach $50,000.

TRIAL MARRIAGES.

A Queer Old Custom That Existed For Ages In Scotland.

"Handfasting" was a custom that existed for ages in Scotland. The contracting parties met at the annual fairs in their several districts. There young men chose the maids who best pleased them. They joined hands and by that act became man and wife until the corresponding day of the following year. If the love and fortunes of the pairs had prospered during the year, on the anniversary of their meeting they were legally married by the priest; if all had not been well, then they parted.

The practice is supposed to have arisen from the scarcity of clergy. If the pair decided to part at the end of the twelvemonth, the bride was at liberty to marry another man, her apprenticeship to matrimony not carrying with it any reproach to her. Such marriages were by custom made legal. Any issue resulting from the union would in the case of a second marriage be taken by the father and rank as heir after the children of the marriage which lasted for life.

Many weddings were unmade at the end of the year, but it was dangerous if the initiative were taken by the man who had wedded the kinswoman of a chief. When a Macdonald of Sleat availed himself of his right to send back the sister of a Macleod of Dungaven, the latter resented it as an indignity. "He had no bonfire to celebrate his wedding, but he shall have one to solemnize his divorce." Macleod swore. He kept his word, and a terrible vendetta between the clans resulted.

ODDITIES IN GRAVES.

A Woman Who, Born, Living and Dying Cross, Was Buried Cross.

There is a curious old gravestone in Prestbury churchyard which records the fact that one woman at least in England died a bachelor. Her name was Sarah Pickford, and the stone gravely informs the reader she was there interred "August ye 17, Anno Dom. 1703, and died a Bachelour in the 48th yeare of her age."

A stone in Westminster abbey records the interment there of George Graham, who was the only workman that received the honor of being buried in Westminster abbey. He was a scientific instrument maker, who in 1700 invented the deadbeat escapement in clocks. His funeral was attended by the Royal society in a body.

In East Ham churchyard there is a tombstone placed crossways. The woman interred is said to have been born cross, lived cross, married a Mr. Cross and died cross. Her dying request was to be buried cross, and this was carried out.

As to more ancient graves, that of Noah is reported to be in the small town of Nakhitchevan, near the foot of Mount Ararat, and is sixty feet in length. Another tradition says that the grave is merely a niche in the wall of an abandoned fortress.—London Chronicle.

A Direct Appeal.

A story is told of a New York car conductor who had once been in the ministry and who retained some of his former ways of speech in his new calling. He had been at the front of the car collecting fares, and when he returned to his platform a well disposed person told him that a man had boarded the car at Houston street and had found a place inside. The conductor stepped inside the doorway and ran his mild gaze up and down the car, but could not be sure which of the tightly packed passengers was the late arrival.

"Will the gentleman who got on at Houston street please rise?" he asked calmly.

The gentleman rose involuntarily, and, with a bow and a "Thank you!" the conductor collected his fare.

Irving's Uphill Fight.

When Irving first appeared in a certain midland town critics declared that his curious mannerisms of voice, gait and gesture destroyed his chances of becoming a great actor. How Irving confounded his critics by creating triumph after triumph and redeeming the English stage from the charge of mediocrity is now a matter of history. This great Shakespearean actor rose from the ranks to the head of his profession by sheer force of his histrionic power, ability and originality. And withal he was one of the most kindly of men, generous to a fault when the distress and troubles of others came under his notice.—London Mail.

Adam and Eve.

Adam was making his avowal to Eve.

"No power shall ever take you from my side," he declared fervently.

"That's a pretty rash promise, isn't it," inquired Eve, winking, "since you know I was taken from your side the first thing after you arrived here?"

Perceiving that the woman was giving him a rib roast, Adam went off sulking in the apple orchard.—Exchange.

He Was Right.

"See here," feebly complained the victim after the accident, "I thought you said it was perfectly safe to go up in that old elevator?"

"Well," replied the elevator man, "so it was safe to go up. You see, the dangerous part of it was comin' down."—Philadelphia Press.

"STAND PATTERS"

Mercilessly Scored by Representative From Texas

"A HUGE, INFLATED BODY"

Roosevelt Accused of Trying to Regulate Everything In the Country--Will Get Instance of Simplified Spelling Very Soon

Washington, Jan. 17.—The fortifications appropriation bill was passed by the house without amendment, an unusual thing with appropriation bills. The appropriation bill for the District of Columbia was taken up, but no time was set for the close of general debate. During its consideration a notable speech was made by Representative Sheppard of Texas, who enthused the Democracy by a carefully prepared address on politics and the state of the nation.

"The Democratic party is as eternal as justice, with which it is synonymous, as indestructible as truth, for which it stands," was the keynote of Sheppard's speech. Incidental to his coming out for Bryan for the Democratic nomination of 1908, Sheppard paid his compliments to the Republican party and especially to the "stand patters." Speaking of the "stand pat" principle of the Republican party, he said:

"Accustomed to limitless and perpetual power, the Republican party has drifted into a complete paralysis, a hopeless inertia. Stand pat is merely another expression for dry rot. Swollen with the spoils of office, corpulent with the wine of power, distended with the dropsy of corruption, the Republican party drags its huge, inflated body across the halls of state, helpless among the trophies of the past, before the problems of the present, and the retribution of the future, while its coward lips wail out, 'stand pat,' 'stand pat,' 'stand pat,' although the pillage of the people never ceases; 'stand pat,' although the wealth of the republic is by a ruthless tariff law transferred from the millions who support to the masters who exploit it; 'stand pat,' although the Republican party refuses to lighten the tariff taxes which it first imposed as a temporary burden in the years of war to double and redouble as a permanent tyranny in the years of peace; 'stand pat,' although the tariff law itself provides for a reduction of its charges; 'stand pat,' although the enormous rates incite the antagonism of the world and imperil our foreign trade; 'stand pat,' although McKinley pleaded from the doorstep of the grave for lower tariffs; 'stand pat,' although patriotic Republicans of Massachusetts, Iowa and all the country unite in the general prayer for less oppressive schedules; 'stand pat,' although our loftiest principles, the very soul of the republic, the principle in the name of which our country was consecrated in the blood and tears of patriots, has been abandoned in Republican policies abroad; 'stand pat,' although the currency situation is black with impending danger; 'stand pat,' although the expenditures of the public moneys has become a riotous dissipation, a wanton waste."

Mr. Sheppard said that it was a curious and significant fact, which he regarded a great tribute to the vitality of Democratic principles, that the president and the Republican party, after receiving in 1904 the largest national majority in American history, could pass no legislation except legislation of a non-partisan or perfunctory character in the Fifty-Ninth congress and that the railroad bill, the pure food bill, the meat inspection bill were non-partisan measures.

He said: "It is evident that if effective rate legislation is to be had, the Republican party must be banished from control. The work has only begun. Roosevelt himself cannot stay the tide he has unwittingly helped to set in motion. His attempt to secure popularity with measures which Bryan and the Democracy originated is like the endeavor of a pygmy to steal the thunderbolts of Jove.

"The monarchial impulse is seen in the Republican president who tries to regulate everything in the country, from the size of families to the method of spelling. When he gets through with congress he brandishes the big stick above the cradle and the dictionary. The Republican party in its wild career has piled Root on South America, Taft on Cuba, and Roosevelt on Noah Webster. Since the president has begun to reform the dictionary the American people are preparing to go him one better and to give him an instance of simplified spelling he may not appreciate—they are going to spell President B-R-Y-A-N."

Mr. Sheppard was accorded a great ovation, Republicans and Democrats alike congratulating him.

650,000 PERSONS DOOMED

Chinese Famine Horrors Increased by Smallpox

Shanghai, Jan. 17.—To the horrors of famine have been added an outbreak of smallpox among the refugees at Sing Kiang, necessitating the demolition of the mat sheds erected to shelter the thousands who have arrived there in search of food. Captain Kirton, who was sent out by the relief committee to investigate the situation, reports that 300,000 destitute persons have been driven back towards their homes and that terrible scenes are being enacted along the line of retreat. He estimates that 250,000 persons are likely to be doomed at Sing Kiang alone and 400,000 at Antung, where small relief works have been started.

But the official records are generally puerile and amateurish. The distress is largely due to lack of means of communication and the fear that the Chinese might appropriate the funds for any works undertaken. The dykes being delapitated, renewed rains are certain to cause fresh floods. Every house in the neighborhood of Antung visited by Kirton contained dead bodies or dying persons.

The relief committee, which has 150,000 taels at its disposal, has instituted relief works under foreign supervision.

Red Cross Ships Flour

Washington, Jan. 17.—The American Red Cross has completed arrangements for making a large shipment of flour by the steamer Coptic, leaving San Francisco today. It is the first assignment of foodstuff to the sufferers from this country and amounts to 12,000 bags, weighing 49 pounds each.

Sports Bow to the Law

New York, Jan. 17.—The so-called prize fight cases, growing out of the fight between Britt and McGovern at Madison Square Garden, came to an abrupt end when a plea of guilty was entered by all the 14 defendants. Henry J. Pollock, the promoter of the fight, was fined $100, with the alternative of 30 days in prison. Sentence was suspended in the case of Britt and McGovern, and all the other defendants were discharged on their own recognizance. The case was regarded as a test of the anti-boxing law and a spirited defense was anticipated.

Long-Contested Case Ended

Washington, Jan. 17.—Secretary Straus has directed that Marion Zartarian, the 16-year-old Armenian girl who arrived at Boston last April, be allowed to land. When she arrived at Boston the girl was found to be afflicted with trachoma, but she has since been cured. The supreme court of the United States held the child to be an alien. The girl's father is a naturalized citizen of the United States.

Attorney General Found No "Graft"

Harrisburg, Jan. 17.—In an elaborate report sent to the legislature on his investigation of the charges of fraud in connection with the decorations and furnishings of the new state capitol, Hampton L. Carson, whose term as attorney general expired Tuesday, says that in his judgment there is no trace of crime in the expenditure of the $9,000,000 for the decorations and furnishings for the building.

Retirement of Admiral Sigsbee

Washington, Jan. 17.—Rear Admiral Sigsbee, who commanded the battleship Maine when that vessel was blown up in the harbor of Havana, has been transferred to the retired list of the navy on account of age. His advancement three numbers for extraordinary heroism made him an extra number in the list of rear admirals, and his retirement, therefore, does not make any vacancy.

Backs President's Contention

Washington, Jan. 17.—In discussing the right of the general government to enforce treaties made between this government and a foreign government, Representative Foster (Vt.) took pronounced ground in support of the president's contention that the government should see to it that the treaty between the United States and Japan is rigidly observed.

Rhodes Revenues Decreasing

Capetown, Jan. 17.—It is understood that the Rhodes trustees are seriously considering the advisability of reducing the number of Rhodes scholars sent to Oxford. Their maintenance is proving more expensive than was anticipated, and it is believed that, owing to the financial depression, the revenues of the Rhodes estate are decreasing.

Overcome by Ammonia Fumes

New York, Jan. 17.—Sixty men made a frantic attempt to escape from a factory building on Suffolk street after an explosion of a large carboy of ammonia. Twelve of them were overcome by the fumes before they were rescued by the police. It is expected that one of the men will not survive.

Count Lost Life In Fire

FERNALD PROBERS MEET

Intimated That Body of Woman May Now Be Disinterred

Boston, Jan. 17.—County Solicitor Abbott, who caused the bodies of Elmer E. Fernald and his father, George M. Fernald, to be exhumed at Jackson, N. H., on suspicion that their deaths in Everett, Mass., were due to foul play, had a conference here with District Attorney Sanderson of Middlesex (Mass.) county.

Following the visit of Judge Abbott it was intimated last night that the body of Mrs. Margaret Fernald would be exhumed from Greenwood cemetery at Everett and a chemical analysis made of the internal organs.

Medical Referee Hodson of Ossipee, N. H., who exhumed the bodies, declared that poison may have caused the deaths of both men, and says that if he was a resident of Massachusetts he would demand an immediate action in the matter.

He says that the autopsy showed that both men were in robust health, that the burns on the body of Elmer Fernald were not of the character to cause immediate death, and that the brain of George M. Fernald showed that no blood clot had formed, thereby disproving the theories of Everett physicians to the effect that Fernald had died from a cerebral hemorrhage. Dr. Hodson claimed that the entire circumstances surrounding the deaths looked suspicious and a full investigation should at once be held.

Charged With Killing Husband

Bridgeport, Conn., Jan. 17.—The grand jury which heard the evidence against Mrs. Catherine Neil, who is accused of the murder of her husband in a Greenwich hotel by forcing a hatpin through his eye into the brain, returned a true bill of murder in the first degree against the woman. Mrs. Neil was very bright during the day, but appeared downcast after the finding of the grand jury. She was taken back to jail. Her trial will come in February.

Would Kill Unlicensed Dogs

Boston, Jan. 17.—The annual meeting of the County Officials' association was held here and the business session was mainly devoted to a discussion of the enforcement of the order for the muzzling of dogs. A general sentiment was shown in favor of a more drastic enforcement of the law providing for the killing of unlicensed dogs throughout the state. A committee was appointed to consider the needs of the situation.

Alleged Illegal Sale of Liquor

Boston, Jan. 17.—Declaring that the sale of liquor to members of the Clover club, which had a meeting at the Exchange club recently, was a violation of the excise law, District Attorney Moran sent a communication to the police department, suggesting that some action be taken against the officials of both clubs. He also suggests that the charter of the Exchange club be declared void and its license invalid.

Orleans People Get Tubers Free

Chatham, Mass., Jan. 17.—The stranded steamer Onondaga never stirred from her sandy berth on Orleans beach yesterday, despite the strenuous tugging of a revenue cutter and three tugs and the throwing overboard of part of her cargo. The inhabitants of Orleans are richer by 500 bushels of potatoes which were dumped overboard from the Onondaga and were soon washed ashore.

Held For Texas Police

Boston, Jan. 17.—A chase which covered many thousand miles ended in this city in the arrest of James A. When arrested Wilkes had $300 and readily confessed that he stole the amount charged and that he had spent the balance in traveling about the country.

Murder In First Degree

Bridgeport, Conn., Jan. 17.—The jury in the superior court returned a verdict of guilty in the first degree against Pasquale Esposito, on trial for the murder of his boarding mistress, Mrs. Victoria Marsico, in Greenwich, on Sept. 15, by shooting. Alleged Murderer In Custody

Tidbits from All Wards of City

Officer Murray is still off duty on account of rheumatism.

Judge Pratt has been on the bench at the district court this week.

No intelligence has been received from Miss Addie J. Parks who was at Kingston, Jamaica.

Mayor Thompson has had many applications for the office of Inspector of Buildings, even though the salary is a small one.

The Republican City Committee will organize on Saturday evening. There will be a contest for chairman by Charles H. Johnson and R. R. Freeman.

The Ward One Republican committee has organized with Charles H. Johnson as chairman, Harry Crane as secretary and A. W. Ryder as treasurer.

There is practically no work being done in the stone sheds on account of the cold. There are a few sheds, however, that can be heated and men work there as usual.

The funeral of Francis H. Crane, one of Quincy's well known business men, was held Wednesday afternoon from his late residence on Elm street. The services were conducted by Rev. Dr. Edwin N. Hardy of Bethany Congregational church. The burial was at Mt. Wollaston cemetery.

Tuesday evening the Universalist Dorcas society elected officers for the coming year, as follows: Mrs. Calvin Fletcher, president; Mrs. Cora Carmen, vice president; Miss Mary Blake, secretary; Miss Mabel Ross, treasurer; Mrs. Spooner and Mrs. Sprague, as a committee on sick.

Foreign Missions.

The Ladies' Benevolent Society met in Memorial church, Atlantic, at 3 o'clock on Wednesday afternoon and were addressed by Mrs. E. S. Tenney of Wollaston. Mrs. Tenney chose for her subject "Foreign missions," and her talk was illustrated by pictures of notable personages who have devoted their lives to this work, of the class of people with whom missionaries have to deal and of interesting episodes connected with the charity work. The subject was brought home very forcibly to those present by Mrs. Tenney's eloquence and the meeting was one of keen interest. Mrs. Hattie Baker of Walker street read an original poem on the subject which was beautifully written and of exceptionally fine conception. The Benevolent society has for the past year steadily increased in membership and the meeting Wednesday was largely attended.

Gifts to Public Library.

There have been hung on the walls of the reading alcove in the Thomas Crane Public Library this week two fine pastel portraits just received from Mr. Albert Crane. One is a portrait of himself, taken a few years ago, and the other a copy of an oil portrait of his brother, Mr. Benjamin F. Crane, when he was about eighteen. The evening is perhaps the better time to see these pictures, as they light up well under the soft gas light.

Friday night the Y. M. C. A. squad leaders go to Brockton to participate in a Ladies Night at the Brockton association.

Prevention Of Fire

37. That watch be maintained at all times in the central fire station.

38. That an ordinance be adopted empowering the chief of the fire department to inspect all buildings and their contents, and to order the removal of combustible rubbish and waste material from buildings, yard enclosures and alleys.

FIRE ALARM SYSTEM.

39. That fire alarm headquarters be removed to a fireproof building; new headquarters to be specially arranged to reduce as far as possible all liability to interruptions of service, and that until this is done every effort be made to safe-guard the present quarters by removing hazards and providing protection.

40. That a 10 circuit repeater be installed to take the place of the present repeater.

41. That tape registers be installed at fire alarm headquarters and at all fire houses.

42. That portable instruments be provided for locating trouble on outside work.

TELEPHONES.

43. That a private telephone system connecting all fire department houses and the fire alarm headquarters be installed, and arrangements be made for calling all houses simultaneously; and that an operator be on duty at all times.

BOXES.

44. That all boxes be provided with keys permanently attached or with keyless doors, and that until this change is made signs indicating where keys may be found be immediately posted at each box.

45. That all boxes be provided with non-interfering devices.

46. That boxes be installed so that a box is within 800 feet of every valuable group of buildings.

47. That all boxes be painted with sufficient frequency to insure conspicuousness.

CIRCUITS.

48. That no fire alarm wires be permitted on poles or in conduits with lighting or other high tension wires.

49. That all fire alarm wires in the closely built section be placed underground. Underground construction should be utilized wherever suitable ducts are available.

50. That all wiring in the underground system be made with rubber covered copper wire in lead-sheathed cables, and that all overhead wire be replaced with double braided rubber covered No. 10 copper wire.

51. That more circuits be added, thus reducing the lengths of all circuits, and that not more than 20 boxes be placed on any one circuit.

52. That duplicate alarm circuits, independent of box circuits, connect the four more important department houses with fire alarm headquarters.

53. That residences and places of business of all call men be equipped with tappers on a special circuit, and that a special manually operated circuit be provided for operating tower bells and whistles.

BATTERIES.

54. That batteries be mounted on glass supports.

RECORDS.

55. That suitable wall maps showing all fire alarm circuits be kept at fire alarm headquarters.

AUXILIARIES.

56. That the owners of extensive establishments be encouraged to equip their premises with auxiliary boxes or with some approved automatic or manual alarm system or with both.

EXPLOSIVES.

57. That a complete code of regulations concerning the manufacture, sale, storage and transportation of all explosives and inflammable substances be adopted, and that the fire department be held solely responsible for the enforcement of all laws. It is suggested that the rules of the Municipal Explosives Commission of the City of New York be used as a guide in framing new regulations.

58. That a special inspection of all places where explosives and inflammables are kept be made at least four times a year by an officer of the fire department, who shall file a suitable report of each inspection.

ELECTRICITY.

59. That the National Electrical Code be adopted in its entirety by ordinance and that a penalty be provided for all violations.

60. That an ordinance be passed creating the office of city electrician, containing proper provisions regarding qualifications and duties.

61. That a complete inspection of all wiring be made and defects corrected, and that all wiring be subsequently reinspected at suitable intervals and proper records kept of all inspections.

62. That all overhead wires in the closely built sections except trolley wires be placed under ground.

63. That systematic tests be made for electrolysis and dangerous conditions eliminated.

BUILDING DEPARTMENT.

64. That a building code be adopted to meet the condition under which the city is developing and conform to modern views, particularly as to limitation for excess height and area, as to protection for vertical and horizontal openings and as to requirements for modern types of construction. It is suggested that the building code prepared by the National Board be used as a guide in framing new laws.

65. That an ordinance be passed creating the office of inspector of buildings, with special attention to qualifications and duties of inspector, and making proper provision for all permits and records.

66. That immediate action be taken to establish fire limits and to provide such laws for other parts of the city as will prevent the development of hazardous conditions. It is suggested that fire limits be as follows; From School to Adams streets, 300 feet west of Hancock street; from Adams to Washington streets, 300 feet east of Hancock street; northwest boundary of Washington street to Canal street; southeast boundary of Canal street from Washington to Hancock from Canal to Elm streets.

CONFLAGRATION HAZARD.

97. That automatic sprinkler equipments be required in all buildings which, by reason of their size, construction or occupancy, singly or combined, might act as conflagration breeders.

GENERAL SUMMARY.

Population about 29,000. City is practically flat in all important parts; steep grades in some outlying residential districts. Streets mainly narrow; in mercantile section some of fair width. Several important manufacturing establishments, but values are scattered, and city not closely built up in any part. Winds moderate, except during winter season. Temperatures severe in winter. Number of fires, large and rapidly increasing; record, as a whole, fair.

WATER SUPPLY.

An adequate supply is furnished from the Metropolitan system to a distribution system owned by the municipality; supply main not in duplicate, but distributing reservoir in the city holds about two days' supply. Consumption high. Pressures generally satisfactory. Main arteries well designed and fairly well supported. A large proportion of distributing mains small, with frequent dead ends. Gate valve spacing generally too wide. Hydrants mostly of only fairly satisfactory type, often too widely spaced; in general, condition is good.

FIRE DEPARTMENT.

Part full paid and part call men. Financial support inadequate. Companies undermanned and dependent on inefficient call men for their strength. One engine in service and one in reserve; both old and of insufficient capacity even if in good condition. Both in poor condition and show excessive slip. Ladder service fair. Chemical apparatus insufficient. Supply of hose fairly adequate; condition mainly good, but hose not adequately tested for defective sections. Minor equipment lacking in many essentials. Discipline good; drills and training fair; fire methods fair. Service as a whole inefficient.

FIRE ALARM SYSTEM.

Satisfactory automatic type under efficient management; a part of the fire department. Headquarters non-fire-proof and with serious internal hazard due to defective electric wiring; apparatus in good condition. Boxes of unsatisfactory interfering type; about half not provided with keyless doors or keys attached. Distribution fair in important section; in outlying sections boxes very scattered. Circuits all overhead, mainly in poor condition, and of excessive lengths, with too many boxes attached to some. No private telephone system connecting houses. System on the whole fairly reliable.

FIRE DEPARTMENT AUXILIARIES.

Co-operation of fire marshal, fair. Police department, satisfactary from a fire protection standpoint. Telephone service for fire alarms, fairly satisfactory. Powerful outside aid available.

SUMMARY.

Water supply to system adequate; available in sufficient quantities in most of the important sections; in other sections often poor, owing to faults of the distribution system. Fire department inefficient and not capable of handling serious fires. Fire alarm system fairly reliable.

BUILDING DEPARTMENT.

No municipal control. No building laws nor fire limits. Local conditions bad and tending to become worse as the city grows.

EXPLOSIVES.

Control mainly in the hands of the State police. Laws inadequate and inspections fair. Local conditions, fair.

ELECTRICITY.

Practically no laws governing electrical installations and no inspections made. Local conditions bad, both new and old work showing numerous defects.

CONFLAGRATION HAZARD.

The preponderance of frame construction, poor electrical conditions and the inadequate fire department increase the fire hazard of the city materially, but, on the whole, the conflagration hazard is small and a local conflagration involving more than one block is a remote possibility.

Today's Temperature A Record Breaker

Last night was one of the coldest this winter the mercury dropped 14 degrees between 5 o'clock and 7.30 o'clock, at which hour it was but 10 above. It continued to dropped until it reached zero, at which point, it remained all night, freezing everything in sight.

At 8 o'clock this morning in City Square it was but 6 above zero, and it did not warm much during the day.

The high wind which prevailed during the night had gone down and there was a feeling of snow in the air.

According to the record of Quincy noon temperature as kept by the Daily Ledger, the mercury was the lowest at noon today that it has been at that time since Jan. 3, 1904. The noon temperature on that date was 4 above. The coldest day in the year 1905 was 14 above and the coldest days at noon in 1906 were 16 above. The coldest day this year up to date was 31 degrees, so that today's temperature at noon of 10 above is a record breaker.

It was found impossible this morning to heat the High school building warmer than 56 degrees, and the school was dismissed after the first period.

TODAY'S COURT.

Inez Berry and Annie Woods of Holbrook were arraigned for removing memorials from the Union cemetery. They pleaded guilty and were fined $20 each.

Patrick J. Whelan was sent to the State farm for drunkenness at Milton.

All Muzzled.

Early this week one of the grocery stores in Atlantic got in a stock of fresh frankfort sausages. When the order clerk went around for the day's orders he was asked by one housekeeper what they had at the store that was nice. "We have some very excellent sausages—frankforts"— he said, "and the beauty of them is that they are all muzzled." It may be added that the clerk has a pet dog of his own so that he is conversant with the laws.

MEMORIAL SERVICE

Prominent Officials to Pay Tribute to Julius Johnson

Charles H. Johnson the principal Assessor of the city, as chairman of a committee of friends and associates of the late Julius Johnson, has arranged for memorial services in English to be held on Sunday afternoon at three o'clock in the Swedish Baptist church at Brewers Corner. The committee has been fortunate in securing prominent representatives of the city, the Odd Fellows, the Board of Trade and other organizations of which the deceased was a member, as speakers, as will be seen by the program below:

Report of Committee of Arrangements.
Resolutions.
Quartet,—Selected.
Prayer, Pastor C. E. Johnson, Cambridge.
Address on behalf of City, Mayor James Thompson.
Address of Odd Fellows, Noble Grand James Moorhead, Jr., Past Grand Walter H. Cobb.
Quartet,—Selected.
Address on behalf of City Council, President Walter E. Piper.
Address of Scandinavian Republican Club, President Theodore Hermanson.
Address, Mr. William Gelotte.
Quartet,—Selected.
Address of Quincy Board of Trade, President T. L. Williams.
Address of Builders Association, President J. W. Pratt.
Address on behalf of Assessors, Chairman Charles H. Johnson.
Music,—Selected.
Benediction, Pastor John A. Bjork.

The service is another indication of the popularity of Mr. Johnson, and the appreciation in which he was held by Quincy people. He was unassuming, but successful in a marked degree. He was a hard worker both as a builder and for his church, his adopted city and the organizations with which he was connected, and set an example which all could emulate.

Deaconess Carter Tells of Alaska

A goodly number of people assembled Thursday evening in the parish house of Christ church to hear Deaconess Carter of Alaska tell about her work. She has been in Alaska for more than four years, first at Skaguay in southeastern Alaska, and since 1904 at Fairbanks in the Tanana Valley, 1500 miles farther "in." At both of these places she has had charge of hospitals where injured miners or natives are cared for in time of need.

The talk began with a description of the wonderful Alaskan scenery as one sails from Seattle to Skaguay through the "Inside" passage and the Lynn Canal, then up through the Klondike region to the upper Yukon, and down by boat to the mining district around Fairbanks which has so recently been opened up.

The miners in their search for gold endure terrible privations; and when, as is often the case, they are frozen, or burned by the steam points used in softening the frozen ground, or injured by other accident, it means much to know that the doors of St. Matthew's Hospital at Fairbanks are open, and that the church through its representatives there stands ready to help them, they are often brought more than 100 miles by dog sledges or canal to have their wounds attended to.

Miss Carter gave a very interesting description of the way they pack a sledge for Bishop Rowe or Archdeacon Huck when they are going "mushing" over the trails to visit the little mission stations along the Yukon. The beans must be boiled and frozen separately, the biscuits put out to freeze while hot, and all provisions, tools, clothing, etc., carefully packed and lashed to the sledge before starting.

The speaker made light of her own hardships in the wonderful and terrible country, but the audience will not soon forget what a privilege it was to have even a brief visit from one who gives so noble an example of courage and self-sacrifice in the cause of religion and humanity.

KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS

New Officers of Quincy Council Installed Last Evening

At one of the largest meetings of Quincy Council, No. 96, Knights of Columbus, held in many months, the newly elected officers of the council were installed Thursday night in Greenleaf hall.

The installation work was performed by the new district deputy, William M. Connell of Roxbury and staff. The work was by far the finest ever seen in Knights of Columbus circles in this city and the installing officers were repeatedly applauded. The officers are:

Grand Knight,—Timothy J. Carey.
Deputy Grand Knight,—Edward J. Murphy.
Conductor,—William T. Donovan.
Recording Secretary, — John J. O'Hara.
Financial Secretary,—Joseph A. Keating.
Treasurer,—Michael T. Sullivan.
Warden,—Michael T. Walsh.
Lecturer,—Robert J. Williams, Jr.
Physician,—Dr. Daniel B. Reardon.
Chaplain,—Rev. John P. Cuffe.
Inside Guard,—Martin W. Cunniff.
Outside Guard,—Thomas F. Shea.
Trustee for 3 years,—James J. Kelly.
Delegate to the Boston Chapter for 3 years,—Lawrence W. Lyons.
Delegate to fill unexpired term of 2 years,—Edward P. Barrett.

Peter J. Cahill, the retiring grand knight, announced that during the two years he had held office there had been four deaths in the council, and an increase of 64 in the membership, making a total membership 185. Addresses were made by the newly elected grand knight, the retiring grand knight and district deputy. The retiring grand knight was presented with a handsome bouquet of cut flowers by John Derringer, the florist, who is a member of the council. Refreshments followed and there was an entertainment by members of the council.

It was announced that a new council will be instituted at Plymouth on Sunday to which the members of Quincy council have been invited. A special train will leave Boston for Plymouth at noon and will run express to Quincy where the first stop will be made. The train will be due here at 12.17 and will return about 10.30 at night.

Seriously Ill

The friends of Donald MacKenzie, Jr., will be sorry to hear that he is very ill in the Presbyterian hospital, Philadelphia. Mr. MacKenzie returned from Europe about the middle of December. He studied at the University of Paris, and also for a short time in Madrid, and visited several cities in France, Spain, Belgium and Holland. He went to New York a few days before Christmas and after tutoring for a short time he accepted a position to teach French, etc., at the Sorbonne, L'Ecole des Haute Etudes in Philadelphia. He was there only two days when he was seized by an acute attack of appendicitis. As local peritonitis had set in, he was removed to the hospital and an operation to remove the appendix was performed upon him as soon as he could be prepared. Mr. MacKenzie was graduated from the Quincy High school with honors a few years ago and his father now resides at 255 Park street, Dorchester Centre.

Japan the Subject.

The Alpha Club held a very successful meeting at the home of its president on Tuesday evening, "Japan" being the subject considered. Papers on the country, its home life, etc., were read by Misses Cassie and Georgie Thayer and Miss Hannant, the committee in charge. Helen Tyler, introduced as a little girl from Tokio, gave a recitation. These, together with Miss Amy Miller, also in costume, served tea a la Japanese. Pictures, ornaments and curios transformed the room into a Japanese house.

The F. D. Fellows Co. is having an odd lot sale of suits, overcoats and sweaters.

Debt Reduced Progressive Year

The annual parish meeting of St. Chrysostoms church, Wollaston, was held Monday evening in the parish rooms. The regular election took place, reports were made, and necessary business transacted. The report of the Woman's Guild showed good work done along several lines during the past year.

The election of officers resulted as follows:

Senior Warden,—Edward A. Lyman.
Junior Warden,—Percy L. Davidson.
Treasurer,—John W. Atkins.
Clerk,—Theodore Parker.
Vestrymen, — Herbert H. Albee, Woodford Ketchum, Robert W. Whiteacre and Frank E. Cleveland.
Delegates to Diocesan Convention,—E. A. Lyman, P. L. Davidson, and Theodore Parker.
Delegates to Archdeaconry Convention,—T. C. Atkins, R. W. Whiteacre and Wm. D. Ross.

During the past year and since the present rector, Rev. A. Edwin Clattenburg, took charge of the church in June, there has been $375 paid on the church mortgage, leaving a balance of $520. About two-thirds was given as personal subscriptions and about one-half of that as memorials.

Last Easter a brass receiving alms basin was presented to the church. It was a gift from all the children of the parents of the former rector, Rev. Carleton P. Mills and Mrs. Mills, and is a memorial to their parents.

A cruet has been given to complete the communion set given as a memorial to their mother, by the Misses Clean.

Rev. and Mrs. Clattenburg have given a beautiful brass baptismal ewer "In humble thanksgiving" for the birth of their son.

Four persons connected with the parish have given cushions for the altar rail, which are much appreciated.

The latest gift to the church was the handsome brass lecturn which was presented and blessed by the rector in connection with the eight o'clock service last Sunday morning. It is a gift from the Guild of St. Perpetua and is suitably engraved.

Fire Companies.

The two fire companies of East Braintree have elected the following officers to serve for the ensuing year:

Hook & Ladder Co. No. 1,—Captain, John H. Frazier; 1st Lieutenant, Martin Frazier; 2d Lieutenant, T. B. Allen; Clerk and treasurer, James F. Gurney.

Hose Co. No. 1,—Captain, Peter Smith, 1st. Lieutenant, Edward F. Starr; 2d Lieutenant, J. P. Brown; Clerk and treasurer, T. F. Croke.

Miss Parks Reported Safe

Good news was received today by the relatives of Miss Addie J. Parks now at Kingston. The Herald prints a special dispatch from Worcester which reads:

James F. Healy, local ticket agent, who booked the Worcester party on the Hamburg-American line for Kingston, Jam., where they arrived Jan. 11, received a message Thursday from the company's office that the passengers on that steamer, which left New York Jan. 6, were all right.

These include B. Edwin Guy, Miss Charlotte McFarland, Mrs. J. F. Bicknell and Mary G. Spring of Worcester, Mrs. J. W. Spring of Gardner and Miss Addie J. Parks of Quincy, a niece of Mr. Guy.

The Ledger also learns that Mr. C. W. Guy of this city has this week received a letter from Miss Parks mailed at Fortune Island, Jan. 8, which reported a delightful passage. The sea was so calm that no one was seasick.

A Fine Lecture.

The first number of the Wollaston entertainment course was given on Thursday evening, at First Baptist church when about 175 people were entertained for two hours by Dr. Grant in his illustrated lecture, "Pope Leo's Palace."

The number was an instructive one, dealing with art in Rome; a special feature being a number of excellent views of the interior of the Vatican, a veritable storehouse of art. Dr. Grant was enthusiastically received; all feeling repaid for venturing forth in inclement weather.

NEW CODDINGTON

GOOD AFTERNOON.

"It is suggested that the rules of the Municipal Explosive Commission of the City of New York be used as a guide in framing new regulations."

"We recommend that the National Electrical code be adopted in its entirety."

It is suggested that the building code prepared by the National Board be used as a guide in framing new building laws."

Quincy did not realize that it was such a large Metropolitan city until the people read the report of the insurance underwriters. While that came as an earthquake and the shock almost prostrated us, we quickly recovered. We do not care to copy New York. It would be more honorable to be swept by a conflagration than for the city to become bankrupt.

Why these extravagant recommendations? The report above referred to concludes: "But on the whole, the conflagration bazard is small, and a local conflagration involving more than one block is a remote possibility."

That sums up the situation about right, and there is no occasion for alarm or reckless expenditures.

Quincy has 77 miles of accepted streets, but it has over 100 miles of water mains in public and private streets. The report recommends hydrants 250 feet apart on some streets and 350 on others. If they were all 350 feet apart it would require over 1500 for the 528,930 feet of mains. The City Book shows that one year ago Quincy had 689 hydrants. Shall the city forthwith add 800?

The report recommends 39 permanent firemen, a permanent chief, permanent assistant chiefs, etc., with 26 men in quarters at all times. All very well if the city could find some way to raise the money to pay the 20 additional men. We now have 19 permanent men, the number being increased each year.

It has been a long time since a steam fire engine was needed at a Quincy fire, the water service having such a high pressure, but the committee want the city to purchase two larger engines. Perhaps we will, but not this year.

The whole report should be laid on the table, and the Mayor instructed to use every effort to secure laws allowing municipal fire insurance.

The city might well profit by the example of some of the churches. The finance committees of our churches realize that it is not easy to successfully conduct the affairs if there is a large debt and interest account hanging over them. Occasionally a debt is necessary for new edifice or enlargement, but it is always the aim to extinguish the debt as expeditiously as possible, and it is usually done remarkably quick. At their annual meetings this month three of the leading churches have reported no debt, and there are several other city churches without debt.

GROWS IN HORROR

Situation at Kingston Is Worse Than First Reported

THOUSANDS ARE DEAD

Many Americans Reported to Have Been Killed--Part of Port Royal Sinks--Need of Food and Medical Supplies

Kingston, Jam., Jan. 18.—The disaster here is as great as the calamities of San Francisco and Valparaiso. Thousands of persons have been killed, and the dead bodies are being taken from the debris by hundreds. The whole town is in ruins and the greater portion is still smouldering ashes. The smell of burnt flesh pervades the air. The cable line from Kingston is broken and the correspondent had to go to Holland Bay, 40 miles to the east, to file this message.

The earthquake came as a sudden oscillation, not from any particular direction, but up and down. Thousands of persons were on the streets of Kingston at the time and great numbers of them were crushed. Many Americans in Kingston were killed and have been buried.

Realizing the possibility of famine, the people made attempts to loot. The military, however, at once took possession of the foodstuffs. Detachments of troops, with fixed bayonets, were placed on guard. They were concentrated in a central position. No one is allowed to pass through the ruined sections of the city.

Kingston is threatened with a failure of the water supply, owing to the bursting of a reservoir, and no water will be obtainable before tomorrow.

The military suffered severely. The hospital camp, where there were several soldiers, was burned, and a number of the men lost their lives. Major Hardyman and Lieutenant Leader are dead.

Part of the town of Port Royal has sunk, and two men were drowned. The batteries sunk eight feet. In several places the water is sprouting through the debris.

Port Antonio, on the north side of the island, suffered little damage. The Hotel Titchfield, with a hundred American guests, was not destroyed.

A tidal wave has inundated Anotta Bay, washing out many houses. The shock was severe at Richmond and this town also was destroyed by fire.

Spanish Town also was damaged. One man was killed and 10 men were injured there.

It is reported that at Anotta Bay the crater of an extinct volcano is emitting flames and smoke and it is thought that the earthquake originated there. The records of Jamaica contain no previous mention of activity of this volcano.

Appeals have been sent to all sections of the island, asking for assistance. Foodstuffs are needed above all things. Business is at a standstill. Some shops have been opened by Chinamen, who have raised the prices on goods 1000 percent. This so angered the people that the Chinamen were driven out and their shops looted.

The hope of famine relief lies in banana crops which have not been injured. Medical assistance is limited, owing to the deaths of several doctors.

Kingston was threatened with a rainstorm, but at the hour of sending out this dispatch the weather is clear.

Committees have been formed and Governor and Lady Swettenham and others are doing noble rescue work. The shipping in the harbor is safe.

There have been a number of other shocks since the first disastrous one and the repetitions keep the people in a state of terror.

The topography of the country has been changed and the navigation channel into this harbor materially altered. Two vessels left here yesterday for the United States, loaded to their full capacity with returning tourists and fleeing natives. Wounded persons are being cared for on all the ships in the harbor.

The lines of the Hayti Cable company and the direct West India Cable company are broken two miles out at sea. Repairs are being made. The West India and Panama line is working from Holland Bay. The railroad workshops have been demolished, but train service has been resumed.

Thousand May Be Dead

London, Jan. 18.—It is now known that the death list from the Kingston earthquake certainly will exceed 500 persons, and may even reach 1000, and that large numbers have been incapacitated by their injuries. The city is a heap of ruins.

The King and the queen have each contributed $5000 to the lord mayor's fund. The Prince and Princess of Wales have contributed $2500 each, and the big companies interested in the West Indies are following suit.

Should the reports of the subsidence of Kingston harbor be confirmed, a new peril will be added, and further dispatches on this subject are awaited with the greatest anxiety.

City Reported Sinking

St. Augustine, Fla., Jan. 18.—Wireless messages received at the station on Anastasia island by Chief Electrician Elkins says that Kingston is sinking gradually; that holes and cracks 100 feet deep were formed by the earthquake and that grave fears are felt that the entire city will slip into the bay.

Congress Provides For Relief

Washington, Jan. 18.—An emergency bill was passed in the house for the relief of the sufferers from the earthquake in Jamaica, clothing the president with power to send the supply ship Celtic with supplies to the relief of the stricken inhabitants of the island.

Without waiting for the authority of congress, however, Secretary Metcalf had telegraphed Admiral Evans to send the supply ship Celtic, which is now on her way from Guantanamo to Kingston, and turn over her full cargo of supplies to the sufferers of the stricken city.

Incident of Singular Pathos

New York, Jan. 18.—Among the steerage passengers on the steamer Majestic was Mrs. Mary Carroll of Ireland, who was on her way here to join her daughter, Maggie Carroll, who was working as a domestic in Mamaroneck, N. Y. Maggie died three days ago of pneumonia and as Mrs. Carroll was penniless she was forbidden to land, but her piteous appeals to be allowed to see her daughter in death resulted in permission to proceed to Mamaroneck under surveillance to attend the funeral, after which she will be deported.

An $8,000,000 Project

New York, Jan. 18.—The rapid transit commission adopted the so-called McDonald subway and elevated loop plan, designed to relieve traffic conditions at the Brooklyn bridge. The system will cost the city about $8,000,000. The plan proposes an elevated structure across the Williamsburg bridge, which will deflect into a subway to run to the new Manhattan bridge, and then to an elevated line across the bridge to a connecting subway in Brooklyn.

Blizzard and High Tides

St. Johns, Jan. 18.—A furious blizzard has been raging over this island for the past three days, delaying railroad and water communication and causing great hardship. The highest tide known in recent years is flooding stores all along the waterfront. It is supposed locally to have some connection with the Kingston earthquake.

Combine Heavily Fined

New York, Jan. 18.—The MacAndrews & Forbes company and the J. S. Young company, which were convicted recently of unlawfully combining to monopolize the licorice paste industry, were fined a total of $18,000 by Judge Hough, who granted a stay of execution of the fines, but denied a motion for a new trial.

Sage Estate Valued at $60,000,000

Albany, Jan. 18.—State Comptroller Glynn has received $625,000, the amount due the state on the estate of Russell Sage under the inheritance tax act. The value of the estate has been placed at $60,000,000, but that amount is not the final estimate. The state has given a temporary receipt for the money received.

Roosevelt's Services Appreciated

St. Petersburg, Jan. 18.—President Spiridovich of the Pan-Slavic League left today for Washington to present to President Roosevelt, on behalf of the league, a cup for his services in bringing about the Portsmouth conference, as a result of which, according to the league, Russia has resumed her true mission of defender of Pan-Slavism.

Railroad Traffic Held Up

Minneapolis, Jan. 18.—Reports from the snowbound districts of North Dakota continue to tell of the trouble the railroads are having in trying to open traffic on their lines. Trains at some places have not been seen for a week, while at others a straggling, snowcovered locomotive arrives now and then.

If you read "Cap'n Eri" you will want to read "Partners of the Tide;" if you did not read "Cap'n Eri" you ought to read "Partners of the Tide." But whether you begin to read from motives of duty or pleasure, you cannot escape the pleasure in store for you.

Mr. Lincoln seems to have an inexhaustible fund of quaint Yankee humor with the twang of the salt sea in it. A POLITICAL MOVE

Republicans Thus Consider Blackburn's Amendment

REFERS TO BROWNSVILLE

Brings Up Legal Phase of Discharge of Troops and May Lead to Republican Caucus to Consider the Subject

Washington, Jan. 18.—The legal phase of President Roosevelt's discharge of the negro troops was again injected into the controversy in the senate yesterday by notice of an amendment to the Foraker compromise resolution which Senator Blackburn said he should press.

Senator Foraker at once declared his opposition to the amendment. He discussed the power of the executive, holding that the affray at Brownsville ought to be investigated simply as to the facts, and the question of power determined later if it should arise as the result of the inquiry. He reviewed his previous utterances, maintaining the same position in every respect. He replied to arguments which have been made since his first speeches, especially to those of Senators Spooner and Knox. He defended the Twenty-fifth infantry, reviewing the "escapades" it is charged with, expressing some astonishment that the record furnished the senate by the war department in this particular was not complete, and stating that in response to his request it had been supplemented by information which was decidedly favorable to the regiment.

Consideration of the resolution was deferred until Monday at the conclusion of Foraker's address.

Eulogies on the life and character of the late Senator William B. Bate of Tennessee were delivered, after which the senate adjourned as a mark of respect to his memory.

After Foraker had concluded his speech on the Brownsville resolution a number of the Republican senators met in informal conference and made an effort to agree upon the program with reference to that measure. They agreed that all Republican senators should vote against the Blackburn amendment upholding the president's authority in the discharge of the negro troops. Senator Lodge will withdraw his substitute for the Foraker resolution, announcing that he considers that the Foraker resolution, in its present form, covers the same ground as his own.

It is probable that the matter will not come up today and it is understood that the senate will adjourn from today until Monday, thus throwing the matter over until next week. Senator Aldrich, at one time, announced his intention of offering an amendment to the Foraker amendment providing for the extension of the investigation to the charge that the southern states discriminate against negro soldiers. If such an amendment should prevail it would lead to an investigation of the entire race question, but before leaving for New York yesterday afternoon the Rhode Island senator said that he had about changed his mind on the subject and probably would not offer the amendment.

The Republican leaders accept the Blackburn amendment as a political move and most of them express the opinion that it is the result of a Democratic conference. This Blackburn denies, but he says with apparent confidence that it will have practically the unanimous support of Democratic senators. "The amendment is not the result of a caucus," he said, "but it has general endorsement." He says he will press it to a vote.

The Republicans are trying to get an unanimous agreement to lay the amendment on the table, but some Republican senators express a disinclination to pursue that course because they fear it would be construed as a reflection on the president. There is talk of a caucus if later developments should make one advisable. Several senators advocate an amendment along the lines suggested by Aldrich, saying, in the language of a western senator, that it would have the effect of "denaturizing" the Blackburn provision.

For the present the intention of the Republican managers is to confine their efforts to holding back debate and to await developments. They express confidence in their ability to so shape the matter that it will embarrass the Democrats more than the Republicans. Senator Tillman does not stand with the supporters of the Blackburn amendment.

Would Raise Salaries

Washington, Jan. 18.—It is the purpose of Mr. Littauer (N. Y.), when the legislative, executive and judicial bill is presented to the house with senate amendments, to offer an amendment making the salaries of the vice president and speaker of the house $15,000, chief justice and associate justices $12,000, senators and representatives $7500.

Unprepared For Arctic Blast

New York, Jan. 18.—A six-inch snowstorm visited New York, affording it the first genuine touch of wintry weather. Not in years has New York been caught so at the mercy of the elements. The city was totally unprepared for the sudden transition from spring to Arctic weather and much suffering among the poor is the result.

Savings Insurance League.

Ex-Governor William L. Douglas of Brockton has become a member of the Massachusetts Savings Insurance League and will give his cordial support to the movement for permitting savings banks of this Commonwealth to establish departments of industrial insurance. In a letter received at the League, he says: "I believe that your plan of erecting in Savings Banks an independent department of life insurance, not only sound and feasible, but the best way of furnishing to working men life insurance at cost, and I desire to do what I can to assist you in your object. I hope that the maximum policy will not be less than one thousand dollars."

"I have had no opportunity to consult with the trustees of the Savings Bank of which I have the honor to be President, and do not know what attitude they would take in the matter, but if a law is passed allowing Savings Banks to open a Life Insurance department, and our Trustees desire to make trial of the plan, it would be a pleasure to me to furnish a guaranty fund of $25,000 or more, if necessary."

BULLET IN HEAD

Prominent Man Who Was Mentally Ill Shot by Son

DEATH QUICKLY FOLLOWS

Youth Claims He Was Justified In Saving Mother From Assault --Tragedy Witnessed by Young Children of the Family

Taunton, Mass., Jan. 18.—George Poole, one of the city's most prominent merchants, was shot and mortally wounded last night by his 17-year-old son, Howard M. Poole, who fired at his father to save his mother from harm. The elder Poole died about two hours after the shooting. The son, who was arrested, justifies his act by claiming his mother's life was in danger and that it was necessary for him to shoot his father in order to save her.

For the past 18 months, according to the police, Poole had been mentally ill, ever since an accident caused by a runaway horse which he was driving, and which resulted in his being thrown from his carriage. His skull was fractured, but although physically he seemed to have regained his health, his mental condition was found to be irresponsible. However, Poole was able to continue in his business, which was that of the principal member of the silverware manufacturing firm of Poole & Roach. The company has a large factory in this city and employs about 300 people.

Poole's mental incapacity was demonstrated principally in his home life, as appeared when his wife and other members of his family were led to complain to the police as to the attitude of the head of their household. On two occasions Mrs. Poole was obliged to ask the police to keep her husband under surveillance, as she feared possible physical violence. After the death of Poole's partner, Edward F. Roache about a month ago, Poole's condition of unrest and irresponsibility became aggravated and the members of his family grew fearful of the future.

Finally Mrs. Poole considered it wise to have her husband placed under restraint. With this end in view she visited the district court about a week ago relative to the possible commitment of her husband on the ground of insanity. Her husband learned of this step and is said to have made no mention of it until dinner last night. He then broached the subject to his wife and when she admitted her visit to the court Poole reached across the dinner table and shook her violently, according to other members of the family.

Poole was greatly excited after the incident at the dinner table, but at that time did not attempt to assault his wife further. However, the assault at the dinner table so alarmed Howard Poole that the latter, according to his statement to the police, went to his bedroom and procured a revolver. He put the weapon in his pocket and rejoined the family in the library.

Suddenly, about 8:30 p. m., Poole again attacked his wife. The woman ran from the library to the front hallway in an endeavor to escape her husband. Poole, however, followed her quickly and grasped her by the throat. Then he pinioned her against the wall. Mrs. Poole screamed repeatedly. Howard rushed into the hallway, drew the revolver from his pocket and fired one shot. His father fell to the floor, unconscious and bleeding. The bullet passed through his right ear into the head. The shooting was witnessed by two other younger children, a boy and a girl. Mrs. Poole fainted from the shock.

Howard called up the central police station on the telephone and informed the officer in charge that a tragedy had taken place and asked him to send officers at once. Then he telegraphed to Drs. Miles and Clark and asked them to hurry to his home. Police and physicians arrived together and after a hurried examination the wounded man was taken to the Morton hospital. There it was found that the bullet had penetrated the base of his skull. He died shortly before 11 o'clock. He had been unconscious from the moment of the shooting.

Shortly after the officers arrived at the house young Poole was escorted to the police station. The boy declared that he shot his father, but that he was confident his mother's life was in danger.

The charge entered against the boy was that of assault with a dangerous weapon and with intent to kill. It was agreed that he might be admitted to bail in bonds of $10,000. No long afterwards these were furnished by two friends of the Poole family.

The defendant is a graduate of the local high school and is employed in his father's factory. There are four other children in the family, including the younger boy and girl who were present when their father was shot; Arthur Poole, aged 20, and another daughter, who is the wife of Dr. Romaine of this city.

The victim of the tragedy has long been prominent in the affairs of Taunton. The silverware manufactory of which he was the controlling force is one of the largest in the city. Last year Poole was appointed by the mayor to be license commissioner, but on account of ill-health he resigned his position after one month of service. He was 52 years of age and was prominent in fraternal organizations.

A NATION OF CRIPPLES RHEUMATISM BEYOND CONTROL

The Only Hope to Rheumatic Suffers is Uric-O Treatment.

If rheumatism continues to spread as it has in the past few years, it would seem as though we would before long become a nation of cripples. The terrible destructiveness of this disease is apparent on every side of us. Almost nine out of ten of the cripples one meets had their affliction brought on by Rheumatism. How many thousands more there are that are hopelessly bed-ridden and whom we never see. Rheumatism from the very nature of the disease, can never cure itself, and if neglected, is bound to grow worse rather than better. If you ever have any twinges of Rheumatism go to E. J. Murphy's drug store right here in Quincy, and get a bottle of Uric-O, the wonderful new Rheumatic Specific. It will cure you and it is the only treatment in the world that will cure you permanently and thoroughly. Uric-O cures by its direct action on the muscles, blood and kidneys. It seeks out the poisonous Uric and Rheumatic Acid and drives it from the system and it is only a treatment of such a nature that will ever cure Rheumatism. Liniments and plasters only serve to drive it from one spot to another. They never cure Rheumatism, because it is primarily a blood disease, and until the blood is cleared from the poison, a cure cannot take place.

There never was a case of Rheumatism that Uric-O could not cure and you should not put off taking it because it is in the end by far the cheapest method. You can test Uric-O free of charge if you wish. Just cut out this advertisement and send it to the Smith Drug Co., Syracuse, N. Y., and state that you have never used Uric-O and would like to try it. They will send you a free sample which you can test and try free of charge.

ICEMEN MADE HAPPY

Below Zero Weather Strikes New England

Boston, Jan. 18.—The old New England adage that "as the days begin to lengthen the cold begins to strengthen," was borne out by a cold wave that, sweeping down from the Canadian northwest, caused discomfort to man and beast, delays to railroads, but brought joy to the hearts of the icemen.

Lake Megantic, just over the Canadian boundary line in the province of Quebec, sent in the biggest figures below the zero mark, a spirit thermometer recording 60 degrees on the minus side. Twenty and 30 below zero is common throughout the northern part of New England, and even as far south as Narragansett bay the frigid wave made a record of nearly zero.

While a snowstorm may break the cold wave for a few hours, it is expected that it will set in again on Saturday. The intense cold was welcomed by the icemen. A month ago lakes and ponds in middle and southern New England were covered by 10 or more inches of good clear ice. Three weeks of unusually open weather nearly cleared the reservoirs and the icemen were beginning to believe that another year of famine was in store for them. It is now expected that a few days more will insure the safety of this year's crop.

Heavy Failures at Boston

Boston, Jan. 18.—Three petitions in the insolvency court, each with heavy liabilities, were filed here, the petitioners being Bordman Hall, a lawyer, Albert D. Mowry, a real estate dealer, and the creditors' petition against Hotel Lexington. Hall places the amount of his debts at $73,684.77. Mowry's liabilities are placed at $85,961. In the case of the Lexington Hotel company the creditors allege that the company is insolvent and that the liabilities are heavy, but no amount is named.

Moran Was In the Wrong

Boston, Jan. 18.—District Attorney Moran, in a statement issued last night, admits that he was in error when he attacked Wilson H. Fairbank, commissioner to the Lewis and Clark Exposition, in speeches delivered during the last campaign. Among several charges made by Moran against Fairbank was that of forgery in connection with state vouchers. The grand jury investigated the case and recently returned a no bill against Fairbank.

Steamer's Mysterious Movements

Gloucester, Mass., Jan. 18.—For some unknown reason, a steamer ran close in shore early this morning and began whistling. The lighthouse keeper at Eastern point thought at one time that the vessel would strike on the end of the point. The steamer continued her signals, which could not be distinguished, and finally sheered off and kept on up the bay.

Steamer Moved Twelve Feet

Chatham, Mass., Jan. 18.—Eased by the removal of nearly 200 tons of her cargo, the stranded steamer Onondaga was dragged 12 feet toward deep water by the combined efforts of the revenue cutter Gresham and three wrecking tugs. More than 100 tons of potatoes were thrown overboard and eagerly harvested by the beach combers.

Alleged Murderer Is Insane

Willimantic, Conn., Jan. 18.—Najeeb Birbarie, who is in jail charged with the murder of his wife by poisoning, has been pronounced insane by a commission of three physicians appointed by Judge Thayer to examine the prisoner. Recently Birbarie refused to take food and became very weak and emaciated.

Vineyard Haven, Mass., Jan. 18.—Tug Valley Forge arrived here from Nantucket shoals with the body of Andrew Anderson, a deckhand on the barge Bethayres, who committed suicide by hanging in the engine-room of the barge. Anderson is supposed to have been temporarily insane.

Suspicion of Murder Lifted

Pittsfield, Mass., Jan. 18.—Reporting on the case of the commonwealth against Emil Strube of Great Barrington, charged with the manslaughter of his 12-year-old son, Johnny, last July, the grand jury freed Strube of the charge. "No bill" was returned.

Decidedly Cold In Vermont

Westfield, Vt., Jan. 18.—The thermometer fell here yesterday to 40 degrees below zero, this representing the climax of a cold period which started in Tuesday night. The weather shows no signs of moderating.

Epidemic of Scarlet Fever

Chicago, Jan. 18.—Chicago and vicinity is suffering from an epidemic of scarlet fever. A week ago the disease made its appearance and has become so prevalent that public schools in Evanston, Oak Park, Kenilworth and Wilmette have been ordered closed by the health officials. Diphtheria, also, has broken out.

Declared Wife Was Faithless

Columbia, S. C., Jan. 18.—C. W. Blair, a railroad conductor, was shot four times at his home here and died 20 minutes later. It is alleged that Blair accused his wife of infidelity and that the shooting followed. Blair made an ante-mortem statement reiterating his charges.

A CHILD WITH CRAMPS

should have immediate attention, as cramps are positive proof that there is some foreign substance in the stomach or bowels that nature cannot get rid of unassisted, and in most cases the trouble proves to be worms. Worms are the cause, either directly or indirectly, of the majority of childhood ills, and in a great many cases adults are also sufferers.

DR. TRUE'S ELIXIR

the only safe, sure, entirely vegetable worm remedy ever compounded, has been working wonderful cures for over half a century, and stands without a peer in in all complaints of the stomach, liver or bowels—especially constipation and worms. The familiar symptoms of worms are disturbed health, deranged stomach, furred tongue, variable appetite and bowels, increased thirst, itching of the nostrils, bed-wetting, wind colic, irritability, restlessness, grinding of teeth, slow fever and often in children, convulsions.

When any of these symptoms are noticed, do not delay, but give Dr. True's Elixir at once and restore the patient to perfect, robust health. A few drops of the Elixir taken occasionally will guard against worms, and if present will expel them.

Sold by all dealers, 35c, 50c, $1.00. Write for free booklet, "Children and Their Diseases."

Partners of the Tide

BY JOE LINCOLN

Author of "Cap'n Eri"

A realistic story of the New England coast introducing quaint characters, among them two lovable old maids who were not loved as much as they should have been and a maiden who got more than her share. But the perils of rivalry in love added to the perils of the sea make a story to keep you up nights. Therefore we shall give it to you in installments, beginning

AT AN EARLY DATE.

The Outlook, referring to "Cap'n Eri" as the one deserved success of the year in which it was published, says "Partners of the Tide" is just as good. The New York Globe says it is much better. Reviewers all agree that it is a story "refreshing as a breath of sea air."

A TRIPLE TRAGEDY

Jealous Man Shoots Self, Wife and Baby, the Latter Dying

Boston, Jan. 18.—Crazed by jealousy and dreading publicity of the divorce action which his wife had begun, Lewis Tennis shot his wife, Mollie Tennis, turned the revolver upon himself, and while struggling with his wife's sister, Mrs. Minnie Franklin, who attempted to get the revolver from him, sent a bullet into his left breast and shot and fatally wounded his 4-year-old child with a third bullet.

The shooting took place in the house at 17 Auburn street, occupied by Mrs. Tennis' mother and sisters, where she had been making her home for several weeks. The child died last night.

The tragedy was the climax of a long drawn out family fight. Mrs. Tennis applied for a divorce some time ago and since then has not lived with her husband, but, with her child, made her home with her mother.

Tennis formerly ran a ladies' tailoring establishment with his father on Eliot street, but when the separation came he left the city, going to New York, where he secured work, and remained up to four days ago.

The afternoon of his return from New York he had a long talk with his wife. He obtained no satisfaction and called again the next day, and on the second visit talked of shooting her, the child and himself.

The woman did not believe he would attempt such a thing, and again sent him away. Yesterday afternoon he called the third time, and after a short conversation, during which he endeavored to get his wife to return to him and she refused, he drew a revolver and began shooting.

Secretary Straus Attacked

Indianapolis, Jan. 18.—The convention of the United Mine Workers adopted a resolution attacking Oscar Straus, secretary of the department of commerce and labor, charging him with aiding employers to violate the contract labor act. It was also declared that the department was being conducted more in the interest of capital than of labor.

Check to Whistle Nuisance

Washington, Jan. 18.—The senate committee on commerce has authorized a favorable report on the bill authorizing supervising inspectors of steam vessels to regulate the blowing of whistles. The bill is intended to correct an abuse indulged in largely by small vessels about cities. The bill has passed the house.

Peace Negotiations Fail

Capetown, Jan. 18.—A dispatch from Port Nolloth says that the negotiations for peace between the Germans and the natives in revolt in the southern part of German Southwest Africa were abruptly broken off and that serious fighting is now going on. The rebels are offering a stubborn resistance.

Lawyer Guilty of Forgery

St. Louis, Jan. 18.—Horace E. Hand, an attorney and chief clerk of the law department of the 'Frisco Railroad company, was arrested and immediately taken before Judge Muench, where he pleaded guilty to two charges of forgery and was sentenced to five years in the penitentiary.

Snowbound Train Arrives

St. Paul, Jan. 18.—After being delayed for 10 days by snow in Montana and North Dakota, a Great Northern train from Seattle finally arrived in St. Paul. The train crew showed the results of days of unceasing toil. The passengers appeared none the worse for their experience.

Actress' Testimony Wanted

New York, Jan. 18.—May McKenzie, an actress and friend of Mrs. Harry Thaw, with whom she is now staying, has been subpoenaed as a witness for the prosecution in the Thaw trial. It is supposed that the defense also intends to summon her.

Bostonian Relieved of $1200

Naples, Jan. 18.—John Jacob of Boston was robbed of $1200 while traveling from Marseilles to this city. The thief was discovered in a man named Fusco, who was taken into custody. He was searched, but the money could not be found.

Savings Bank Insurance.

So general was the interest aroused by the discussion of savings bank insurance at the recent meeting of the Wollaston Unitarian Club that the Quincy Men's Club has arranged to have Louis D. Brandeis and Representative Norman H. White of Brookline at their meeting of February 4. These gentlemen who are speaking almost nightly at crowded meetings throughout the state and in some cases in other states, will present to Quincy citizens the facts regarding the present excessive costliness of industrial life insurance and the reasons which have led them to believe that the savings banks of Massachusetts, which for now ninety years have conducted their business without scandal and without reproach, are competent to include departments of industrial life insurance which basically is only a specialized form of savings.

Mrs. Luke Levangie has been entertaining her cousin from San Francisco this week.

Thursday was a day when it required the almost constant shoveling of coal to keep the house warm.

Just enough snow fell Thursday to make good sleighing, and if the weather continues cold the sleighing will last some days.

The Democratic City Committee meet tonight for organization. The ward committees will probably organize at the same time, previous to the meeting of the general committee.

The dual meet with the Cambridge Y. M. C. A. occurrs Tuesday night at Cambridge. A good sized crowd of rooters will go over to cheer the Quincy boys along.

The annual meeting of the Merrymount Granite Co. was held Wednesday evening and these officers elected: President, James H. Sullivan; clerk, M. B. Geary; treasurer, John C. Kapples; agent, P. W. Driscoll; directors, the above with Lemuel J. Meyers, James McTiernan and Enos S. Costa.

Don't forget the basket ball games tomorrow at the Y. M. C. A. Saturday afternoon the Intermediates play Abington high, and in the evening there are two games—Quincy Y. M. C. A. versus Brockton Y. M. C. A., and Quincy Employed Boys versus Boston Employed Boys.

The New England Associate Alliance held a meeting at the Bullfinch Place church, Thursday. Tea and coffee were provided; box lunches were brought. The program discussed "The Benevolent Fraternities of the churches." Many from Quincy and Wollastod at tended.

Enjoyable Program

A very pleasing entertainment was given at the Washington Street Congregational church Wednesday evening under the auspices of the men. There was a large attendance and the encores were demanded and accorded. The program included solos by Aubrey N. Peters, Mrs. C. E. Patch, W. H. Varney and Frank Varney; mandolin solos by Roscoe R. Ricker, and impersonations by Erastus Osgood. Mrs. Henry D. Higgins was the accompanist.

Proved Fatal

Alexander Fraser of 22 Centre street, who was severely scalded at the Allston power station of the Elevated railway on Wednesday, by the bursting of a safety valve, died Thursday as the result of his injuries. He leaves a widow and three children.

Concert by the Norfolk Trio

The Norfolk Trio gave an exceptionally fine concert in Atlantic Music hall on Thursday evening. The trio, consisting of Miss Josephine Maud Wright, pianist; Miss Bernice Eudora Wright, contralto, and Mr. Orville N. Estes, flutist, were assisted by the Berkeley Male Quartette and Miss Maud Huntington Benjamin, reader.

The program was carefully prepared, opening and closing by selections by the quartette, whose voices blended perfectly. Miss Bernice Wright was in splendid voice, and her rendering of Gounod's "Sing, Smile, Slumber," accompanied by Mr. Estes on the flute was one of the best numbers on the program.

Although Miss Benjamin interested her audience in all her readings her Irish selections were especially excellent. The pretty piece, Birdies' Favorite, written by J. S. Cox for the flute was played by Mr. Estes splendidly.

The ushers were Miss Maud Read, Miss Annie Harding and Miss Julia Barbor. Mr. William Harding took tickets. The concert was enjoyable from first to last.

The two missionary societies connected with the Wollaston Baptist church held their annual meetings jointly on Thursday afternoon, and it was an enjoyable occasion for the large number of ladies who accepted the hospitality of Mrs. George F. Pinkham.

Extraordinary Luck Of Quincy Gunner

Charles L. Prescatt has returned from Muskegat, Nantucket, where he was very successful in bagging lots of game, bringing home 84 birds. The Globe says: This is the largest number of ducks ever brought out of Muskegat by one gunner. Mr. Prescott is elated at his success, because brant are seldom found in January and geese are almost never killed in the winter.

Mr. Prescott killed all the birds with a 12 gage gun. He had as guide, George E. Coffin, a native of Muskegat. During the entire trip the weather was warm and spring-like.

Mr. Prescott says that his best day's shooting was a week ago yesterday when he killed 12 brant, one goose and 11 ducks.

On the preceding evening Coffin saw several brant flying about near camp. He routed Mr. Prescott out of bed at 2 o'clock the following morning, and took him to a nearby marsh, where the brant were found feeding. This started the day, and before night Mr. Prescott had killed 24 birds.

Mr. Prescott speaks in praise of Capt. Gibbs and the surfmen of the life-saving crew stationed at Muskegat. He says that they were most accommodating and put themselves out in many ways to help the hunters. It was owing to their directions and advice that Mr. Prescott found several of his ducks.

MILTON.

O. H. Flanders, the well know real estate dealer, was found dead at the engine house on his property at East Milton Saturday night. He had been to the engine house, as was his custom, to start up the engine that pumped the water into a stand-pipe. This he evidently did, and afterward shut down the engine. When found he was seated in a chair and had been dead about two hours. He was about 73 years of age.

A three-horse hitch is being used by Hose 2 this winter.

The Thursday Evening club held a largely attended whist party last week at their rooms. There were twenty tables in play and a grand time was enjoyed.

Warren F. Spaulding, secretary of the Massachusetts Prison Association, will speak on "Crimes and Criminals" at the Thursday Evening club next week.

There was a lively runaway at East Milton Wednesday. A horse attached to a sleigh and driven by a woman dashed through the village with the woman shouting for help. The animal got tuckered out before he reached the top of Milton hill where he was stopped. The woman did not give her name.

At ice hockey on Thursday at Milton, the Milton Academy defeated English High of Boston 2 to 1.

Shooting On West Street

Carmine Coutelli of 54 West street went on the war path with a shot gun last night and fired point blank at a crowd of men.

From what could be learned by the police there was a crowd of Italians in Coutelli's place. An argument of some kind took place and the crowd was ejected.

Coutellio then took down his gun and going to the door fired point blank at the crowd. It is alleged that several of the shots went dangerously near the ear of Antonio Cellucci.

The police were notified and the chances are that Coutillio will be brought into court for assault with a dangerous weapon.

And arrive serene, majestic ever.

GREAT HIT

Vaudeville Show of Social Club Draws Crowd

A packed house greeted the vaudeville artists last evening at the Social Club entertainment given in First Church chapel. The Y. M. C. A. Guitar and Mandolin club delighted the audience with several selections before the entertainment began, and opened the program with an overture, receiving hearty applause.

The following program was given:

Farcical Sketch — Mrs. Maltby's Mole

Characters:

Letitia Maltby, a Society Leader with a leaning toward "Bohemia." Note: She also possesses a mole. — Miss Georgiana C. Lane

Marmaduke Maltby, her husband, a Professor of Archæology with a leaning towards any old thing. Note: He also possesses whiskers. — Mr. Emery L. Crane

Jenkins, the Butler, seen but not heard at great length. — Mr. Frank Patch

Miss George Clark — In Artistic Dances

Miss Alice Claflin — Drum Soloist

Miss Muriel Clapp and Mr. Frank Patch — In Illustrated Songs

Cheyenne.
Stars and Strips and You.
Aint you coming back to Old New Hampshire, Molly?

Mr. Albert Hopkins — Buck and Wing Dancer

Henry Dowst — Monologues

The Zingari Troupe.

Miss Clapp, Miss Claflin, Mrs. Slade, Miss Tisdale, Mr. Slade, Mr. Keyes, Mr. Patch, Mr. Ricker, Mr. Thompson.

Vocal Solos, Mrs. Slade and Mr. Thompson

Mandolin Solo — Mr. Ricker

Miss Burgess, Accompanist

Mr. Crane, Miss Lane, and Mr. Patch ably sustained their parts in the farce, which abounded in ludicrous situations and quick changes.

Miss Georgie Clark, the Parisian terpsichorean artist was the recipient of a large bunch of pinks.

Miss Alice Claflin in songs with drum accompaniment made a great hit, and received loud and prolonged applause. She responded with a whistling solo.

The audience enjoyed joining in the chorus of the songs, sung by Miss Clapp and Mr. Patch, which were illustrated by the stereopticon, the words of the chorus being thrown on the screen.

Mr. Hopkins was particularly good in buck and wing dancing, and was repeatedly recalled.

Mr. Dowst, "the Greenleaf street unknown," in monologues made an instant hit and it is safe to say that he will not hereafter remain on the unknown list. So smitten were the Social Club committee with his charms that after several curtain calls he was presented with a large box. On opening it a beautiful large white cabbage tied with a huge bow of green ribbon, was disclosed. The gift almost moved the artist to tears, but he was able to express his thanks most feelingly.

The performance closed with the appearence of the Zingari troupe who appeared in national costume. Their specialties were: A dance by Miss Claflin, vocal solos by Mrs. Harry Slade and Mr. Thompson, and mandolin solos by Roscoe Ricker. All were gems and appreciatively by encored.

The favorites of the evening were Miss Claflin, Mr. Hopkins, Mr. Dowst, Mr. Ricker and Mr. Thompson.

Miss Burgess accompanied and was good as usual.

The vaudeville was a great success and carried through in a way that would do credit to professionals, and reflects credit on Mr. Crane, under whose direction it was given.

A Councilman Elected President

The Democratic City Committee of 1907 met for organization at Hotel Greenleaf last evening. Councilman Charles J. McGilvray was elected president, Edward J. Dunn vice president, Alfred J. LaCroix secretary and William J. Walsh, treasurer. The above with the chairmen of the Ward committees constitue the executive committee.

Day Officer At Atlantic.

There is great rejoicing at Atlantic today for the new day officer for that section went on duty this morning. The officer assigned to this beat is Officer Bradley who has been doing day duty between Quincy Adams and the West Quincy depot.

Officer Bradley's beat is being covered by Officer Goodhue, who for several years has been doing the night beat in City Square.

Officer Goodhue has proved an efficient officer in City Square, and had been given the title of "Johnnie" on the spot.

His assignment to a day beat is a merited promotion. The changes were announced at roll call last night and went into effect this morning.

In addition to this, a new order was issued requiring the day men to ring in every half hour instead of once an hour as heretofore. This will enable headquarters to communicate with the officers readily should they be needed.

At roll call tonight some changes in the beats of night men will be announced.

Appointments Expected Monday

A regular meeting of the City Council will be held next Monday evening. It is more than probable that Mayor Thompson will forward to the City Council at that time a list of his appointments of dpartment officials.

There have been many rumors of possible changes but Mayor Thompson has dropped no hint of his intentions, and the general public will not know anything about them until announced.

During the municipal campaign last fall there was a cry for a change in some departments particularly the Commissioner of Public Works and Overseer of the Poor. Since the inauguration there have been several conferences between those who desired these changes and Mayor Thompson.

What the result of these conferences were is not known as neither Mayor Thompson or those who interviewed him have had anything to say on the subject.

In Competition With Granite Cutters

The granite cutters are remonstrating against the employment of prisoners at Deer island as granite cutters. A Boston paper says: In answer to a protest against prisoners at Deer Island being employed at granite cutting, made by the Granite Cutters' Union of Boston, the committee handling the matter has received a letter from the state prison commission which says that if the union will suggest some other suitable work for the prisoners, granite cutting will be stopped.

The announcement was made at this weeks meeting of the Boston branch at 46 Stillman street. The letter has been forwarded to James Duncan, national secretary of the granite cutters, whose office is in Quincy.

William McCartney, recording secretary of the Boston branch, has been elected one of the auditors of the union at large. The other two auditors elected are M. J. O'Brien of the Quincy branch and John Griffin of the Milford branch.

Galahad Brotherhood.

Rev. William E. Gardner will deliver his seventh address of a course of twelve in "Relation of Church and State," to the Galbad Brotherhood of Christ church on Sunday at 12.15 These addresses are very interesting as well as instructive, even more so, at this particular period when the church and state in foreign countries are striving so earnestly for supremacy. The Galahad Brotherhood invites all men to attend this address and learn how the trouble of today started centuries ago.

Charles D. Mann.

The funeral of Charles D. Mann was held at his home, 295 Beale street, Friday at 2 o'clock, services were conducted by the Rev. Edward A. Chase. There were many floral tributes from relatives and friends.

Mr. Mann died very suddenly Wednesday morning at 4.30 from an attack of the grip after an illness of but a few days, at the age of 68 years and 2 mohths. He leaves a widow and several children.

There Is Much Close at Hand, While More Is Being Rushed From Outside Quarters--The Death List a Thousand

New York, Jan. 19.—A dispatch direct from Kingston says that the streets of that city are now picketed with American guards, Admiral Evans, at the request of the British authorities, having landed a number of marines from the battleships Missouri and Indiana.

Six hundred bodies have been recovered and more are being found constantly. Dynamite is being employed to clear away the debris of shattered buildings.

The situation at Kingston seems to be improving. Order has been reestablished, and the work of burying the dead and caring for the injured is progressing on an organized basis.

The work of sending in relief to the stricken city is proceeding with energy. Kingston is receiving supplies, as far as possible, from the island of Jamaica itself. The American warships in the harbor have put on shore all the foodstuffs and medical supplies they could spare, and the Jamaican authorities have taken charge of the distribution of all provisions in the city.

In addition, relief is being hurried in from outside quarters. The senate yesterday passed a bill authorizing relief for the stricken island; the people of the British island of Trinidad have sent a first instalment of relief; H. M. S. Indefatigable has left Port of Spain, Trinidad, with provisions, clothing and other supplies for the stricken people; the French government has started a cruiser from the island of Martinique with supplies for Kingston; the Mansion House fund in London is growing rapidly and the British authorities are perfecting the details of relief on a large scale, and, in addition, various steamers are either on their way or about to start for Kingston with food, clothing and medicines on board.

The report that a tidal wave had devastated the southern shore of Jamaica has not been confirmed. Cable communication with the island has been partly restored, buf messages from Jamaica are coming through very slowly.

The estimate of deaths remains at about 1000.

Great relief was afforded last night to all those who have friends in Jamaica by a statement received from the office of the cable company at Kingston that up to 7 o'clock Thursday evening no Americans had been reported killed or severely wounded by the earthquake.

The list of known victims is growing and the names of no less than 40 persons of more or less prominence in the Jamaican capital already have been given out as dead. About 20 well known people are either injured or missing.

The reports make no mention of further earthquake and the fires have been put out.

The partial restoration of communication is bringing a number of belated dispatches from Kingston which give additional details of the calamity. The city is described as rocking like a ship in a choppy sea during the quake, and when the fire started the scene became hellish.

The only wharves left are those of the Hamburg-American, the Direct Mail and the Royal Mail steamship companies. All the lumber yards and stocks have been destroyed.

Many painful sights were witnessed as rescues were being made and when dead bodies were being extricated from the ruins. A number of negroes, trying to escape through open windows, became jammed therein by falling timbers and were either killed outright or burned to death. Bodies of the dead are being transported by lighter across the harbor to the Palisades and buried well away from the city.

Immediately after the first shock there was a mad rush of refugees to the sea front, and 700 persons were rescued by being taken on board vessels in the harbor.

Since that fateful Monday the visitors to Jamaica have been leaving the island as fast as they are able to secure passage. This thinning out of the population tends to relieve the anxiety of the authorities by reducing the number of mouths to be fed.

While the fire was at its height the screaming of a number of horses, corralled in a ring of fire, was heard above every other sound, even the constant explosions and the crashing of falling timbers.

Kingston was threatened with a water famine owing to the bursting of the reservoir fed by the Hope river. The supply ceased for 24 hours, but there is now a plentiful supply from the Wagwater river.

The negroes are quite useless. Paralyzed with fear, they are unable to help themselves and spend their time in praying.

Rain is threatening, which is very unusual at this time of the year. If rain comes it will add very much to the discomforts of the people.

The whole of Jamaica felt the shock, but no serious damage was done beyond a radius of 12 miles from Kingston. Some houses were cracked at Spanish Town, the fortifications at Port Royal were abandoned by the artillerymen and engineers and the western part of the town is partly submerged. Up Park camp, north of Kingston, is also destroyed, and about 40 sick soldiers were burned to death before they could be removed from the hospital.

Opinion of Eminent Scientist

Naples, Jan. 19.—Professor Chestoni has declared that there is great similarity between the Kingston earthquake and that which occurred in Calabria in September, 1905. The professor was sent to Calabria as president of the commission appointed by the Italian government to study the phenomena. He is of the opinion that Kingston may be submerged, and he attributes the earthquake there to magnetic disturbances caused by recent eclipses.

Anxious to Save Our Forests

Washington, Jan. 19.—A delegation representing the states interested in the White Mountain and Appalachian forest reserves called on Speaker Cannon at the Capitol and urged him to permit the house to consider the bill providing for the creation of these reserves. Cannon assured the delegation that he intends to study the measure carefully and read the senate report on it at the time it passed that body, as well as the favorable report made by the house committee on agriculture.

French Get Footing In Russia

St. Petersburg, Jan. 19.—A French syndicate, headed by ex-Finance Minister Rouvier, has obtained a concession for the construction of a great car and locomotive factory at Dikitovka, a contract to supply rolling stock for the government railroads for a term of years, and a lease of the Catherine railroad, 1800 miles long. In return for the concessions the syndicate is to deposit a cash bond for $50,000,000 in the treasury.

Bid For Building Canal

Washington, Jan. 19.—President Roosevelt and Chairman Shonts of the isthmian canal commission last night received a delegation of contractors representing the McArthur-Gillespie company of New York, who submitted argument in favor of their bid, which was 12.5 percent of the total estimated cost for construction of the Panama canal. The contract for constructing the canal will not be awarded for some time.

Merger of Trolley Lines

Hoosick Falls, N. Y., Jan. 19.—The merger of the Bennington and Hoosick Valley railway with the Bennington and North Adams street railway has been consummated by the filing of the necessary legal papers with the secretary of state. The roads form part of an interstate trolley system, which the New Haven interests now have in New York, Massachusetts, Connecticut and Vermont.

Thaw Will Have Sister's Aid

New York, Jan. 19.—The Countess of Yarmouth, sister of Harry Thaw, now awaiting trial for the killing of Stanford White, arrived from Europe on the steamship Kaiserin Auguste Victoria. The countess denied herself to newspaper interviewers, but, through her brother, Edward Thaw, said that she would give every aid in her power to her brother when he faces trial next week.

Assault Caused Loss of Reason

Pittsburg, Jan. 19.—William C. Morton, the wealthy real estate broker of Cleveland, who was assaulted in his room at a hotel here two weeks ago, and who has since lain unconscious at the homeopathic hospital, was able to be taken to his home yesterday. Morton is mentally unsound as a result of the blows on his head, and may never recover his reason.

Another Case of "Unwritten Law"

Washington, Jan. 19.—Hubert Posey, 21 years old, was shot and fatally wounded at Hill Top, Md., a few minutes before the hour set for his marriage to Miss Mary Bowie. The shooting was done by the girl's mother and brother, who claimed that young Posey had wronged Miss Bowie.

Carnes Will Preside at Hargis Trial

The Purser's Confidence

By HUNTLEY WEYMAN

Copyrighted by E. C. Parcells

It was spoken of as the slickest robbery ever perpetrated on a London jewelry house. Lady Stanton was looking at a diamond tiara and being waited on by one of the partners when a gentleman lounged forward, familiarly addressed her and, picking up the tiara, walked out of the store with it. The act was so audacious that he was given time to mix with the throng in the street and get safely away.

It was a jewelry house that had never been robbed before, and the decision was immediate to spare no expense to run the robber down. The case was given to the police, with a grand reward attached, and Scotland Yard put its best detectives at work. Two or three private agencies took up the trail for the reward there was in it, and when a clew seemed to lead to Paris a French detective prepared to follow it. From some line of reasoning not made public all the officers came to an agreement that the robber was an American and that he would seek to get away on the Blue Star liner Monarch. The press didn't say anything about trails, but four of the detectives followed their noses at least and secured passage on the Monarch. Had one of the male passengers come to them half an hour before sailing and admitted that he was the robber and held out his hands for the bracelets none of the four would have sailed. As it was, no one came forward, and they felt it a duty to make the voyage to New York and keep an eye on every fellow passenger. They knew nothing of each other's presence in an official way. If any one of them was to give his confidence to any one, the purser was the man to unbosom to, and it was not long before he had a call. It was a Scotland Yard man. He was wearing false side whiskers and passing himself off as a retired English retail grocer who was making the trip to see his sister in New York.

"I think I have a clew already," he said as the purser promised to respect his confidence and assist him in any way he could. "There is a Frenchman aboard calling himself Dubois. He speaks English passably well and claims to be going over in the interests of the wine business, but he isn't fooling Inspector Saunders a little bit. He's my man or I don't know a crook when I see one."

The next burst of confidence came from Dubois. He identified himself as belonging to the Paris bureau and added:

"Pist! It was easy enough. I picked him out from the 300 passengers almost at a glance. He is an Englishman and claims to be a retired grocer, and I shall give him rope until we reach quarantine on the other side. Should he suspect me and try to jump overboard I hope I may have your assistance."

Mr. Dubois was assured that the purser and all the other officers of the boat stood ready to lend justice all possible assistance, and he then made way for a detective from a private London agency. The man wore a false stomach and a wig and used the Lancashire dialect. He introduced himself as John Stone and asked for the purser's confidence at once.

"I've got him right between my thumb and finger, this way," he said, with a grin. "The trail led me as straight as a turnpike. I can't ask the Monarch to turn back, of course, but I'll have the darbies on the fellow as soon as we sight Sandy Hook. Lord but it was dead easy! He calls himself a French name and tries to disguise his English, but any child could spot him off. Help me to keep an eye on Dubois and there will be something in it for you."

The purser smiled inwardly and gave his promise. He thought there were others to come, and he was not mistaken. Mr. Hiram Wilkinson next introduced himself as being from a private Liverpool agency. He had a wig and goggles and was trying to talk through his nose and be taken for a New Englander. He felt that he had come to the right party in coming to the purser, and he didn't shut his mouth until his secret was out.

"It's the feller as calls hisself Stone," he whispered. "I spotted him the instant he came up the gangplank, but I dasn't tackle him on sight. I am making the voyage to play my fish. I'll bet pounds to shillings I make him trap hisself in less than three days. He claims to have a brother in the butcher business at Albany, but of course that's all in your eye."

"You think he's the man?" queried the purser in an absent way as he began to see the humorous side of the situation.

"Say, now, take a good long look at him yourself. He looks the thief from head to heel. Haven't you noticed his nervousness? He's afraid he's been followed. He'll make a fight of it when we sight the American coast, but I'll have the irons on him before he can say Jack Robinson. Mum is the word, and you will get your whack of the reward."

There was no fifth detective aboard to ask the purser for his confidence and assistance, but after a day or two Mr. Abijah Absalom Barnes, as he gave his name, asked the official to take charge of a package for him.

"It's only some gimcracks I've been buying abroad," he explained, "but Martha and the children will be looking for presents when I get home. That Yurup is a great country, but I hain't seen no spot like old New Hampshire since I went away. Ever get up that far?"

"I never have," replied the purser as he wondered how Uncle Abijah had escaped the pitfalls that must have been set for his feet.

"If you ever have a chance, come up and stay with me for a week, and it shan't cost you a red cent. If you've got a wife and children, bring 'em along. If you could come in the winter, I'd take you to half a dozen spelling schools, and we'd slide down hills on hand sleds. I own a hill over a mile long, and my old woman can make buckwheat cakes to beat the band. Say, now, is there any danger of any one stealing my package from you?"

"Not the slightest."

"Because there are some suspicious characters aboard. I've run across four different men that I wouldn't trust to go to my barn and get a peck measure of oats. They call themselves Stone, Dubois, Saunders and Wilkinson. We've got tin peddlers up in my state that look more honest than these men do. I'm right on to 'em, however, and they can't fool me."

At least once a day during the rest of the voyage each of the four detectives sought out the purser and reported progress and planned what should be done when quarantine was reached. While each one had only suspected one another on the start, only three days had passed when each man's suspicions included the three others in the quartet. Uncle Abijah bothered them from the start. He insisted on butting in at all times and under all circumstances. If one detective had another aside to pump him, the old man from New Hampshire presently appeared and carelessly said:

"Gentlemen, I hope I don't intrude, but were either of you ever up in Sock county, N. H.?"

"Never," was the reply.

"Then you've missed a great thing. We hain't got no Niagara falls up there, but sliding down hill in the winter beats anything you can find outdoors. You load up a big shed with gals and boys and head her down hill and let her go, and the first thing you know you are two miles away. I hain't got but one spare bed in the house, but Martha and me will sleep on the floor if you'll come up."

Sometimes the four sleuths would play cards together and pretend to be very jovial and friendly. Before the game was fairly under way Uncle Abijah would stroll into the smoking room and say:

"I dunno whether any of you fellers heard about that big robbery in London or not, but it was a corker. Feller walked into a jewelry store and picked up a bushel of diamonds and walked out ag'in as cool as a hired man going to work. I happened to be right nigh the store at the time, and I didn't know but what they would arrest me. The feller got away, but I'm purty sure I saw him and would know him ag'in."

He would then lounge out on deck, and the game would soon break up, and one of the officers would hunt up Uncle Abijah to get further particulars. He would intimate that he had seen the robber among the passengers aboard and that he might give him away on landing, and thus the four officers would be further puzzled and mystified. Each one was invited up to New Hampshire over and over again, and before Sandy Hook was sighted each one knew the old man's history from the day he was born. No arrests were made at quarantine. It had been left to the purser, and he had telephoned up. Four interviews had been held with him, and as a result four different men were arrested when the steamer made her dock. The victims were Messrs. Saunders, Dubois, Wilkinson and Stone. Uncle Abijah saw them taken into custody and smiled and winked. He had also worked out a little plan.

Three hours later the four men, accompanied by two detectives from headquarters, boarded the Monarch to ask of the purser:

"What do you know of the old fellow who called himself Barnes?"

"Nice old man and innocent as a child," replied the official. "Say, now, he's gone off and forgotten his package."

"If he returns for it, tie a string around his wrist and hold him fast," laughed one of the headquarters men. "He's the chap that took the diamonds!"

The Value of Lifeboats.

Considerably more shipwrecked sailors are saved by their own boats than by any other means, says London Answers. Thus of 2,159 persons saved on the coasts of the United Kingdom in 1903-04, 165 were saved by the rocket apparatus and assistance from the shore, 423 by lifeboats, 143 by coast guard boats and other craft, 641 by passing ships and 735 by their own boats.

The total number of seamen and passengers saved from wrecks of British vessels everywhere and of foreign vessels on or near the coasts of British territory during the year 1903-04 was 6,086, of whom 2,159 were saved on the coasts of the United Kingdom, 1,782 on the coasts of British possessions abroad, 1,343 on the coasts of foreign countries—all from British wrecks, be it remembered—and 802 on the high seas. Of the 3,927 persons saved from British wrecks abroad 2,562 were saved by their own boats and 959 by passing ships, while only 28 were saved by lifeboats and 149 by rocket apparatus.

An Impression.

"Did that lawyer get a clear view of the case?" inquired the litigant's friend.

"No. I'm afraid he didn't. I told him that my trouble was about money, and he seemed to be proceeding on the theory that by relieving me of my money he would cause the trouble to disappear."

DOWN TO POLITICS

Brownsville Affray Developes Into a "Football" Game

CRANE AS A PEACEMAKER

Endeavoring to Line Up Republicans Who Favor Blackburn Amendment, the Author of Which Still "Stands Pat"

Washington, Jan. 19.—Brownsville is now little more than a political football, which the Republicans and Democrats are kicking about the senate, each side playing for position. Senator Blackburn's introduction of the amendment disclaiming any intention on the part of the senate of questioning or denying the president's right caused confusion on the Republican side of the chamber.

Senators Lodge, Spooner, Knox and other Republican leaders were inclined to vote for the amendment because it accurately reflected their personal indisposition to question or defy the president's authority. At the same time they saw the political inexpediency of dividing the Republican senators and that to vote for the Blackburn amendment would play into the hands of the Democrats.

In the absence of Senator Aldrich, Senator Crane took charge yesterday of the forces in the senate in opposition to the Blackburn amendment and by 2 o'clock he had succeeded in inspiring more confidence that had been felt earlier in the day. He then announced his opinion that a vote would be reached on Monday and that the Blackburn provision would be laid on the table by a practically unanimous Republican vote.

There were others, however, who thought that in case there should be any break in the party ranks the defection would be of considerable extent. Much interest is attached to Lodge's position, because it is generally felt that if he should see his way clear to vote against the Blackburn provision, strong friend of the president that he is, many others who hesitate to antagonize the president would follow his example. Lodge made no public announcement of his intention, but it is asserted by the opponents of the Blackburn amendment that when the test comes the Massachusetts senator will cast his vote against the provision, notwithstanding it is along the same line of his own original amendment to the original Foraker resolution.

Senator Crane's plan is for the Republicans to disclaim on the floor of the senate what the Democrats would have disclaimed in the form of the amendment introduced by their minority leader. Then the Republicans, provided enough of them can be lined up, will vote to table the amendment on the ground that it is entirely superfluous and merely reiterates what the Republicans have already disclaimed.

When asked for his version of the situation, Senator Blackburn, the author of the amendment, said that he was "standing pat." "I mean to force the issue as far as I can," he said, "and I do not believe that a fighting man like the President of the United States will oppose an amendment like mine, which is in line with his own course and conviction."

He said he had been importuned by the Republicans to withdraw the amendment, but that he had declined to do so because he believed that the president was entitled to this declaration of faith and right and he added that if the Republicans should vote it down the consequences must be upon their shoulders. He declares that the amendment is an abstract declaration and that it is entirely disconnected with the Brownsville affair. He repeated his conviction that a practically unanimous Democratic vote would be cast for the amendment, but expressed doubt as to whether a vote would be secured Monday.

Repeated efforts were made during the day to get Blackburn to withdraw the amendment, but without avail. Unquestionably a large majority of the Democrats stand with him, but it is known that there will be some falling off in their vote. Senators Teller and Tillman will vote against the Blackburn provision. Those who have talked with the president say he is not making any effort to influence senators on the vote on the question.

Denial From the Vatican

Shots were exchanged between the strikers and the secret police, but there were no casualties. The strikers were dispersed. The strikers are stevedores employed by three shipping companies.

BOSTON'S LACK OF HUMOR.

An English View of the Landmarks of the "Hub."

I have said that Boston loves relics. The relics which it loves best are the relics of England's discomfiture. The stately portraits of Copley are of small account compared to the memorials of what was nothing else than a civil war. Faneuil hall, the Covent Garden of Boston, presented to the city by Peter Faneuil some thirty years before the birth of "liberty," is now but an emblem of revolt. The Old South meeting place is endeared to the citizens of Boston as "the sanctuary of freedom." A vast monument, erected a mere quarter of a century ago, commemorates the "Boston massacre." And wherever you turn you are reminded of an episode which might easily be forgotten. To an Englishman these historical landmarks are inoffensive. The dispute which they recall aroused far less emotion on our side of the ocean than on the other, and long ago we saw the events of the Revolution in a fair perspective. In truth, this insistence on the past is not wholly creditable to Boston's sense of humor. The passionate paeans which Otis and his friends sang to liberty were irrelevant. Liberty was never for a moment in danger, if liberty, indeed, be a thing of fact and not of watchwords. The leaders of the Revolution wrote and spoke as though it was their duty to throw off the yoke of the foreigner—a yoke as heavy as that which Catholic Spain cast upon Protestant Holland. But there was no yoke to be thrown off, because no yoke was ever imposed, and Boston might have celebrated greater events in her history than that which an American statesman has wisely called "the glittering and sounding generalities of natural right."—Charles Whitley in Blackwood's Magazine.

IMITATIVE WOMAN.

A Cynical English View of Feminine Human Nature.

Decidedly women are ar imitative class. From her earliest age the small girl apes the doings of her elders and, had she her own way, would be a miniature epitome of fashion. Such entertainments as she is permitted to witness in her mother's drawing room she imitates, with dolls and nurses for company, in the nursery. In her school days she invariably "forms" herself on some special friend whom she elects as a model of feminine perfection. And at a certain stage of their lives girls are as much alike as peas in a pod. As they mature and develop they may perhaps show some signs of individuality, but in all the main issues of life they continue to be more imitative than original.

Fashions, housekeeping and entertaining are all more or less conducted on the same lines, and the only true sign of friendship that is shown to the young married woman is to beg her to order her life and her home on her friend's principles. Any departure from those principles or any symptom of individual taste or strength of mind will sound the first challenge of unpopularity for the budding matron. Her mother and her mother's friends will alike desire imitation of their methods as the "sincerest form of flattery," and every decline from the original system will be pronounced wrong or injudicious.—Rita in London Mail.

Too Rapid Growth.

The minister's six-year-old son is of a very critical, literal turn of mind, and his father's sermons sometimes puzzle him sorely. He regards his father as the embodiment of truth and wisdom, but he has difficulty in harmonizing the dominie's pulpit utterances with the world as it really is. His parents encourage him to express his opinions and clear up his doubts as much as possible. So one Sunday at dinner, after a long period of thought, they were not surprised when he said gravely, "Papa, you said one thing in your sermon today that I don't think is so at all."

"Well, what's that, my boy?" asked the clergyman.

"Why, papa, you said 'The boy of today is the man of tomorrow.' That's too soon."

Incredulous.

"Cousin Henry's seasickness that time he crossed the water must have touched his head a bit."

"Why so?"

"Well, here he wrote in his di'ry: 'June 14.—Most everybody seasick, includin' myself. Saw two spoutin' wales.'"

"Don't see anything very loony about that."

"Why, Abner Dobbs! Do you mean to tell me that you believe that any of them passengers had ever swallered a whale?"—Life.

British Military Inventors.

The war office has long been proverbial for its discouragement of inventors in general, but they seem to reserve a special brand of ill treatment for an inventor who is unlucky enough to wear a soldier's coat. General Shrapnell, the inventor of the formidable projectile which bears his name to this day, died a poor man after spending thousands of pounds on his invention.—London Regiment.

To the Point.

Little Fred—Uncle John, did you ever hear the story about the good little boy who had a nice uncle? Uncle John—No. Tell it to me. Little Fred—Well, the nice uncle gave the good little boy a quarter. That's all.—Exchange.

Nothing is impossible to the man who can will.—Mirabeau.

Bondsmen Superseded

The personal bondsman is fast becoming obsolete; the risk to private fortune is too great.

The corporate bond is just as rapidly supplanting the old form; and, in time, men will marvel that they were ever called upon to incur the danger of personal suretyship.

In point of safety, convenience and propriety, there can be no comparison between the two; the one is just as weak and perilous as the other is strong and safe.

The time is coming when it will be thought as reasonable to borrow the key of a friend's safe as to borrow his name for surety purposes.

PLANT EXPLORATIONS.

Results of Professor Hansen's Trip Through Northern Asia.

HOW SIBERIA IS TO AID OUR FARMS

Species of Plants From Cold, Dry Belt There to Be Transferred to Arid Regions In the United States—New Alfalfa Found to Rotate Wheat Crop of the Northwest—Alcohol Producing Potatoes.

Professor Niels E. Hansen of the University of South Dakota recently returned from an exploration of the cold, dry belt of northern Asia, where he was sent by Secretary Wilson to find plants that will grow in similar soil and climate in the United States, writes William E. Curtis, the Chicago Record-Herald's Washington correspondent. His journey was very successful, and he has brought back several valuable additions to the useful plants that grow in the semiarid belt between the Mississippi river and the Rocky mountains.

"Rotation in crops is absolutely necessary for the life of the soil, as everybody knows," said Secretary Wilson. "You can ruin a farm by planting the same crop on the same ground year after year, and it is the simplest rule of farming to rotate crops. That rule is difficult to apply in the semiarid regions because there are so few things that will grow there. We have found the durum wheat to be especially adapted to dry farming, and out in that western country, which used to be called a desert, the farmers have harvested between fifty and sixty million bushels this year, but they can grow wheat only so long. It exhausts the soil after a few crops. And they cannot afford to give nature a rest and time to prepare more plant food in her laboratory because they lose the use of the land. They cannot afford what we call 'summer fallowing,' which is plowing without a crop, and it was up to the agricultural department to find some alternate crop, something for them to rotate with. We have failed to make plants that need moisture grow in the dry regions, and if we conquer the desert, if we get the most there is out of the arid and semiarid regions, we've got to find plants that will endure the severe winters; that will grow in dry ground and pay the farmers a profit. That's the problem before us.

"Up in the middle of northern Asia, which is called 'the roof of the world,' the people have been successfully cultivating many plants under similar conditions and in similar soil. So I sent Professor Hansen of the University of South Dakota over to hunt for such as are suitable for our semiarid belt and will rotate with durum wheat all the way from the 'Panhandle' to Alaska. He has been three times in Russia and twice in Siberia. His first trip was made in 1894 for study. The department of agriculture sent him over in 1897 on a plant hunting expedition, and he brought back some very important samples. I sent him again in 1906, and he has just returned with three kinds of alfalfa—two that will grow in dry soil with light rainfall and intense cold and one that will grow in the woods. They are entirely new varieties, but have been grown on the cold, dry steppes of northern Asia for centuries. They have a yellow flower, while our alfalfa has a blue flower. Professor Hansen will take the seeds out to South Dakota, plant them and cultivate them so as to get the largest possible yield, and then we will distribute seed among the farmers of the arid belt to use as a complement to wheat as a rotating crop, and we hope they will do the business and enable the people of the dry belt to make a crop every year.

"In addition to this hardy alfalfa Professor Hansen brought back several new species of clover, with which the natives of northern Siberia fatten their stock and make hay. It grows in the coldest regions in a short summer, with very little rainfall, and we hope that it will do as well on this side of the world under similar conditions.

"Congress has passed an alcohol law in anticipation of the time when our people will have to go to the fields for light and power, and it was up to the agricultural department to provide them with the best plants in existence to make alcohol from. Professor Hansen was on the lookout for such things also. He investigated the alcohol business in the countries he visited and brought home seventeen barrels of what are called 'alcohol potatoes,' which will grow in dry ground and turn out 500 or 600 bushels to the acre. They are full of alcohol and are also very valuable for fattening stock, but they have a coarse fiber and are not delicate enough for table use. We expect to introduce those potatoes among the farmers of the United States and make 500 gallons of alcohol an acre from them. We propose to distribute them among the experiment stations throughout the United States to be planted next spring.

"Professor Hansen brought back several other interesting and valuable plants, but these are the things I sent him for, and he brought them. Hansen is a man who does things. He is an intelligent, intrepid fellow, full of resources, and nothing stops him. When he sees anything of value he knows it, and when he goes after anything he gets it. Up at Tomsk, in eastern Siberia, he was unable to find any clover seed, so he went out and bought a load of hay in the market and hired men to pick the seed out of it."

Playing a Trump Card

[Original.]

"There is no use trying any longer. I've stood your inhuman treatment ever since we've been married."

"The honeymoon and a fortnight."

"If that brief period has fallen so heavily upon me, what would a lifetime of such misery be?"

"Pretty glum prospect, isn't it?"

"A frightful prospect for me."

"You have a pleasant home, plenty of servants, an excellent position in society. Don't you think these should make amends for a very imperfect husband?"

"No, I do not. I'm going away."

"Where?"

"Abroad. Mother is going with me."

"You've got it all arranged."

"I haven't said anything to mother about it yet, but I'm sure she'll go."

"Very well. I'll stay at home."

"Home! A nice name for it! Bluebeard house would be a better one."

"Do you mean by that that I am to bring in another wife?"

"You'll have to get a divorce first."

"I shall be in no hurry for that, but I must have some one to keep house for me."

"Your Aunt Harriet would do very well."

"Thank you, no. To live with Aunt Harriet would be worse than"—

"Another insult."

—"living alone. I must have some one who will be companionable, to be here when I come home for dinner, to speak a word to me when I come in from the club before going to bed—in short, to make the house as cheerful as it can be made while the wife is away."

"You seem to consider it an easy matter to find such a person."

"I have one already in mind."

"Whom?"

"I can't see what interest it is to you to know, but since you are curious I don't mind saying that I refer to Mrs. Beardslee."

"Mrs. Beardslee!"

"She's been very unfortunate—married but a year when she lost her husband, and her father failed. I understand she's looking for a situation as companion for some old lady."

"Do you call yourself an old lady?"

"Oh, no, only an old fool. Mrs. Beardslee, you know, before my marriage with you"—

"Oh, yes, I know very well the efforts she made to get you."

—"warned me against matrimony. She had a hard time of it, poor woman, with a husband who drank."

"And she accused me of drinking?" hotly.

"No; at the time she didn't know that I was engaged to you. If you leave me, I know of no one I would rely upon for companionship—she's a splendid housekeeper—except Mrs. Beardslee."

"If you have no regard for your own good name, I insist that you should have some for mine. For you to bring an old flame into your house would make a frightful scandal."

"It will not trouble me, and, as for you, you must remember that when a couple separates neither has any control over the acts of the other."

This was an ounce of prevention instead of a pound of cure. The lady was staggered.

"That's when they are divorced," she said.

"A divorce would necessarily follow in time. It's a great drawback in every way for a couple to be married and live apart."

"And you would marry your old flame?"

"Since that pertains to me at a period after our separation I must decline to take you into my confidence."

"Why not shut up the house—you go in one direction, I in another?"

"What advantage would there be in that?"

"You wouldn't need a housekeeper."

"I'm content here. I have no desire to leave my comfortable home."

"I see how it is. You're trying to get me out so that you can get that horrid Mrs. Beardslee in my place."

She put her handkerchief to her eyes; but, repressing her tears, she nerved herself to appear indifferent.

"When do you go?" he asked without noticing her remark.

"I shall consult my own convenience. I'm not going to be turned out of house and home till I get ready, and if it is for the purpose of making room for your old flame I shall not go at all."

"If you go, I shall certainly get Mrs. Beardslee to keep house for me, if I can."

"Oh, never fear for that. She'll come quick enough."

"Then I understand that you will not go?"

"No, I won't."

"And you are disposed to stand my brutality for a lifetime?"

"For ages rather than have that woman come into the house, I being turned out of it."

"Suppose we spend the evening at the theater. I've been rather tried in a business matter today, and I think some recreation would do me good."

She glanced at him. He looked tired and careworn.

"After all," she said, "I think I have been the one to blame. Yes, let's go to the theater."

What took place during the next few minutes would not sound as well in words as in the original.

AN APPROPRIATION

in 1907 for a

NEW CODDINGTON

GOOD AFTERNOON.

The city of Quincy has obtained some very undesirable advertising because of the libel of the committee of the insurance underwriters, which was entirely uncalled for. With here and there a local reference it looked like a report prepared for large cities generally, and not at all adaptable to a city like Quincy which is not closely built up even in City Square.

But when Boston papers construe the report to say that our fire department is "in bad condition," and that the "fire apparatus is useless in handling serious blazes," etc., etc., the losses for ten years show quite the contrary.

Quincy people do not feel that there is any great danger from a conflagration. With the best of equipments, however, big fires will come occasionally.

The city can be depended upon to improve the fire department without such a report, and has made rapid strides in recent years.

Even the most conservative government officials have evinced surprise at the statement just issued by the Bureau of Statistics of the Department of Commerce and Labor concerning value of manufactures exported from this country in the last year. This trade has aggregated more than $700,000,000, a figure hitherto never approached by this country; and the United States now ranks third in the value of manufactures entering the world's commerce. That this condition should prevail in the face of such a congestion of transportation facilities as the country has suffered during the last few months, is little short of remarkable. Advocates of waterways development are asking what this report would have presented had the great rivers of the country been improved so as to admit of their use as carriers of the products of factories and mills. They declare that once the natural channels of the nation are bettered so as to permit of their carrying trade, the United States will jump from third place and may possibly lead the world.

The hysteria for mining investments that has seized the country is likely to be a prominent subject before the Sixtieth Congress. At present there are no laws whatever for the protection of the innocent investor against the numerous wildcat schemes that have appeared of late. Both Senator Dick, chairman of the Senate Committee on Mines and Mining, and Congressman Brown of Wisconsin, chairman of the corresponding committee in the House, are agreed that some legislation is needed. Neither, however, believes that any action will be taken at this session because of the pressure of unfinished business and the necessity for getting the big appropriations bills out of the way before adjournment in March. Such a bill will have the undoubted support of all the reputable mining enterprises in the country which have suffered vastly by the unprincipled actions of unscrupulous promoters.

Those who have read "Cap'n Eri" or the "Cape Cod ballads" will be pleased to learn that the Daily Ledger has made arrangements to print Joe Lincoln's latest story "Partners of the Tide." The perils of the hero's love affair added to the perils of the sea, furnish plenty of action and make a story of most fascinating interest.

"Partners of the Tide" appear so real, "reads so natural" that you feel the mantle of Defoe must have fallen on the author, or else he has sketched his quaint characters from life. Perhaps both are partly true. A brilliant New York woman, who has summered on the Maine cost for years, has a notebook full of sketches of these people whom she intends to put in a book after they are dead. It need hardly be said that she is not a professional writer or she would be less Quixotic. Joe Lincoln has put them in his story and lives to tell the tale, though he has doubtless made composite characters from many individual types.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ What every city that is improperly governed needs is not the application of the Galveston or the Newport idea by a few devoted reformers, either by constant agitation or by any hook or crook. That would be little gain. What is needed is the development of a crisis calculated to arouse the citizens to actual conditions as the people of Newport were aroused, or as the people of Galveston were aroused, and when once that is done under any form of government the results can be obtained. It is puerile to contend that it is impossible to find fourteen men for common council and seven men for the board of aldermen in the various wards of the city not equally competent to successfully administer the affairs of the city as would be any five who might be secured for a commission. The trouble has been that the people have not sought these men; that they have been content with men who have sought the places without regard to their fitness for them, and as a result the better men have remained in the background and their services have not been gained. The agitation of the Galveston idea and the demonstration of its accomplishments is welcome because it shows what can be done when the people are aroused, and indicates that if the appeal comes to the citizenship, even of a mis-governed city, with sufficient force, there is still that power for good government which will respond to it. The problem that faces most cities is not how to meet the demand for more honest and economical administration, but how to make an appeal sufficiently strong to create that demand. We can't all have tidal waves, and we do not want them, and Galveston can't help us much in the solution of this real problem.—Haverhill Gazette.

New Smoke Law.

An amendment has been introduced into the Legislature to amend the Smoke act so that section one will read:

"In cities and towns situated in whole or in part within 10 miles of the sta e house, dark smoke or dense gray smoke shall not be discharged or allowed to escape from any building or premises for more than six minutes in any one hour of the day or night.

This bill amends the present law so as to make it apply to the metropolitan district instead of Boston only and it makes liable the railroads and public service corporations which were exempted in the act of 1905. The railroads and the public service corporations under the sanction of law are it is claimed devastating the metropolitan district. The petition of 1905, which is the basis of the present bill, sought to include them within its scope, but so great was the pressure brought to bear that words were actually inserted in the law specifically exempting those corporations.

A POINTER FOR TOURISTS.

Put Your Prayer Book on Top of the Things In Your Trunk.

"If you ever go to Bermuda I can tell you how to make time at the custom house," said a returning Washingtonian. "I reached Bermuda early in the morning. I made up my luggage rather hastily before leaving the ship.

"Just as I was ready to close my suit case I noticed that I had left my prayer book on the lounge. I pitched it in rather unceremoniously, strapped down the case and hurried ashore.

"You don't have to wait to declare as you do when coming into the port of New York. As I stepped into the office of the Johnny Bull official I unstrapped my case and opened it up. The official talked at me as if I had been a telephone.

"'Hello!' he said the first thing. 'What's this?' he asked, picking up my prayer book. 'Prayer book, eh? All right. Shut up your case.'

"'Want to look at anything else?' I asked.

"'No. You're all right, my friend. Any man who will put his prayer book on top of his traps isn't likely to beat the government. I'll take that for your declaration.'

"I threw him half a dozen cigars. That's where I made my mistake.

"'Got any more like these in that case?' asked the official.

"I said I hadn't, but do you know he wouldn't believe me, and I had to open up the case again, and he went through it as if he thought I was a smuggler."—Washington Post.

A PRODUCT OF MILK.

Galalith Is So Strong You Could Build a House With It.

You could build a house of milk if you liked, and it would be as strong and lasting as though made of Aberdeen granite, says M. Glen Fling in Technical World Magazine. Moreover, all the fittings could be made of the same substance, and they would outlive the finest ordinary material that was ever constructed.

Billiard tables, combs, fancy boxes and many other things are made from galalith, which is made from milk.

There is really no limit to the articles which can be made from galalith. It takes dyes readily, and inferior grades are colored. The best remain white, however, for white galalith brings the highest price because of its similarity to ivory. The first grade of galalith is made up into knife handles, and it brings almost as high a figure as would so much ivory.

Galalith is the best substitute for ivory ever discovered, for it is smooth to the touch, retains its soft, creamy tinting for years, is not marred by soap and water and, unlike celluloid, is proof against fire. It does not chip or crack like bone and can be cut into the most delicate shapes, being tough and not easily broken.

Cave Dwellers.

Grottoes and caverns are used, more or less, as shelters by primitive peoples, and thus inhabited caves are of course most frequent in Africa. A considerable number of natives make their homes in caves along the southern shore of the strait of Gibraltar, and in some of those caves are found the polished stones and arrowheads of the stone age. Troglodyte villages are frequent in the Tebessa territory of Algeria, one of which at Djeurf, 250 feet above the gorge of the Wadi Hallail, is reached by steps cut in the rock. The inhabitants of the Tunisian island of Galite are cave dwellers, their habitations being grottoes which they have dug out of the limestone or ancient burial caverns that they have enlarged. The subterranean villages of Matmata and of Medenine, hewn out of the rock, are in southern Tunisa.

Racine at His Work.

Racine, the French writer, composed his work while walking rapidly about, shouting out the lines in a loud voice. One day while he was thus composing part of his play of "Mithridates" in the Tuileries gardens in Paris he was surrounded by a group of workmen who took him to be a maniac. On his return home from these walks he would write down scene after scene in prose, and when they were finished he would exclaim, "My tragedy is done!" considering the transposition of the lines into verse only a trivial thing.

A Remarkable Church.

A small watering place in Austria named Eichwald can boast of possessing a remarkable church. It was first built by an Italian architect at Venice at the expense of Prince Carlos Clary-Aldringen, who is a great admirer of Italian architecture. When it was finished the church was taken to pieces and packed in thousands of numbered cases for transportation to Eichwald. At that place it was eventually rebuilt and then made over to its inhabitants as a gift from the prince.

THE BREAD OF ECONOMY.

"Man works from sun to sun; woman's work is never done."

That saying "Time is money" is usually applied to man and his work, but how about the busy house-wife to whom time is so precious? Time is more than money to her, for she is doing things which cannot be measured by money standards.

For instance she spends hours in keeping up the bread supply for the home by baking every day or so, when she might just as well use and be money and hard work "in." There is no better bread made than Best's, and it will please the family and save many a hard day's work.

Best's Celebrated Milk Bread

Church Wedding At Milton

An event of great interest to a large circle of friends was the wedding on Wednesday evening at the East Congregational church in Milton, of Miss Emily Frances Baxter, one of the most popular young ladies of that village, and Mr. Stephen Perkins Hurd of Swampscott. It was an exceedingly pretty affair and the first wedding in the church for over forty years.

The bride was attended by Miss Gertrude Fletcher Sanderson of Littleton and Mr. Edward Allen of Newton acted as best man. Mr. Jesse B. Baxter, brother of the bride, Mr. Percy E. Sheldon of East Milton, Dr. Frank R. Chapman and Mr. Tom Johnson 2d of Swampscott were the ushers. Rev. Andrew H. Mulnix of Faneuil was the officiating clergyman.

The party entered the church promptly at eight o'clock to the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march which was finely rendered by Mr. John Harris Gutterson of Boston. Before the entrance of the bridal party, and while the friends were gathering, Mr. Gutterson gave several musical selections, and Miss Rosa E. Richardson of Malden, sang "I love and the world is mine." The Episcopal form of the marriage service was used, during which Miss Richardson sang "O Perfect Love."

As the party left the church the bell in the belfrey pealed merrily forth. The bride was gowned in white messaline trimmed with princess lace with veil and orange blossoms and carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley. Her only ornament was a pearl pendant a gift from the bridegroem.

The maid of honor was dressed in rose pink crepe de chene trimmed with rose buds and carried sweet peas. She wore a pearl pin a gift from the bride. Owing to the recent death of the mother of Mr. Hurd, the reception which was to have been given at the home of the bride's parents was postponed. Miss Baxter has always been very active in the church and social life of the village, and the young couple carry with them to their new home in Swampscott the best wishes of a host of friends.

Boston Outlet For Parkway

Among the petitions to the Legislature this week was one that the Metropolitan Park Commissioners investigate and report to the next general court as to the advisability of constructing a boulevard from Dorchester avenue near the Fort Point channel, to to the Neponset river, the Quincy line.

Quincy is interested in this proposed boulevard as it would connect with the boulevard in this city that runs along the shore of Quincy bay and thence through West Quincy to the Blue Hills reservation.

ROBUST DOUGH ROLLERS.

Work In a Pie Factory Is on the Scale of Athletics.

To properly describe the processes of baking pumpkin pies would require one skilled in the technicalities of the art. This is the way it looks to a mere man: First, the coarse yellow rind is removed, and then the pumpkin is cut open and the seeds taken out, after which the two halves are thoroughly washed. Then a husky lad takes a sort of cleaver and cuts the pumpkin into large pieces, which are fed into a steam chopping machine and reduced to small fragments. These are placed in a huge copper boiler capable of holding perhaps twenty-five gallons. After the boiling has been completed a pasty mixture of eggs, milk, sugar, cinnamon and other spices and condiments is added and well stirred in, and then the yellow mass is ready to be filled into the skeleton pies. The crust is prepared in another department, where the dough is mixed, rolled and placed in the pans ready to receive the filling. If any one thinks that piemaking is an easy and effeminate employment he should visit a pie bakery and inspect the muscles developed on the arms of expert pie crust mixers and rollers. They would be creditable to a trained athlete and would put many a mill worker and blacksmith to the blush. Finally the pies are placed on racks and shoved into huge ovens that resemble nothing else so much as the kilns used for burning brick. These kilns are constructed in any size desired, with a capacity of anywhere from fifty up to several hundred at a time, while they can be refilled every half hour or less.—Pacific Monthly.

PECULIAR EYES.

The Organs of Sight of the Spider and the Snail.

The next time you catch a spider try to find the eight shiny little eyes at the anterior end, some above and some put under the edge of what we may imagine to be its forehead. To examine these parts to the best advantage hold the spider in tweezers, or it may be better to use a spider killed by being dropped into a bottle of diluted alcohol. These eight eyes vary in arrangement and in relative size in various species of spiders—in some they may be arranged in two rows, in other in three; some may be very small and others large and prominent, and so on—but there they are, rather poor eyes, nearsighted, looking in several directions at once, and the spider, which can never shut any of them, is sure to see everything that approaches unless it is asleep, in which case the sight is dead. For some purposes it may be convenient to have eyes that roll up and disappear at the approach of danger. And these are exactly what the snail has, situated at the end of two long and sensitive palpi, or feelers. When all is quiet their owner extends these organs, and you can see at their tips small round knobs upon which the eyes are placed. But if you touch one of the palpi or even jar the snail a little the eyes begin to back into these feelers as the tip of a glove finger may be turned in, and they no longer see any danger that may be lurking at hand.

Dangers of the Revenue Service.

The officers of the internal revenue service make little fuss over their accomplishments. The world scarcely hears of them unless they have had a desperate hand to hand fight with mountain desperadoes which has resulted in the death of several of their number. But day after day and night after night they go about their work calmly, quietly, in constant danger of death from a shot from some ambushed moonshiner or blockader. Yet these men are an absolute necessity for the safeguarding of the country's interests, and they deserve much credit for their hard task, scarcely appreciated by the great mass of the people.—David A. Gates in Metropolitan Magazine.

When the Wire Tires.

"Messages," said a telegraph operator, "always slide over the wires better on Monday than on any other day. The wires, you see, have profited by their Sunday rest. It is a fact that inanimate as well as animate things get tired and need a vacation occasionally. You know how true this is of razors, of automobiles, of locomotives, and it is just as true of telegraph wires. A wire after its Sunday rest gives a quicker, a fuller and a more delicate transmission. It is like a piano that has just been tuned."

The Thumb.

The radical difference between the hand of man and of the monkey lies in the thumb. In the human hand the thumb has the "opposing power," which means that the thumb can be made to touch the tip of each or any of the other fingers on the same hand. The monkey's thumb is nonopposable. —Pittsburg Dispatch.

Needed the Money.

"Say," queried old Wedderly, "why don't you get married?"

"Because," replied young Singleton, "I'm too poor."

"Huh!" rejoined the old man. "When I was your age I was so poor I had to marry."—Chicago News.

They Must Like It.

"Does this powder really kill the cockroaches?" asked the housekeeper at the grocery.

"Why, certainly not!" replied the grocer. "If it did we wouldn't sell a third of the quantity."

The truth is always the strongest argument.—Sophocles.

FRAUD IS ALLEGED

Former Bank President Walsh Indicted by Grand Jury

182 COUNTS ARE FOUND

Alleged Queer Transactions In "Memorandum" Notes, by Which Over $2,000,000 of Bank Funds Were Misapplied

Chicago, Jan. 19.—John R. Walsh, former president of the Chicago National bank, which was closed by the government Dec. 16, 1905, was yesterday formally indicted by the federal grand jury on the charge of misapplying the funds of the bank.

The indictment, which contains 182 counts, is based upon 22 transactions in "memorandum" notes, which the government officials declare to be fraudulent, upon 13 sales of bonds to the bank, it being claimed that these bonds were unmarketable and of doubtful value, and upon 57 payments of the money derived from those transactions. The money derived from these operations, it is charged in the indictment, was placed by Walsh to the credit of his personal account in the bank and used by him in aiding outside enterprises with which he was connected.

The "memorandum" notes have a total face value of $2,090,000, 14 of them being for $42,000 each, six for $97,000 each, and two for $100,000 each. They were discounted between Jan. 21, 1904, and Feb. 15, 1905, and the total proceeds of $2,048,176 were used, the indictment charges, by Walsh personally. It is also claimed that between Jan. 21, 1904, and Feb. 15, 1905, Walsh paid out an aggregate of $2,614,377 to his outside interests. This amount was disbursed as follows: Southern Indiana Railway company, $1,315,000; Illinois Southern Railway company, $375,000; Wisconsin and Michigan Railway company, $562,000; Equitable Trust company of Chicago, $292,377; other business enterprises, $70,000.

It is claimed in the indictment that between April 15, 1904, and Jan. 31, 1905, Walsh, on 13 different occasions, sold at exaggerated prices to the bank bonds of the Southern Indiana Railway company, Illinois Southern Railway company, Wisconsin and Michigan Railway company, and Mount Olive and Staunton Coal company, amounting to $822,227.

It is claimed in the indictment that Walsh knowingly borrowed money from the bank on fictitious notes and that he sold to the bank bonds of doubtful value and that he was therefore guilty of wilful misuse of the funds of the institution.

It was explained by District Attorney Sims that the variation between the number of transactions and the counts in the indictment is due to the fact that each transaction, which is the basis of a charge of misapplication of funds, has been treated in several different ways in order to meet possible variations in proof when the case comes to trial. A number of counts in the indictment charge that money was frequently expended by Walsh for his personal benefit and not for that of the railroads. This variation in the form of accusation is intended to meet a statement of facts showing that Walsh was the sole owner of the several enterprises which, it is claimed, he maintained out of the funds of the bank.

Walsh was arrested March 2, 1906, for alleged violation of the federal banking law, and was under bonds for $60,000. As soon as the indictment was received he appeared in the federal court and gave a new bond for a similar amount. He will plead or file demurrers to the indictment on or before Feb. 6.

It was announced by Walsh's attorneys that they expect to have little difficulty in clearing him when the case comes to trial. They asserted that the basis of offense defined by the federal banking act is criminal intent and that the defense will be that Walsh never did a criminal act or any act with criminal intent.

To Take Evidence at Gloucester

St. Johns, Jan. 19.—The supreme court has granted a motion to take evidence at Gloucester, Mass., by a commission for the purpose of learning the terms under which two west coast fishermen shipped aboard an American herring vessel beyond the three-mile limit. These men have been fined for violation of the bait act. This step will postpone for several weeks the court's final decision on the main issue.

Did Not Murder Wife

Chicago, Jan. 19.—Knute Ole Knudson, a wealthy contractor, was acquitted of the murder of his wife. Mrs. Knudson's sister accused Knudson of having poisoned his wife. The principal witnesses for Knudson were his three children, the oldest of whom is but 13 years old.

Nearly Half a Billion in Money Orders

New York, Jan. 19.—During the year 1906 the money order department of the New York postoffice handled $430,785,304, an increase of $91,115,473 over 1905. The office made a profit in 1906 of $364,805 in the purchase of foreign bills of exchange.

Irregular Trade Reports

New York, Jan. 19.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says that trade in winter fabrics improved as the weather became more seasonable, but reports for the week are most irregular on account of varying temperature.

COLLIDED HEAD-ON

Engines and Cars Wrecked and Three Trainmen Injured

South Royalton, Vt., Jan. 19.—Three trainmen were injured, one seriously, in a head-on collision of a passenger train and a freight near this station. Although the locomotives of both trains were demolished and the baggage and mail cars and a number of freight cars wrecked, the passenger cars came through the accident comparatively uninjured and none of the passengers was hurt. The injured are Engineer Howland and Fireman Lawton of the passenger and L. P. Armstead, mail clerk.

The passenger train is said to have had orders giving it a clear track and was rapidly increasing its speed after leaving this station when a freight suddenly appeared in its path. The passenger locomotive plowed halfway through the locomotive of the freight and the boilers of both engines were broken. The baggage and mail cars of the passenger were also smashed, while a number of freight cars, including several containing cattle, were wrecked and many of the cattle either killed or injured so badly that it was necessary to put them to death. The occupants of the passenger were violently shaken, but otherwise sustained no injuries.

The condition of Engineer Howland is regarded as serious, but it is believed that he has a chance for recovery. None of the trainmen of the freight was hurt, the engineer and fireman escaping by jumping from the locomotive when they saw that the collision was inevitable.

Smoky City's Darkest Day

Pittsburg, Jan. 19.—Daylight has not been seen in Pittsburg for nearly 48 hours and there is little prospect of anything but midnight darkness for as many more hours, according to the weather bureau here. Known throughout the country for its "dark days," Jan. 18 is recorded in the history of the city as the only day in which daylight has not been seen for a few hours at least. The phenomenon is attributed to the warm weather, fog, and smoke from the mills and manufacturing plants. Because of these unusual weather conditions sunlight has not been seen here for two weeks. Stores, offices, factories and dwellings are illuminated as at night. Street lamps are lighted throughout the entire day.

Cashier Got Eighteen Bullets

Midville, Ga., Jan. 19.—A daring attempt was made by three men to rob the bank of Midville. Four charges of dynamite were exploded. Cashier Powers was awakened by the explosions and opened fire with a rifle. The fire was returned and Powers was shot down, 18 bullets having been fired into his body before the men took flight. He will recover, however. The vaults of the bank were not seriously damaged. Sheriffs of two counties are in pursuit of the would-be robbers with bloodhounds.

Serious Flood Conditions

Cincinnati, Jan. 19.—With a second rise reported at the headwaters of the Ohio, while the whole valley is still in the grip of the greatest flood it has known for more than 20 years, the outlook is gloomy. Every town along the river is suffering from crippled communications, limited fuel supply and a shortage of food. Thousands of families are temporarily homeless and many thousand men are idle because of the enforced shutting down of the factories and other establishments.

Ballot Box Guards to Withdraw

New York, Jan. 19.—The watchers who have been on constant guard over the boxes containing the ballots cast in the local election in November, 1905, since Attorney General Jackson seized them on a court order, must be withdrawn, Justice Leventritt of the supreme court having denied the motion of Jackson to continue the watchers over the boxes, which now are stored in several warehouses.

Astor Taxes Greatly Reduced

New York, Jan. 19.—The swearing off of $745,000 personal taxes assessed against William W. Astor, who now lives in England, has been assented to by President Purdy of the board of tax assessors. Astor's legal representative asserted that the only personal property Astor had in New York city was the furniture in his estate office. The original assessment of $750,000 was reduced to $5000.

Revolver Battle In Church

Lodz, Jan. 19.—The refusal of a priest to bless the remains of two workmen killed in a street fight, expressed at the funeral of the men, led to a conflict in the church between the congregation and a band of socialists. Revolver shots were exchanged freely, with the result that eight persons were killed and 13 were wounded.

Partners of the Tide

BY JOE LINCOLN

Author of "Cap'n Eri"

A realistic story of the New England coast introducing quaint characters, among them two lovable old maids who were not loved as much as they should have been and a maiden who got more than her share. But the perils of rivalry in love added to the perils of the sea make a story to keep you up nights. Therefore we shall give it to you in installments, beginning

AT AN EARLY DATE.

The Outlook, referring to "Cap'n Eri" as the one deserved success of the year in which it was published, says "Partners of the Tide" is just as good. The New York Globe says it is much better. Reviewers all agree that it is a story "refreshing as a breath of sea air."

WOMAN'S WORLD

MRS. CAROLINE F. CORBIN.

She Labors to Keep Her Sex From the Ballot Box.

Mrs. Caroline F. Corbin of Chicago, who for many years has been president of the Illinois Association Opposed to the Extension of Suffrage to Women, is a bitter opponent of any and all movements tending to bring her sex into contact with the ballot box. Mrs. Corbin aims to elevate and advance women in the social plane, but she does not believe in the ballot box as a means to her end. Her motto is, "The home for women and women for the home," and it is along these lines that her life work has been mapped.

Mrs. Corbin has published many books, most of them upon social questions, and is a contributor to the magazines. She was born in Connecticut in 1835 and was married to Calvin R. Corbin in 1861. Her first important work as a leader of her sex was in the foundation of the Association For the Advancement of Women. The most recent book which she has brought out is "A Woman's Philosophy of Love," published in 1892. Mrs. Corbin opposes woman's suffrage on the ground that it threatens home life and is an adjunct to Socialism.

MRS. CAROLINE F. CORBIN.

The Bath Rug.

The bath rug should be made of washable material, should be daily shaken and the floor, if of tile, wiped with a damp cloth. Wooden bathroom floors should be dusted with a long handled lamb's wool brush, and especial pains should be taken to clean under and behind the fixtures, so as to remove every accumulation.

That everything thus collected should be burned seems obvious, but long and rigorous training sometimes is required to persuade the ignorant not to drop them down the flushes. Nothing is more provocative of plumbers' bills than this. Even bits of soap, although they seem harmless, have a tendency to collect all other solid particles and cause an accumulation which it will cost to remove. The interior of the catch basin must be daily cleansed with a long handled stiff brush, slightly curved at the end. This brush should be excellent of its kind, else the bristles will fall.

For cleaning the marble basin and the bathtub and faucets strong soapsuds with ammonia or soda should be used now and then, but for the daily cleansing one of the quickest and best agents is gasoline.

Moisten a small cloth with this, and a quick rubbing will cause the streaks of greasy dirt to disappear as if by magic. All nickel is brightened at once by gasoline. There are objections to the odor, but fresh air from the windows, opened at the top and bottom, will remove this.

For safety never do the cleansing when there is artificial light of any kind in the room. Use only a small bottle for holding it and hang this outside the bathroom window when not in use by a wire fastened to its neck for the purpose.

Kitchen Suggestions.

Here are some good suggestions for your kitchen: Have your shades and sash curtains of white muslin that can be laundered. When using your gas stove in the summer cover the top of your coal stove with newspapers, which will make a handy table. Have your rack near the range, so that your towels will get well dried after each dishwashing. A small shelf should be put up near the stove to hold your salt and pepper box. The icebox should be removed from the stove as far as possible if you must have it in the kitchen. Cover the wall back of your sink with oilcloth, preferably white, and here may be hung your sink broom, shovel, dish mop and soap shaker. The ironing tables that now come may be converted into a settee when not in use. In the box or drawer may be kept the necessary articles for ironing. The top may be covered with oilcloth and will give an extra table. A chest of drawers under the closets is necessary for keeping the kitchen towels and aprons besides many other useful articles. It is well to keep in the kitchen a bottle of linseed oil and lime water, together with a roll of old linen pieces, for bandages for use in case of burns.

Round Shoulders In Children.

Do you keep sharp watch on the children's spinal columns and shoulders? When there is any inclination to stooping shoulder look into the matter at once to find the cause. It may be the clothing in some way. The hose supporters will be put on the easiest way, and that is front and fastened to the underwaist. This makes a pull on the chest and drags it over. It takes only just a little more pull than on the back, and down drops the chest. Are the bands around the waist weighing on the muscles that are made to hold up the body so they are not strong enough to work when so much is put on them? The boy gives way under the drag of an ill fitting coat collar which is too thick. See that there is no pull or weight on the back of the neck. When nothing pulls the young spine over or presses it down and the proper muscles are allowed to hold it up, the back will usually be straight and flat. Want of pure air to fill the lungs and the drag of poorly arranged clothing have given many a child an incurable hump or a sunken chest for life.

Why She Had Headaches.

"It is so strange, doctor," complained a woman patient recently, "that when I have had a perfectly good night's sleep I should so often wake up with a headache."

"How many pillows do you have under your head?" asked the physician.

"One thin pillow," was the answer.

"Try two fairly thick ones," the doctor advised, adding that many congestive headaches were caused by people sleeping with their heads too low. The blood settles in the head, and the sufferer wakes with a dull feeling or throbbing pain. Persons subject to catarrhal headache should be careful to have their heads high enough at night.—Harper's Bazar.

Instead of Ribbons.

The mother of a small girl whose ability to lose hair ribbons was a source of constant worry solved the problem by using strips of plain or flowered muslin. These she hemmed neatly, making them the width of ordinary hair ribbons. They laundered nicely and always looked fresh and clean, while the loss of one of them did not mean so serious a thing as if a brand new hair ribbon had disappeared. Of course these little muslin ties were not used for "dress up" occasions, but for ordinary home wear they proved to be as satisfactory as they were inexpensive.—New York Press.

Steel Dinner Knives.

Steel dinner knives should be cleaned every time they are used. Otherwise they will look black and dull. Bristol brick with soap is the best thing to use. Let the blade of the knife rest flat upon a board and rub the steel with a bit of soaped cloth dipped in the brick reduced to a powder. Some housekeepers use a small potato for cleaning knives instead of a cloth. If the blades have become rusted cover them with olive oil and quicklime. Put away for two or three days, then rub with brick.

To Grill on Closed Range.

If the bars of a grate are too small or too near together for grilling remove the boiling ring and lift up the hot plate over the fire. Then place the gridiron in a horizontal position over the coals instead of attempting to grill in front of the fire, and the effect is just as good. Great care must be taken that the fire is bright, clear and quite free from smoke before the gridiron is placed over it, otherwise the operation cannot be successful.

Baky Bureau Drawers.

What is more tiresome than a bureau drawer that balks and sticks and goes in sidewise or refuses to go in altogether? But rub the edges lightly with sandpaper and see how bright the world looks, or rub laundry soap all around the top of the drawer and on the little wooden shelf it runs on. Simple "homemade" remedies, both of them, but worth trying.

Brass Pans.

Brass pans that have stood for some time should be rubbed with vinegar and salt to remove verdigris. Clean with polishing paste or with bath brick dust and water. Then rinse out well with hot water and polish with soft cloths. Treated like this your brass pans will be perfectly safe for any kind of cookery.

For Reddish Hair.

A shampoo that should give a blond cast to reddish hair is made of one-half ounce of honey, half an ounce of rhubarb stalks and three ounces of white wine. Let the three stand together for twenty-four hours, then drain. Wet the hair evenly with the liquid, rub and let it dry. Then wash off in clear water.

The French Seam.

The French seam is always used on fine underwear. To make it the cloth is seamed on the right side, taking a very narrow seam, and then trimmed off as closely as possible. It is then turned and stitched on the wrong side, the first seam being entirely inclosed.

You can make menthol ice by melting two parts of spermaceti with the same quantity of white vaseline in a porcelain dish set in a pan of hot water. Ten parts of powdered menthol are added while the mixture is cooling.

The teething period is the most troublesome and dangerous time of childhood, and it would be well for a reputable dentist to be consulted by all mothers at that period.

The bed should never stand against the wall. It should be pulled out a little on all sides in order that there may be a free circulation of air.

Don't let anything interfere with your regular hours of work and rest, but get plenty of sleep.

HUDSON TUBE STATION

Plans of Largest Office Building In the World.

TO HAVE FINEST OF ARCADES.

Nucleus of All Underground Railway Systems Converging Under Lower New York Will Have 4,000 Offices and 5,200 Doors—Incoming and Departing Crowds to Use Separate Platforms and Thus Avoid a Crush.

The Hudson companies, the corporation building the great system of tunnels which are to connect Manhattan with New Jersey and the completion of which means the greatest system of underground transportation in the world, recently invited New York reporters over to Jersey City to see the work that is being done toward the realization of the scheme, says the New York Times. The tunnels under the Hudson are all either completed or well under way. The great stations in Manhattan are going up, and it will soon be known exactly when it will be possible for the traveler to go all over Manhattan, Brooklyn and the Bronx as well as a large part of New Jersey without ever coming to the surface of the earth.

As is known, the Hudson companies are boring four tunnels under the Hudson. In Jersey City and Hoboken, running parallel with the river, will be another tunnel which when finished will connect the Jersey City and Hoboken stations of the Pennsylvania, Erie and Lackawanna railroads.

The great terminal on Church street, New York, will be when completed the largest office structure in the world. It is to have 4,000 offices on twenty-two floors and will be the nucleus of all underground railway systems that converge under lower Manhattan, while its population, it is estimated, will be at least 10,000. One thousand persons a minute are expected to pass through its corridors all day long, while the grand total of those in the building every twenty-four hours will reach, it is expected, a total of 600,000 persons.

This great population will be handled by thirty-nine elevators. Twenty-two of the elevators will be express cars, rising without a stop to the eleventh floor.

The two buildings together will occupy 70,000 square feet of ground. The cubic areas will be 14,500,000 cubic feet above ground, 3,650,000 cubic feet below ground, or a total of 18,150,000 cubic feet. The structure will be a fine example of Italian Renaissance. Up to the fourth story it will be built of polished granite and Indiana limestone. Above that it will be built of brick and terra cotta. The public halls will be of marble, handsomely decorated, and the building will be finished in hardwood throughout.

An idea of the size of the building may be obtained by comparing it with the Broad Exchange building, the largest at present in Manhattan, or with the United States Express building. The Broad Exchange contains 7,000,000 cubic feet. The United States Express building contains 2,500,000 cubic feet. Nearly three Broad Exchanges or nearly eight Express buildings could be inserted in the space to be occupied by the Hudson Terminal buildings.

Here are some figures that give an idea of the amount of material necessary in the construction of this terminal. To build the walls above the curb 16,300,000 bricks will be necessary. There will be 1,300,000 square feet of tile partitions, 4,500 tons of architectural terra cotta, 5,200 doors, 5,000 windows and a total glass area of 120,000 square feet. In the floor arches there will be 1,100,000 cubic feet of concrete, 500,000 square yards of plastering, 16 miles of plumbing pipe, 29 miles of steam pipe, 56 miles of wood base, 65 miles of picture molding, 95 miles of conduits, 113 miles of electric wiring and 30,000 electric lights. Special features of the building will be perhaps the largest electric storage battery in the world and an arcade. This arcade will be a great glass inclosed passageway, lined with shops and booths. It will be larger than any of the famous European arcades, and its promoters say it will be the world's most famous covered shopping street.

Under the building will be the terminal station for the Hudson river tunnels. Passengers will enter upon the street floor and pass down into the stations by stairways, inclined planes and elevators. On the first floor, below the sidewalk, known as the concourse floor, will be waiting stations, restaurants, lunch counters and other conveniences. Below the concourse floor will be train platforms. Passengers will pass down from the concourse floor by means of stairways and elevators to the platforms.

There will be five tracks within the terminal station, running between six platforms. The cars will have openings on the sides and at the ends. Alternate platforms will be used for loading and unloading the cars, so incoming and outgoing passengers cannot collide and there can be no congestion.

The cars will be of steel, each seating nearly fifty persons. It is proposed to operate eight car trains during the rush hours on a headway of one and a half minutes between trains. The passage under the river will probably average three minutes, so that a resident of Jersey City should be able to reach the heart of the Manhattan shopping district in from five to ten minutes.

BOTH MARRIED AGAIN

Husband and Wife Had Each Thought the Other Dead

Boston, Jan. 19.—Judge Aiken, in the divorce session of the superior court, granted a petition presented by Charles M. Burns of South Boston, asking for the annulment of his marriage to Margaret Anderson of Dorchester, which was solemnized 19 years ago. The couple separated soon after the wedding, and, according to Burns' testimony, he was notified by his wife's relatives that she had died in Chicago.

Several years afterward Burns remarried. Recently he was surprised to hear that his first wife was living in Dorchester. To satisfy himself as to the accuracy of the report he went to a house where he heard she was staying. The first Mrs. Burns responded to his ring at the door and was overcome when she recognized the caller.

Her story was similar to that of Burns'. She told him she had heard he was dead and that a year later she had married Thomas Anderson of Dorchester. As a result of the complications, Burns applied to the court for the annulment of his first marriage. Judge Aiken granted the petition.

Much Good Accomplished

Boston, Jan. 19.—More than 1000 persons have secured good situations through the state free employment office since its establishment six weeks ago. The weekly wages paid vary from $3.50 for office boys to $15 and $18 for men, the pay of these applicants averaging at least $8 a week. This represents a saving in one month of at least $8000 to these persons, assuming that if they had applied to a private agency for work they would have had to give their first week's pay as a fee.

Explosion Caused Much Damage

Waltham, Mass., Jan. 19.—The explosion of the generator of a new turbine engine caused $10,000 damage at the plant of the Waltham Gas and Electric Lighting company late yesterday and severely injured Engineer Hughes. The cause of the explosion is not known. As a result of a piece of the machinery striking a switchboard, the power was cut off from all street car lines running into and through the city. The street lighting system also was put out of commission.

Young Poole In Jail

Taunton, Mass., Jan. 19.—Overwhelmed by the realization of the seriousness of his act of shooting and killing his father, 17-year-old Howard Poole, in jail in this city, held without bail for the February grand jury on a charge of wilful murder, is completely broken down. Though many of his friends consider that he took a natural step toward an alleged insane and intoxicated parent in defense of his mother, the court thought it best to hold the youth.

Birbarie In Insane Asylum

Willimantic, Conn., Jan. 19.—Najeeb Birbarie was taken to the insane asylum in Norwich yesterday afternoon. Birbarie was held for the murder of his wife and a commission had declared him insane. The prisoner refused to eat food and gradually wasted away until he weighed but 80 pounds when he was exmined and declared insane. His commitment probably will mean the ending of the case, as it is doubtful if the alleged murderer will recover.

Murder at New Haven

New Haven, Jan. 19.—Ralph Perune of Montowesee, aged 28, was shot and killed last night, the bullet passing through his heart, just after leaving the factory of the National Folding Box and Paper company, where he was employed. The person who did the shooting is said to be Constorino de Lucia, a Montowesee farmhand, also about 28 years old. After the shooting de Lucia made his escape. No cause for the deed is known.

Seeking Insurance Probe

Boston, Jan. 19.—An order asking for the appointment of a committee of two senators and three representatives to investigate the business of the Columbian Mutual Life Insurance company, a Massachusetts corporation, was introduced in the senate. It was referred to the committee on rules. A similar order was introduced in the house recently.

Resignation Followed Civil Suit

Cambridge, Mass., Jan. 19.—Philippe B. Marcou, assistant professor of romance languages at Harvard university, has resigned, to take effect from Jan. 10 last. Marcou has occupied this position since 1899. On Jan. 8 Marcou was made the defendant in a civil suit for $25,000, brought by a Boston woman.

Met a Terrible Death

Lebanon, N. H., Jan. 19.—Noble Nailman, 24 years of age, was feeding a saw at Plummer's mills, where he was employed, when he lost his footing and fell across the implement, which cut through his chest and slowly sawed him in two.

Lake Champlain Frozen Over

Burlington, Vt., Jan. 19.—The severe cold weather of this week has formed an ice surface on Lake Champlain extending across the lake. It is many years since the lake has been frozen over from shore to shore.

House Favors Higher Salaries

Washington, Jan. 19.—By a rising vote of 133 to 92, the house voted to increase the salary of the vice president, the speaker and members of the cabinet to $12,000 a year and those of senators and representatives, delegates from territories and the resident commissioner from Porto Rico to $7500 a year, the increases to take effect after March 4, 1907.

COMING REVOLUTION.

Its General Symptoms as Described by Tolstoi.

"COLD CRUELTY OF THE RICH."

Noted Novelist Sees External Signs of a Revolution In Intensified Struggle of Classes and In Anger and Despair of the Poor—Says Real Christianity Will Replace One That Is Perverted.

I think that at present the life of the Christian nations is near the line which separates the end of the old age from the beginning of the new age, writes Count Leo Tolstoi in the New York American. I think that this is the beginning of the great revolution which is been preparing for almost 2,000 years throughout the Christian world, a revolution which is to replace perverted Christianity and the mastery of some and slavery of others emanating from it, by real Christianity, by the recognition of the equality of all mankind based upon it and by real freedom for all people. I see the external signs of this in the intensified struggle of the classes among all nations, in the cold cruelty of the rich, in the anger and despair of the poor, in the senseless, mad, ever growing armaments of all governments.

Such are the general symptoms of the coming revolution, or, rather, of the state of readiness for the revolution, in which the Christian nations find themselves. The historical signs or the impulse which is to start the revolution are the recent Russian-Japanese war and the outbreak of the revolution among the Russian people.

The victory of the Japanese over the Russians has demonstrated to all military nations that the military power is no longer in their hands, but has passer, or will soon pass, to other—un-Christian—hands, for it will not be hard for all the un-Christian nations of Asia and Africa that are oppressed by the Christians to emulate the example of the Japanese, to learn the technique of the warfare of which we are so proud, and not only free themselves, but wipe all the Christian governments off the face of the earth.

We look at the pyramids of Egypt, and we are terrified at the cruelty and the folly of the people that gave orders to build them and at those that fulfilled their orders, but how much more cruel, how much more absurd are the thirty-six story buildings which the people of today are erecting in the cities, feeling proud of them. There is the earth with its grass, its forests, its pure air, the clear water, the sun, the birds, the animals, and yet people are making terrible efforts and obstructing the sun from the view of other people and are erecting thirty-six story structures where there are no trees or grass and where everything—the water and the air—are foul, where all food is adulterated and where life is hard, unwholesome. Is not this a sign of the madness of humanity, which not only does these absurdities, but is even proud of them?

There are times when in the life of mankind, even as in the life of an individual, an error committed in the past is suddenly revealed, and the way to remedy that error also becomes clear. These are times of revolutions. The Christian nations are at present in such a state as this.

It would seem that it is natural for a man whose spiritual powers are not depraved or weak, when finding himself in a humiliating position, to say to himself: "Why should I do this? I want to live my own life; I want to decide for myself what I like, what is useful to me and what I am to do. Leave me alone with your Russia, France, Britain. Let those that need them guard these countries. I don't need them. You take everything from me by force. You can kill me, but I do not want to—I cannot and I will not—participate in my own enslavement." It seems that it would be natural to act thus, but nobody does.

Some do not act thus because their interests are so intertwined with the interests of the ruling classes that this enslavement is profitable to them. Mr. Rockefeller cannot desire to refuse to obey the laws of his land, because the laws of that land make it possible for him to amass and keep his millions to the detriment of the interests of the mass of the people; nor can the directors of Mr. Rockefeller's enterprises desire to refuse to obey such laws, nor can the servants of these directors nor the servants of these servants.

Silk Flowers For the Table.

One of the newest and most artistic table decorations designed for the hostess for whom cut flowers are not available is of flowers made of ribbon or silk, with natural greens to show them off, says the New York Press. Miss Satterlee, daughter of the bishop of Washington, who is always seeking new things for her Girls' Friendly society, tells of the way a hostess decked her table when she was asked to luncheon in eastern Maryland. In the center of the snowy cloth was a large green straw box, homemade and graceful, and the lid was covered with pink roses and garlands of trailing honeysuckle. But when the luncheon was over the hostess lifted the lid of her centerpiece and displayed her favors, an assortment of similar ribbon roses, dainty as if they had just been plucked from the garden.

Not "Hello," but "I Listen."

Telephone girls in France must no longer say "allo," but "j'ecoute" (I listen), says Le Figaro of Paris. This is one of the new postmaster general's "reforms."

THE PASSION PLAY.

Its Origin, According to the Tradition of Oberammergau.

According to local tradition, the origin of the Oberammergau Passion play was as follows: When in the year 1633 a deadly plague threatened to depopulate the districts of Partenkirchen, Escheloke and Kohlgrub, which are separated from Ammerthal, or the valley of the Ammer, by a rampart of mountains, the Ammerthalers succeeded for a time in protecting themselves against the dread contagion, but one day a native who had been working all summer at Escheloke evaded the quarantine and entered the Ammerthal by a secret path in order to celebrate an annual church festival with his family. Two days afterward he was a corpse, and in less than three weeks the plague had carried off eighty-four of the Ammerthalers.

Despairing of all human succor, the terrified survivors addressed themselves to God and registered a solemn vow that if he heard their prayer and removed the scourge they would represent, every ten years, "for thankful remembrance and edifying contemplation, and by the help of the Almighty, the sufferings of Jesus, the Saviour of the world."

Not a single person died of the plague after the vow was made, though many were affected by it. The first representation of the Passion play in fulfillment of the vow of these simple villagers took place at Oberammergau in the following year, and it has been repeated every ten years without a single omission.

FEMININE INFLUENCE.

Nowhere Is It More Felt and Less Recogzized Than In France.

There is still in every Frenchman a great deal of the oriental way of looking at woman.

And the French wife knows it, but she goes on helping her "man," be she duchess or midinette. She will forgive again and again; she will let him squander her dot and will learn how to do with fewer frocks (the delight of every Frenchwoman) in an ever pitiful attempt to patch up the fortune and happiness he has wrecked. If she happen to be a shopman's wife he needs no bookkeeper or manager; she will be there from morning till night, the slave of the ledger, careful of every centime, while he, too, often will leave the heavier part of the business in her capable hands and turn his attention to a domino party at the nearest cafe. If she be a peasant's wife no one on the farm will slave harder than she. There is scarcely any labor which she will not undertake.

In every sphere woman is too often the man of the house. Nowhere is feminine influence more active, more felt and less recognized than in France, and nowhere among the civilized nations is man more dependent on woman, more attached to her and less respectful.—London Mail.

Speed of Sounds.

"Judge David Torrence of Derby, Conn.," said a New Haven man, "uttered many an epigram from the bench. In a case concerning a noise nuisance a scientist was once testifying before him about the speed of sound.

"'Sound,' said the man, 'travels at the rate of 400 yards a second.'

"'All sound?' asked Judge Torrence.

"'All,' replied the scientist.

"The judge smiled.

"'I'm sure you're wrong,' he said. 'I have noticed a great difference between the speed of certain kinds of sound. Thus, slander travels at the rate of quite 1,000 yards a second; flattery, 500 yards, while truth makes only a few feet a second, and, slow as its progress is, truth often fails to reach the goal, no matter how short the distance.'"—Indianapolis Star.

The Persians.

Socially I found the Persian people a great improvement on the other orientals of the farther east whom I had met. They are of a happy disposition and bright imagination, doubtless produced by the dry, clear air of their high table lands, which relieves from dullness and depression. They enjoy a joke and laugh heartily, and they are able to see that most things have their amusing side. I was struck with much among all classes which showed that their manners and ways had been favorably touched and turned by a softening civilization of ancient date.—General Gordon's "A Varied Life."

The Woman of Poise.

It is the creed of the up to date woman never to give herself away. A cup of coffee may be spilled over her delicate silk gown; she simply holds the breadths together and goes on with her flow of feminine talk. "Enfant terrible" makes agonizing remarks, a rival gives some cruel stab; all is met with the same absolute immobility of countenance.—London Lady.

The Rehearsal.

Bobby—Sister will be down in a few minutes, Mr. Softly. She's upstairs rehearsing. Mr. Softly (who has come prepared)—W-what is s-she rehearsing, B-bobby? Bobby—I don't know, but she's standing in front of the mirror and blushing and saying, "Oh, Mr. Softly—er—this is so sudden."

Makes a Difference.

"George told me today he loved me more than his very life."

"Nonsense. All the young men say that."

"That may be true. But they all don't say it to me."

He removes the greatest ornament of friendship who takes away from it respect.—Cicero.

New Sewerage Systems.

Ernest W. Branch, civil engineer of this city, has recently completed plans for a system of sewage purification for the new manufacturing plant of the A. C. Lawrence Leather Company at Peabody. The method of purification proposed is intermittent filtration, and the system is similar to the one built last summer by Mr. Branch for the Stetson Shoe Company at South Weymouth.

The South Weymouth system disposes of the sewage of a factory employing about three hundred hands. The system comprises about a quarter of a mile of sewer, four sand filter beds, a detritus or settling tank and a dosing or Siphon tank. An intermittent flow with discharge upon the beds in proper quantities and at proper intervals is effected by a six-inch automatic Miller Siphon. The settling tank is emptied upon a sludge bed by raising two valves, no pumping or bailing being necessary.

The system has been in operation since September first and has given entire satisfaction. It is considered a good example of the best modern practice in sewage purification.

BOSTON AMUSEMENTS.

Keith's Theatre.

Great, indeed, is Houdini, and great are the crowds he is drawing to Keith's, crowds that are even larger than those he drew during his phenomenal engagement last season He has had some very hard tests put up to him during the past ten days, but he has successfully solved them all. Next week will be the last of his stay, as his present visit cannot be prolonged. At every performance he will perform some special stunt. Lew Hawkins, the popular blackface monologist, will tell new stories and sing new songs; Ferry Corwey is to appear in his delightful musical clown turn; Ziska and King will do their mirthful mixture of magic and drolleries, and Cook and Sylvia will prove their right to be ranked among the best dancers in vaudeville. The bill will also include the Mech International Trio in a novel athletic act; Kinney and Reeves, cross-fire conversationalists; Lillian Maynard, a sweet singer; Reilly and Morgan, sketcharians, and the kinetograph. The sensational feature for the week of January 28th will be Volta, the electrical marvel who has been astonishing New Yorkers for the past few weeks.

Castle Square Theatre.

"The Shaughraun," as a comedy of Irish life has never been excelled It touches the high-water mark of Dion Boucicault's genius as a dramatist, and it was for many years one of the most popular plays in his repertory. Again and again it has been acted in Boston, and never without the full appreciation and laughter of the public. At the Castle Square theatre next week "The Shaughraun" will be given for the first time in three seasons. It will be carefully staged and acted as in Mr. Boucicault's own day, and the title role will be played by Mark Kent, whose personality and talents as a comedian exactly fit him for the character of the jovial Irishman. Also in the cast will be Mr. Hansel. Mr. Waldron, Mr. Miller, Miss Lasche and the entire stock company.

MEMORIAL SERVICES

Many Tributes By City and Others to Julius Johnson

There was a very large attendance Sunday afternoon at the memorial services for the late Julius Johnson tendered by his friends and associates. The services were held at the Swedish Baptist church and were in the English language.

Many of the present and past city officials were present, as well as a number of his business associates. Theodore Hermanson called the meeting to order and introduced Representative E. J. Sandberg as presiding officer. He said that the meeting was called by citizens' associates and friends as a tribute to the memory of Mr. Johnson. Mr. Hermanson then read resolutions which were adopted by the people assembled.

Rev. J. A. Bjork, the pastor of the church, welcomed those present in behalf of the church to hold these services. He was glad to see the interest shown to honor the memory of Julius Johnson. May God bless his memory.

A quartette composed of Miss Hannah Durhann, Miss Ruth Collins, Miss Emma Lanudgrane and Miss Bertha Carlson then sang, "Nearer My God to Thee," which was followed by a prayer by Rev. C. E. Johnson of Cambridge.

In the absence of Mayor Thompson who was confined to his home by a severe cold, ex-Mayor John O. Hall spoke on behalf of the city. He said it was hard to understand why those that are loved best are cut off. The friends of Julius Johnson will miss him and the city of Quincy will miss him. There could hardly be said of him anything but praises. He had never found anything in him but geniality and friendship.

The same spirit that characterized him as a friend and brother possessed him in his public character. He was ever ready to do his part for the welfare of the city. He was ever forgetful of self that he might benefit others.

Ex-Senator Eugene H. Sprague in behalf of the Odd Fellows said: He still lives in the hearts of his family and friends, and in the appreciation of all the people of Quincy who knew him. He gained for himself honesty and a good name, the highest that a man can ever attain. His life has been an inspiration to others who have come from a foreign shore. He was always true to himself.

J. D. Uppling sang a beautiful solo, "Trusting in Thee."

President Walter E. Piper of the City Council spoke on behalf of the City Council and of Mr. Johnson as a Councilman and neighbor. He said that he was a legislator in the best sense. He was clear headed and his vote was recorded regardless of personal preference for what he believed best for the city. As a neighbor he was one in its truest and best sense. He lived the true christian life.

Theodore Hermanson, president of the Scandinavian club, had known Mr. Johnson for sixteen years. He found him a good honest and upright man. He considered him one whom any young man could take as a pattern. As a citizen he felt he had a duty to perform and he never forgot that duty.

William Gelotte, vice president of the Scandinavian club said he had known Mr. Johnson for nineteen years. He was one of the first Swedes he met in Quincy. He was a good man and a true Christian. He had his course set and he followed it. May God bless his memory and his family.

The quartette then sang "Going down the Valley."

Thomas L. Williams, president of the Board of Trade, said there was here today a feeling of sadness and pleasure. Sadness because of the loss of a friend, and pleasure because so many were ready to honor his memory. He came here a stranger in a strange land. He did not have the advantages of some of us who come from a foreign shore as he was unfamiliar with the language. But he was not easily discouraged. He did everything with all his might and as a builder he builded well. To the rising generation he was a man from whom a good example may be taken. Walk in his footsteps and you will not go far astray.

J. W. Pratt, president of the Builders Association, spoke of his acquaintance with Mr. Johnson in a business and social way. He also spoke of the Builders Association and how Mr. Johnson had helped it in many ways. He was looked up to as a leader among builders of the city.

Charles H. Johnson, principal assessor, extended the regrets of Mayor Thompson, and spoke of Mr. Johnson as a friend, associate, and as a citizen. This meeting was held that the English speaking people might pay their tribute of respect. We may draw a lesson from his life that will help our own life. He filled a large place in this community. He was a man of strong friendships, alway ready to lend his assistance. As a companion you all know what he was. As an associate, he had a wit of humor, and he was a man who had an opinion. As a citizen his life was a great tribute to this country. He loved this city and desired to see it in the front rank, and he developed it in a large degree. His christianity he took with him in his business life, as well as in his church. In him you have a full rounded life. May we not draw some lesson from his life.

The audiance then united is singing "Nearer My God to Thee."

At this point Rev. Mr. Johnson expressed in behalf of the family of Mr. Johnson their thanks and gratitude for the tribute paid him, and for the many acts of kindness shown during his illness.

The benediction was by Rev. John A. Björk, the pastor.

A hearing will be held before the Country Commissioners tomorrow on the petition of the Fore River Ship Building Co. to cross Howard avenue at grade with a railroad track.

CHURCH FUNERAL

Grand Army and Odd Fellows Pay Tribute to Franklin Jacobs

The funeral of Franklin Jacobs was held on Sunday afternoon at 2.30 at Bethany Congregational church and was largely attended by relatives, friends and these organizations: Paul Revere Post, 88, Grand Army; Mt. Wollaston lodge of Odd Fellows and Manet encampment of Odd Fellows. Among the floral tributes was an evergreen wreath from the Post, and emblematic wreath of roses from the lodge, and a tent from the encampment.

Mme Morey presided at the organ. Rev. Dr. Hardy preceded the body as it entered the church and read, "I am the resurrection." A male quartet sang "Lead Kindly Light," and during the service also rendered "I'm a Pilgrim," "Somewhere," and "Passing out of the Shadow."

The pastor from an acquaintance of several years spoke in eulogistic terms of Mr. Jacobs. He said he was a New Englander through and through; born in Hanover in 1837, married in Quincy in 1857; taught school in Canton and resigned to enlist in Civil war, in Co. A, 4th regiment. Saw considerable privation and suffered in health.

At the close of the war he took up his residence in Norwell and was elected to places of honor. About 20 years ago he came to Quincy as superintendent of the Quincy almshouse, where for years he gave good satisfaction. For many years he had been a member of Mt. Wollaston lodge of Odd Fellows and one of its prominent and loyal members. In the Grand Army he had been chaplain and filled other positions. He loved his country and the flag, and also his brethren in post, lodge and encampment. He was large physically and equally large mentally. He was also prepared for the eternal life. A hymn selected by Mr. Jacobs for a memorial service was quoted in conclusion.

After prayer by Dr. Hardy, the Odd Fellows service was performed by Noble Grand James Moorhead and Chaplain Frank L. Carlton. Then the Grand Army service by Commander J. D. Williams, Chaplain Henry Chubbuck and the officers of the Post.

The three organizations escorted the remains to Mt. Wollaston cemetery. The pall bearers were Frederick L. Jones and James H. Webb of the Grand Army, Past Grands Charles L. Hammond and Walter H. Cobb of the Odd Fellows, and Past Chiefs Aubrey Keith and A. W. Stetson of the Encampment.

The only services at the grave were by the Grand Army who committed the body to mother earth, fired a volley and sounded taps.

CHAPTER I.

"WAS you cal'latin' to buy one of them turnovers, bub?" casually inquired Mr. Clark, ceasing to gaze at his steaming boots, which were planted against the bulging center of the station stove, and turning toward the boy at the lunch counter.

"Yes, sir," said the boy. He had taken off one worsted mitten and held a five cent piece clutched tightly in his red fist.

The station agent wrapped the pastry in a piece of newspaper and handed it to his customer.

The boy, a youngster of about twelve years of age, with a freckled face and a pair of bright gray eyes, took his "turnover" to the settee in the corner of the waiting room and began to eat. He had on a worn cloth cap with an attachment that could be pulled down to cover the ears and a shabby overcoat of man's size, very much too large for him. As he munched the greasy crust and the thin layer of "evaporated" apple he looked around him with interest.

The station itself was like the average railway building on Cape Cod. Except for the sign "Harniss" that hung outside it might have been the station at Wellmouth, which he had seen so often. Battered settees around the walls; lithographs of steamers, time tables and year old announcements of excursions and county fairs hung above them; big stove set in a box of sawdust—all these were the regulation fixtures. Regulation also were the "refreshments" on the counter at the side—"turnovers" arranged cobhouse fashion under a glass cover, with a dingy "Washington" pie under another cover and jars of striped stick candy, with boxes of "jawbreakers" and similar sweetmeats between.

It was snowing hard, and in the dusk of the winter evening the flakes rustled against the windows as if unseen old ladies in starched summer gowns were shivering in the storm and crowding to get a peep within. The air in the shut waiting room smelled of hot stove, sawdust, wet clothing and Mr. Clark's cigar. To this collection of perfumes was presently added the odor of kerosene as the station agent lit the big lamps in their brackets on the wall.

From outside came the sounds of creaking wheels and stamping horses, the stamping muffled by the snow which covered the ground.

The door opened, and a big man with a face of which gray whiskers and red nose were the most prominent features came stamping and puffing into the room. He jerked off a pair of leather gloves, playfully shook the congealed moisture from them down Mr. Clark's neck inside his collar, tossed a long whip into the corner and, holding his spread fingers over the stove, began to sing "Whoa, Emma!" with enthusiasm.

Mr. Clark, being too busy clawing the melting snow from his neck to open a conversation, Mr. Bodkin observed: "Hello, Barney Small! How's the trav'lin'? Have a rough time drivin' over?"

"Oh, middlin', middlin'," replied the driver of the Orham stage, unbuttoning his overcoat and reaching for his pipe, "but this earth's a vale of tears anyhow, so what's the odds so long's you're happy. Hello, Dan!" The last a shouted greeting to the station agent in the little room, whose answer was a wave of the hand and a sidelong nod across the telegraph instrument.

"What's doin' over in Orham, Barney?" inquired Mr. Clark.

"Prissy and Tempy's adopted a boy." The agent evidently was interested.

"The old maids?"

"Yup, the old maids. I s'pose they come to reelize that they needed a man 'round the house, but as there wa'n't no bids in that line they sort of compromised on a boy."

"You don't mean the Allen old maids that live down on the 'lower road,' do you?" asked Mr. Bodkin.

"Sartin. I said the old maids, didn't I? There's plenty of single women in Orham, but when you say 'the old maids' in our town everybody knows you mean Prissy and Tempy."

"What about the boy, Barney?" said the station agent, coming into the waiting room.

"Why," said Mr. Small, "it's this way: Seems that Prissy and Tempy's father, old Cap'n D'rius Allen—he's been dead six years or more now—had a niece name of Sophia, that married Cap'n Ben Nickerson over to Wellmouth. Cap'n Ben and his wife had one son. I think the boy's name's Bradley. Anyhow Cap'n Ben and his wife was drowned off the Portuguese coast two year ago when Ben's bark was lost. Maybe you remember? Well, the boy was left at home that voyage with Ben's half brother, Solon Nickerson, so's the youngester could go to school. When his folks was drownded that way the boy kept on livin' with Solon till 'bout three weeks ago Solon was took with pneumony and up and died. Prissy and Tempy's the only relations there was, you see, so it was left to them to say what should be done with the boy. I cal'late ther must have been some high old pow wowin' in the old house, but the old maids are pretty conscientious spite ot their bein' so everlastin' 'old maidy,' and they fin'lly decided 'twas their duty so take the little feller to bring up. That's the way I heard the yarn. They kept it a secret until yesterday, but now the whole town's talkin' 'bout it. You see, it's such a good joke for them two to have a boy in the house. Why, Prissy's been used to shoo in' every stray boy off the place as if he was a hen."

Mr. Small laughed so heartily at this that the others joined in. When the hilarity had subsided the station agent asked:

"When's the Nickerson boy comin' over from Wellmouth?"

"Why, today, come to think of it. He was to come up on the afternoon train from Wellmouth and go to Orham with me tonight. You ain't seen nothin'."—

The station agent interrupted him with a sidelong movement of the head.

"Huh?" queried Mr. Small. Then he, in company with Mr. Clark and Mr. Bodkin, turned toward the corner of the waiting room.

The boy who had bought the apple "turnover," having finished the last crumb of that viand, had turned to the window and was looking out through a hole he had scraped in the frost on the pane. He had shaded his face with his hands to shut out the lamplight, and, though he must have heard the conversation, his manner betrayed no interest in it.

"What's your name, sonny?"

Mr. Small interrogated the station agent by raising his eyebrows. The agent whispered, "Shouldn't wonder," and added, "He came on the up train this afternoon."

"Hey, boy," said Mr. Clark, who never let consideration for other people interfere with his own curiosity, "what's your name?"

The boy turned from the window and, blinking a little as the light struck his eyes, faced the group by the stove. His freckled cheeks glistened as the light shone upon them; but, as if he knew this, he pulled the big sleeve of the overcoat across his face and rubbed them dry.

"What's your name, sonny?" said the stage driver kindly.

"Nickerson," said the boy in a low tone.

"I want to know. Your fust name aint Bradley, is it?"

"Yes, sir."

"Sho, well, there now! Guess you're goin' to ride over with me then. I drive the Orham coach. Hum, well, I declare!" And Mr. Small pulled his beard in an embarrassed fashon.

"Come over to the stove and get warm, won't you?" asked the station agent.

"I ain't cold," was the reply.

The trio by the stove fidgeted in silence for a few moments, and then Mr. Small said uneasily; "Ain't it 'most time for that train to be in? She's a half hour late now."

"She was twenty-five minutes late at Sandwich," said the station agent, "and she's prob'ly lost ten minutes or

GOOD AFTERNOON.

The recent action of the insurance underwriters looks like an attempt to justify high insurance rates. The figures showing the fire loses of the city for 1906 have not yet become public, and there was no report for the year 1905, but it is a well known fact that there were no large or serious fires. In fact it would be almost impossible to have a conflagration in Quincy.

In 1904 the insurance on property at risk was $283,250.00 and the loss only $20,176.43, a little over seven percent. During the year there were 91 bell alarms and 67 still alarms. Several of the alarms were for grass fires or false, and at no fire was there a loss of $5000.

In 1903 the loss was $42,806.35 on property issured for $190,100 and valued at $392,860.85. There were 82 bell alarms and 67 still alarms. Aside from Hotel Shelton an unoccupied summer hotel at Adams Shore none of the losses amounted to $5,000 on buildings and contents.

A committee of school superintendent would probably report that salaries of teachers were too small, school overcrowded and financial support inadequate.

A committee of chiefs of police from Metropolitan cities would probably report that Quincy needed twice as many patrolmen, perhaps ten times as many.

So with street improvements, street lights, sidewalks, parks, playgrounds, etc. But all the income cannot be expended for one department. Every year recently the city has appropriated all it could under the $12 limit for current expenses.

The situation of Quincy which is much the same as most cities, is similar to the man with an income of less than $1,500 a year without a bank account who is told that he should purchase right away an automobile for himself, and a piano for his wife, send his son and daughter to college, and reduce the mortgage on his house.

There is need of good sidewalks on both sides of Coddington street and Sea Street as far as Mt. Wollaston cemetery, and also for macadam streets in the cemetery. The organizations which attended the funeral services on Sunday almost got mired, especially at the cemetery gate. A great many visit the cemetery at all seasons of the year, especially those recently bereaved and it is the duty of the city to give these improvement attention.

OUR AID REJECTED

Extraordinary Action by the Governor of Jamaica

OFFENDS UNITED STATES

Unfortunate and Regrettable Incident Results in Admiral Davis Withdrawing Warships Which Had Been Performing Acts of Mercy--British Newspapers Think It a Deplorable Blunder

Kingston, Jam., Jan. 21.—Rear Admiral Davis' mission of mercy to stricken Kingston came to an abrupt and painful conclusion Saturday in consequence of Governor Swettenham's objection to the presence of American sailors engaged in the work of clearing the streets, guarding property and succoring the wounded and sick, culminating in a letter to the admiral peremptorily requesting him to reembark all parties which had been landed.

Admiral Davis was greatly shocked and pained, and paid a formal visit to Swettenham yesterday, informing him that the battleships Missouri and Indiana and the gunboat Yankton would sail in the afternoon. To The Associated Press Davis said that immediate compliance with Swettenham's request was the only course consistent with the dignity of the United States.

The friction between the governor and the admiral began with the arrival of the American war vessels, when the governor objected to the firing of a salute in his honor on the ground that the citizens might mistake the firing for a new earthquake. He also declared there was no necessity for American aid—that his government was fully able to preserve order, tend the wounded and succor the homeless.

Admiral Davis, however, landed parties of bluejackets, who patrolled the streets, cleared the debris, razed ruins, attended many of the wounded and won the highest praise from citizens and military officers for excellent work.

On the afternoon of the salute incident Admiral Davis wrote Swettenham as follows:

"I beg you to accept my apology for the mistake of the salute this afternoon. My order was misunderstood and the disregard of your wishes was due to a mistake in the transmission of my order. I trust the apparent disregard of your wishes will be overlooked.

"I landed working parties from both ships today to aid in clearing the various streets and buildings and purpose landing parties tomorrow for the same purpose unless you expressly do not desire it. I think a great deal may be done in the way of assistance to private individuals without interfering with the forces of yourself and the government officials. As the only object of my being here is to render such assistance as I can, I trust you will justify me in this matter for the cause of common humanity.

"I had a patrol of six men ashore today to guard and secure the archives of the United States consulate, together with a party of 10 clearing away wreckage. This party, after finishing its work at the consulate, assisted a working party to catch thieves, recovering from them a safe, taken from a jewelry store, valued at $5000. From this I judge that the police surveillance of the city is inadequate for the protection of private property.

Actuated by the same motive, namely, common humanity, I shall direct the medical officers of my squadron to make all efforts to aid cases of distress which perhaps do not come under the observation of your medical officers.

"I shall have pleasure in meeting you at the hour appointed, 10 a. m., at headquarters house. I trust you approve of my action in this matter."

Governor Swettenham responded as follows:

"Thanks very much for your letter, your kind call and all the assistance given or offered us. While I most heartily appreciate the very generous offer of assistance, I feel it my duty to ask you to re-embark the working party and all parties which your kindness prompted you to land.

"If in consideration of the American vice consul's assiduous attentions to his family at his country house the American consulate needs guarding in your opinion, although he was present and it was not guarded an hour ago, I have no objection to your detailing a force for the sole purpose of guarding; but the party must have no firearms and nothing more offensive than clubs or staves for this function.

"I find your working party was this morning helping Mr. Crosswell clean his store. Crosswell was delighted that the work was done without cost. If your excellency should remain long enough I am sure almost all the private owners would be glad of the services of the navy to save expense.

"It is no longer a question of humanity. All the dead died days ago and the work of giving them burial is merely one of convenience.

"I would be glad to accept delivery of the safe which it is alleged thieves had possession of. The American vice consul has no knowledge of it; the store is close to a sentry post and the officer of the post professes ignorance of the incident.

"I believe the police surveillance of the city is adequate for the protection of private property. I may remind your excellency that not long ago it was discovered that thieves had lodged in and pillaged the residence of some New York millionaire during his absence in the summer; but this would not have justified a British admiral landing an armed party and assisting the New York police."

When Admiral Davis called at headquarters house yesterday to bid farewell to Swettenham he waited 15 minutes. He then informed the governor's aide that he would wait no longer and requested him to tell the governor that in consequence of his attitude in not desiring American aid he had countermanded President Roosevelt's order dispatching the supply ship Celtic, laden with beef, for the relief of Kingston.

Governor Swettenham arrived at that moment, there was a brief private meeting and the governor escorted Davis to his carriage. Salutations were exchanged and the governor, replying to Davis' regret that he was unable to do more for Kingston, said: "All the more to your honor," adding a deep bow, evidently in reply to Davis' reference to his departure, and meaning that he would do the same if in the admiral's place.

Rear Admiral Davis told The Associated Press that he deeply regretted the governor's attitude. He was still convinced that the governor was unequal to the task of relieving distress—that this was evident from the fact that the American field hospital had tended many sick and wounded and others were constantly arriving, having been unable to gain admission to the government hospital.

The American hospital was established in Winchester park, the property of the Jesuits, Thursday, under the American flag and in charge of Fleet Surgeon Ames and Surgeon Norton of the battleship Missouri and aided by Sisters of Charity. The hospital received more than 50 sufferers, including persons with fractured bones and skulls, cases of blood poison which had resulted from neglect of wounds, etc.

Governor Swettenham and the local medical men were greatly opposed to the American hospital, insisting that there was no necessity for it, as all the wounded already had been attended to. Surgeon Ames said the local medical men were very ready to accept medical supplies, but wished no American interference with the wounded. Consequently there was much suffering which the American officers, in the name of humanity, were anxious to relieve. A party of American sailors worked at repairing the hospital building to the last moment, when they hauled down their flag, the Jesuits taking charge, and returned to their ships, the Yankton sailing at 1 o'clock, followed by the battleships at 4.

Governor Swettenham's attitude toward a friendly American officer's assistance is greatly deplored by many of the residents of Kingston, some of them even suggesting that the governor be petitioned to resign. His action is construed by some as inspired by resentment of President Roosevelt's attitude toward Jamaican negroes on the Panama canal. Others ridicule the governor's objection to the landing of American sailors, armed or not armed. The insecurity of the city is evidenced by the attempt Friday night by six negroes to waylay a midshipman from the Missouri, who drew his revolver and put his assailants to flight.

The streets of the burned district still reek with the stench of decaying bodies. The burned ruins are illuminated at night only by the baleful glow of the corpse fires lining the roadways.

Many bodies have been recovered through the aid of vultures, which perch in flocks on the ruins beneath which their prey is buried. As fast as they are uncovered the bodies are thrown on the funeral pyres and slowly consumed.

The total number known dead is about 450, and it is believed there are at least 150 persons who have not been accounted for.

Bacon Says Story Is Untrue

Washington, Jan. 21.—Acting Secretary of State Bacon, when shown the dispatch from Kingston regarding Governor Swettenham's attitude toward Rear Admiral Davis, at once declared that it was not true. He charged that the newspapers were trying to make trouble between Davis and Swettenham.

"There is not any truth in it," he said emphatically. "I know what I am talking about. There is not the slightest kind of trouble or foundation for it in any way, shape or manner. The ships have not sailed. I know exactly what happened, and," he added, "there is no foundation for it in any manner. That is perfectly straight. If you are looking for the facts those are the facts."

Mr. Bacon would not disclose the source of his information, but indicated a possibility of official advices.

Naval officials to whom the word of the unexpected culmination of this government's efforts to relieve the victims of the disaster was communicated expressed astonishment, but beyond that carefully refrained from expressing their views for publication.

As Viewed In London

London, Jan. 21.—The London newspapers all regard the incident culminating in the withdrawal of the American warships from Kingston as most unfortunate and regrettable, but several of them refrain from speaking editorially pending further information, evidently being desirous to carefully avoid anything calculated to in the slightest jeopardize the friendly feeling between the United States and Great Britain. They all, however, reiterate expressions of gratitude for the services of the American surgeons and landing parties.

According to The Daily Mail's Kingston correspondent, it was at the request of the governor's deputy and a subordinate that American marines were landed to quell the disorders in the penitentiary. Governor Swettenham, however, repudiated his deputy's action. The correspondent says Swettenham bases his action on that of the American government after the San Francisco disaster. He adds that in the heated final interview between Swettenham and Davis the governor intimated that the admiral wanted to gain an unfair amount of credit.

The Daily Mail frankly describes the incident as a deplorable blunder on the part of Swettenham and says he dealt with the situation in altogether a wrong frame of mind and compromised the credit of his country in so doing.

The incident occurs at a moment when the British press and public are loud in an expression of grateful recognition of the prompt and generous assistance the United States rendered when it was impossible, owing to their distance from the scene, for British warships to go to the rescue.

As a possible explanation of Swettenham's action, it is suggested that he may have acted under the strain of nervous excitement through being overwrought by his recent painful experiences.

Check to Relief Work

New York, Jan. 21.—The gathering locally of supplies for the Kingston earthquake sufferers by the New York-Kingston relief committee will, it is expected, be discontinued, for the time being at least, and in view of the refusal on the part of Governor Swettenham to accept aid from American war vessels, it is quite probable that the supplies now on the way to Kingston on the steamers Allegheny and Prince Joachim will never reach that port. Both steamers have been ordered to call off Port Antonio and there await further instructions. Several days ago the relief committee cabled Swettenham, asking him the nature of acceptable relief and where supplies could be landed safely and to advantage. To these inquiries, subsequently repeated, no reply was received.

Will Drop Blackburn Amendment

Washington, Jan. 21.—Several conferences of Republican senators were held yesterday to consider the Blackburn amendment to the Foraker resolution relative to the president's discharge of the negro troops. A decision was reached to draft a resolution along the lines of the original Lodge resolution which will meet the approval of Senator Blackburn. This resolution will be introduced by a Republican and will be supported by both the Republican and Democratic senators, who take the position that "the senate had no legal right to question the action of the president."

Thousands Suffer From Flood

Cincinnati, Jan. 21.—Cold weather and a gale of wind have increased the suffering of the thousands who have been made homeless by the flood in Ohio. A number of buildings that had been weakened by the water went down before the wind yesterday. Reports from up the river vary little. The lower end of Parkersburg and almost the entire business section of Portsmouth are under water, while 5000 people, driven from their homes, are sheltered in Portsmouth schools and churches and the city is without gas and water service.

Storm Causes $2,000,000 Dama e

Buffalo, Jan. 21.—This city has been swept by the most destructive wind storm of a decade. After a day and a night of continued hurricane, the Niagara frontier lies a scene of wreckage and destruction in the wake of the storm. Two lives reported lost so far and a property damage that will aggregate $2,000,000 is the toll of the storm.

Creosoting Plant Destroyed

Norfolk, Jan. 21.—The most spectacular fire in the history of the city occurred when a spark from a locomotive set fire to grass near the plant of the Atlantic Creosoting company and the flames extended to the lumber piles and oil tanks of the company, causing a loss of $60,000 and the probable fatal injury of one man.

Millionaire's Narrow Escape

New York, Jan. 21.—Morton F. Plant, railway and steamship magnate, narrowly escaped with his life in a collision between his cab and a trolley car last night, in which he was thrown to the pavement and received a bad scalp wound that required dressing at a hospital.

China's Latest Rebellion

Shanghai, Jan. 21.—Rumors of an anti-dynastic movement in the middle Yangtse region have received some confirmation. A fresh outbreak has taken place at Houangchoufu and two regiments have been dispatched thither from Hankow. The insurgents number 3000.

Rockefeller Attends Negro Church

Augusta, Ga., Jan. 21.—John D. Rockefeller, having an acquaintance with Rev. C. T. Walker, who preached in New York four years, attended Walker's negro church yesterday, heard the sermon and made a generous contribution when the collection was taken up.

LARGE JURY LIST

Will Be No "Professional" Talesmen In the Thaw Trial

SANITY OF DEFENDANT

A Question Which Will Play an Important Part In the Proceedings.--No Inkling of What Defense Will Have to Offer

New York, Jan. 21.—Harry K. Thaw, heir to the famous Thaw millions of Pittsburg, will today stand in the tribunal of justice, where he hopes to prove before a jury that his killing of Stanford White, eminent architect and patron of the stage, was not "wilful and deliberate murder" in the eyes of the law.

It will be the first time Thaw has left the Tombs since his commitment June 28 last, three days after the tragedy which furnished an international sensation. Justice Fitzgerald has another case pending, that of Matthew Hilgert, the maker of "magic boots," and this must be disposed of before the case of Thaw can be taken up. It is thought that Wednesday will be the earliest moment that the real work of the Thaw trial can be started.

In the meantime 200 talesmen, members of a special jury panel drawn for the Thaw trial, will have to await the call of the court. This large jury list is remarkable in many ways. It has been selected with the greatest care and every effort has been made to avoid the professional juror. It is recognized that the selection of a jury is to be the most difficult part of the proceedings. The interest in the Thaw-White tragedy has been so keen and so long sustained, and the comments on it have been so wide and diversified that comparatively few of the talesmen will be able conscientiously to say that they have not formed some sort of an opinion.

With the trial only a few days away there is still a feeling in unusually well-informed circles that something may yet happen to put an abrupt end to the proceedings. The great pressure which has been brought to bear upon the prisoner to permit a request for the appointment of a lunacy commission, the authenticated statements from a number of alienists who have examined Thaw in the Tombs pronounced him irresponsible, the arrival of the Countess of Yarmouth, who is said to have more influence with her brother than any other member of the family, all tend to keep the followers of the case on the alert for a sudden development.

Thus far Thaw's persistent refusal to agree to a plea of insanity and his curt dismissal of several of the best known lawyers of New York who had been engaged for his defense, have baffled those of this friends and relatives who had urged upon him the advisability of a course which, while leading to confinement in an asylum for the criminal insane, at least would avoid the possibility of a worse fate.

Intent upon being tried upon the merits of his case, no one beyond the prisoner, his intimate relations and his present counsel knows what the defense will have to offer in justification of Thaw's undenied act. Choosing the crowded Madison Square roof garden, Thaw fired the three fatal bullets which brought instant death to White during the closing minutes of a gala first night performance of an early summer musical affair. With the smoking pistol still within his clutch, he proclaimed that he had killed the man "who ruined my wife."

White's friends rallied to the defense of his memory and, while admitting that White had taken a deep interest in Evelyn Nesbit, the former artists' model and chorus girl, declared he was not guilty of any wrongdoing.

Much has been said about the "unwritten law" in connection with the Thaw case, but how far the testimony will go toward influencing a jury on such a plea remains to be seen. Thaw's persistence in the claim that he was morally justified in taking White's life has apparently prevailed with his counsel and they will go into court with a plea of not guilty.

Once Thaw is in court there is a possibility that District Attorney Jerome himself may move for the appointment of a commission to examine the defendant as to his sanity. Jerome personally will have charge of the prosecution of Thaw, assisted by one of his deputies, Mr. Garvan.

Thaw has several lawyers still in his employ, but just who will direct his case in court is not definitely known.

Named the Wrong Prince

Berlin, Jan. 21.—The Morgen Post, which said that Prince Henry of Prussia was in a sanitarium at Charlottenburg suffering from a severe sore throat, confused the emperor's brother with the late regent of Brunswick, who is in a sanitarium under treatment for a throat affection. Prince Henry of Prussia is at Kiel following his naval duties.

Shea Jury's Long Deliberation

Chicago, Jan. 21.—The jury which since Saturday noon has been striving to reach a verdict in the case of Cornelius P. Shea and 13 other labor leaders, on trial for conspiracy in connection with the teamsters' strike of 1905, was out all night. A number of ballots were taken and the jurors are said to stand seven to five for conviction.

POWDER BLEW UP

Caused Wreck of Passenger Train, Which Took Fire

THIRTY-FOUR ARE KILLED

Remains of Victims Charred and Mutilated--Freight Cars Also Wrecked by Explosion, the Shock of Which Was Felt For a Distance of Thirty Miles

Terre Haute, Ind., Jan. 21.—Twenty-two charred, broken and mutilated bodies were taken from the smouldering ruins of an accommodation passenger train, following its destruction by the explosion of a carload of powder as the accommodation passed a freight train at Sandford, five miles west of Terre Haute. The number of injured will total at least 35.

The cause of the disaster has not been fully explained, but several theories are advanced. The result was terrible. The shock was felt for 30 miles, many believing it to be an earthquake. The three coaches of the passenger train were filled with travelers.

The entire train, including the locomotive, was blown from the track, the coaches were demolished, the engine was hurled 50 feet and the passengers were either blown to pieces, consumed by fire or rescued in an injured condition. Some of the 35 injured will die. The death list will not be complete until workmen have cleared the debris and the injured are out of danger.

According to trainmen of the freight the explosion of the powder was caused by the concussion of the passenger train, which was slowing down for Sandford. Another theory is that gas escaping from an oil pipe line entered the powder car, standing by the pipe, and that a spark from the passenger locomotive ignited the gas. The belief was expressed by one or two persons that the disaster was due to the act of a tramp or an intoxicated man who may have fired a shot into the car.

Besides the passenger train, eight freight cars were blown to pieces by the explosion. Huge masses of iron were hurled hundreds of feet from the track. The tank of the passenger locomotive was thrown 100 feet, landing in a gravel bank. The wrecked train and eight freight cars were consumed by fire, starting in the wreckage. The other cars were pulled out of danger.

Not a building in Sandford escaped damage. Windows were shattered, dishes and furniture broken and several doors were torn from their hinges.

The accommodation passenger train was running from Indianapolis to Mattoon, Ills. It was very dark and heavy rains had converted the streets and tracks at Sandford into a pond. The residents were going to bed when the freight train drew in on a sidetrack to let the passenger train go by. Shortly afterward the passenger train approached the station, setting brakes as it passed the freight. As the passenger train was just abreast of the powder car the explosive let go and the entire passenger train was blown from the tracks into the air, crashing to the earth a tangled mass of wood and steel beneath which lay many human beings. Fire broke out in the wreckage and before the eyes of rescuers, many were burned to death, the flames stopping the work of succor. By the glare from the burning coaches the people of Sandford did their best for the wounded and worked heroically all night.

A thousand feet of track was torn up and a great hole shows where the powder car stood. This car was bound from Concord Junction, Mass., to East Alton, Ills., and contained 500 kegs of powder.

Big Four officials who directed the care of the injured said that the death list might reach between 30 and 40. Already 13 dead bodies have been identified and four other persons are missing and probably dead. According to E. W. Thiers, local freight agent, enough remnants of bodies have been found to indicate a dozen more victims, or a possible total of 34 dead.

SINGULARY BOLD CRIME

Three Italians Held Up In Woods by Trio of Fellow Countrymen

Wakefield, Mass., Jan. 21.—Three Italians, who recently came to the United States, were lured into the woods here by three compatriots, bound and beaten and robbed of money which aggregated $500. The victims were induced to come here under the belief that they were to work as woodchoppers, but when they reached the woods they were set upon by their fellow-countrymen, one of whom was the Italian who hired them, ostensibly to do some extensive work in Wakefield. None of the names of the men who figured in the affair are known to the police, who expressed the opinion that the Italians were hired to come here to make it easy for them to be robbed.

The plight of the Italians was discovered by some boys who were playing in the woods. All the Italians were bound to trees and one of them was almost naked, as the clothing had been cut from his body in order that the thieves might secure $250 which was secreted about his waist. The police were notified and the Italians were released.

The men were unable to speak English, but through an interpreter they said that they had been hired as woodchoppers to come to Wakefield and cut down a number of trees. Arriving here, they were met by the Italian who employed them in Boston. The four passed into the woods, where they were joined by two other Italians. The newcomers and the leader suddenly attacked the woodchoppers. The latter resisted, but their assailants were armed with revolvers and razors and the trio from Boston were overcome and bound to trees. The assailants then relieved them of all their money.

Three Boys Crushed to Death

Boston, Jan. 21.—Three boys were killed through the falling in of a wall in the cellar of a recently demolished house in South Boston. Their names were James Gill, Michael Knee and John Murphy. Nearly a dozen boys gathered in the old cellar at 48 West Fourth street and amused themselves in prying some of the stones from the walls. Suddenly one of the highest walls was toppled over upon the little group and three of them were buried beneath the debris.

Criminal Malpractice Charged

Shapleigh of this city for criminal malpractice in causing the death of Shapleigh's wife. Cilley is named as the principal, Lambert both as principal and assistant and Shapleigh as an accessory. Cilley and Lambert are at present out on bail, while Shapleigh disappeared two hours before the death of his wife.

Fatal Fire In Boathouse

Medford, Mass., Jan. 21.—Nicholas Sandstone, 27 years old, was burned to death, and Otto Mietzner, 27, was terribly burned in a fire that destroyed the large boathouse of the Medford Boat club, situated on Mystic lake. The property loss will reach $15,000. Mietzner was the caretaker at the club house and Sandstone was visiting him when the fire occurred. No one knows how the fire originated.

Onondaga Still Further Ashore

Chatham, Mass., Jan. 21.—Nearly a week's work toward floating the stranded steamer Onondaga was wiped out by a moderate southeast gale, which drove the vessel further up the beach than when she first came ashore. It is believed that very little will be accomplished toward floating the Onondaga until the next course of high tides the last of the week.

Accidentally Shot Brother

Lebanon, Conn., Jan. 21.—Coroner Brown states that he finds the shooting of Abraham Lavine, aged 17, by a shotgun in the hands of his brother, Max Lavine, 10 years old, was accidental. IN CHOOSING HUSBAND

Rev. Mr. Perkins Gives One Rule And a Great Many Don'ts

The third lecture on the family was delivered by Rev. W. S. Perkins, D.D., Pastor of the Universalist church Sunday evening. The subject for the evening was, "The choosing of a husband."

The quotation used as a text was one from Shakespeare:

"The lord whose hand shall take my plight shall carry Half my love with him, half my care and duty."

Or for a better knowledge of choice of a husband Shakespeare was further quoted: "The Three Caskets; The Casket of Gold, the Casket of Silver, and the Casket of Lead."

The deduction was that a one who was to enter matrimony must be willing to give up anything else, or to help bear the troubles of life.

That although most of the reasons given last week in choosing a wife, would equally well apply to the choosing of a husband.

In addition however there are many "Don'ts." There are many professions and occupations that are now open to young women so it is not now necessary from a point of mere support.

Don't expect to marry a perfect man; it leads to nothing but disappointment, for there are none. If you wait until you find one you will never marry, though there are many good men. Warning was given against union of money and title. Also against marrying any foreign person, especially if they expect to return to their country.

Don't marry a man just because he is a great man. Don't marry a man who is a crank on any subject, as they rarely make good husbands. Don't marry a man to reform him, for if you cannot reform him before marrage, you are almost sure of failure, and instead of raising him, he will surely drag you down.

One rule given by which a husband may be chosen; Watch how he treats other women, and especially those in his own family. The man who does not treat all women with respect will not be likely to continue his respect for you.

The music at the service was by a sextet of female voices under the supervision of Miss Mary W. Blake.

The last of the series will be given next Sunday evening. The subject will be "Courtship and Marriages." The music will be furnished by Mr. Charles Hobart.

Sad Death of E. P. Bradman

A peculiarly sad death was that of Mr. Edward Parker Bradman, son of Frank C. and the late Helen M. Bradman, which took place at his home 75 Van Winkle street, Ashmont, on Saturday.

Mr. Bradman was quite well known in Quincy and was engaged to Miss Bertha Packard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank C. Packard of Chestnut street. Some three years ago he was sadly afflicted and has been totally blind for some time. He was a young man of ability, and it was thought to be overwork which caused his misfortune.

During all his illness and affliction Miss Packard has never given up the hope that his eyesight would be restored, and she with her parents have been constantly with him. Miss Packard has the sympathy of a large circle of friends. The funeral services were held today.

Letter from Miss Parks

A letter has been received from Miss Addie J. Parks which showed that she arrived in Kingston, Jamaica, the Friday before the earthquake. The letter stated that the party had secured rooms with a family in the suburbs of the city. Nothing has been heard from her directly since the earthquake, although it is believed that she is safe, as the party was reported all safe.

Officer Hinchon arrested Abraham Ginsberg of 62 South street, Saturday, for collecting junk without a license and for buying junk from minors. When arrested Ginsberg had 150 pounds of window weights which it was alleged was taken from the old Graham factory building on Sumner street. He was fined in court.

Police Assigned To New Beats

The expected changes in the beats of the night police force were announced at roll call Saturday night. These changes were made necessary by addition of two new officers. The wholesale shake-up, however, did not materalize. Officer Patrick J. Kellier, who has been covering the Wollaston beat for three years was transferred to the beat in City Square.

This is one of the most important routes in the city, and has been covered by Officer Goodhue, who was transferred to the day route at South and West Quincy.

Reserve Officer Henry J. Riley was assigned to the Wollaston beat, and Reserve Officer Daniel H. Doran was assigned to a new beat covering parts of Hancock street, Revere road, Elm street Union street, and vicinity.

The two reserve men are filling the vacancies caused by the resignation of Chief Burrell from the permanent force and the illness of Officer Golden.

Officers Bishop and Olson recently promoted from the reserve to the permanent force, will remain on the same beats that they have been covering, namely, the upper part of Washington street and Houghs Neck respectively.

There are still two vacancies in the reserve force to be filled by Mayor Thompson from the eligible list.

Officer Keliher, who takes the City Square beat, was born in Quincy and educated at the Willard and High schools. He has been on the regular force for three years. He has an excellent record as an officer.

Contelli Discharged

Carmine Coutelli of 54 West street, who it was alleged fired a gun point blank at a crowd of men leaving his store last Thursday night, was discharged by Judge Pratt in the district court on Saturday, for lack of evidence. The police say that the story told them of the affair and the story told in court were different.

Also Worked Quincy.

Miss Dorothy M. Burton, who plead guilty on Saturday to larency of jewelry and clothing in Newton, and was also found guilty of hiring a horse and carriage with attempt to defraud, was at Hotel Greenleaf in this city last summer, and was up to the same games. It is alleged that she defrauded the landlord for board, a livery stableman for horse hire, a store for shirt waists, et., etc. In Newton she represented herself as a demonstrator for a salt firm. If unable to furnish bail she will go to the Sherborn reformatory.

From Leper Settlement

Rev. Fr. Conrardy, the well known missionary of the leper settlement, preached at the masses at St John's church, Sunday, on his life among the lepers of the Hawaiian islands, and China, Fr. Conrardy has just completed a four years' study course in medicine in this country, and will apply his knowledge in medical science in his labor among the lepers of China to whom he returns next summer.

At Work as Usual.

Walter E. Anderson, son of Andrew J. Anderson of 42 Cranch street, who was reported to the police on Saturday as missing, turned up all right this morning. The boy worked in Boston and when he did not return home Saturday night his parents feared that he had run away to New York as he had been talking of going there. This morning a telephone message was received from the store where he was employed, stating that he was at work as usual. It is thought that the boy with a companion made a flying trip to New York.

Special Vespers.

A special vesper service in honor of the Holy Name society was held at St. John's church Sunday evening. Vespers was celebrated by Rev. John J. Casey. There was an appropriate sermon by Rev. Julian E. Johnstone.

The new members of the society were received and consecrated by the pastor, Rev. John J. Coan. An unusually fine musical service was rendered by the choir under the direction of John Mahan.

Unique Features.

Don't forget the mid winter gymnasium exhibition at the Y. M. C. A. on Tuesday evening. The feature of special interest will be a basket ball game between the Senior team and a team from the Business Men's class. No rules will be observed, and no sidelines will be used, so the contest will have many unique features. Clever pyramid work by various groups will be another interesting feature.

so since. She'll be along in a little while now."

But in spite of this cheerful prophecy a full fifteen minutes passed before the train, which had been started from Boston with the vague idea that some time or other it might get to Provincetown, came coughing and panting round the curve and drew up at the station platform. Only one passenger got out at the Harniss station, and he, stopping for a moment to hand his trunk check to the station agent, walked briskly into the waiting room and slammed the door behind him.

"Hello!" he hailed, pulling off a buckskin glove and holding out a big hand to the stage driver. "Barney, how's she headin'?"

Mr. Small grinned and took the proffered hand.

"Well, for the land's sake, Ez Titcomb!" he exclaimed. "Where'd you drop from? Thought you was somewheres off the coast between New York and Portland jest 'bout now."

"Got shore leave for a fortni't or so," said the newcomer, unbuttoning his overcoat with a smart jerk and throwing it wide open. "Schooner sprung a leak off Gay head last trip, and she's hauled up at East Boston for repairs. Dirty weather, ain't it? Hello, Lon! How are you, Ike?"

Mr. Clark and his friend grinned and responded, "How are you, Cap'n Ez?" in unison.

The arrival was a short, thickset man with a sunburned face, sharp eyes, hair that was a reddish brown sprinkled with gray and a close clipped mustache of the same color. He wore a blue overcoat over a blue suit and held a cigar firmly in one corner of his mouth. His movements were quick and sharp and he snapped out his sentences with vigor.

"Full cargo tonight?" he asked of Mr. Small, who was buttoning his overcoat and pulling on his gloves.

"Pretty nigh an empty hold," was the reply. "Only 'bout one and a ha'f goin' over. You're the one, and the boy here's the ha'f. All aboard! Come on, Brad. You and the cap'n git inside, while me and Dan git the dunnage on the rack."

The boy picked up the carpet bag and followed Mr. Small out to the rear platform of the station, where the coach, an old fashioned, dingy vehicle, drawn by four sleepy horses, stood waiting.

Captain Titcomb followed, his overcoat flapping in the wind.

"Here, Barney," he observed, "have a cigar to smoke on the road. Have one, Dan? Here, Lon; here's a couple for you and Ike. Who's the little feller?" he added in a whisper to the station agent.

"Ben Nickerson's boy from Wellmouth. He's comin' down to Orham to live with the old maids. They've adopted him."

"The old maids? Not the old maids? Not Prissy and Tempy?"

"Yup. All right, Barney; I'm comin'."

The station agent hurried away to help the driver with the captain's sea chest, and its owner, apparently overcome with astonishment, climbed mutely into the coach, where his fellow passenger had preceded him.

The old vehicle rocked and groaned as the heavy chest was strapped on the racks behind. Then it tipped again as Mr. Small climbed clumsily to the driver's seat.

"All ashore that's goin' shore!" shouted Mr. Small. "So long, Dan. Git dap, Two-forty!"

The whip cracked, the coach reeled on its springs, and the whole equipage disappeared in the snow and blackness.

* * * * * * *

The boy, Bradley Nickerson, had never ridden in a stagecoach before, and after ten or fifteen minutes of jolt and roll he decided that he never wanted to ride in one again.

Suddenly Captain Titcomb, who had been silent so far, spoke.

"Heavy sea on tonight," he observed. "'Pears to me Barney'd better take a reef. She's rollin' consider'ble."

The boy laughed and said, "Yes, sir."

"Goin' all the way to Orham?" asked the captain.

"Yes, sir."

"Got folks over there, I presume likely. Friends or nothin' but jest relations?"

"Relations, I—I guess."

"So! Well, I've got a good many relations over there myself. Fact is, I've got relations, seems to me, 'most everywheres. Father used to have so many of 'em that when he went visitin' he used to call it 'goin' cousinin'.' My name's Titcomb. What do they call you when your back ain't turned?"

The boy laughed again in a puzzled way—he scarcely knew what to make of his questioner—and said that his name was Bradley Nickerson.

"Nickerson, hey? That settles it; you're a Cape Codder. Minute I meet anybody named Nickerson I always know they've got the same kind of sand in their boots that I have. Is it Obed Nickerson's folks you're goin' to see?"

"No, sir. I'm goin' to live with Miss Priscilla Allen. Her and her sister. They was some of mother's people."

"Sho, well I swan!" muttered the captain. "Prissy and Tempy, hey? Then Dan wa'n't foolin'. And you're goin' to live with 'em?"

"Yes, sir. Do you know 'em?"

"Who—me? Oh, yes! I know 'em. I'm a partic'lar friend of theirs—that is," he added cautiously, "I call on 'em once in awhile jest to say 'How are you?' Why? You didn't hear any of them fellers at the depot say anything 'bout me and them did you? No! Well, all right, I jest thought— Oh, yes! I know 'em. Nice folks as ever was, but what you might call a little mite 'sot in their ways.' Do you always wipe your feet when you come into the house?"

"Why—why—yes, sir, if I don't forget it."

"All right. It's a good habit to git into, 'specially if you're goin' to walk on Prissy's floors. Sometimes I've wished I could manage to put my feet in my pocket when I've been there. I wonder if I know your father? What was his name?"

Bradley told his father's name and in response to the captain's tactful questioning a good deal more besides. In fact, before long Captain Titcomb knew all about the boy, where he came from, how he happened to come and all the rest. And Bradley for his part learned that his companion commanded the coasting schooner Thomas Doane, that he had been a sailor ever since he was fourteen, that he had a marvelous fund of sea yarns and knew how to spin them and that he (Bradley) liked him.

By and by the captain noticed that the boy's replies to his cheerful observations were growing rather incoherent, and, suspecting the reason, he ceased to talk. A few minutes later he leaned forward and smiled to find his fellow traveler, who had slipped down upon the cushions, fast asleep.

When Bradley awoke Captain Titcomb was standing on the ground the open door of the coach.

"Good night, Brad," he said. "Here where I'm bound for. You've got a fi minute ride or so more 'fore you git the old mai—that is, to Prissy a Tempy's. I'll see you tomorrer. Y and me's goin' to be chums, you know

The door was shut. Mr. Small stru up "Camptown Races," and the st bumped on again. This time the b did not sleep, but, holding on to strap, tried to peer through the sn crusted window. He saw a light h and there, but little else. After a sh interval the coach turned a sharp c ner, rolled on for perhaps twice length and then stopped.

Mr. Small opened the door, and Bra ley, looking past him, saw the side of large house and a lighted doorwa with two female figures, one plum and the other slender, standing in From behind them the lamplig streamed warm and bright and sen their shadows almost to his feet.

"Come on, bub," said the stage dri er. "Here's where you git out. Mi Prissy," he shouted, "here's your ne boarder."

This Story be continued Daily when space will admit.

CARD OF THANKS

If there is any one time in life when friends are more appreciated than another, it is at a time such as we have just experienced.

During this recent bereavement there have been so many acts of kindness and love that it is impossible to express to each one our appreciation of their friendliness.

Therefore we take advantage of this medium to sincerely thank all who so kindly contributed the many floral tokens, and the kind words will ever be cherished.

HAS A SURPLUS

City Hospital Closes Year With $3,339.91 In Treasury

The annual reports of the City Hospital of Quincy were never more satisfactory than those offered Monday evening at the annual meeting of the corporation at the Unitarian chapel.

For the first time, the Hospital is free from debt, but better yet, has a surplus of $3,339.91 in the treasury.

In the absence of President W. B. Rice, Nathan G. Nickerson presided.

The records of the last annual meeting were read, which showed a debt of $2,147.

Ten ladies and gentlemen were then elected members of the corporation.

Timothy Reed made the report for the Trustees, which stated that 328 persons had been admitted to the hospital in 1906, including 89 medical cases and 339 surgical cases. There had been 42 cases of appendicitis, only two proving fatal. There had been two graduates from the Nurses school.

Good work had been done by the Hospital collectors, and over $4,000 were collected. The debt of $2,147 at the close of 1905 had been cancelled early in the year by a check from President Rice. The financial condition was improving and with a surplus in the treasury the outlook was never more encouraging. The endowment fund was also larger, and prospects were bright for the Nurses home.

R. D. Chase, the treasurer, reported receipts of $21,064.26, which included $4,000.00 from the city, $5,648.08 from patients, $4,109.59 from Hospital week collection, $2,980.59 from interest on endowment, etc., $2,147.85 gift from W. B. Rice, and other sums.

The expenditures of $17,724.35 included $4,499.71 for pay roll, $3,441.79 for groceries, etc., $1,129.87 for medical and surgical supplies, $4,200.00 in payment of temporary loan, $892.00 for fuel, $853.45 for milk, and other sums, leaving a surplus of $3,339.91.

The endowment fund amounts to $65,865.33, the fund for the Nurses Home to $1,007.37, the fund for the contagious ward to $870.57.

Warren W. Adams was reelected clerk and sworn in.

A double list of candidates for trustees was reported. It contained the names of six women.

At this point a letter from W. B. Rice was read in opposition to the election of women.

All of the trustees of 1906 were reelected, those receiving the highest vote appearing first: William B. Rice, R. D. Chase, Henry McGrath, N. G. Nickerson, Horace M. Willard, James F. Burke, Henry M. Faxon, Dr. John F. Welch, Frank P. Waterhouse, George E. Adams, Arthur W. Newcomb, Fred B. Rice, Timothy Reed, Theodore Parker, T. B. Pollard, William T. Shea, Dr. John A. Gordon, Roger H. Wilde, Joseph A. Dasha, Alexander Falconer, Charles P. Hutchins, and Delcevare King.

Dr. Gordon reviewed the work of the year while the tellers were at work. There had been more patients then in any previous year, and the little hospital had been pretty much crowded. The preponderance of surgical cases showed it was becoming a surgical hospital. The results were satisfactory.

The average number of patients was 20, although there were but 22 beds. Many were refused because it was impossible to admit them. We need this year a new ward and also a Nurses' Home.

A committee was appointed to nominate 30 candidates for trustees next year, 22 to be elected.

Irish League Is Encouraged

At a meeting of the Quincy branch, Irish National League, held in Cahill's hall on Sunday evening, the following officers were installed:

President,—John Cavanagh.

Vice President,—Peter McConarty.

Recording and Financial Secretary,—John J. Byron.

Treasurer,—Timothy F. Ford.

Sergeant at Arms,—James Tate.

Executive Committee, — Michael Burns, Denis McGee, Luke J. Coyle, Daniel Lennon and Bartholemew Duran.

The installing officers were James D. Kelly of Quincy assisted by Edward Lawton of Brockton. The officers being duly installed and conducted to their positions were called upon for addresses on the prospect of the advancement of the Irish cause in the future.

President Cavanagh outlined the necessary work to be done to assist the members of Parliament from Ireland in obtaining the long sought for justice to the Irish people by Legislation which would grant to the people of Ireland the same measures as prevail in Canada and Australia.

Vice-President McConarty stated that he had been a physical force man until the Parnell movement was organized, and since that time he has been convinced that constitutional agitation will accomplish more for Ireland than any other means suggested.

Mr. Lawton of Brockton gave a very interesting address on the past history of Ireland, and the many movements inaugurated for her political regeneration. He cited the rising of '98, the Young Ireland party of '48, and the Fenian movement of '67, which were futile in their attempts for the freedom of Ireland, and his advice was to agitate and fight by constitutional methods until success would crown the efforts of the United Irish League.

Addresses were also made by Luke J. Coyle, John J. Byron, Daniel Lennon, Timothy F. Ford, James Tate and Bartholemew Duran.

The meeting was largely attended and arrangements were made for the reception to Mr. Richard Hazelton, M. P. who will speak in this city at a date to be announced.

The Quincy branch of the Irish National League which has been in existence 26 years, feel jubilant at the fact that home rule for Ireland is in sight, and the long cherished hope is about to be realized, as the party in power in the English Parliament are committed to the policy of home rule. The passage of this measure which will be introduced at the next session of the British Parliament, and will mean that Ireland will again become a nation.

Pleasing Concert At Wollaston

The concert given on Monday evening at the Wollaston Methodist church, by the Y. M. C. A. Mandolin and Guitar club and Erastus Osgood impersonator, was an emphatic success, artistically and financially. Every number rendered by the club was heartily enjoyed. The march and waltzes were given with a swing and rhythm that appealed to all present. Possibly the most artistic number was the intermezzo pizzicato le secret, and without doubt the jolliest was "At an Alabama cake-walk."

Mr. Osgood, as usual, had something original and amusing to tell, and again displayed his ability as an actor and mimic in presenting his monologues. "Hamlet Under Difficulties" simply convulsed his audience. This monologue from Mr. Osgood's pen appeared in a recent number of Harper's Magazine.

The highest praise is due Roscoe Ricker for his brilliant mandolin solos. His first number "Valse Brilliant," by Valantine Abt the greatest living mandolinest, was a most artistic performance. His rapid runs "double stop" and "duo" passages were played with an ease and precision worthy the master Abt himself. His second number a difficult Tarantella served but to emphasize the young players' skill and musical instinct. Mr. Ricker was accompanied on the piano by Miss Netta M. Gram with discriminating taste and deservedly shared the triumph scored by the soloist.

WHY HE WITHDREW

Mr. Crane Writes Relative To Assurance Of the Mayor

Editors Daily Ledger:

An explanation of my withdrawal in favor of Mayor Thompson at the last election may interest the voters of Quincy at this time. Shortly after my candidacy was announced, Mayor Thompson telephoned a prominent business man, doing business in Boston, but residing in Quincy, to call on me to urge me to withdraw. I explained to this man that I had no ambition for the office but that the people behind me demanded changes in the appointed offices.

Shortly afterwards Mr. Schenkelberger appeared and after a long conversation with him, I finally told him that if the Mayor would make a change in the offices of Commissioner and City Solicitor, I would withdraw. Later, he telephoned me that Mr. Burgin and himself had made an appointment with the Mayor and they desired to see me before my papers were filed.

Accordingly Mr. Burgin and Mr. Schenkelberger came to my house and informed me that they had been in consultation with the Mayor and brought this proposition from him. That owing to the corrupt practices act the Mayor could make no promise in writing but had given them this "assurance."

I quote the exact words: "In the event of Mr. Crane withdrawing, and no other independent Republican being placed in nomination, if after the election, Mr. Crane with a delegation of citizens should call on him and request that a change be made in the offices of Commissioner of Public Works and City Solicitor, his request could but be acceded to."

On the Mayor telling them this, Messrs. Burgin and Schenkelberger informed me that they said to him—"What assurances can we give Mr. Crane that you will carry out this agreement?"—and the Mayor replied to them in a very dignified way: "Gentlemen, they have said many unkind things about me, but no one has ever yet doubted my word."

I then said to these gentlemen: "Do you feel sure that the Mayor will keep his word in this matter?" And both gentlemen replied that they did not see how he could honorably do otherwise.

Having been accustomed to deal with people who keep their word, and feeling that the object for which we were working had been accomplished, I accordingly, with the advice and consent of my supporters, withdrew and did not file my papers.

During the heat of the campaign, when the Mayor was in grave danger, Mr. Schenkelberger again appeared and wished me to sign a paper to help the Mayor carry Wollaston. At this time I asked him if he thought the Mayor intended to carry out the agreement, and he told me that Mr. Thompson had already offered the Commissionership to Mr. Whitman. I therefore signed the card on the understanding that it was desired by Mr. Thompson.

After the Mayor's "glorious" victory, in company with a delegation of citizens, I called by appointment on the Mayor at City Hall and requested that the changes be made in accordance with the "assurance."

In every way, it seems to me, the independents fulfilled their part of the agreement. The appointments made last evening show that the other party feels that an agreement of gentlemen is binding only on one side.

Mr. Thompson has the office of Mayor, and by right of that office is entitled to be called "His Honor." The Independent Republicans have a lemon but they also have retained their honor.

During the last campaign, a great deal was said about voting the "straight" ticket. There is a proverb that often when you vote the straight ticket you vote for a crooked candidate.

The appointments of the Mayor cause no surprise, but nevertheless there is disappointment among hundreds who supported his honor last fall. It is hoped that some of the department officials, who have not given satisfaction have improved by experience.

With one or two exceptions the officers appointed by Mayor Thompson are the same as last year. The exceptions are the appointment of J. Winthrop Pratt a practical builder, as assessor for three years in place of the late Julius Johnson. There are also two new members of the Managers of the Adams Academy. Dr. F. J. Peirce takes the place of Roger H. Wilde, and the name of Perry Lawton is added.

James H. Cunningham, who resigned the office of Tax Collecter to accept the office of County Treasurer gets his old office back again.

Over a million emigrants were admitted to this country last year, all of whom will be able to vote within from three to six months. Native-born citizens have to live here 21 years before they are eligible.

Because of an accident to the first page of the Daily Ledger shortly after the paper went to press yesterday, the opening chapter of the new serial was not readable in some papers. Therefore the opening chapter is republished today.

RECALL IS ASKED

Swettenham's Action Causes Indignation In Jamaica

CITY IS NOT PROTECTED

Governor Knew It When He Prohibited Presence of Armed Americans--Views at Washington and London

Kingston, Jam., Jan. 22.—The indignation of the residents of Jamaica, both official and private citizens, at the action of Governor Swettenham in demanding the withdrawal by Admiral Davis, is spreading and intensifying. The governor's response to Davis is bitterly denounced and it is generally declared that the only possible reparation is for the government to apologize and recall Swettenham.

Jamaicans say that the indignation is fully shared by the residents of the island. They contrast the apathy of the home government, which has not tendered any relief, and the loyal generosity of the United States, which instantly rushed warships, surgeons, medicines and food to the stricken city. The deepest regret and mortification is expressed lest the action of Swettenham may disturb the affectionate entente between America and Great Britain.

Mayor Tait, upon the departure of Davis, voiced the sentiments of citizens in a letter to the admiral, in which he asked Davis to reconsider his decision to leave and to remain with the American ships, as every aid was still urgently needed. Davis replied that he had no alternative but to go in accordance with the desire of the constituted authorities.

Citizens strongly criticise the action of the authorities in placing obstacles in the way of the American naval surgeons, whose splendid services in tending the neglected wounded and sick was most highly praised.

Governor Swettenham's contention in his letter to Davis that the local police protection was ample is in contrast with the fact that, after sending the letter, the governor personally visited the barracks occupied by the police and several companies of the West India regiment and bitterly censured the officers, saying that pilfering was prevalent throughout the city. At the same time the governor declared he would not permit the presence of any armed Americans in Kingston.

The conditions in Kingston are improving slowly. All passes to the burned sections, where there is nothing to loot, were revoked yesterday and this step has caused much inconvenience to Americans and others who desire to reach ships in the harbor.

Many bodies are still being recovered and cremated, and it is believed the fatalities will reach a total of 700.

There is not a pressing demand for an increased food supply, but rain is imminent and is dreaded, the doctors predicting that it would result in an epidemic among the unsheltered thousands, resulting in a death list far exceeding that brought about by the earthquake and fire.

The United States refrigerator ship Celtic arrived here yesterday morning. She received orders not to delay her departure, and sailed at 1 o'clock in the afternoon. Few Americans remain here.

There are still frequent tremors of the earth. A quake of especial severity occurred at 3 o'clock yesterday morning, but did little damage.

Difficulty is experienced in inducing the negroes to work on account of the conviction among them that this was a "white man's earthquake" and that it would be dangerous for negroes to interfere with an act of God.

The Feeling at Washington

Washington, Jan. 22.—Dispatches exchanged between the British secretary of state for war and the state department, practically ignoring the letters which passed between Admiral Davis and Governor Swettenham, have had the effect of relieving the tensity of feeling which had existed since it became known that Davis returned to Guantanamo from Kingston with his ships which had gone to aid the people of Jamaica. The message from London is interpreted here as meaning that the British government and people disapprove the action of the governor of Jamaica in requesting Davis to embark his men.

Meantime, Davis is preparing a report which will be forwarded to Washington by mail. The subject was regarded as one of such delicacy that it was deemed advisable to send it in this manner rather than by wireless telegraphy.

While the general sentiment here is one of extreme resentment at the treatment of Davis, there is no official who will venture to express himself in criticism for publication. The president has taken the position that there is nothing in the episode which warrants the slightest representations by this government on the subject, and no representations will be made.

The British government has acknowledged its appreciation of the sending of the ships to Jamaica in correspondence which passed between Secretary Root and Esme Howard, the British charge.

At the state department it is stated that, so far as this government is concerned, the matter will be allowed to drop, the department's position being that the action of one man in a distant colony, at a time of great distress and mental anguish, should not be the means of raising an unpleasant issue with a great and friendly nation.

Officials of the National Red Cross society in this city do not believe that the Jamaican authorities will refuse to accept the supplies which have been sent to the island.

Swettenham May Be Recalled

London, Jan. 22.—The colonial office is still without explanation from Sir Alexander Swettenham of the situation which led to the withdrawal of Admiral Davis' warships from Kingston on Saturday. It is supposed that if Swettenham had any reasonable justification for his extraordinary letter to Davis he would not delay in placing his government in possession of the facts, therefore his silence is regarded as a confession of the weakness of his case or an evidence of compunction at having adopted an inadvisable course.

Furthermore, War Secretary Haldane has taken a course indicative of the exceptional importance of the occasion by addressing a dispatch to Secretary Root which indirectly implies censure of the governor of Jamaica. It cannot be doubted but that the incident will be settled, probably by the recall of Swettenham, or at least disavowal of his action and apology to Davis.

Officials of the foreign office do not hesitate in agreeing that under no conceivable circumstances should such a letter as Swettenham's to Davis been written, and they declare that even the stress of recent events is no excuse for such language on the part of a government official to an officer of a friendly nation engaged in a work of humanity.

Great Britain Indebted to Davis

London, Jan. 22.—By a singular coincidence Admiral Davis happens to be an officer to whom England heretofore has felt the deepest gratitude, as his course while the American member of the international arbitration court at Paris upon the sinking of the British fishing vessels in the North sea by the Russian fleet practically was decisive in shaping a decision favorable to Great Britain.

Some phases of the arbitration were not stated at the time, as they might have proved irritating to Russia. It is known that Davis' staunch support of the British contention turned the scales at the decisive moment. His views were accepted by the Austrian admiral and this, with the vote of the British member, Admiral Baumont, made a majority which determined the character of the final decision. In this the Russian member, Admiral Dubasoff, and the French member, Admiral Fournier, concurred, thus making the conclusion unanimous.

One of the phases not generally known is that King Edward, on the conclusion of the court, communicated an invitation through the British ambassador at Paris to Davis to come to Buckingham palace, where marked honors were to have been shown him. But the desire to avoid anything that would have been construed as wounding Russia led Davis not to accept the king's invitation. It was none the less expressive of the feeling of Great Britain toward Davis, although this feeling is now momentarily overlooked, probably through failure to recognize the Davis at Jamaica as the same Davis who turned the scales for Great Britain before the historic international court.

Appeal From Mayor of Kingston

New York, Jan. 22.—The mayor of Kingston, Jam., in his official capacity, sent the following cablegram to Mayor McClellan:

"On behalf of stricken people, I appeal through you to generosity of American people for help. Every house destroyed. Money, lumber and building materials most urgently needed."

Acting upon the suggestion of Tait, McClellan last night announced that he would be glad to receive contributions, which would be forwarded to the proper authorities in Kingston.

Supplies For Kingston Merchants

Boston, Jan. 22.—When the steamer Admiral Sampson sailed this morning on her return trip to Jamaica she took out a large quantity of flour, provisions and supplies for merchants at Kingston, who are already prepared to resume business. The city is already recovering from the dreadful calamity of last week and orders have been received here from business men for big stocks of supplies.

Relief Committee Will Wait

Philadelphia, Jan. 22.—The citizens' permanent relief committee met at city hall to take action on relief for the earthquake sufferers in Jamaica, but in view of the attitude assumed by Swettenham the committee decided to postpone for the present the matter of extending aid.

Higgins Close to Death

Olean, N. Y., Jan. 22.—There is practically no change in the illness of former Governor Higgins. The doctors say that the fact that he responds readily to heart stimulants may prolong his life for an indefinite time and that death may occur suddenly, or it may not occur for several days.

DELAY IN THAW TRIAL

Accused Man's Brother-In-Law May Testify For Prosecution

New York, Jan. 22.—Howard Nesbitt, 18 years old, brother of Harry Thaw's wife, came here from Pittsburg and went to the district attorney's office, where he was questioned. It is stated unofficially that young Nesbitt may be called as a witness for the prosecution and that his testimony will be in defense of Stanford White's reputation and designed to show that White had been a benefactor of young Nesbitt and his mother.

The trial of Thaw has been postponed until Wednesday. The trial was set for yesterday before Justice Fitzgerald, but a case which was begun 10 days ago has not been concluded and this necessitated the delay as announced. All persons other than the 200 men from among whom the jury is to be selected were excluded from the courtroom. Even the newspaper men, including correspondents from many of the larger cities of this country and from London and Paris, were held outside the courtroom during the brief proceedings.

The prisoner appeared happy and confident and walked with a springy step. He was accompanied by his counsel. Thaw once stepped from the prisoner's room into the jury room and caught his first glimpse of the court in which he is to be tried for his life.

Says Chinese Are Practically Slaves

Washington, Jan. 22.—"Chinese boys and Chinese girls are sold in the San Francisco market every day like horses and mules," was one of the statements made by Representative McKinlay (Cal.) before the house committee on foreign affairs, which is considering the Perkins bill to modify the Chinese exclusion act. McKinlay urged that only a few great companies, which brought such young Chinese to this country, in practical slavery, would profit by any modifications of the exclusion act, and said the majority of Californians are opposed to any tampering with the present law.

Railroads a Mercy of Elements

St. Paul, Jan. 22.—The heavy snow which covers North Dakota for miles is piled in drifts of unprecedented depth, covering in some cases houses and barns. In anticipation of Saturday's blizzard all the railroads bent every effort to bring to the towns of the state trains filled with coal and provisions. This action was wise, for every line in North Dakota is tied up. In the mountain district snowslides have filled in the tracks, the banks piling up in some places to a depth of 70 feet. Not a train has reached St. Paul for three days.

Forced to Go to Isthmus

Colon, Jan. 22.—Steamer Canada, with 900 laborers on board, has arrived here. The laborers are to work on the canal. On Jan. 11, while the steamer was at Fort de France, Martinique, the laborers mutinied because they did not want to come to the isthmus. They wanted to disembark there or at Trinidad. This the governments of these islands would not permit. Fifteen of the leaders of the mutiny have been turned over to the canal zone authorities.

SCUTTLED SCHOONER

Charge Upon Which Skipper and a Seaman Are Arrested

Portland, Me., Jan. 22.—Charged with sinking their schooner for the purpose of obtaining the value of an insurance policy for $600, Captain G. H. Tower and Haskell Davis, the former master and half owner, and the latter a seaman on the 25-ton fishing schooner Fortuna, which was sunk just outside Portland harbor, were arrested in Washington county. The penalty for conviction of a crime of this alleged character is life imprisonment. Previous to 1897 a death penalty was attached.

The men rowed into port Dec. 2, claiming their vessel had struck on Alden's rock, outside this harbor, the night before. Two weeks later she drifted onto the beach near Highland light, Cape Cod. Investigtion showed that her centre-board box had been bored full of augur holes.

Captain Tower was half owner of the schooner and his wife tried to collect $600 insurance. The men will be heard before United States Commissioner Burleigh at Augusta.

Grain Storehouse Set on Fire

Providence, Jan. 22.—A fire of an incendiary origin destroyed the hay and grain storehouse of the Andrew Spellman company last night and threatened at one time to burn a large part of the Providence waterfront in that vicinity. A number of vessels tied up at neighboring docks were in danger. Several citizens saw three negroes run away from the wharf on which the grain building is located and heard one of them say "I guess that will burn all right." A few minutes later fire was discovered in the grain building. The loss is $15,000.

IN DUNNAGE BAGS

Children Are Rescued From a Life-boat by a Tug

ONE HURLED THROUGH AIR

Another Dragged Through a Tumbling Sea, While Their Mother and Seamen Are Rescued by Means of Ropes

Providence, Jan. 22.—A tale, the recitation of which sounded like the wildest fiction, was told last night by 12 survivors of a terrible storm which raged on Long Island sound. All of them had faced death so long and had suffered so severely that none expected to live.

One of them, an infant boy, had been tied in a dunnage bag and hurled from a tumbling lifeboat to the deck of a tug. Another, a girl, 3 years old, also bound in a dunnage bag, was dragged through the seas and landed safely beside her brother. Six others, including the mother of the children, with ropes under their arms, leaped from their lifeboat and were hauled, half drowned and semi-conscious, to the tug. Twelve hours later four others, the crew of a foundering barge, were taken on board the tug after they had almost lost their lives.

The survivors were brought here by the tug Buccaneer, which left Baltimore Thursday afternoon, bound for Providence, towing two immense coal barges, the Annie M. Ashe and the Montana, both of which were lost.

The tug, commanded by Captain Moon, ran into bad weather soon after she left Baltimore. At 12:30 o'clock on Saturday night, when in the lower Narrows, New York, the Annie M. Ashe sprung aleak. All hands were set at work at the pumps and throughout the night and during Sunday morning the seas broke over the boat, leaving so much water on board that the crew could not hold their own and they were finally compelled to abandon their efforts when the pumps became choked with coal dust. Engineer Knudson had gone into the engine room to put out his fires and while there the inrush of water was so great that he was compelled to swim about until his head bobbed through the hatchway. The stern of the barge was gradually sinking and it was decided to lower the lifeboat.

While Knudson signalled the tug Captain Lockhardt told his wife to prepare herself and her children for a trip in the lifeboat. The tug had cut loose from the barge Montana, which hoisted sail and continued on her course unaided. When the tug was within 100 feet of the lifeboat Lockhardt appeared at the side of his barge, carrying a dunnage bag, to which was attached a long line. Inside the bag was his little boy. It was lowered to the engineer who placed it under the seat of the boat. In a moment the little girl, also bound up in a bag, was lowered over the side and she was placed alongside her brother. Then Mrs. Lockhardt, with a rope under her arms, was dropped to Knudson.

The seas were running so high that the frail craft was tossed about like a cork. When 10 feet away from the tug Knudson dragged out the bag containing the boy. He placed the bag over the side, and, with feet firmly planted, swung the bag first one way and then another until he had secured sufficient momentum. When he had done so he hurled the little bundle forward. His aim was true and the bag fell into the arms of a deckhand who, unaware of its contents, tossed it aside, where it remained unheeded until the boy, in his efforts to free himself, started to roll down the deck. Then the bag was opened and the crew, after they had recovered from their amazement, carried him to the captain's cabin.

Knudson then grasped the bag in which the little girl was imprisoned. As the boat rose on the crest of a wave he dropped the bag overboard, and the crew on board the tug, now aware that the bags contained human beings, hauled carefully, and in less than two minutes the girl was hauled on board uninjured, but almost suffocated.

Another line was sent whirling into the lifeboat and this Knudson fastened under Mrs. Lockhardt's arms. The woman was dropped into the sea, but she was half drowned when she was hauled on board the tug.

The men on the sinking barge now drew the lifeboat back to them and one after another dropped into it and when all were on board the men on the tug began to haul in their end of the line. The boat was now so heavily laden that her gunwales were almost level with the water. When half a dozen yards away from the tug, Captain Lockhardt tied a rope under his arms and was hauled on board the tug, and each remaining man followed his example, and while these rescues were being made the barge plunged beneath the waves.

Captain Moon immediately started ahead and soon picked up the Montana and started for Block Island. The barge had labored so heavily while under her own canvas that she, too, had sprung aleak. Just as the Buccaneer steamed inside the breakwater at Block Island the water made so much headway that the barge was in danger of sinking any moment. The lifeboat was lowered and for nearly an hour the four men struggled against the elements before they succeeded in rowing their boat under the lee of the tug. The tug remained on the scene until the barge went down yesterday afternoon.

CHAPTER I.

"WAS you cal'latin' to buy one of them turnovers, bub?" casually inquired Mr. Clark, ceasing to gaze at his steaming boots, which were planted against the bulging center of the station stove, and turning toward the boy at the lunch counter.

"Yes, sir," said the boy. He had taken off one worsted mitten and held a five cent piece clutched tightly in his red fist.

The station agent wrapped the pastry in a piece of newspaper and handed it to his customer.

The boy, a youngster of about twelve years of age, with a freckled face and a pair of bright gray eyes, took his "turnover" to the settee in the corner of the waiting room and began to eat. He had on a worn cloth cap with an attachment that could be pulled down to cover the ears and a shabby overcoat of man's size, very much too large for him. As he munched the greasy crust and the thin layer of "evaporated" apple he looked around him with interest.

The station itself was like the average railway building on Cape Cod. Except for the sign "Harniss" that hung outside it might have been the station at Wellmouth, which he had seen so often. Battered settees around the walls; lithographs of steamers, time tables and year old announcements of excursions and county fairs hung above them; big stove set in a box of sawdust—all these were the regulation fixtures. Regulation also were the "refreshments" on the counter at the side—"turnovers" arranged cobhouse fashion under a glass cover, with a dingy "Washington" pie under another cover and jars of striped stick candy, with boxes of "jawbreakers" and similar sweetmeats between.

It was snowing hard, and in the dusk of the winter evening the flakes rustled against the windows as if unseen old ladies in starched summer gowns were shivering in the storm and crowding to get a peep within. The air in the shut waiting room smelled of hot stove, sawdust, wet clothing and Mr. Clark's cigar. To this collection of perfumes was presently added the odor of kerosene as the station agent lit the big lamps in their brackets on the wall.

From outside came the sounds of creaking wheels and stamping horses, the stamping muffled by the snow which covered the ground.

The door opened, and a big man with a face of which gray whiskers and red nose were the most prominent features came stamping and puffing into the room. He jerked off a pair of leather gloves, playfully shook the congealed moisture from them down Mr. Clark's neck inside his collar, tossed a long whip into the corner and, holding his spread fingers over the stove, began to sing "Whoa, Emma!" with enthusiasm.

Mr. Clark, being too busy clawing the melting snow from his neck to open a conversation, Mr. Bodkin observed: "Hello, Barney Small! How's the trav'lin'? Have a rough time drivin' over?"

"Oh, middlin', middlin'," replied the driver of the Orham stage, unbuttoning his overcoat and reaching for his pipe, "but this earth's a vale of tears anyhow, so what's the odds so long's you're happy. Hello, Dan!" The last a shouted greeting to the station agent in the little room, whose answer was a wave of the hand and a sidelong nod across the telegraph instrument.

"What's doin' over in Orham, Barney?" inquired Mr. Clark.

"Prissy and Tempy's adopted a boy."

The agent evidently was interested.

"The old maids?"

"Yup, the old maids. I s'pose they come to reelize that they needed a man 'round the house, but as there wa'n't no bids in that line they sort of compromised on a boy."

"You don't mean the Allen old maids that live down on the 'lower road,' do you?" asked Mr. Bodkin.

"Sartin. I said the old maids, didn't I? There's plenty of single women in Orham, but when you say 'the old maids' in our town everybody knows you mean Prissy and Tempy."

"What about the boy, Barney?" said the station agent, coming into the waiting room.

"Why," said Mr. Small, "it's this way: Seems that Prissy and Tempy's father, old Cap'n D'rius Allen—he's been dead six years or more now—had a niece name of Sophia, that married Cap'n Ben Nickerson over to Wellmouth. Cap'n Ben and his wife had one son. I think the boy's name's Bradley. Anyhow Cap'n Ben and his wife was drowned off the Portuguese coast two year ago when Ben's bark was lost. Maybe you remember? Well, the boy was left at home that voyage with Ben's half brother, Solon Nickerson's, so the youngester could go to school. When his folks was drownded that way the boy kept on livin' with Solon till 'bout three weeks ago Solon was took with pneumony and up and died. Prissy and Tempy's the only relations there was, you see, so it was left to them to say what should be done with the boy. I cal'late ther must have been some high old pow wowin' in the old house, but the old maids are pretty conscientious spite of their bein' so everlastin' 'old maidy,' and they fin'lly decided 'twas their duty so take the little feller to bring up. That's the way I heard the yarn. They kept it a secret until yesterday, but now the whole town's talkin' 'bout it. You see, it's such a good joke for them two to have a boy in the house. Why, Prissy's been used to shooin' every stray boy off the place as if he was a hen."

Mr. Small laughed so heartily at this that the others joined in. When the hilarity had subsided the station agent asked:

"When's the Nickerson boy comin' over from Wellmouth?"

"Why, today, come to think of it. He was to come up on the afternoon train from Wellmouth and go to Orham with me tonight. You ain't seen nothin'."—

The station agent interrupted him with a sidelong movement of the head.

"Huh?" queried Mr. Small. Then he in company with Mr. Clark and Mr. Bodkin, turned toward the corner of the waiting room.

The boy who had bought the apple "turnover," having finished the last crumb of that viand, had turned to the window and was looking out through a hole he had scraped in the frost on the pane. He had shaded his face with his hands to shut out the lamplight, and, though he must have heard the conversation, his manner betrayed no interest in it.

"What's your name, sonny?"

Mr. Small interrogated the station agent by raising his eyebrows. The agent whispered, "Shouldn't wonder," and added, "He came on the up train this afternoon."

"Hey, boy," said Mr. Clark, who never let consideration for other people interfere with his own curiosity, "what's your name?"

The boy turned from the window and, blinking a little as the light struck his eyes, faced the group by the stove. His freckled cheeks glistened as the light shone upon them; but, as if he knew this, he pulled the big sleeve of the overcoat across his face and rubbed them dry.

"What's your name, sonny?" said the stage driver kindly.

"Nickerson," said the boy in a low tone.

"I want to know. Your fust name aint Bradley, is it?"

"Yes, sir."

"Sho, well, there now! Guess you're goin' to ri o ver with me then. I drive the Orham coach. Hum, well, I declare!" And Mr. Small pulled his beard in an embarrassed fashon.

"Come over to the stove and get warm, won't you?" asked the station agent.

"I ain't cold," was the reply.

The trio by the stove fidgeted in silence for a few moments, and then Mr. Small said uneasily; "Ain't it 'most time for that train to be in? She's a ha'f hour late now."

"She was twenty-five minutes late at Sandwich," said the station agent, "and she's prob'ly lost ten minutes or so since. She'll be along in a little while now."

But in spite of this cheerful prophecy a full fifteen minutes passed before the train, which had been started from Boston with the vague idea that some time or other it might get to Provincetown, came coughing and panting round the curve and drew up at the station platform. Only one passenger got out at the Harniss station, and he, stopping for a moment to hand his trunk check to the station agent, walked briskly into the waiting room and slammed the door behind him.

"Hello!" he hailed, pulling off a buckskin glove and holding out a big hand to the stage driver. "Barney, how's she headin'?"

Mr. Small grinned and took the proffered hand.

"Well, for the land's sake, Ez Titcomb!" he exclaimed. "Where'd you drop from? Thought you was somewheres off the coast between New York and Portland jest 'bout now."

"Got shore leave for a fortni't or so," said the newcomer, unbuttoning his overcoat with a smart jerk and throwing it wide open. "Schooner sprung a leak off Gay head last trip, and she's hauled up at East Boston for repairs. Dirty weather, ain't it? Hello, Lon! How are you, Ike?"

Mr. Clark and his friend grinned and responded, "How are you, Cap'n Ez?" in unison.

The arrival was a short, thickset man with a sunburned face, sharp eyes, hair that was a reddish brown sprinkled with gray and a close clipped mustache of the same color. He wore a blue overcoat over a blue suit and held a cigar firmly in one corner of his mouth. His movements were quick and sharp and he snapped out his sentences with vigor.

"Full cargo tonight?" he asked of Mr. Small, who was buttoning his overcoat and pulling on his gloves.

"Pretty nigh an empty hold," was the reply. "Only 'bout one and a ha'f goin' over. You're the one, and the boy here's the ha'f. All aboard! Come on, Brad. You and the cap'n git inside, while me and Dan git the dunnage on the rack."

The boy picked up the carpet bag and followed Mr. Small out to the rear platform of the station, where the coach, an old fashioned, dingy vehicle, drawn by four sleepy horses, stood waiting.

Captain Titcomb followed, his overcoat flapping in the wind.

"Here, Barney," he observed, "have a cigar to smoke on the road. Have one, Dan? Here, Lon; here's a couple for you and Ike. Who's the little feller?" he added in a whisper to the station agent.

"Ben Nickerson's boy from Wellmouth. He's comin' down to Orham to live with the old maids. They've adopted him."

"The old maids? Not the old maids? Not Prissy and Tempy?"

"Yup. All right, Barney; I'm comin'."

The station agent hurried away to help the driver with the captain's sea chest, and its owner, apparently overcome with astonishment, climbed mutely into the coach, where his fellow passenger had preceded him.

The old vehicle rocked and groaned as the heavy chest was strapped on the racks behind. Then it tipped again as Mr. Small climbed clumsily to the driver's seat.

"All ashore that's goin' shore!" shouted Mr. Small. "So long, Dan. Git dap, Two-forty!"

The whip cracked, the coach reeled on its springs, and the whole equipage disappeared in the snow and blackness.

* * * * * * *

The boy, Bradley Nickerson, had never ridden in a stagecoach before, and after ten or fifteen minutes of jolt and roll he decided that he never wanted to ride in one again.

Suddenly Captain Titcomb, who had been silent so far, spoke.

"Heavy sea on tonight," he observed. "'Pears to me Barney'd better take a reef. She's rollin' considerable."

The boy laughed and said, "Yes, sir."

"Goin' all the way to Orham?" asked the captain.

"Yes, sir."

"Got folks over there, I presume likely. Friends or nothin' but jest relations?"

"Relations, I—I guess."

"So! Well, I've got a good many relations over there myself. Fact is, I've got relations, seems to me, 'most everywheres. Father used to have so many of 'em that when he went visitin' he used to call it 'goin' cousinin'.' My name's Titcomb. What do they call you when your back ain't turned?"

The boy laughed again in a puzzled way—he scarcely knew what to make of his questioner—and said that his name was Bradley Nickerson.

"Nickerson, hey? That settles it: you're a Cape Codder. Minute I meet anybody named Nickerson I always know they've got the same kind of sand in their boots that I have. Is it Obed Nickerson's folks you're goin' to see?"

"No, sir. I'm goin' to live with Miss Priscilla Allen. Her and her sister. They was some of mother's people."

"Sho, well I swan!" muttered the captain. "Prissy and Tempy, hey? Then Dan wa'n't foolin'. And you're goin' to live with 'em?"

"Yes, sir. Do you know 'em?"

"Who—me? Oh, yes! I know 'em. I'm a partic'lar friend of theirs—that is," he added cautiously, "I call on 'em once in awhile jest to say 'How are you?' Why? You didn't hear any of them fellers at the depot say anything 'bout me and them did you? No! Well, all right, I jest thought— Oh, yes! I know 'em. Nice folks as ever was, but what you might call a little mite 'sot in their ways.' Do you always wipe your feet when you come into the house?"

"Why—why—yes, sir, if I don't f'r get it."

"All right. It's a good habit to git into, 'specially if you're goin' to walk on Prissy's floors. Sometimes I've wished I could manage to put my feet in my pocket when I've been there. I wonder if I know your father? What was his name?"

Bradley told his father's name and in response to the captain's tactful questioning a good deal more besides. In fact, before long Captain Titcomb knew all about the boy, where he came from, how he happened to come and all the rest. And Bradley for his part learned that his companion commanded the coasting schooner Thomas Doane, that he had been a sailor ever since he was fourteen, that he had a marvelous fund of sea yarns and knew how to spin them and that he (Bradley) liked him.

By and by the captain noticed that the boy's replies to his cheerful observations were growing rather incoherent, and, suspecting the reason, he ceased to talk. A few minutes later he leaned forward and smiled to find his fellow traveler, who had slipped down upon the cushion, fast asleep.

When Bradley awoke Captain Titcomb was standing on the ground in the open door of the coach.

"Good night, Brad," he said. "Here we're where I'm bound for. You've got a five minute ride or so more 'fore you git to the old mai—that is, to Prissy and Tempy's. I'll see you tomorrer. You and me's goin' to be chums, you know."

The door was shut. Mr. Small stepped up "Camptown Races," and the stage bumped on again. This time the boy did not sleep, but, holding on to the strap, tried to peer through the steam crusted window. He saw a light here and there, but little else. After a short interval the coach turned a sharp corner, rolled on for perhaps twice its length and then stopped.

Mr. Small opened the door, and Bradley, looking past him, saw the side of a large house and a lighted doorway with two female figures, one plump and the other slender, standing in it. From behind them the lamplight streamed warm and bright and sent their shadows almost to his feet.

"Come on, bub," said the stage driver. "Here's where you git out. Miss Prissy," he shouted, "here's your new boarder."

In Use For Over Fifty Years

DR. TRUE'S ELIXIR

As a reliable family tonic, in all complaints of the stomach, liver or bowels, especially constipation, Dr. True's Elixir stands without an equal; it is a pure vegetable compound with a wonderfully successful record since 1851. Adults as well as children are troubled with worms. The symptoms are: Indigestion, with a variable appetite; foul tongue, offensive breath, hard and full belly, with occasional gripings and pains about the naval; eyes heavy and dull, itching of the nose, short, dry cough; grinding of the teeth, starting during sleep; slow fever, and often in children, convulsions and bed wetting.

A few doses of Dr. True's Elixir will expel the worms if there are any: if not it acts as a gentle laxative tonic, clearing the stomach and bowels of all waste matter, leaving those organs sweet and clean—it increases the appetite, causing pure life-giving blood to flow through the body, thus invigorating the whole system with rugged, robust health. If taken regularly it will prevent coughs, colds fevers and worms.

Sold by druggists, 35c, 50c, $1.00. Write for booklet, "Children and Their Diseases." is a scalp medicine, not merely a hair beautifier. It rids the scalp of that dangerous hair enemy, dandruff, and allows nature to serve its purpose unhampered. Your own specialist will endorse the properties in "Dandrocide."

"DANDROCIDE"

The many hair tonics fool you into softening the hair, but shamefully neglect the great evil, dandruff.

You won't get rid of dandruff, until you use "Dandrocide." It is lasting in its benefits, and is best in its results when economically applied. One bottle will heal the scalp, and start a rejuvenating growth of hair.

Letter from Miss Parks

It will be good news to the many friends of Miss Addie J. Parks, who was in Kingston, Jamaica, at the time of the earthquake to learn that she is safe. It has been believed from the first that her party was safe but lack of direct information kept her friends on the anxious seat.

All fears however were set at rest this morning when Mrs. C. W. Guy of Butler road received a postal from her, conveying the information that she and her party are safe and well. Mrs. Guy also received word by telephone from Worcester friends to the same effect.

The postal which was written the day following the earthquake was as follows:

Jan. 14, 1907.

"Dear Aunt: "We are all safe, after the earthquake. We were three miles out of the city on an electric car sightseeing, when the car seemed to be running off the tracks on level ground. The power gave out and we had to walk home. Houses, buildings and cabins previously passed were well shaken and caved in. The occupants were in the streets, praying, singing and acting for they knew not what was to come.

One wharf is standing so boats may land. Fruit and vegetables are plentiful. We slept under the palms last night, fearing the caving of the house. I am now writing this card there. The fire is out, but all Kingston is ruined. We have all our luggage and ourselves 3 miles in country with a friend."

It is the intention of the party to leave Jamaica as soon as possible and continue the trip as planned through Cuba and New Orleans.

Rheumatism Cannot Be Cured Unless Uric-O is Used

The Store of E. J. Murphy is the Home of Uric-O in Quincy.

The Rheumatic person is sceptical regarding the claims of almost any remedy advertised as a cure for Rheumatism and one can scarcely blame him for being so. All the plasters and liniments combined never actually cured a case of Rheumatism. They may relieve it one quarter, but it is sure to break out somewhere else. The only sure way to cure Rheumatism, is to drive it from the system, for as long as the Uric and Rheumatic Acid remains in the blood, one is never entirely free from the trouble. This is where the value of Uric-O as a permanent cure for Rheumatism comes in. It seeks out the Rheumatic poison in the blood, muscles and kindeys, renders it inert and harmless and drives it out of the system. That is why Uric-o is such an admirable and effective cure for Rheumatism.

The chief reason that Uric-o is such a wonderful cure for Rheumatism is, that it is designed and prepared to cure Rheumatism and Rheumatism only. It does not contain any alcohol or other so called tonics to make one "feel good" for the time being, but is composed of antidotes for the rheumatic acid poison in the system. That is the secret of its wonderful success. Rheumatism simply cannot exist in a person's system if Uric-O is used.

Uric-O is sold by E. J. Murphy, "The home of Uric-O" in Quincy, at 75c and $1.00 the bottle, but if you still feel skeptical about its efficacy you can test it free of charge by cutting out this advertisement and sending same together with your name and address to the Smith Drug Co., Syracuse, N. Y., and they will send you a sample bottle free. To persons who write and say they have never used Uric-O, want to test it thoroughly, and will agree to take it systematically according to directions, they frequently send a regular 75c bottle free.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS. —STATE HOUSE, BOSTON, Jan. 15, 1907. The committee on liquor law will give a hearing to parties interested in the petition of Howard C. CHAPTER II.

THE plump woman, whom Mr. Small had addressed as "Miss Prissy," was counting into the stage driver's palm a sum in small change from a portentous black wallet that fastened with a strap.

"Good night," said the driver, pocketing the money, with a grunt and a jingle. Like the boy, he had been very careful not to step off the mat. "Good night, Miss Tempy. Snow's lettin' up a little mite. Guess 'twill be clear by mornin'. Good night, Brad."

The plump lady closed the door behind him just in time to shut out the opening notes of the "Sweet By and By." Then she dropped the hook into the staple, wound the leather strap carefully about the wallet, placed the latter in a compartment of a tall chest of drawers in the corner, turned the key upon it and put the key under the alabaster candlestick on the mantel. Then she turned to the boy, who, holding his carpet bag with both hands, still stood uneasily on the mat, while the slim lady fidgeted in front of him.

"Bradley," said the plump lady—she was dressed in some sort of black material that rustled and wore a lace collar, jet earrings and a breastpin with a braided lock of hair in the center of it—"Bradley, we're real glad to see you. I'm Miss Priscilla; this is my sister, Miss Temperance."

"Yes, Bradley," coincided "Miss Tempy," "we're real glad to see you." She was the younger of the two and was gowned in what the boy learned later was her "brown poplin." Her hair was not worn plain, like her sister's, but had a little bunch of curls over each ear. She also wore a hair breastpin, but her earrings were gold.

Bradley shook the extended hands. Miss Prissy's red and dimpled and Miss Tempy's thin and white, with two old fashioned rings on the fingers.

"Won't you—won't you set down?" ventered Miss Tempy after a rather awkward pause.

"Why, yes, of course," said Miss Prissy, "and take your things right off—do."

Bradley placed the carpetbag on the corner of the mat and pulled off the shabby overcoat. The jacket and trousers beneath were also shabby, but it was at his shoes that Miss Prissy glanced, and, oddly enough, their condition served to break the formality.

"My goodness me!" she ejaculated. "Jest look at his poor feet, Tempy Allen! Come right over to the stove this minute and take off those shoes. They're soppin' wet through."

"No, ma'am," protested the boy. "They ain't, honest. They only look so."

"Don't tell me!" commanded Miss Prissy. "Go right over to the stove this minute."

Bradley reluctantly obeyed, stepping gingerly across the spotless oilcloth and taking as long strides as possible. It did not add to his comfort to see Miss Tempy shake the melting snow into the center of the rope mat, fold the latter carefully together and disappear with it into the kitchen.

Miss Prissy piloted him to the chintz covered rocker by the big "airtight" stove. Then she proceeded to unlace the patched brogans, commenting in an undertone upon the condition of the stockings beneath.

"I'm 'fraid," said Bradley fearfully, "that I've got some snow water on your floor, ma'am."

"Don't say a word. Thank goodness your feet ain't so wet as I thought they was. Put 'em right on the rail of the stove there while I go up to the garret and get those slippers of father's. I'll be right back."

She hurried out of the room just as her sister entered it by the other door.

"Now, set right still," said Miss Tempy, bustling about, with the steaming teakettle in her hand. "I'm goin' to make you some pepper tea. There's nothin' in the world like pepper tea when you're likely to catch cold."

"Pepper tea" was a new prescription for the boy, and he watched with interest while Miss Tempy turned some milk into a bowl, flooded it with boiling water, added a spoonful of sugar and vigorously shook the pepper box over the mess.

"There!" she said. "Now, drink that, every drop. Ain't you hungry?"

Bradley, with tears in his eyes, the result of the first swallow of pepper tea, gaspingly protested that he wasn't hungry, not very. The sight and smell of the loaded supper table were so tempting that the denial was rather half hearted.

"Not very! When did you have anything to eat last?"

"Mr. Bartlett—he's the s'lectman at Wellmouth—gave me a sandwich at the depot 'fore I started, ma'am, and I bought a turnover at Harniss."

"My sakes! Prissy"—to her sister, who came rustling in—"he hasn't et a thing but a sandwich and a turnover since morning. Now, come right over to the table, Bradley, and set down."

As the boy ate he looked about the room. It was a big room, with a low ceiling, spotlessly whitewashed. The oilcloth on the floor was partially covered with braided rag mats with carpet centers. On the window shades were wonderful tinted pictures of castles and mountains. The table was black walnut, and there were five rush seated chairs, each in its place against the wall and looking as if it were glued there. The sixth of the set he occupied. Then there was the chintz covered rocker and another rocker painted black, with a worn picture of a ship at sea on the back. There was another ship over the face of the tall wooden clock in the corner. This craft was evidently the Flying Dutchman, for every time the clock ticked it rolled heavily behind a fence of tin waves, but didn't advance an inch. On the walls were several works of art, including a spatter work motto, a wreath made of seashells under a glass and an engraving showing a boat filled with men, women and children rowed by a solemn individual in his shirt sleeves, moving over a placid sheet of water toward an unseen port.

"Cap'n Titcomb," remarked Bradley, whose bashfulness was wearing off, "came over in the coach with me tonight."

The effect of this announcement was remarkable. Miss Prissy looked at

Bradley shook the extended hands.

Miss Tempy, and the latter returned the look. Strange to say, both colored.

"Cap'n Titcomb?" faltered Miss Prissy. "Cap'n Ezra Titcomb?"

"Yes, ma'am. He talked to me 'most all the way. I liked him first rate."

"Why—why, I do declare! I didn't know the cap'n was expected, did you, Tempy?"

"No, I'm sure I didn't!" exclaimed the flustered younger sister. "Did he—did he tell you why he was comin', Bradley?"

"No, ma'am, but I heard him tell the man that drove the coach that he had shore leave for a week 'cause his schooner was laid up for repairs. He said he knew you, though, and that he was comin' round to see me tomorrer."

This remark caused quite as much embarrassment and agitation as that concerning the captain's presence in the coach. The two ladies again glanced hurriedly at each other.

"Goodness gracious!" exclaimed Miss Prissy. "And the settin' room not swept and the windows not washed! I'll have to get up early tomorrer mornin'. I'm so glad I fixed that ruffle on my alpaca," she added in an absentminded soliloquy.

"And I must finish that tidy for the sofy," said Miss Tempy nervously. "I've only got a little more to do on it, thank goodness! Prissy, I'm goin' to put an iron on. I want to press my other collar. Did—did the cap'n say anything more about me—us, I mean?" she added, looking at the stove.

"No, ma'am, he didn't," replied the boy. "He jest asked about me and told stories and talked."

Miss Tempy seemed a little disappointed and made no comment. Her sister, too, was silent. Presently Bradley yawned. He tried to hide it, but Miss Prissy, coming out of her trance, saw him.

"My sakes," she exclaimed, "what are we thinkin' of, keepin' you up this way? It's after 9 o'clock. Let me get the lamp. Tempy, you do up that soapstone for his feet."

(To be continued.)

STOCK EXCHANGE

Boston Banker Tells Members of Congregational Club The Ins and Outs

Mr. Sumner B. Pearman of the banking firm of Pearman & Brooks, told the members of the Wollaston Congregational club very frankly on Tuesday evening everything concerning the Stock Exchange which they wished to know. It was the regular January meeting of the club, of which Councilman W. H. Hull is president.

At 6.30 a hot supper was served and the attendance was larger than usual, not being confined to the men of the church.

Mr. Pearman has for 24 years been a member of the Boston and New York exchanges. He told of the memberships in these, the Boston one having 150 seats and the New York one 1,100. In London there is no limit, while in Paris the bourse has 77 members. Seats in the Boston exchange in 1883 were worth $5,000 but are now quoted at $40,000. In New York they had been sold as high as $95,000 and in Paris at $600,000. A standard of efficiency was required to become members.

He told of the different kinds of stock brokers; the traders, the $2 men, the buyers, the arbitrage men, the specialists, etc. The work of the clearing house was explained, also the puts and calls, the effect of the London market, booms, etc.

It was a mistaken idea he said that the market was led by the public. It never was. Every move is manipulated. He told how oil was controlled, and copper would be. He said that 85 per cent. of all those who invest in stock were unsuccessful in the long run. Only about 5 per cent. make money. He advised people with small savings not to invest in stocks. The odds were greatly against them.

Mr. Pearman closed his address about 8.30, but was kept busy for an hour in answering questions. He said brokers did not give tips when they had a dead cinch. Stock brokerage and the law are at dead points.

He explained listed and unlisted storks, and explained the difference between investors and speculators. He advised safe investors to reject everything that pays over four and one-half per cent. The average speculator was a fool. He told of bucket shops and margins, and said the advertising of stock was vicious.

The exchange market was an essential feature in the world's affairs. There was no danger of the government taking control. He claimed the Russian-Japanese war was ended by the stock exchange. It was a great financial power.

Panics occurred with remarkable regularity, for instance in 1837, 1857, 1873 and 1891, and one might be expect- about 1911. The order was always the same—panic, liquidation and prosperity.

A vote of thanks was extended Mr. Pearman, for it was a great delight for the members to listen to him. Merrill's orchestra furnished music during the banquet.

Cold Day

Today will pass as one of the coldest days this winter. Although the glass at Pettengills registered 18 above zero at noon. Other glasses gave the temperature at that hour as being but 8 and 10 degrees above. The glass at Pettengills is on the lee side and would naturally be higher then those exposed to the wind. The lowest noon temperature previous to today was 10.

Charles A. Briggs created quite a little excitement Tuesday afternoon at Atlantic by rushing along Hancock street shooting off a revolver. He had a great time for a few minutes, but his fun was of short duration, for Officer Bradley gathered him in. He was fined $15.

Y. M. C. A. Exhibition

The first exhibition of the year of the Y. M. C. A. was held Tuesday evening and was a grand success. There were on the floor about thirty.

The first event was the maze run. This was for the purpose of getting warmed up. Then came a little more work for the fingers, arms and feet. Bar bells were then used.

In the apparatus work four of the best men as leaders put the various squad through the exercises. The apparatus used were hanging parallels, parallel bars and horse and a squad in tumbling, etc.

Pyramids came next, Tupper and Long each leading a squad of men. The pyramids were exceptional good which, showed a good deal of work.

Tumbling feats were next on the program this part of the work was excellent. The tumbling was with and without spring board. The medicine ball race proved very exciting as well as interesting.

The program for the evening was concluded by a basket ball game between the Seniors and the Business Men's class. This game was played without any rules and a good deal of life and was enjoyed by all. The line up of the two teams was as follows:

BUSINESS MEN	SENIORS
Long	Dahl
Maloney	MacDonald
Gay	Tirrell
Walker	Farquhar
Tupper	Morris

Five and ten minute halves were played in which the Business Men won by the score of 16 to 8.

Music was rendered by Leslie Mehaffy during the first part of the evening. The attendance was good.

Next Thursday night the Senior track team go to Cambridge to compete in a dual meet with that association.

Next Saturday at 8 o'clock the Quincy Y. M. C. A. and the Somerville Y. M. C. A. clash in basket ball at Quincy.

—Hon. Albert B. Cummins was inaugurated Governor of Iowa Thursday for the third time.

Fewer Alarms Small Loss

Chief Engineer Litchfield reports the total number of fire alarms during the year 1906 to have been 186 against 284 for the year 1905. Of these alarms last year 84 were bell alarms and 102 stil alarms. Of the bell alarms, 17 were false.

The totat amount of property at risk was $264,684 and the insurance on the same $191,400 the amount paid by insurance companies for losses was $12,-158 25.

Considering the amount of property at risk the losses were unusually small which speaks well for the efficiency of the department.

MAYOR REPLIES

Quotes Mr. Crane In December And Claims Contradictions

Editors of the Quincy Daily Ledger:

In your issue of yesterday you have an article entitled, "Why he withdrew. Mr. Crane writes relative to assurance of the Mayor."

At the outset, I will say no person or persons were authorized, with the exception of the Boston business man, resident of Quincy, referred to, whom I requested to obtain from Mr. Crane, if he could, his reasons, and whether personal or public, for entering the contest after choice had been made by the people.

Upon that gentleman informing me the reasons, namely objections to certain office holders, and at the same time commending, from his own observation, the work done on a particular street by the Commissioner of Public Works, as one of the persons complained of and wished removed, all further communition with Mr. Crane ceased on my part.

The article means to convey that there were negotiations, and that friends representing me and acting as a committee from me, had assured or promised or pledged to Mr. Crane, a then-intended-to-be Independent candidate in the municipal campaign, in the event of his withdrawal, etc., I would make changes in certain appointive city officers.

That statement was strongly iterated and reiterated during the municipal campaign; and in the most positive language of which I was capable. I repudiated it both publicly and privately. It was so quoted in the press, and such statement of mine was publicly endorsed by Mr. Crane in a signed article in your issue of December 1st, which was as follows:

WHY MR. CRANE IS SATISFIED.

"In view of the fact that you have published in to-day's Ledger two letters from correspondents who are not men enough to sign their own names, and whose statements are false and misleading, I ask you to print tomorrow the following statement:

Neither Mayor Thompson nor anyone else has ever made or communicated to me a pledge or promise that he will or will not appoint or reappoint anyone to office. I have been assured, however, that if Mayor Thompson should be reelected and that if a representative body of citizens should then go to him and advise that for good and sufficient reasons, and for the best interests of the city, certain heads of departments should not be reappointed, that such advice would receive more than ordinary consideration. That satisfies me.

Emery L. Crane.

Quincy, Nov. 30, 1906.

This communication of December 1st was at no solicitation of mine, neither was any action of his prior or subsequent to the above date, as what he did was wholly unimportant to me.

I commend to the reading public the article quoted above, and that of yesterday to which he has appended his signature.

To term the contradictions, mildly, as forgetfulness or the phantasy of a disordered brain of a busy man of the world with a mission to perform, who evidently, after a lapse of a little time, contorts his own words and coins new phrases to fit situations conjured in dreams, is the condition of our friend in his intemperate and frenzied communication.

The insulting and indecent language to which he descends is unworthy the notice of any respecting person. I grant him the whole field which he monopolizes and adorns.

As to my word, honor or standing in the community: I make no comment further than to say it is not at the caprice or antics of irresponsible persons in the juggling of words, who flagrantly contradict themselves and forget overnight.

James Thompson.

Quincy, Jan. 23, 1907.

A Contest for Vice Commodore

There will be quite a contest at the annual meeting of the Quincy Yacht club on Feb. 7, over the office of vice commodore. Herbert W. Robins, who was secretary of the club for several years and has been vice commodore for the past two years, is a candidate for reelection. There was some little opposition to him last year but it did not develope into anything tangible. This year, however, there will be a formidable candidate against him in the person of Joseph W. Johnson. Both have a large circle of friends and a warm contest is looked for.

Commodore Crane who has held that office for the past two years has been persuaded to become a candidate again, and there is no opposition to him.

Roy D. Evans,

The funeral of Roy D., the four-year old son of J. D. and Lucy (Kain) Evans, was held at the home of his parents Tuesday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock, the Rev. N. J. Sproul officiating. The floral tributes were many and beautiful, and included: Pillow, "Our darling" from parents; wreath, "Roy," from friends; wreath from I. O. Heptasopha; mound from friends; basket with dove from playmates and friends; flat bouquets of carnations from following friends: Mrs. Thomas and family, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Carleton, Miss Annie McNaughton, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Bisson, Mr. and Mrs. J. Wedderburn, Mrs. W. McIntosh, Mrs. and Miss Weatherspoon, Mrs. J. Dunstan, Mrs. J. Emery, Mr. and Mrs. S. Kain, Mrs. K. McDonald, Mr. and Mrs. P. Cahill.

AN APPROPRIATION

in 1907 for a

NEW CODDINGTON

GOOD AFTERNOON.

Mayor Thompson replies today to the open letter of Emery L. Crane, and the Daily Ledger submits both sides of the question to its readers without comment. Both make interesting reading.

The Houston Post claims that the peek-a-boo shirtwaist has made its appearence in Texas. That Baily fight has certainly warmed things up in the Lone Star State.

Anxiety about a board of appeal, so that real estate men may escape from the restrictions of the Building Ordinance, has already appeared, and there is a movement in West Quincy for exemption from fire district one.

The Daily Ledger proposes in a few days to publish a roll of honor of the churches and other institutions of the city which are free from debt, or which reduced their debt in the year 1906. We should like to hear this week from the treasurer of all the churches.

According to a ruling in the State Department foreign diplomatic representatives are no longer to be questioned along the color line. This must be a considerable relief to some of the South American members of the diplomatic corps, who are naturally a good deal in doubt on the subject themselves.

According to the current number of the Pittsburg Christian Advocate, Bishop McCabe will visit a conference of the Methodist Episcopal church on March 30, another on April 3, and several others later on. Still, the people who buried him a short time ago, will doubt his ability to keep the engagements.

In all charges and recriminations that have been made concerning the Brownsville episode, there is one point that seems to have been generally overlooked, and that is that the President has dealt very leniently by the offending soldiers in merely dismissing them from the army instead of following the course that would have landed many of the non-commissioned officers, not only of the disgraced companies but of the others companies as well, in Leavenworth military prison.

Congratulations to the people of Quincy that they have an up-to-date Hospital which is free from debt, and has a substantial surplus; also a large and increasing endowment, and other funds. The indications are that the institution will soon be self supporting. The large increase in receipts from patients and the growth of the endowment fund are encouraging. With no debt nothing will be needed for interest. The trustees have managed wisely and well.

REJECTION OF AID

May Result In Demand For Recall of Swettenham

IS MUCH TOO IMPERIOUS

Abuse of Subordinates and Discourtesy to Citizens Made Him Unpopular Even Before the Earthquake Episode

Kingston, Jam., Jan. 23.—The publication yesterday in The Daily Telegraph of Governor Swettenham's letter to Admiral Davis has greatly intensified the resentment of the residents against the governor for rebuffing the tenders of American assistance, and there is a movement on foot here to demand the recall of the governor. A small minority, mostly officials, support Swettenham, and their views were voiced by Rev. Mr. Graham, pastor of the Methodist church, who declared that the governor was justified in resenting the landing of armed Americans. "This is a British colony, not Cuba or a Spanish-American republic," he said.

A press correspondent sought Swettenham and spoke to him of the Davis incident. The governor said that he had not invited Davis to land sailors. Asked if he endorsed the action taken by Davis he replied: "That is a matter between myself and Rear Admiral Davis, to whom I must refer you."

The governor said that his reference in his letter to Davis to a tramp pillaging the house of a New York millionaire was merely a jocular parallel.

A meeting of the relief committees was held here yesterday to discover the precise conditions attending the difference between the governor and the admiral. At the close of this meeting, and after having read Swettenham's letter to Davis, Dr. Nuttall, archbishop of Jamaica, sought the governor to talk the matter over with him, saying that if he found the conditions warranted he would send a personal explanatory cablegram to President Roosevelt. The archbishop was unable to see the governor, owing to the latter's absence at headquarters.

Archbishop Nuttall said to the press correspondent that he greatly regretted that any action had been taken which might make the Jamaicans appear ungrateful for the generous aid of the United States, while, as a matter of fact, they welcomed it warmly. He said he approved the governor's desire to endeavor to inspire the Jamaicans with the sentiment of self-help, but that this was no excuse for the rejection of American aid.

"There yet remains much to be done to relieve the suffering of the people, to provide shelter for them, and to prepare for the task of rebuilding the city," the archbishop continued, "in all of which American aid would have been of great assistance." The archbishop said that Swettenham's action was merely a result of the dictatorial character of the governor. "His imperious manner, his frequent abuse of subordinates, and his discourtesy to citizens," said Nuttall, "have earned him great unpopularity, although otherwise he is regarded as a comparatively conscientious official."

Developments at Washington

Washington, Jan. 23.—An expression of gratitude from Governor Swettenham of Jamaica for the sympathy and aid extended by the United States to the victims of the disaster on that island and a graceful note from Esme Howard, the British charge here, conveying the regrets of Sir Edward Grey, the British secretary of state, on account of the incident, are among the developments in the controversy between the governor and Rear Admiral Davis. While Swettenham's message is couched in the most polite terms, the British authorities, nevertheless, are not through with the matter, so far as the governor is concerned.

An interesting chapter was added to the case when it became known that on Jan. 20, after Davis and his ships had sailed from Kingston, Brigadier General Wint, commanding the army of pacification in Cuba, on the request of the acting British minister at Havana, had sent to Kingston five hospital tents and flies, 28 wall tents and flies and 52 conical wall tents, all complete. These had been reported by the British authorities as urgently required. Secretary Taft was prompt to give his approval upon his arrival here from South Carolina, and the tents are now on their way to Kingston.

Swettenham Delays Report

London, Jan. 23.—The incident arising from the exchange of letters at Kingston between Governor Swettenham and Rear Admiral Davis now appears to be entering the waiting stage, as the imperial government, after doing all possible in the absence of advices from the governor of Jamaica, is obliged to defer further action until he reports.

In the absence of a report from the governor to his government, his dispatch to Secretary Root tends further to mystify the mind of the public, which finds it difficult to reconcile the governor's present recognition of the assistance rendered by the American squadron with the terms of his previous letter.

Tidbits from All Wards of City

The Iroquois club holds a minstrel show this week.

The annual meeting of the Wollaston Yacht club will be held at the club house Feb. 5.

The cold weather combined with the snow that fell Tuesday has made good sleighing. Owners of a borse and sleigh will doubtless improve the opportunity to take a spin.

Quincy lodge of Elks used its new ritual for the first time on Tuesday evening and initiated ten candidates. The members were very much pleased with the new work, likewise the candidates.

The public is invited to the Evangelistic service to be held in the Wollaston Congregational church, Monday evening, Feb. 4, under the auspices of the East Norfolk C. E. Union. W. W. Bustard of Boston will be the speaker.

The reception committee at the police ball Friday evening at Music hall will be Lieut. Daniel R. McKay, Sergts. Mark E. Hanson and David J. Barry, and Officers Patrick A. Milford, George A. Cahill and William S. Lyons. This is a sufficient guarantee that the guests of the evening will be well looked after.

TO INVESTIGATE FACTS

Senate Passes the Foraker Resolution on Brownsville

Washington, Jan. 23.—The senate passed the compromise Foraker resolution authorizing the committee on military affairs to investigate the facts of the affray at Brownsville, Tex., the nights of Aug. 13 and 14 last, "without questioning the legality or justice of any act of the president in relation to or connection with that affray."

This action came after the subject of the president's discharge of the negro troops had been under consideration almost daily since the first day of the present session of congress and every phase of the question had been discussed on all sides.

Before the adoption of the resolution several substitutes were voted down. One by senator Mallory, declaring that the president had authority for his course and acted justly, was tabled by a vote of 43 to 22. Another, by Senator McCumber, simply providing for an investigation without reference to the president in any manner, was tabled by a viva voce vote. A third, by Senator Culberson, simply endorsing the president's action and providing for no investigation, was tabled by a rollcall vote of 46 to 19. There was no record vote on the resolution adopted.

Senator Sutherland occupied the first three hours of the day's session, delivering his first speech in the senate. It was in behalf of the right of Reed Smoot of his own state to a seat. The Brownsville debate followed. Senators took the opportunity to explain the vote they should cast on the resolution.

The bill was filed by five other children of the aged millionaire and Judge McEwen issued the injunction and will hear the petition for the appointment of a receiver for the estate. The elder Jack is said to be mentally deficient, owing to his advanced age.

Plenty of Food and Clothing

New York, Jan. 23.—Kingston has a plentiful supply of food and clothing, according to a cablegram received from Governor Swettenham by the New York-Kingston relief committee. Kingston Sufferers Were Rebuffed by British Sea Captain

Americans Who Pleaded For Aid Were Treated With Great Incivility--"Bonds of Blood and Language" a Mockery

New York, Jan. 23.—American refugees from Kingston, arriving here on board steamer Prinz Eitel Friedrich, which sailed from the stricken city on Thursday afternoon last, the third day after the earthquake, are unanimous in condemning what they termed the "inactivity and utter inefficiency" of the English authorities on the island during the first days following the disaster. For three days, or up to the day the Prinz Eitel sailed, there was no semblance of order and nothing definite done in the matter of relieving the sufferings of many of the wounded.

The Prinz Eitel's passengers told of the great relief the arrival of the American squadron brought to the terror-stricken people and were amazed to hear of the rupture between Governor Swettenham and Admiral Davis.

The protest of the American refugees against the conduct and behavior of certain officials on the island was voiced at a mass meeting held on board the steamer Monday, when resolutions were adopted and addressed "To the general public and the international press." The resolutions follow:

"We, a company of American refugees of Kingston, Jam., Jan. 14-Jan. 17, 1907, on board the steamship Prinz Eitel Friedrich, herewith utter emphatic condemnation of the conduct and behavior in that period of certain officials of rank, specifically, Captain Parsons, commander of the British steamship Port Kingston, lying in the harbor of Kingston, and aboard which was Sir Alfred Jones, his superior, and other officials, basing our contentions on the following counts:

"First—That Captain Parsons declined to furnish food for one meal to the small number of Germans, led by Captain Richard Vahsel, Hamburg-American line, who prevented four docks from burning on the night of the 14th, among them the Port Kingston's own wharf.

"Second—That such American and other refugees as the small boats manned by Captain Vahsel and others gathered and lodged on Monday on board the Port Kingston, were summarily ordered ashore at 4 p. m. Tuesday to make room for English refugees, though women and children tearfully pleaded that they had neither food nor clothing on shore.

"Third—That the wounded of mixed nationalities were taken ashore at the same hour and left in a crude situation on the railway wharf until cared for by American naval authorities on Thursday, except such as were removed by train to Spanish Town or by relatives who found them.

"Fourth—That when Fr. O'Donovan of Boston, Gavin L. Payne of Indianapolis and Rev. H. F. Auld of Hatboro, Pa., took a petition to Sir Alfred Jones and Captain Parsons from the refugees, sleeping on trunks, sacks of coffee and the cargo-fouled planks of the Hamburg-American dock, to allow the said refugees to go on board the Port Kingston, then at her dock, and sleep on her bare, clean decks, where they would be safe from recurrent earthquake shocks, Captain Parsons refused with great incivility and, coming to the Hamburg-American dock, showed the party further discourtesy.

"Fifth—That in the three days, though Sir Alfred Jones and his party on board the Port Kingston had all the comforts of a large, well-equipped ship, no tender was made either of food, water, coffee, bedding or medical assistance.

"Sixth—That in three days, save for the above unpleasant visit of Captain Parsons, no official visit was paid either by the police, military or colonial authorities to the large body of American refugees on the Hamburg-American docks, the known centre for American refugees in Kingston, to offer succor or protection in any degree or even to ascertain the condition in which they were.

"Seventh—That in individual cases and minor ways we were made to feel the superiority and first claim of the English and found the much-talked-of 'bonds of blood and language,' when tested, to be a mockery and a diplomatic phantom.

"Therefore, we declare our resentment and condemnation, this utterance being the joint expression of the passengers in common assembly on board the Prinz Eitel Friedrich, Jan. 21, 1907."

The Americans had to wait for the arrival of the Prinz Eitel at Kingston and during that time all of them slept on the Hamburg-American dock.

"We lay down on the planks and on sacks, piles of which reached almost to the ceiling," said A. D. Hallman of Norristown, Pa., who was one of the 112 passengers on the vessel. "The men were glad enough to get any shelter, but with the Port Kingston lying nearby, her decks clean and empty, we thought the captain might take the women on board. He refused, however, as the resolutions state. The inactivity and inefficiency of the authorities was everywhere apparent."

MUST FOLLOW LAW

Employes of Navy Yards Cannot Work Overtime

TO LOSE DRYDOCK JOBS

Privately Owned Ships, Where a Rush Is Necessary, Are Not Excepted--Unaccepted War ships Come Under the Ruling

Boston, Jan. 23.—Because the navy department at Washington has given orders to the commandant of the Charlestown navy yard to follow strictly the provisions of the eight-hour law it is likely the local yard will lose a large amount of work which for a year or more has proved very beneficial. It is announced, in response to an inquiry sent to the departmental authorities, that no work will be allowed on private ships, it being held that this would be a violation of the law, the same as for work on warships.

The steamship Republic was to have been floated into the new drydock at high tide Sunday and 48 hours would have been necessary in order to do the work required on the ship's hull; that is to scrape and paint her and attend to the outside connections of the sea valves.

Some time ago the White Star line made the request for drydocking the Republic and permission was given. As soon as the matter of overtime work was called to the attention of the local officials, however, they were in doubt about what to do and a request for information was sent to Washington. The reply forbids work on the steamship to be continued for more than eight hours on any working day. The result is that the steamship company has about concluded to give up docking the Republic here.

Not only will the navy yard dock hands lose opportunities to make extra money, if the ship is not docked, but the government also will lose considerable money which it would have netted from the work. When a privately-owned ship is allowed to drydock at the navy yard the job is paid for by the owners at so much per ton for each day the ship is in drydock. The tonnage taken for this purpose is the gross, which for the Republic is 15,378 tons. The charge in this case of the White Star liner would be about $1000 a day.

Under the new ruling it would take twice as long to complete the work in hand as it would if the men were allowed to work double time, and, therefore, the company would be obliged to pay double. In other words, the White Star line would have to pay $2000 additional, and, worst of all, would lose the use of the steamship for two days longer. This in itself would be a considerable item to the company and would interfere with its sailing dates, it is said.

While the case in hand is comparatively small, yet the ruling is far-reaching in that it will prevent overtime work being done on the new battleships and cruisers which come here for the purpose of being cleaned and put in condition for their trial trips off the Maine and Massachusetts coasts. These ships have come here in large numbers during the past year and the work has been done in quick order whenever necessary. They are privately owned, not having been accepted and delivered to the United States by their builders, and so no overtime work can be done on them and the builders must either have it done at some other place or else allow for about double the length of time to prepare their ships. They, too, will have to stand the extra expense due to the much longer time required for the stay in the drydock.

Since the new drydock was opened, a year and a half ago, private ships (including several battleships and cruisers not yet accepted by the navy) have been docked, and in this way the crew has been kept employed pretty steadily. The work on naval ships is in itself not sufficient to keep the men employed for anywhere near their full time and so the extra work served to keep the crew organized in good working order.

Toronto Street Cars Not Running

Toronto, Jan. 23.—Dissatisfaction with the service of the Toronto street railway culminated in the city ordering the company to revert to the old routes. Police were stationed at the turning points on three lines. When the cars were stopped the motormen and conductors left the cars standing and went home. As a result of this "passive resistance" the city will attempt to take over the service and operate it for the benefit of the citizens.

Autoist Wagner Arrested

New York, Jan. 23.—Louis Wagner, who drove the winning car in last year's automobile race for the Vanderbilt cup, was arrested here for driving a car that did not carry a license tag. Search of Wagner at the police station revealed a revolver and knife and resulted in two additional charges of carrying concealed weapons being made against him. Bail of $1600 was required and furnished pending a hearing.

Receiver For Department Store

Buffalo, Jan. 23.—Judge Hazel has appointed John Conners receiver of the property of the People's Department Store company of Rochester as the result of the filing of a petition in voluntary bankruptcy. The petitioning creditors allege that the company owes debts amounting to $100,000.

WANTS WAITERS' NAMES

Moran Makes Sensational Move In Seeking a Prosecution

Boston, Jan. 23.—In a letter to Lieutenant Governor Draper, sent to the state house yesterday afternoon, District Attorney Moran requests Draper to furnish names of certain employes of the Exchange club, of which Draper is president, that they may be used in the prosecution for alleged violation of the excise law. The district attorney says in his letter that he expects that either the lieutenant governor will furnish the names or see the propriety of resigning his office.

For the past few weeks the district attorney has been trying to obtain evidence against the Exchange club because certain members of the Clover club, a dining organization, purchased liquor there during a banquet, in a method which Moran claims was a violation of the law. In the course of his investigation the district attorney finds it necessary to obtain the names of the waiters who served the liquor, but the officials of the club have refused to give them. He therefore calls upon Draper, as president of the Exchange club, to furnish these names and uphold the laws of the state.

Deadly Work With Stiletto

Portland, Me., Jan. 23.—Antonio Gimino, an Italian, aged 40, was stabbed to death last night at his home at 24 Franklin street. Paulo Celesto, aged 21, who boarded in Gimino's home, did the stabbing, it is alleged, and disappeared. Celesto's father said that he and Gimono came home from work and found his son sitting on the table, almost helpless from drink. He and Gimino coaxed him to get off the table and the latter put his arms about him to assist him. Just as he did so, Paulo, it is alleged, drew the stiletto and stabbed him.

Fraud Is Alleged

Cambridge, Mass., Jan. 23.—A charge of fraud was made against Frank E. Chandler, former president of the Malden and Melrose Gaslight company, in a bill of complaint filed in the superior court by the company. The charge is based upon an alleged purchase of land for the company by Chandler, and it is alleged that Chandler retained for himself a part of the sum of money appropriated by the company for the buying of the property.

Solons and Free Passes

Concord, N. H., Jan. 23.—The so-called free pass bill, a measure prohibiting members of the legislature from receiving free transportation from railroad companies, was taken up by both branches of the legislature, the senate passing the bill, while the house committee on judiciary gave a public hearing, but made no report. The bill will be considered in the house later.

End of Present-Giving

Hartford, Jan. 23.—Representative Dunn introduced a resolution in the legislature, which was immediately passed under suspension of the rules, whereby no gratuities will be given employes of the capitol and other attaches at the close of the session, a practice which has prevailed for several sessions past and which has cost the state large sums of money.

To Improve Freight Terminals

Boston, Jan. 23.—Vice President Byrne of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad states that the road intends to spend several million dollars in the improvement of its freight terminals in this city within a short time. The freight congestion in this city, he says, is due to the fact that shippers are allowed eight days to unload and load cars.

Boston Negroes Register a Kick

Boston, Jan. 23.—The action of President Roosevelt and the members of the senate, especially Senator Lodge, who supported the president in the Brownsville controversy, was hotly denounced last night at a mass meeting of negro citizens. A sum of money was raised to add to the fund for the defense of the discharged soldiers of the Twenty-fifth infantry.

Took Ninety-Seven Ballots

Gloucester, Mass., Jan. 23.—The deadlock in the common council over the election of a president, which has existed since the new city government came into office Jan. 1, was broken last night, George L. Darcy defeating James C. Hanrahan on the 97th ballot.

Smoke Nuisance Indictment

Boston, Jan. 23.—An indictment was found by the grand jury against the New York Central and Hudson River railroad charging the maintenance of a smoke nuisance in one of its buildings on Huntington avenue. The company entered a plea of not guilty.

Election Returns Were Incorrect

Hartford, Jan. 23.—Franklin L. Homan of New Haven is entitled to the seat in the senate as a result of a recount of the ballots cast in the fourth ward in that city. The count in the senate was behind closed doors.

Boston Short of Longshoremen

Boston, Jan. 23.—The loading and unloading of vessels here is seriously delayed through a dearth of longshoremen, and the freight managers are considering the plan of sending to other cities for assistance.

Fire Sweeps Southern Town

Charlotte, N. C., Jan. 23.—Fire, which had its origin in nearby woods, swept into the town of Hamlet, burning over a large portion of it. The big plant of the Carolina Distilling company, 17 loaded freight cars, eight residences and the Seaboard freight depot were destroyed. The loss is $75,000.

COMPROMISE PLAN

Only Facts of Brownsville Affray Will Be Investigated

VICTORY FOR PRESIDENT

Legality of His Action In Dismissing Troops Is Not to Be Questioned--Tillman Apology For Attempt to Be "Funny"

Washington, Jan. 22.—Few features of the spectacular were missing from the proceedings of the senate yesterday. The Brownsville affair was the subject of controversy, and the day began with the announcement of a compromise resolution which brought both Republican and Democratic senators together on the basis of ordering an investigation of the facts of the affray without bringing into question the authority of the president to dismiss the negro troops. The resolution had been submitted to and approved by the president at a conference Sunday.

When the "harmony" testimonials were all in, Senator Tillman took the floor and delivered a speech in reply to the recent criticism of himself by Senator Spooner. This speech began with a satirical picture of the senate as a minstrel show, which Tillman later said was his first and last attempt to be "funny," an attempt which, at its conclusion, brought a stinging denunciation from Senator Carmack in resentment of allusions to him. This was preceded by a serious reply from Spooner on the attitude taken by Tillman on the race problem, all finally resulting in a session of nearly two hours behind closed doors.

The secret session was followed by a brief open one in which Tillman made a profuse apology to Carmack, to all senators whom he had brought into his "first essay in the line of humor," and finally to the entire senate. "I very much regret that I ever undertook to be funny and I will never do so any more." Tillman then withdrew all he had said in his "funny essay" and said it would not appear in the record.

This apology was at once accepted by Carmack, who regretted he had questioned the motives of his friend, and he, too, withdrew words he had uttered in protest.

Mr. Foraker made a final attempt to get a vote on his resolution, but objection was made and the matter will be taken up today. Carmack remarked jocularly that there were not more than 15 or 20 senators desiring to talk, and Foraker, feigning seriousness, retorted hotly that the senator need not think the Democratic side of the chamber could monopolize the talking. Carmack explained that he was only trying to be funny, that it was his first attempt and he would never make another. As senators were laughing over this party sally, adjournment was taken at 6:15 o'clock.

During the entire day the galleries of the senate were crowded to their capacity and the debate was also listened to by seemingly a majority of the members of the house of representatives, who occupied all available seats and standing room in the chamber.

Unusually Cold In Europe

London, Jan. 22.—Intense cold prevails over eastern Europe, even as far south as Greece. In Russia the peasants are literally living on top of their spacious stoves and day and night enormous braziers are kept burning on the streets of St. Petersburg and troops are patrolling the streets to rescue frozen cab drivers and others. In Austro-Hungary a number of people have been frozen to death. Athens presents the unique spectacle of being covered with snow.

Speculation Brought Downfall

New York, Jan. 22.—Charles Zimmer, an employe of the Wells-Fargo company who disappeared a few weeks ago, has surrendered. It is alleged that a shortage of $14,000 in his books was discovered after he disappeared. "I haven't a cent left," said he. "All the money went in Wall street." He was held in $5000 bail for examination on a charge of grand larceny and went to prison in default of bail.

Anxiety Over Root's Visit

St. Johns, Jan. 22.—The visit of Secretary Root to Canada is exciting more or less concern here, and fear is expressed lest any accord between Canada and the United States diminish the vigor of Canada's support of Newfoundland's protests against the recent modus vivendi between Great Britain and the United States in the matter of the herring fishery.

Disagreement of Shea Jury

Chicago, Jan. 22.—The trial of President Shea of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters and 13 other defendants has ended, the jury failing to agree. When discharged the jurors stood seven for acquittal and five for conviction, after being locked in the juryroom for 55 hours. Arrangements will be made at once for a second trial.

Defeat Predicted For Dryden

Trenton, Jan. 22.—At a caucus of 36 of the 44 Republican members of the legislature John F. Dryden was declared the nominee for re-election to the United States senate. Dryden received 27 votes in the caucus, the rest being scattered. His opponents claim that they will defeat him at the joint legislative session.

SENATORIAL ELECTIONS

Bailey, Tillman, Elkins and Others to Remain In Office

Austin, Jan. 23.—Joseph W. Bailey was re-elected United States senator by a vote in the two branches of the legislature of 108 to 45. In the senate the vote was 19 in favor of Bailey and 10 against him. In the lower house it was 89 to 35.

Columbia, S. C., Jan. 23.—Ballots were taken in the senate and house of representatives for the re-election of B. R. Tillman as United States senator. The senate voted solidly for Tillman, while in the house one member declined to vote.

Raleigh, Jan. 23.—F. M. Simmons was re-elected United States senator, receiving 116 votes to 24 for Spencer B. Adams, Republican.

Charleston, W. Va., Jan. 23.—The legislature gave Stephen E. Elkins a big majority for re-election for the third time to the United States senate.

Salem, Or., Jan. 23.—Fred W. Mulkey (Rep.) was elected to the United States senate for the short term, and Jonathan Bourne, Jr., (Rep.) for the long term.

Cheyenne, Wyo., Jan. 23.—Francis E. Warren was re-elected United States senator, receiving 64 votes out of a total of 70.

Mrs Hartje's Heavy Expenses

Pittsburg, Jan. 23.—Attorney Ferguson, counsel for Augustus Hartje, the millionaire paper manufacturer, whose petition for a divorce from his wife was refused, has filed exceptions to the statements of the expenses of his wife. He objects to a bill of $19,094.26 for detectives, $4759.66 for handwriting experts, $2086.96 for the court stenographers, and numerous other items of expense petitioned for by his wife, the total of which amounts to nearly $30,000.

Extremely Cold In Europe

London, Jan. 23.—The cold wave which was recorded from the continent yesterday has reached Great Britain. The temperature fell 20 degrees. Almost the whole of Europe is now involved in this cold wave, a feature of which has been the suddenness of the fall in temperature in western Europe. The severity of the weather is causing intense discomfort and suffering. Vienna reports the lowest temperature recorded in 50 years.

Firemen Almost Suffocated

New York, Jan. 23.—Thirteen firemen, including Battalion Chief Stone and Captain Livingston, were overcome by smoke at a fire in the basement of a four-story toy factory last night. Two of the firemen would have been suffocated but for the assistance of comrades. The rescuers themselves fell unconscious as they reached the open air with the senseless forms of their fellow-firemen in their arms. The loss by the fire was small.

Many Suffering From Flood

Cincinnati, Jan. 23.—Twenty-four hours after the crest of the flood had passed this point the Ohio river had gone down one foot and the slow recession continues steadily. Colder weather is promised and the relief organizations have redoubled their efforts to care for those suffering from lack of shelter or food. Many instances of peculiar hardships are reported and new cases of need are hourly added.

Court Ready For Thaw Case

New York, Jan. 23.—The calendar of the criminal branch of the supreme court was cleared for the trial of Harry K. Thaw by the finding of a verdict in the "magic boots" case, which delayed the Thaw case when it was scheduled for a hearing on Monday. Matthew Hilgert, who was charged with larceny in practicing medicine by the aid of alleged "magic boots," was found not guilty. The Thaw case will come up today.

Japs Not Flocking to Philippines

Washington, Jan. 23.—That the tendency of Japanese emigration is not toward the Philippines is shown by statistics presented to the Philippine commission by W. M. Shuster, insular collector of customs. The report shows that but 277 Japanese went to the islands in 1906, as against 1235 in 1905, 2744 in 1904, and 1072 in 1903.

Japanese Laborers Barred

San Francisco, Jan. 23.—Steamer Alameda brought from Honolulu about 200 Japanese laborers. These were refused landing by Immigration Commissioner North, under instructions from Washington. It is presumed the Japanese came to Honolulu under contract and were then sent to Pacific coast points under contract.

New York, Jan. 23.—A deadlock in the board of aldermen over the election of a successor to Recorder Goff was broken by the election of Francis S. McAvoy, the candidate of the Democratic members. The Municipal Ownership members of the board switched their votes from their own candidate to McAvoy.

The routine program under the leadership of Miss Alice Keith Prescott was varied somewhat as it was found there was not enough of interest to tell of the men selected for the afternoon's study. The program was rounded out most delightfully by Miss Edith Randall who told some of her experiences abroad. Refreshments were served by the hostess. The club is talking of a club musical a little later in the season.

QUINCY WOMEN'S CLUB.

The snowstorm did not prevent a large gathering at the clubhouse on Tuesday afternoon of the Quincy Women's club. A musical afternoon always attracts members and in this instance the fine program was a special inducement to brave the elements. The program was arranged by the music committee of which Mrs. Emma Shufelt Moore is chairman.

The following program was given with the addition of several responses to encores:

Piano,—1st Movement, Op. 26 Schumann
Miss Alice L. Claflin.

Song,—My Dreams Tosti
Mr. Thomas N. Shufelt.

Reading,—Told in China Elizabeth T. Wade
Mrs. Cora Beach Kellogg.

Violin,—1st Movement from Concerto No. 22 Viotti
Mr. Walter E. Loud.

Piano,—Valse Caprice Op. 43 Alvah Glover Salmon
Miss Claflin.

Reading,—Long 'fore he knew who Santa Claus was James Whitcomb Riley
Mrs. Kellogg.

Song,—Slumber Romance Gounod
Mr. Shufelt.

Violin,—{a, Evening Song Schumann
{b, Spanish Dance Sarasate
Mr. Loud.

From beginning to end the program was one of pleasure; the variety; the pleasing selections and the artistic work of the participants combined to make the afternoon one of rare enjoyment.

Miss Claflin's piano solos were not only technically accurate but her touch was sympathetic and full of expression. The two pieces on the program were in different movement and both were appreciatively listened to. In both Miss Claflin was recalled, the applause being spontaneous and hearty, expressing keen enjoyment.

Mr. Shufelt was at once a favorite, his rich full baritone voice touching a responsive note in every heart. His selections were good and especially well suited to his voice. His is a voice that appeals; the expression and sympathy, clear intonation and enjoyment of singing, giving his listeners unusual pleasure, which was in a measure expressed in the hearty encores which followed his songs.

Mrs. Kellogg, reader, added still further to the enjoyment of the program; her recitation of, "Told in China," being capitally well done, as was James Whitcomb Riley's, "Long 'fore he knew who Santa Claus Was." Mrs. Kellogg was most enthusiastically applauded and her responses were also very much enjoyed.

As was to be expected Mr. Walter E. Loud was enthusiastically received, not only because he belongs to Quincy and club members are proud of him, but because he is an artist; a thorough musician, whose handling of the violin always gives pleasure. Tuesday afternoon was no exception and the audience was not content with the three solos on the program but were insistent in their applause. Mr. Loud plays with a masterly artistic touch that compels attention and it is always noted that the quiet intense enjoyment during his playing is followed by thoroughly appreciative applause. Mrs. Chandler W. Smith at the piano ably accompanied Mr. Loud rounding out the program.

After the concert nothing but most sincere praise was heard on every hand. It was an afternoon of enjoyment. Seldom does one have the pleasure of listening to an all star program.

During the short business meeting letters were read from the club president, Mrs. Bumpus, expressing regret that she could not be with the club and telling of her investigation of club and charitable work in California, especially visiting nursing. She hoped to be able to give the Quincy club some new points regarding visiting nursing as the California women were very wide-awake and progressive.

Announcement was made of gentlemen's night to be held at the club house on Tuesday evening, Feb. 19th, details of which would be given later.

Two more whist parties are to be held on Tuesday afternoons, Jan. 29th and Feb. 5th. The first one was very successful socially, and large parties are anticipated for the next two. The parties are arranged to create sociability in the club and for the better acquaintance of the members. Tickets may be secured from any member of the executive board or personally of Miss Prescott, treasurer.

Announcement was made by the Arts and Crafts department of a cake and candy sale at the home of Mrs. George G. Saville, Saville avenue, on Saturday afternoon, Jan. 26th, to raise funds for furnishing the arts and crafts room.

The Woman's exchange was well patronized at the close of the meeting.

The Literary class under the leadership of Mrs. Herbert J. Gurney meets at the club house Thursday mornings at 10.30. This class is found particularly enjoyable as well as instructive. It is open to any member of the club who cares to subscribe to the course or to each lecture.

KING'S DAUGHTERS

What So Ever Circle King's Daughters, of Wollaston, held a reception on Monday evening, at the home of Mrs. Edmund Seward Taylor of Hancock street, in the form of a birthday party.

The invitations were sent to members and their husbands a large number attending.

The admission was a corresponding number of pennies for the ages of those present, and a goodly sum was netted for the treasury. In fact the sum was such that we are led to believe many of the members did not count just right.

Miss Helen Comins and Miss Jennie Foster, acted as ushers, and in the receiving line with the hostess, were Mrs. Charles S. Adams, president; Miss Helen L. Foster, Mrs. Harry Appleton Stevens, and Mrs. Wendall Hull who welcomed the guests.

The Merrill orchestra dispursed pleasing music during a part of the evening after which the committee had arranged a miscellanious program, consisting of two piano duets by Mrs. Fuller and Mrs. Allen, tenor solos by Frank Packard of Boston, and several delightful piano selections by Miss Edith Holbrook.

The dining room, which was daintly decorated in pink and white, was in charge of Mrs. E. E. Jameson, and during the evening dainty viands were served, with Mrs. Badger, Mrs. Veiting Miss Foster and Mrs. Holbrook assisting. Mrs. G. H. York and Mrs. B. I. Cleveland poured. The evening passed all too quickly, and every one expressed themselves well pleased.

Bradley was up early the next morning, and his dressing was a sort of jig, for it was freezing cold. When he went downstairs it was evident that things had been going on. Miss Prissy came out of the sitting room, bearing a broom and with her "alpaca" gown covered with an apron. Miss Tempy, her curls done up in papers, was busy with the "tidy" for the sofa. Each of the sisters was nervous and excited.

Miss Prissy said a stiff little grace at the breakfast table, Miss Tempy had a large cup of "pepper tea" for herself and urged Bradley to partake, but the elder sister came to the rescue and gave him hot milk and water instead. After the meal was over and the dishes washed Miss Prissy went out to feed the hens, and Bradley went with her. The house, seen by day, was a big, square building, badly in need of paint. The roof was four sided and sloped upward to a cupola in the center. From its closely shut front door snow covered box hedges in parallel lines defined the path to the front gate, also locked and fastened and, like the front door, only used on occasions. There was a large tumbledown barn, with an empty pigpen back of the house and a henhouse and yard in the rear of the barn.

Next door to the left—on the right was a vacant field—was a small story and a half cottage, separated from the Allen household by a board fence. One of the boards in this fence had fallen down, and as Bradley, wading in Miss Prissy's wake, passed this opening he saw a girl, apparently about his own age open the back door of the house next door and look out at him. He wanted to ask who she was, but didn't feel well enough acquainted with his guide to do so just yet.

Just as the dozen hens and lonesome looking rooster were fed—Miss Prissy informed him that by and by looking after the poultry would be one of his duties—Miss Tempy's voice was heard calling excitedly from the kitchen door.

"Prissy," she screamed—"Prissy, come in the house quick! He's comin'! The cap'n's comin'!"

"My land!" exclaimed the elder sister wildly, and, her dignity forgotten, she almost ran to the house, followed by Bradley, who didn't understand the cause of the excitement.

"Oh, my sakes," ejaculated Miss Tempy as they entered the kitchen, "what made him come so early? You'll have to see him first, Prissy. I've got to fix my hair."

Miss Prissy rushed into the sitting room, wheeled a chair into place, set a tidy straight, laid the photograph album exactly in the center of the table instead of two inches from the edge and patted her own hair with her hands, dodging in front of the big gilt framed mirror as she did so. Then, as a smart knock sounded on the dining room door, she assumed her "company" smile and marched sedately to receive the visitor.

It was Captain Titcomb who had knocked, and after cleaning the snow from his boots on the "scraper" he entered the house, bearing two packages wrapped in brown paper.

"Well, Prissy," said the captain, laying down the packages to shake hands, "how d'you do? Didn't expect to see me in this port jest now, did you?"

"No, indeed, Cap'n Titcomb,' was the reply. "But we're real glad to see you all the same. Come right in. Take your things off. Bradley said he rode down with you in the coach last night. Dreadful storm we had, wasn't it? How's your health nowadays? Walk right into the sittin' room. You must excuse the looks of things. I've been sweepin'."

There was a good deal more, but when Miss Prissy stopped for breath the captain, who had thrown his cap and overcoat on a chair, replied that the storm was bad, that his health was good and that the room looked "first rate," so far as he could see. Then he held out his hand to the boy, who had seated himself on a chair close to the door, and said cheerily:

"Mornin', Brad. Well, how are you after your shake up last night? Wan't seasick after I got out, was you?"

Bradley grinned bashfully and stammered that he was "all right."

"Good! We had a rugged trip comin' over, Prissy. The old coach rolled so I felt like goin' on deck and shortenin' sail. Your new boy here's goin' to make a good sailor, I can see that. Where's Tempy?"

"Oh, she's upstairs for a minute. She'll be right down," answered Miss Prissy carelessly. "Tell me what brought you home so unexpected."

"Sprung a leak and had to lay the old hooker up for repairs. That's a specialty of my owners—repairs. They'd rather patch up for a hundred years than build new vessels. I—I—Brad, fetch me them bundles out of the dinin' room."

Bradley obediently brought the brown paper parcels, and the captain handed one of them to Miss Prissy, saying: "Here's a little somethin' I picked up over to New York, Prissy. I thought you might like it. I ain't got much use for such things myself."

The lady took the package and began to untie the string in a nervous manner, blushing a little as she did so.

"I know it's somethin' nice, Cap'n Ezra. You do buy the nicest things. It's real kind of you to remember me this way. Oh, ain't that pretty!"

The package contained a Japanese silk fan, with ivory sticks and a red tassel. Miss Prissy opened it and spread it out in her lap, exclaiming over its beauty, her face the color of the tassel.

"Oh, it ain't nothin'," said the captain. "I did a favor for a friend of mine that's skipper of a barkentine jest home from Hongkong, and he gave it to me. He had some stuff he'd brought for his daughter, and the duty on it would have been pretty expensive, so I fixed—but never mind that. I thought maybe you'd like it to carry to church in the summer time or somethin'. Why, hello, Tempy! How d'you do?"

The younger sister entered the room, her poplin rustling and every curl in place. She gushingly shook the captain's hand and said she was so glad to see him.

"Oh, Tempy," cried Miss Prissy, "jest look at this lovely fan Cap'n Titcomb brought me! Did you ever see anything so pretty?"

Miss Tempy exclaimed over the fan, but somehow her enthusiasm seemed a little forced. It may be the captain noticed this; at any rate, he picked up the second parcel and handed it to her, saying:

"Here's a little somethin' I brought for you, Tempy. I don't know's you'll like it, but"—

Miss Tempy's present also was a fan precisely like the other except that the tassel was pink. Miss Prissy's interest in her sister's gift was intense, but when it was discovered that in no important point were the fans dissimilar and that neither was better than its mate both of the ladies appeared to be a trifle disappointed, although they tried not to show it.

"We're so glad you've come, cap'n," said Miss Prissy, after the fans were laid on the table. "We've got so many things to talk to you about, and we want to ask your advice. Bradley, don't you think you'd like to go out into the dinin' room a little while?"

The boy, acting upon this decided hint, went into the dining room, and Miss Prissy shut the door after him.

"Now, Cap'n Titcomb," she began, "I s'pose you were awfully surprised to hear we'd took a boy to bring up? Well, you ain't any more surprised than we are to think we should do such a thing. But it seemed as if we jest had to or else give up bein' Christians altogether. I'll tell you how it was."

And she did tell him, beginning with the exact relationship between Bradley's mother and the Allens, expatiating upon the shiftlessness of the boy's father and how he "never saved a cent," nor even took out an insurance policy to provide for his son in case of his own death.

"But, mercy me," she exclaimed, lifting her hands, "what on earth we'll do with a boy is more'n I know. What shall we do?"

"Bring him up in the way he ought to go, I guess," replied the captain calmly. "Send him to school first thing. How is he off for clothes?"

"Hasn't got any that are fit for anything but the rag bag," replied Miss Prissy with decision. "And that's another thing. Who's goin' to buy 'em for him? I'm sure I don't know what a boy needs to wear any more than a cat."

"I'll buy his fit out, if you want me to," said the captain. "Take him down to Weeks' store right now, if you say the word."

"Oh, I wish you would. You pay Mr. Weeks, and I'll pay you."

They pressed the captain to stay for dinner, or at least to return for that meal, but he declined, promising, however, to dine with them before he went back to his vessel.

"Come on, Brad," he said, entering the dining room; "you and me's goin' on a cruise downtown."

Bradley put on the shabby overcoat and cap for the last time and walked down to the back gate and along the sidewalk with the captain.

Meanwhile Miss Tempy, seated in the rocker by the window and holding a fan in each hand, was examining them with the greatest care.

"Prissy," she said at last in a solemn tone, "they're jest exactly alike."

"Yes," said her sister, with a stifled sigh, "they're jest alike."

(To be continued.)

RAILROAD HEARINGS

West Quincy Men Favor Uniting The Granite and Shawmut Branches

On Wednesday forenoon two matters of special importance to Quincy were heard at the State House. One was the bill for the charter of the Boston, Quincy and Fall River Bicycle railway company and the other was the bill to give better connection to the Granite branch in Quincy.

E. Moody Boynton was the first and principal speaker at the first-named hearing, which was before the committee on street railways.

It will be remembered that the last legislature refused to grant Boynton's petition for further extension of time for the construction of his road and the charter has lapsed. Now he wants it revived. It was a familiar, but graphic and interesting story which he told, about his spending his large fortune to demonstrate the practicability of his idea; how it had been admitted by the best civil engineers, in writing over their own names, to be practicable; how he had the indorsement of August Belmont and other great capitalists; how the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad had opposed him and how he had not been given anywhere near the favors shown by the legislature to the steam roads.

The other case was presented by Col. J. H. Benton, Jr., council for the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad company. The Ledger has already printed the bill proposed.

Col. Benton described the benefit to accrue to the road and to the public from the contruction of this connecting link, between the Granite and Shawmut branches, showing how it would relieve congestion.

He was followed by ex-Representative Fallon of Quincy, who remarked that he always doubted what Col. Benton might support, but in this instance, he had no doubt that he was right, and he hoped that the petition would be granted.

After him spoke Rev. Ambrose F. Roach of West Quincy, saying that he represented the popular feeling in favor of the petition. Now the people live on a single track branch where all the trains but one are accommodation, and though they are only eight miles from Boston, it takes from 28 to 30 minutes to reach that city.

Wilbur F. Lakin of West Quincy said that the improvement would give the people more trains, running a shorter distance and would avoid a dangerous curve near Montclair.

When the opposition, if any, was called for, ex Representative Frank W. Thayer of Dorchester said that he did not appear in opposition, if the bill was really to avoid blockades and improve the service, as had been been described, but if it was what he had been told it was to be, then he did oppose, for he had been told that the real purpose was to use the line through Dorchester for freight purposes, so that at all hours of day and night there would the running of freight trains and the whistling of engines. He should object to that, and if that were the purpose, the people of Dorchester ought to be allowed to appear and object.

A member of the committee said that the hearing had been advertised in papers in Quincy and Boston. Mr. Thayer replied that if the bill were for freight trains, than the hearing ought to have been advertised in the Dorchester Beacon, so the people could protest. The hearing was closed.

American Benefit Society.

Wollaston lodge of the American Benefit society held its regular meeting at Brasee hall, Tuesday evening, with a good attendance of members. The business of the lodge was entered into with much zeal by all present, showing that the members are interested in the welfare of the society. Two applications for membership were received.

The "Donkey Party" brought forth much laughter, as donkey parties generally do.

The next meeting, which is the anniversary of the order, will be celebrated, to which invitations will be given to friends of the members, also to the officers of the Supreme lodge of Boston.

Milton Rector Called to Ohio

Milton will be sorry if the time has come when St. Michael's Episcopal church must lose its rector. Rev. Theodore Irving Reese has had a call from Trinity church, Columbus, Ohio, and will announce his intention of accepting or not on Sunday, though it is understood that he has given the call the most favorable consideration.

Trinity church, Columbus, is one of the oldest and most influential parishes in the diocese of Southern Ohio, and Bishop Vincent considers the field a most promising one for a young and energetic clergyman, such as Mr. Reese has shown himself since being at Milton.

Rev. Mr. Reese was graduated from Harvard University and also from the Episcopal Theological school. He began his work at Milton as a layman in 1896 and as rector he has served the parish of St. Michael for ten years. When he first entered upon his work there the parish numbered eight families; today it has 300 communicants, and in addition to building up his own parish he has charge of a flourishing mission, the Church of Our Saviour at East Milton.

Rev. Mr. Reese has just returned from Columbus, where he looked over the field carefully and had several conferences with Bishop Vincent.

Quincy Coliseum.

Over 800 people witnessed the starting of the big six days' race at the Coliseum Wednesday night. Sharply at 10 o'clock the race started, Frank Tully taking the lead with William Maloney a close second and eight men following resulting as follows: Maloney, 123; Tully, 123; Burns, 121; Graut, 120; Schofield, 116; Fontoni, 112; Barstow, 108; Johnson, 100; Chartier, 77 and Grady 16.

Tonight there will probably be a hot contest between Maloney and Tully as both men are tied and Burns who is third will probably make fast time. Skaking seven until 10. Friday night will appear Master George Morton the world's greatest boy wooden shoe dancer and illustrated songs concluding with the big race.

—Andrew Carnegie's latest endowment comes to Chelsea as a gift of $1000 toward the purchase of an organ for the Mt. Bellingham Methodist church, now building on the site of the edifice destroyed by fire a year ago.

COMPANY B INSPECTED

General Gary Compliments The Boys and Major Geekie

Company B. of Atlantic of the United Boys' Brigade of America were publically inspected Wednesday evening at Atlantic Music hall. Mayor Thompson, owing to a severe cold, sent a letter of regret for his inability to be the speaker of the evening, which place was well filled by Brig. Gen. H. H. Gary of Winthrop who gave an interesting digest of the origin and aim of the Brigade. He cited the mistaken idea people have in believing the organism to be more for show than for any real good. But as a matter of fact, the latter is accomplished by the former. Gilt buttons and the roll of drums give the boys inspiration and pride. The Brigade is helpful in other ways also. It teachers the boys to mind first and argue afterward.

Last summer at Philadelphia, Gen Gary said there were representatives of 50,000 boys and men ranging from 12 to 40 years, members of the Brigade. He said that when these young men attended church there was marked contrast between them and the audience and the contrast favored the boys.

Another important fact was noted: that outside of New York, Massachusetts was the best set of soldiers. The Boys' Brigade was started by one Mr. Smith of Scotland. It originated by a troublesome Sunday school class setting Mr. Smith's mind in active state to keep the lads out of mischief. He himself was a member of the Queen's militia and it dawned upon him that drill would be just the thing for his class. Thus the movement that has extended all over the United States began in 1883. It reached Massachusetts in 1892.

Following Mr. Gary's address, was a Bible drill, led by Rev. J. G. Miller of Memorial church. The responses of the boys were clear, true and promptly given.

Miss Ruth Putnam of Dorchester gave several very bright recitations and was repeatedly encored.

The little McDonald sisters of Norfolk Downs delighted everyone by the execution of three charming little solo dances, the highland fling, the sailors' hornpipe and the sword dance.

The Brigade drilled excellently. A few of the boys were a bit young to feel the importance of their position, and were slightly abashed by the audience, but the majority did credit to the untiring efforts of the officers. The commands were clearly given and the physical drill was excellently carried out.

The hall was crowded, but the audience were somewhat impolite in their manner of appreciation and mingled with their applause, whistles shrill enough to do credit to the Wild West. It may be that the boys who looked on were carried away by their enthusiasm, but maybe if the time come for them to enter the brigade they will appreciate how such rude demonstration of interest sounds from the stage.

The policeman present was not of the secret service for his boots announced him by a melodious squeaking that caused not a few smiles. He was honest in his duty, however.

The program closed with a rendering of the Star Spangled Banner. Special mention may be made of Major William Geekie, who made the announcements and shouldered the responsibility. He did credit to the Brigade and was complimented by Gen. Gary on his success.

Quincy Man Missing Three Weeks

Mrs. Victor E. Prout, of 45 Granite street, asks the aid of the newspapers to help find her husband who left Quincy three weeks ago. When he left home it was to go to Fall River for work.

Mr. Prout, who is a son of Richard Prout, is a stone cutter by trade. He is 45 years of age and about 5 feet, 10 inches tall, and has a moustache. When last seen he wore a dark suit, blue overcoat and derby hat.

About eight years ago he had a serious illness, and has acted queerly at times since then. Besides his wife there are three small children in destitute circumstances.

Norfolk County Law Library

The removal of the Registry of Deeds and Registry of Probate from the Court House at Dedham, has made room for several improvements. Some have already been noted. Now the Norfolk county law library is in new quarters. The 7500 volumes are now in four spacious rooms instead of one as formerly.

In the first room, shelves dedicated to the Supreme Court reports of Indiana, Illinois, Alabama and Arkansas are conveniently arranged; in the rear are those of California, Colorado, Connecticut, Delaware, Florida and Georgia. On the first cabinet are reports of Iowa, Kansas, Wisconsin, West Virginia, Virginia, Vermont, Texas and Tennessee; on the second cabinet, Ohio, Pennsylvania, North and South Carolina, Kentucky, New York Superior Court and New York miscellaneous; on the third, Missouri, Nebraska, New Hampshire, Nevada, New Jersey and New York Supreme Court reports, and the New York Court of Appeals, New York Chancery and New York Supreme Court, appelate division; on the fourth Massachusetts, Maine, Maryland, Michigan, Minnesota and Mississippi. On shelves fronting Pearl street are Massachusetts textbooks, sets of the Revised Laws and the Acts and Resolves.

In the second room are numerous encylopaedias and digests of all the states. This room is occupied by Miss Florence M. Chute, who has charge of the library. In a third room are a set of Louisiana reports and a plentiful supply of textbooks; in the last room, the shelves are devoted to the United States Supreme Court and English reports, Federal cases, Federal reports, Federal decisions, American decisions and American State reports.

Visit to Jail.

Upwards of sixty members of the Board of Trade and friends accepted the invitation on Wednesday of Representative Sandberg to visit the jail at East Cambridge, and the plant of the North Packing Co. The party left Quincy on the 12.13 train and returned in the early evening. The trip was a very enjoyable one.

Another Fine

Abraham Ginsberg was in court Monday and fined $10 each upon two complaints, charging him with collecting junk without a license and buying junk from a minor. The $20 in fines, however, did not seem to phase him any, for Tuesday he continued the business and again he fell into the hands of Officer Hinchon. In court he was called upon to pay another $10 fine.

ANOTHER CHURCH

Report of Surplus in Account for Current Expenses

The annual meeting of the Protestant Episcopal society of Christ church, Quincy, was held in the parish house on Wednesday evening. The meeting was very enthusiastic and was called to order by the rector, Rev. W. E. Gardner at 8 o'clock.

Besides transacting the usual amount of regular parish business, the election of officers also took place. The result of the election was as follows:

Warden for 2 years, — George H. Brown.

Clerk for 1 year,—James Smith Jr.

Treasurer for 1 year, — Elmer F. Ricker.

Five vestrymen for 2 years,—E. W. Newcomb, Dr. A. B. Packard, H. E. Ricker, A. C. Smith and C. A. Wilson.

Three delegates to Diocesan convention,—George H. Brown, Elisha Packard and W. L. Thomas.

Delegates to Archdeaconry,—George H. Brown, W. H. Deacon and Elisha Packard.

Reports were received from the rector, Sunday school superintendent, treasurer and the various guilds and clubs connected with the church. All the reports were of such a favorable nature that the church has a decidedly bright outlook for the coming year.

Treasurer Elmer F. Ricker reported for the year. A summary of the report is here given:

Total expenditures for the year, $4,594.19.

Surplus in current expense account, $140.27.

Unpaid balance of debt on rectory, $1,700.00

The budget of 1907 made provision for an increase in income and expenditures of $900.00

Reports from the various organizations were given as follows:

Sunday School, by W. L. Thomas, Superintendent.

Braintree Guild, by J. H. Stedman, President.

NEW CODDINGTON

GOOD AFTERNOON.

There is not the slightest use in anyone attempting to whistle up a war cloud between the United States and England over the churlish performance of Gov. General Swettenhan of Jamaica, who has just ordered Admiral Davis and his American squadron away from the earthquake stricken island, where they were doing their best to relieve the suffering in the cause of common humanity. According to all the facts in the case so far as they have yet developed, Admiral Davis sailed into what was left of the harbor at Kingston, Jamaica, and without waiting for orders from anyone landed blue jackets to help preserve order and doctors and medical supplies to help out the scanty store in the overworked hospital.

Withal he courteously placed himself at the disposal of Gov. Swettenham, announcing that he was there to do whatever he needed most to be done, pending the arrival of the relief ship Celtic, which was already on its way from the United States. Almost anyone might suppose, under the circumstances, that the Governor-General would have welcomed these friendly offices. But what did he do? With characteristic British insularity he ordered Admiral Davis and his marines back on shipboard, as though an invading force from an unfriendly power, and added insult to injury by an unkind and untrue letter in which he as good as accused Admiral Davis of lying and told him that he needed no assistance from the outside.

SHONTS RESIGNS

Leaves Canal Job to Become Transit Company President

"RED TAPE" IN SENATE

Frequently Caused Chairman to Express Dissatisfaction, but He Remained In Office For Friendship's Sake

Washington, Jan. 24.—The resignation of Theodore P. Shonts as chairman of the isthmian canal commission was announced at the White House, having been tendered to the president and accepted by him Tuesday, according to correspondence made public. It will take effect not later than March 4, Shonts having been elected yesterday as president of the Inter-Borough Metropolitan company, which controls the Rapid Transit and many surface lines in New York.

No announcement was made as to who will succeed Shonts as chairman of the commission, but it is learned authoritatively that headquarters will be removed from Washington to the isthmus and that a high salaried chairman to serve in that capacity alone will not be named. This being admitted, it follows that John F. Stevens, the engineer in charge of the construction of the canal, will not be made subordinate to another official on the isthmus, and it is regarded as a certainty that Stevens will be named as chairman of the commission and will assume duties as such in connection with his post as chief engineer.

Secretary Taft announced that Shonts' resignation was voluntary and called attention to the fact that, as the work of organizing the commission had been completed and that as Shonts had been brought here to assume the executive duties necessary to such organization, his continued presence is not absolutely essential.

Shonts became chairman of the canal commission on April 3, 1905, coming from the presidency of the Clover Leaf route, which title he held for some time after taking up the canal work. This connection, together with the fact that Shonts spent little time on the isthmus, caused considerable dissatisfaction in the senate. The two objections thus raised contributed to the failure of the senate last session to confirm the nominations of canal commissioners and they have not since been confirmed.

The failure of the nominations in the senate, however, had nothing to do with Shonts' decision to resign, except insofar as the incident caused him to chafe under the restraint of the "red tape" through which he was compelled to work by reason of the senate canal committee not being in harmony with the commission. He frequently expressed dissatisfaction with conditions and had said that were it not for his friendship for the president and Secretary Taft he would resign and again take up railroad work, where he "would not have to ask permission to buy a lead pencil."

In removing headquarters of the commission from Washington to the isthmus extensive offices here will be abandoned. In the Washington office there has been the secretary of the commission, with a definite line of work, the chief of the office in active charge in the absence of the chairman, the auditing and purchasing departments, as well as a number of other branches of the canal work. A large force of clerks has been maintained. It is obvious that some of these departments will have to be retained, but it is likely that they will be placed under a bureau of the war department, possibly again under the insular bureau.

The students used hatchets to break up furniture, chandeliers and various ornaments, wrecked the conference hall and offices of the university and several class rooms, and piled a number of desks and the smashed furniture in the quadrangle. One hundred arrests were made.

SEVERE COLD WAVE

Sends Mercury Away Down and Insures a Good Ice Crop

Boston, Jan. 24.—The stiffest cold wave since the middle of December swept into New England last night and sent the thermometer in this city down to 5 below zero at midnight with every prospect of reaching several degrees below that today. The cold wave was welcomed as insuring the safety of the ice crop, which had been in a precarious condition for nearly a month.

Thermometers north of the city recorded unusual figures. The following were some of the records at 2 a. m: Augusta, Me., 28 below; Lewiston, Me., 20 below; Bangor, Me., 15 below; Manchester, N. H., 19 below; Boston, 8 below; Portland, 2 below.

Mississippi Negro Lynched

Jackson Miss., Jan. 24.—Henry Bell, a negro, was lynched at Greenwood, the home of Governor Vardaman. The negro assaulted Mrs. Graves of that place several months ago, and had been in the Greenville jail. Last night he arrived at Greenwood in charge of a deputy sheriff and while that officer was taking Bell from the train to the jail he was surrounded by a mob which took Bell and hanged him to a railroad bridge.

San Juan, P. R., Jan. 24.—A special train conveying Governor Winthrop and others from San Juan to attend the celebration of the completion of the railroad connecting San Juan and Ponce was derailed near Quebradillas because of a defective truck on one of the cars. The coach containing the governor's party stopped within six inches of the edge of a slope 1400 feet high. No one was injured.

St. Johns, Jan. 24.—The captain and mate of the American vessel Vigilant, which was carried away from Bay of Islands by the ice, were saved by a rescuing party. The two men had spent 36 hours on a deserted island, without food and shelter, and suffered intensely from the cold. "A BLINDED BIGOT"

Swettenham Thus Referred to by a Kingston Paper

JAMAICA IS ASHAMED

Has Lost Confidence In His Power of Guidance--Lord Archbishop Cables Thanks to President For Aid Rendered

Kingston, Jam., Jan. 24.—The Daily Telegraph, in a scathing editorial article, arraigns Governor Swettenham as follows:

"We would be unfaithful to our duties as exponents of public opinion if we failed to call attention to the extraordinary conduct of his excellency in the present crisis. His general behavior at a moment of great peril and difficulty was unworthy a responsible British official and even a cultured English gentleman. His letter to Rear Admiral Davis was a production of which he ought to be ashamed and of which the Jamaicans are ashamed.

"The United States is a friendly nation, their bone is British bone and their flesh is British flesh, and no one but a blinded bigot would have refused to admit American landing parties. The men from the American warships did magnificent work in removing the debris and recovering bodies and the naval surgeons performed an equally splendid service.

"The action of the governor was absolutely reprehensible. We want a man who does not spend his time riding about the city, cursing officials who are endeavoring to work loyally. The people of this community have lost confidence in his power of guidance and are indignant at his autocratic, bullying and insulting manner."

Most Rev. Dr. Enos Nuttall, lord archbishop of the West Indies, having heard here that King Edward had cabled deprecating the idea that the people of Jamaica should accept foreign assistance, said he trusted the king had not given utterance to this sentiment, and that if he had he (the archbishop) did not approve of it. The archbishop said also that he believed a great mistake had been made when Swettenham rejected the offers of American aid. The archbishop sent a cablegram to President Roosevelt yesterday, thanking him warmly for the assistance of the American navy.

The relief committees are actively engaged in sending refugees into the country and distributing food and money to those who are unable to leave the city.

Bishop Hendricks of Colon arrived here yesterday on board the steamer Advance, which brought from Colon 100 tons of food and $800 contributed to the Jamaican sufferers by the officials of the canal and merchants of Panama. Swettenham consented to accept these supplies, waiving the customs dues. The Advance will return to Colon with refugees.

The French cruiser Jurien de la Graviere and a Haytian gunboat have arrived here. The latter vessel offered to render aid, but this suggestion was declined by the governor.

Incident Dismissed at Washington

Washington, Jan. 24.—The president has finally dismissed the incident connected with the refusal of Governor Swettenham of aid from Admiral Davis, as is shown in the following letter, made public at the state department, addressed by Acting Secretary Bacon to Charge Howard:

"I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your note by which you communicate the substance of the instructions received by you from Sir Edward Grey in reference to the Jamaica incident.

"I hasten to assure you, on behalf of the president, that this government will pay no heed whatever to the matter, and very much appreciates the frank and ready courtesy and consideration shown in this dispatch by Sir Edward Grey.

"I can only repeat to you, in this more formal way, what I said to you personally last evening, assuring you of the president's sincere appreciation of the cordial spirit shown by your government. It is especially gratifying to the president to feel that it has been possible for this country to show in any practical way, however small, its friendship to a community of your people in a time of such suffering and need."

Swettenham Reports Incident

London, Jan. 24.—The colonial office is now in possession of official advices from Governor Swettenham concerning the exchange of letters between himself and Rear Admiral Davis, but the extent of these advices and whether or not they contain an explanation, an apology, or extenuating circumstances, has not been disclosed.

The fact that Swettenham wrote the letter to Davis having been established, there remains only to determine the official formalities, and the indications are that the matter will be handled through the usual diplomatic channels and that the correspondence will be made public in a blue book.

Kingston Is Again Shaken

Kingston, Jam., Jan. 24.—Two earthquake shocks, the heaviest since the destructive ones of Jan. 14, were felt here at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Several buildings were thrown down and there was great alarm among the people. No one was injured.

THAW TRIAL IS ON

The Talesmen Are Subjected to Sharp Questioning

TWO JURORS ARE CHOSEN

Defendant's Mood Varies From Lively Interest to Listlessness --How His Wife and Other Members of Family Appeared

New York, Jan. 24.—The curtain was rung up yesterday for another act in the tragedy of real life known as the Thaw-White case. The story of the play was brought down to the grim courtroom scene, where 12 men are to sit and render a judgment which may mean either the taking of another life, this time by the state, or a determination that Harry K. Thaw was justified in the claim that he shot the man who had "ruined his wife." There may be a third decision, that Thaw was insane at the time he committed the crime—"emotional insanity" it was called yesterday—but there will be no opportunity to say that Thaw is now a lunatic.

The long awaited trial began shortly before 10:30 o'clock yesterday and when an adjournment for the day had been taken at 5 p. m. there were two jurors in the box. A third juror had been accepted and sworn, but he was excused in the closing moments of the day's session, the reason for the action being of a private nature and not made public. Nineteen of the 200 talesmen who were summoned were examined before the day closed. Nearly all of them seemed anxious to serve and a very small percentage was excused for cause. The challenges in nearly every instance were of a peremptory character and about evenly divided between the prosecution and the defense.

The examination of the first talesman was followed with the keenest interest, as it was thought the line of questioning by the attorneys for Thaw would develop the character of the defense they are to set up. There was disappointment in this respect. District Attorney Jerome, who personally conducted the examinations, asked each talesman in turn if he would be influenced by any so-called higher unwritten law to the exclusion of the actual laws of the state as they would be laid down by Justice Fitzgerald. There was none to say he would not accept the court's ruling as to all questions of law, whether they agreed with the law or not.

On the question of insanity as an excuse for crime, Jerome explained to each talesman that the law excused only those persons who were laboring under such a defective reason as not to know the nature or the quality of the act committed, or even to know that the act was wrong.

"That is the law," declared Jerome. "Now would you import into your conclusion any imaginary form of insanity you might have in mind or that might be suggested to you, to the exclusion of the law as it will be laid down to you by the court?" Again the talesmen said in turn that they would be guided solely by the court.

Thaw's counsel entered objections only to certain forms of questions propounded by Jerome along this line. They declared they had no objection to the questions in principle. Every talesman examined said he had formed or expressed an opinion in the case. All admitted, however, that their opinions were based on newspaper reports and these had been so conflicting from time to time as to make their opinions susceptible of change by the actual evidence.

Thaw sat during the day at the table set apart for his counsel. At times he seemed to take a lively interest in the examination of the men summoned to decide his fate, leaning well forward and holding his hand to his ear to catch every word that might fall from the lips of the talesmen. Again he would seem listless and his eyes, deep set and having something of a stare, roved about the courtroom. His face was pallid, doubtless due to his seven months' confinement in the Tombs. Thaw is fully six feet in height and is quite thin. He wore a dark blue sack suit and had with him a plaid ulster coat.

Just behind the prisoner sat the several members of his family gathered here for the trial. Mrs. William Thaw, the prisoner's mother, was dressed plainly in black and wore a heavy black veil, her white hair showing in striking contrast against the sombre costume. She sat with her eyes fixed upon her son and spoke but seldom to her children about her. During the long afternoon session she threw back the veil better to see and study the faces of the prospective jurors as they were called to the stand.

The Countess of Yarmouth, who was Miss Alice Thaw, after she had become more accustomed to her surroundings, pushed aside a heavy veil which had hidden her features. There was a decided murmur in the courtroom as the spectators noted the striking resemblance between the countess and the prisoner. Mrs. George L. Carnegie, another sister of the defendant, came in with the countess.

There was a lively craning of necks to catch the first glimpse of Mrs. Evelyn N. Thaw around whom the storm of the great trial will rage. She appeared with May McKenzie, the actress, who has been her sole companion since the night of the tragedy, when the artists' model wife of Stanford White's slayer fled to Miss McKenzie's apartments. Not once during the day did the younger Mrs. Thaw remove her veil, but her features were plainly discernible and there was about them much of the beauty which caused her to be so wildly sought as a model by noted artists. Her dark mass of hair made a pretty setting for the ivory of her cheeks. She seemed to take the keenest interest in every question put to the talesmen. Hardly once during the day did Harry Thaw take his eyes from the front and look at his relatives. His brother, Edward Thaw, and brother-in-law, George Carnegie, sat almost at his elbow.

Aside from the members of the family, there were only four women in the courtroom and these were newspaper writers. The attendance was confined to newspaper people and jury talesmen.

The jurors who remained in the box when the day was done, and who were turned over to a bailiff who will have them in charge until the end of the trial, were Deming B. Smith, a retired manufacturer of umbrellas, and Charles H. Feoke, an employing teamster. Both men are married and have families. Smith is about 55 years of age and Feoke 45 years.

EVILS OF CHILD LABOR

Beveridge Tells of Policy Which Is Killing American Children

Washington, Jan. 24.—Senator Beveridge of Indiana addressed the senate in support of his bill prohibiting interstate commerce in the product of child labor.

He pleaded against the continuance of a policy which he said was killing hundreds of thousands of American children and undermining the stability of the race and the country.

Quoting various reports and works, he told of one little girl at Atlanta who said: "When I works nights I'se too tired to undress when I gets home, and so I goes to bed with my clothes on me."

"Another little girl in Paterson, N. J., works in the steaming room of a flax mill, standing barefooted in pools of water twisting coils of wet hemp. She was 'dripping wet, and in the coldest evenings in winter little Marie and hundreds of other little girls must come out of the superheated steaming rooms in just that condition.'

"Owen R. Lovejoy, assistant secretary of the national child labor committee, thus describes what the breaker boy's work means—to sit bent over a stream of coal, which pours out a cloud of dust so thick that the light cannot penetrate it; to be responsible for the exact separation from the coal of all slate and rock, depending often entirely on the sense of touch; to endure the incessant rattle of deafening gigantic machinery; to be conscious that the boss stands behind with his stick or a small piece of coal to prompt to duty if * * * backache induces a moment's forgetfulness; to have the hands cut and crippled and hardened by contact with the rough stones and bits of coal; to learn to control the nausea caused by swallowing quantities of coal dust and by feeling that one's throat and lungs are never clean."

This action was taken by a vote of 53 to 21.

GREAT LOTTERY RAIDS

Secret Service Men Secure Valuable Information at Boston

Boston, Jan. 24.—A number of United States secret service officers raided houses in Somerville, Lynn, East Boston and Roxbury in connection with the efforts of the government authorities to suppress lotteries. Several thousand tickets, as well as drawing lists, were seized, and a number of arrests were made.

The disclosures made by the raids show the business in Greater Boston approximated $10,000 a month. Although the raids indicate only that figure, the secret service agents are of the opinion that the actual figure is nearer $25,000 monthly, as the Mexican national lottery and a number of smaller Central American lotteries are known to have secret agencies in and around Boston.

The information disclosed regarding agents, distributors, methods of communication and volume of business is very valuable and will be used, it is understood, for additional raids and for further prosecutions.

City Government In a Tangle

Meriden, Conn., Jan. 24.—The Republicans, who have a majority of two in the city council, placed none but Republicans on the principal council committees and empowered the finance committee to hire legal counsel for the city for the ensuing year. Mayor Reilly (Dem.) last night vetoed both resolutions and then produced a list of council committees prepared by himself, which he said would be the only list of committees that he would recognize in future. The city now has two sets of council committees and a deadlock is the result, as no action requiring the expenditure of money can be effective without the approval of the mayor.

Narrowly Escaped Disaster

Greenfield, Mass., Jan. 24.—A broken flange of a wheel of the locomotive pulling a passenger express train caused the engine to leave the track just as it went on the bridge over the Deerfield river, six miles west of here, last night. The engine plowed along on the sleepers and over the bridge for probably 200 feet, but none of the passenger coaches left the track. When it left the rails the engine was running slowly or it would surely have gone off the bridge into the river, 40 feet below. No passengers or trainmen were injured.

Hits Liquor Sales In Maine

Portland, Me., Jan. 24.—No liquors marked c. o. d., whether intended for illegal sale or not, may be lawfully delivered in this state if congress gives passage to the bill on which the house committee on judiciary decided yesterday to make a favorable report. This bill makes liquors in interstate commerce subject to the laws of the states into which they are shipped and provides that a c. o. d. delivery of liquor in a prohibition section is the same as a sale at the place of delivery.

Marine Showed Great Nerve

Boston, Jan. 24.—Garbed in the uniform of his superior officer, Private John Carson of the United States marine corps, orderly to Captain Parker of the battleship New Jersey, walked out of the Charlestown navy yard with a suit case containing considerable of Parker's clothing and was arrested six hours later, charged with larceny. So well did Parker's uniform fit Carson that in the five-minute walk out of the yard he was frequently saluted.

Broken Rail Caused Wreck

New Market, N. H., Jan. 24.—Ten cars of a freight train were derailed and eight of them smashed in a wreck one mile east of this station at exactly the same point where portions of two passenger trains left the iron one week ago. Last night's accident was due to precisely the same cause, a broken rail. None of the trainmen was hurt. A new rail which had been put in to replace the one broken a week ago caused the accident last night.

Capture of Alleged Murderer

Brunswick, Me., Jan. 24.—The capture of Paulo Celesto, an Italian, aged 21, charged with stabbing Antonio Gimino to death in Portland, was effected last evening at an Italian settlement at a feldspar quarry in Cathance. Celesto fled from the settlement when the officers appeared and they had a running chase of about two hours before they effected his arrest.

A Peculiar Fatality

Waterbury, Conn., Jan. 24.—Henry V. McIsaac, a roller employed by the Benedict & Burnham Manufacturing company, was seated in a small wardrobe removing his overalls when a pulley wheel five feet in diameter broke from a shaft 40 feet distant and flew across the room. A piece of the rim took off the top of McIsaac's head. No other person was injured.

Russian Reds Meet at Boston

Boston, Jan. 24.—Two thousand Russian sympathizers gathered in Faneuil hall last night in commemoration of Red Sunday in St. Petersburg and listened to speeches on the martyrs of that day in six languages. The meeting was very enthusiastic and the speakers very earnest. A set of resolutions endorsing the revolutionary movement in Russia was adopted.

Killed on Grade Crossing

Oxford, Mass., Jan. 24.—Joseph Knealon of Worcester, driver for a grocery firm, was driving across the track at a grade crossing here when a locomotive struck his vehicle squarely, killing the horse and dragging Knealon's body nearly 400 feet along the tracks and mutilating it terribly.

The Anarchist

[Copyright, 1906, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.]

John Cunningham had been governor of Dartmoor prison for thirteen years, and during that long interval not a convict had succeeded in making his escape. The governor flattered himself on this fact. He lived four miles from the prison, and the less he visited it the better things were run.

Governor Cunningham finally decided to write a book on criminology. That was a perfectly natural thing, since he had so many specimens at hand. He meant that book to be a standard and to contain matter to astonish the world. He was entirely ignorant of his subject, but he went to work like a man who means business. To get his data he had to have prisoners brought before him to be questioned and to have their heads examined. The governor had boasted more than once that he could tell a predisposed criminal ten rods away.

One of the prisoners called before the governor was James Broughton, who had received a sentence of five years for embezzlement. The family was a respectable one, and this was the first offense for a hundred years. Broughton himself had anything but criminal tendencies. He was well educated, well appearing and was remarked for his intelligence. The governor found in Broughton the acme for which he sought. He put him down as a man who was born with the instincts of a thief. He did not credit him with ordinary intelligence. He found him a victim of homicidal mania.

Broughton had entered prison determined to make his escape if it was within the possibilities. After a year's good conduct he was named for the agricultural gang, the trusties who mowed the meadows and raised a share of the fresh vegetables consumed in the prison. He had friends outside to aid him in so far as furnishing him a suit of citizen's clothes and a small sum of money. He had made up his mind to go to South America, and he must have several hundred dollars. The fact that he knew not where to raise the money prevented his escape for months. It was not until after the governor had made him a choice specimen of criminology that a brilliant idea came to him. As the agricultural gang marched back to prison one evening Broughton was missing, and the alarm was given. He had found the suit, had been met by a friend with a horse and buggy, and by the time the guards were scouring the country for him the convict was at the governor's house.

A rather queer thing had happened to the governor ten years before, and as the incident had been published it was common property in prison and out. He had made a trip to Russia, aided an anarchist without knowing what the man was, and after being shut up in a fortress for a month he had been given his liberty and escorted to the frontier. This humiliation rankled in his breast, and he was not backward about saying to freeman or convict that he would do most anything to get square with the Russian government. He had been so outspoken that he had received a hint from his own government to moderate his speech. He took warning by it, but he still chafed. The telephone called the governor up to inform him that a convict had escaped, and while he was fussing about it the card of a stranger was brought in. The name was that of a Russian, and the governor at once thought of anarchists and nihilists and arbitrary measures and became hot.

There was a confab lasting an hour. The Russian did not hesitate to confide in the governor. He informed him that a plot was on foot to overturn the government and raise a republic on its ruins. He was asked to assist in the conspiracy. He knew that such action would make him amenable to the law, and yet he remembered the dreary days and nights in that cell in the fortress. He had never talked with a more intelligent man. He had never met with another foreigner who spoke the English language so correctly.

The warning received by the great man was ringing in his ears, but he thought of the miserable food, the wet straw and the manner in which he had been bounced out of the czar's dominions and warned to stay out. The telephone gave him the particulars of the convict's escape and inquired about offering a reward, but he was too busy to attend to such trifles. He first said no, but as the Russian rose to leave the house the governor brought out a bag containing $500 in gold and placed it on the table and turned his back and began to hum the air of a tune. The Russian tumbled to the subscription and murmured his thanks. With the gold he picked up one of the governor's cards. An hour later a train was bearing him to Liverpool. He was stopped on the way and stopped again as he went aboard a steamer for South America, but that card of the governor carried him through.

The search for Broughton was thorough and long drawn out. As it was the first escape from Dartmoor under Governor Cunningham's reign, he was overanxious for the man's capture. In the course of a month fifty different men were arrested in different parts of England, but of course none of them proved to be the person wanted. Not until Broughton reached South America and knew that he could not be extradited did he give himself away. Then there was fun in the big prison and at the governor's mansion. The convicts laughed among themselves, and the press roasted the governor for an ass, and the result was a resignation and the abandonment of the interesting study of criminology for all time to come.

COLD TODAY

But Six Days In Ten Years With Lower Noon Temperature

But one other day this winter has the temperature at noon been as low as it was today. That was last week Thursday, when the temperature at noon was 10 above. There is not quite as much wind today, however, as a week ago.

Last night was the coldest thus far this winter. The mercury began to drop rapidly after sun down and by 7 o'clock it was but 2 above zero. From that hour until midnight it dropped to 2 below zero. It grew no warmer during the night. On the contrary it continued to fall and in some places it went as low as 10 and 16 below.

It then began to rise, and at 7 o'clock the most of the glasses registered 6 below, and the indications were that it would remain cold all day.

Only six days in the last ten years have been colder than today, but there were seven others just as cold. The coldest day was Dec. 9, 1902, as will be seen by this summary, which includes all day since May 1896, when the noon temperature was 10 above or less.

Miss Parks Writes Again

Another postal has been received from Miss Addie J. Parks, by Mrs. C. W. Guy, giving additional news of her party who were in Jamaica at the time of the earthquake.

This postal was written Jan. 16, two days after the quake and was as follows:

"We spent another night under the trees, not desiring to sleep in the house. People are getting out of Kingston all the time, for the country, as fast as they can.

"We are at St. Andrews and with the family of the pilot of the island, so are safe as can be under the circumstances.

"We felt but three tremors during the night. The earthquake seem to be gradually passing. Flour was landed yesterday and food is seized wherever it can be found. We simply sit around during the day waiting for news.

"Being near the main road, friends of the family as soon as possible bring the latest news to us. We have two vicious barking dogs, so they with the servants all sleep out of doors. I suppose you have heard from us as Uncle cabled.

"We are leaving for Cuba as soon as possible. We start for Port Antonio today. Only Kingston is destroyed."

Electricity for N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R.

It is reported that if the results of the experiments being made by the New Haven road with electricity as a motive power are satisfactory, that the road will apply that power to its service between Boston and Braintree very soon.

Arrangements For Police Ball

Everything points to the success of the first grand concert and ball of the Quincy Police Relief Association tomorrow night at Quincy Music hall. The first order to the printers for tickets was for 1000, but twice since it has been necessary to order more, such was the demand. All the details have been carefully arranged by the following committee: Chief Frank E. Burrell, Lieut. Daniel R. McKay, John T. Larkin, Alfred W. Goodhue and Patrick J. Kelliher.

There will be a concert from 8 till 9 by Cuffs orchestra, when the program will be:

March—New Colonial	Hall
Overture—Remick's Hits	Lampe
Concert Waltz—Amour Eternal	Mittenhall
Xylophone Solo—Dixie Blossoms	Henrich

The grand march will come at 9 P. M. and dancing will continue until 2 A. M. Chief Burrell will be floor marshal and Lieut. McKay floor director, and there will be assistants and aids.

The floral decorations will be by Derringer. Lunch will be served between 10 P. M. and 1 A. M. by Thompson. Special cars will be run to all points after the ball.

The order of dances are from the press of George W. Prescott & Son, about 5 by 7 in size, and printed in blue ink. The first page has the badge of the Quincy police, and the last page a half tone cut of "Old Harry" and the patrol wagon, taken in front of the Police Station.

Telephone Districts Proposed.

The continued hearing before the Highway Commission on cheaper suburban telephone rates was held Wednesday. Counsel for the company maintained that until all the new districts can be mapped out the new rates could be not given.

Instead of there being a metropolitan and a suburban district as at present there will be about 41 separate districts, each independent of the other as far as rates go.

By this plan the company are studying just what districts Quincy is talking with and a Quincy district will be laid out containing the localities this city converses with largely.

A rate will then be arranged in accordance with the service. Quincy seems most to desire that the toll rate to Boston be lower than at present.

An adjournment was then taken for three weeks that the Telephone company might perfect its plan and submit it at the continued hearing.

The Raid of the Sky Patrol.

[Being an aerial episode of the antigambling crusade of 1910.]

AERONAUTS once upward shot
On an aeroplane
To seek a safe and quiet spot
Where spying would be vain
And where Dame Chance her best and worst
Of luck in games could send.
They tried aerofaro first
And poker toward the end.

But soon some fly cops as they flew
In their aerotram
Were told to raid the gamester crew
By an aerogram.
"They're playing high," the message ran,
"At least a mile or two."
Aeroclubs the fly cop clan
With earnest purpose drew.

Though otherwise the fly cops planned,
The gamblers flew atop;
They dropped a dozen bags of sand
And sandbagged every cop.
Then, not content, they further tried
To spoil the fly cops' looks
By fishing for them o'er the side
With anchors as their hooks.

At last the law's aerostat
Was hooked by one deft cast,
But ere they knew where they were at
The fly cops held them fast.
With parachutes the gamblers dropped,
But fate is stern and hard—
Each gamester's earthward journey stopped
Inside the prison yard.

Money Did It.

"Oh, no! He's a dipsomaniac."—Brooklyn Eagle.

CHAPTER III.

IN "Weeks' store" was to be found an assortment of wares ranging from potatoes and razors to molasses and ladies' dress goods. Somewhere within this extensive range was a limited supply of what Mr. Weeks' advertisement in the Item called "Youths', Men's and Children's Clothing In Latest Styles at Moderate Prices." The styles were "late"—about a year late—and the prices were moderate when the lengthy period of credit given to customers is taken into consideration.

Captain Titcomb, exchanging greetings with the half dozen loungers by the stove, whose business there was, as Mr. Weeks himself said, "to swap bad tobacco smoke for heat," passed to the rear of the store, followed by Bradley. There he proceeded to select an entire outfit for the boy calculated to clothe him in successive layers from the skin outward. When the pile of garments on the counter was complete the captain and Mr. Weeks entered into a lengthy argument concerning price. There was a "Sunday hat" involved in the transaction, and about this piece of headgear the battle waged fiercest.

"It's too much money, Caleb," said the captain finally. "I guess I'll try the New York store. Tom Emery's always treated me fair enough, and I'll give him a chance. Come on, Brad."

"I'll take off a quarter on the suit," conceded the storekeeper, who was loath to see so much custom go to a rival.

"No," was the reply, "that ain't enough to amount to anything. Tell you what I'll do, Caleb. Throw in that Sunday hat and I'll take the lot and pay you cash for it and run my risk of gittin' the money."

So the bargain was concluded on that basis. Bradley retired to the back room and emerged clothed in his new garments and tremendously conscious of the fact. The captain said he looked so fresh that you could "smell the paint on him."

"Say, Caleb," said "Squealer" Wixon after Captain Titcomb and his protege had left the premises, "did Ez tell you who that boy was?"

"No, he didn't. I hinted two or three times, but he wouldn't say."

"Well, I'll tell you. 'Twas the old maids' boy—Ben Nickerson's son. Barney said he brought him over in the coach last night."

"You don't mean it!" exclaimed the chopfallen Mr. Weeks. "Well, if that ain't enough to— Ez made me throw in a hat that was wuth a dollar 'n' a half 'cause he said he'd pay cash for everything and take his chance of gittin' his money back. And Prissy and Tempy always pay cash for everything. Reg'lar Titcomb trick!"

The loafers about the store roared with delight.

"Oh, I tell you," remarked "Squealer," "you've got to keep your weather eye peeled when you're dealin' with Cap'n Ez. He'll have you, head and scales, if you ain't careful."

"That's all right," grumbled "Bluey" Bacheldor, "but he'll git fetched up all standin' some of these days. You can call him smart if you want to, but it's pretty risky smartness, most folks think. You notice his schooner's always makin' record trips, and he's always havin' presents give him and all that. How many presents did you have give to you, Cap'n Jabez, when you was runnin' a coaster?"

"Not a one," indignantly replied the person addressed, Captain Jabez Bailey. "Not a one. What I got I had to work for."

It may be that Captain Jabez overworked during his sea experiences. Certainly no one in Orham had known him to do a stroke of work since he retired to live on his wife's earnings as a dressmaker.

"Well," commented Captain Eri Hedge, who was not a member of the circle, but had dropped in to buy some tobacco, "I like Cap'n Ez. He does love to git the best of a bargain, and he's a 'driver' on a vessel, and perhaps he likes to shave the law pretty close sometimes. Ez is a reg'lar born gambler for takin' chances, but I never knew him to do a mean trick."

"What do you call that game he put up on the old maids?" asked "Squealer." "You knew 'bout that, didn't you, Jabez? Seems Prissy and Tempy wanted to sell that little piece of cranb'ry swamp of theirs 'cause it didn't pay them to take care of it and keep it in shape. Prissy told Seth Wingate about it, and Seth said he didn't want it, but that he'd give them so and so—a fair price, consid'rin'. Well, they was goin' to sell it to Seth, but Ez comes home 'bout that time, hears of the deal and goes to Prissy and buys it for $50 mor'n Seth offered. And inside of three months along comes that Ostable company and buys all that land for their big swamp. They say Titcomb made more'n a hundred dollars out of that deal. If you don't think that's a mean trick, Cap'n Eri, you ask Seth Wingate what he thinks of it."

"I know about that," said Captain Eri calmly, "and I think it was jest another case of Ez's takin' chances, that's all. Seth's growlin' is only sour grapes. Ez knew the Ostable folks was talkin' 'bout layin' out a big swamp over here some time or other. He jest bought the Allen piece and run his risk. You notice Prissy and Tempy ain't findin' no fault. They think he's the only man in town. Fact is, he is the only man, outside of the minister, that they'll have any dealin's with. Queer pairin' off that is—Ez and the minister!" he chuckled.

"Oh, women's fools, anyhow," snorted Captain Jabez savagely. "Ez Titcomb always could wind 'em' 'round his fingers. He's been next door to keepin' comp'ny with more girls'n a few in this town sence he was old enough to leave school, but he don't go fur enough to git engaged or nothin' like that. Minute there's any talk that he's likely to git married to one of 'em away goes Ez, and that's the end of that courtin'. And yet, spite of their talk 'bout his bein' slick and hints that he's tricky they're always heavin' up to a feller, 'How smart Cap'n Titcomb is,' and 'Why don't you make money same as Cap'n Ezry?' 'Nough to make an honest man sick."

Captain Eri made his purchases and went home, but the others continued to dissect Ezra Titcomb's character, and the general opinion seemed to be that he would "bear watchin'."

Meanwhile the captain, unconscious of all this, piloted Bradley to the corner of the road upon which the Allen sisters lived, and there left him with a message to the effect that he (the captain) would call next day. Then he sought his room at the "Traveler's Rest," there to read the paper of the day before, while the boy, with his big bundle of old clothes and new "extras," walked homeward alone.

The Allen house was on the "lower road," and to reach it you turned the corner just above "Web" Saunders' billiard room and went on past "Lem" Mullett's stable, and the Methodist "buryin' ground"—the sects in Orham cannot, apparently, agree even after they are dead, for each denomination has its separate cemetery—past the late Captain Saunders' estate and on up the hill overlooking the bay. Bradley had just reached the little house next door to the Allens, when, through the side gate of its yard, there darted a small, ragged looking dog, barking as if it went by steam. It was followed by a big dog, also barking, and this in turn was followed by another and still another. None of the animals was handsome and none looked as if it was good for much except to bark, but each seemed to feel that it was its special duty to devour the boy before the others got a chance at him. On they came, a noisy procession, growling and snapping.

Bradley put down his bundle and looked about for a stone, but the snow covered the road, and there were no stones in sight. He poised himself on one foot and held the other ready for a kick. The dogs formed a circle about him and the racket was blood curdling.

The annual ball of the Milton Firemen's Relief Association was held at the Town hall, Wednesday evening and was very largely attended.

There is a great need of a village improvement society at East Milton, and steps are being taken to form such an association. There are several things that could be done to beautify the square, notably the removal of that old dismantled freight car that is being used for a freight house.

—Boardman Hall of Boston, an attorney who has had an extensive practice, former Assistant United States District Attorney, prominent first as a Democrat and later as a Republican, once an Alderman of Boston, a candidate for District Attorney, for Congress and for Mayor of Boston, went into bankruptcy recently by filing a petition in the United States District Court. He scheduled liabilities of $73,684.77 and assets of a face value of $57,170.

$2,000 BLAZE

Roof Burned Off Double House When Mercury Was Near Zero

The double house on the corner of Copeland and Miller streets, owned by Charles LeClare, and occupied on the easterly side by the owner and on the westerly sides by two families F. H. Morrison and Edward Jolliceau, was damaged upwards of $2,000 last night by fire.

It has but a minute past 5 o'clock when the fire was discovered and Assistant Engineer George O'Brien, who was near at hand, rang in an alarm from Box 43. When the department arrived they found the upper part of the house burning briskly. It was also soon discovered that the fire was burning under floors and behind walls.

This made it a hard fire to handle, and the weather was bitter cold, making it hard for the firemen.

The fire appeared to be in the westerly side of the house, and although the two families were able to get out the greater part of their household effects, they were more or less damaged.

The fiercest blaze seemed to be in a blind attic. Quantities of water were thrown onto the blazing roof and it froze as fast as it fell, covering the firemen with coats of ice. They, however, worked with a will, but it was 6.35 before the fire was all out and the recall sounded. The roof of the building was practically destroyed, and there was more or less damage throughout the house caused by tearing away plastering to get at the fire.

From all that can be learned, the fire must have been smouldering all day. It seems that during Wednesday night the water pipes became frozen. Thursday morning in trying to thaw these out the house was set on fire. This fire the family put out, or at least thought they did. All through the day they could smell smoke, and several times thought there might be a fire, but were unable to locate it until it burst out at 5 o'clock. Chief Litchfield estimates the loss on the building and contents at $2,000.

The firemen had hardly returned to the station when a telephone call came to the Central station from the residence of William Wilson on Presidents avenue to extinguish a chimney fire.

Soft coal had been used in the furnace, and the soot that had gathered took fire. The firemen took out several pailfuls of soot. There was no damage.

Galahad Social.

The Galahad Brotherhood of Christ church gave their third social in the parish house Thursday evening. The affair was in charge of the following committee, Roy Prout, chairman; William Dunstan, John McGregor, Byron Miller and Walter Deacon. The program consisted of dancing interspersed with the following special numbers: Recitations — "When Pa begins to shave" and "The new bishop" by Miss Olive Barnicoat; vocal duets by the Misses Fowler; piano duets by Miss Hannah Litchfield and Miss Elossie Flowers; readings by Leslie Smith; and comic songs by Roy Prout. Mr. Prout gave a humorous monologue which was also well received. The Colonial orchestra furnished the music for dancing. Refreshments were served by the committee. The social was the most successful held thus far, there being forty couples present. The various organizations throughout the city were well represented. The next social will take place Feb. 11.

Poultry Food

The examination of cattle and poultry foods is the title of a sixty page bulletin now being distributed by the Experiment Station at Amherst. Attention is called to low grade cottonseed meal, to adulterated wheat feeds, and to the inferiority of many mixtures of corn and oat residues. The composition of the numerous proprietary dairy and poultry foods is given, and a variety of formulas for home mixtures are suggested.

Quincy Y. M. C. A. Taken into Camp

The Quincy Y. M. C. A. boys were clearly outclassed Thursday evening at the dual meet at Cambridge with the local Y. M. C. A. In no event did Quincy take first place, but scored a second and two thirds, a total of 4 points out of 54. The summary follows:

Twenty-yard dash,—Cox, Cambridge, first, 2 4-5s.; Stration, Cambridge, second, Floyd, Quincy, third.

Three broad jumps,—Cox Cambridge, first, 29 ft. 1-3 in.; Luft, Cambridge, second, 28 ft. 11 1-2 in.; Howe, Cambridge, third, 27 ft 6 3-4 in.

Vote for Two Big Battleships

The naval bill approved by the House committee on naval officers on Thursday contains considerable work for the shipyards. First, an additional battleship of the Dreadnought class (20,000 tons) which will give the United States navy two vessels of this character.

It provides for two torpedo boat destroyers and appropriates $2,000,000 for submarines, in addition to the $1,000,000 for submarines provided in the bill of last year which has not yet been expended. The cost of these two battleships is estimated at $10,000,000 each.

A appropriation of $130,000 is made for the erection of buildings and improvements at the naval magazine near Boston.

A total appropriation of about $95,000,000 is provided for in the naval bill, as agreed upon by the committee.

Police Ball Tonight.

It did not look at noon as though the police would have a very pleasant night for their first annual ball. The storm, however, will not prevent a large party from attending. A large number of tickets have been sold and everything promises a crowning success. The officers from the Chief down have been hard at work perfecting arrangements for some weeks and no efforts have been spared to make it an occasion long to be remembered.

From 8 until 9 o'clock there will be a promenade concert by Cuffs orchestra, to be followed by dancing. A continuous lunch will be served by Thompson the City Square caterer.

Minstrel Show At Music Hall

There was a large crowd Thursday evening at Music hall at the midwinter minstrel show and dance given under the auspices of the Iroquois club.

David S. McIntosh was the interlocutor, Tim DeCoste, Leo Ford and Dan Driscoll shook the tambos, and Bob Sullivan, Ed Larkin and E. Godfrey rattled the bones.

Between these was the chorus circle composed of members of the club.

The program opened with a chorus by the troup, during which popular airs were sung, which included: "The Girl I Left Behind," "In Splendor Bright," "Gypsy Song," "Little Mary," "Here's to Good Old Water," "Have a glass with me," "My Dainty Cigarette," "Sleighing we will go," "Waltz me around, Willie," and "Lucinda's Serenade."

Then came end songs by Leo Ford, Ed Larkin, Dan Driscoll, Bob Sullivan, Ernest Godfrey and Tim DeCoste, and solos by Eugene Murphy and George Mulford.

Among the songs rendered were: "Let it Alone," "Songs of the Rag Time Boy," "Just because it reminds me of you," "He walked right in, and turned around and walked right out again," "It is up to you to move," "He's a cousin of mine," and "What you can't get, you got to go without."

Between each of these solos the end men got in their work, and jokes and local hits flew thick and fast. Many of the hits were timely and the audience was quick to catch on. The solos were all well rendered and the chorus was full and strong. In addition to the songs there was buck and wing dancing by Coffey brothers.

The first part of the program ended with a grand finale, entitled "Stars and Stripes and you."

Part two consisted of illustrated songs by McDermat and Milford of Boston. Encores lengthened the program until after 10 o'clock.

Shortly before 11 o'clock dancing was commenced and continued until 2 A. M., for which Wilson's orchestra furnished the music. Edward D. Larkin was the floor director, Robert P. Sullivan assistant, and Daniel H. Driscoll, Leo Ford and Joseph H. Elcock the aids.

Leg Fractured.

John Lundren, of 82 Carver street, Boston, employed at the Hall lock plant, Wollaston, had his leg fractured Thursday afternoon. He was at work hoisting a case of metal into the building when it slipped and fell upon him. The police ambulance was called and he was removed to the City Hospital.

—In a statement in which he accuses Commissioner O'Meara, the Boston Police Commissioner, of "butting in" and of "squealing," Dist. Atty. Moran denied last night the assertion by the Police Commissioner that he adversely criticised the members of the new Grand Jury. He refers to the Commissioner throughout as "O'Meara."

At the meeting of the Citizens' Trade Association of Cambridge this week the members went on record in favor of the House order calling for an investigation by the Legislative Committee on Insurance, as petitioned for by Mayor Grimmons of Somerville. Sutherland, president of the Merchants' Association of Lawrence; by Representative Robert Luce of Somerville and by Herman Bird, chairman of the Board of Cambridge Underwriters.

ACCEPTABLE AID

Thanks From Swettenham For Supplies From Isthmus

CONSUL ORRETT'S LETTER

Admiral Davis' Aid Invoked and Accepted With Full Knowledge and Consent of Authorities--Conditions at Kingston

Kingston, Jam., Jan. 25.—Governor Swettenham has written a courteous letter to John F. Stevens, chief engineer of the Panama canal, thanking him for the tents and supplies sent in here from the isthmus by the steamer Advance. The governor said:

"Convey my grateful and heartfelt acknowledgment to the citizens of the United States and the officials and employes of the canal commission who so promptly testified their sympathy with suffering Kingston."

The governor also has written a letter to the secretary of state for Hayti, accepting and thanking the secretary for food, medicines and $5000 sent to Kingston on board the Haytian gunboat Alexis Nord. This communication refers to the consignment of relief which yesterday the governor was supposed to have declined.

W. H. Orrett, the American vice counsel here, has published a letter setting forth the facts relative to the landing of marines from the American warships under command of Rear Admiral Davis. This letter is as follows:

"I met Rear Admiral Davis at headquarters house and introduced him to Colonial Secretary Bourn. The admiral offered his service to land immediately such food and medical supplies as were needed, and to detail all his men to help generally. While in the midst of this interview the deputy inspector general arrived hurriedly and reported to the colonial secretary that there was a serious mutiny at the general penitentiary, and added it could be quelled only with an armed force.

"The aid of the American admiral was invoked and accepted, and he arranged that a party be landed at once. The admiral, in the presence of the colonial secretary, the deputy inspector general and myself, gave instructions to his flag lieutenant to return at once to the flagship, to order the Indiana to anchor off the penitentiary and to land an armed party, and to land any other parties the authorities might need.

"Only a small guard was landed with the working party, which saved the archives at the consulate, and when these men had completed their work they joined the general working party. Everything that Admiral Davis did was with the full knowledge and consent of the authorities."

Conditions here are slowly improving. There is no scarcity of food. Cash allowances to the needy are being made by the archbishop and relief committees. There are 2000 persons destitute and without homes.

Many bodies are being recovered daily. Forty were found yesterday. The exact number of bodies buried or cremated is not known, but it will probably reach 600, and it is believed that the total fatalities will reach 800 persons.

In many sections of the city masons are rebuilding walls and cleaning up unsafe structures. The exodus to the country continues, and is relieving the congestion in the camps and parks and at the race course.

There is great consternation here as a result of a cablegram from London saying that all the insurance companies disclaim liability for losses incurred as a result of the earthquake and fire. Even the most sanguine say that this precludes the possibility of rebuilding the city.

The earth shocks continue, but they are not severe.

Official Career About Ended

London, Jan. 25.—The colonial office has received several telegrams from the governor of Jamaica, explaining the incident with Rear Admiral Davis, but not one is of such a character that the authorities are prepared to give it to the public.

The foreign office says that with the receipt of President Roosevelt's telegram, through Assistant Secretary of State Bacon, the international side of the question is regarded as settled. At the same time, it is possible that when Swettenham's explanation is received in full there will be further communication with the government of the United States. The general impression is that Swettenham's career is at an end.

Precedent For Davis' Act

Washington, Jan. 25.—The receipt in this city of the official full text of the correspondence between Rear Admiral Davis and Governor Swettenham, which did not differ from the communications transmitted by the press last Sunday night, caused the naval officials to again study the situation to see if Davis had in any way transgressed the bounds of propriety on his visit to Kingston.

They not only found a precedent for his landing men from his ships to preserve order, strangely enough in the case of another British island in the West Indies, but also saw nothing in the whole affair to warrant the letter addressed to him by Swettenham.

FOXBORO REVELATIONS

What Detective Found In State Home For Inebriates

Boston, Jan. 25.—Testimony which made the councillors stare in amazement was given at the probe hearings upon the Foxboro institution for dipsomaniacs and inebriates. The prison committee of the governor's council conducted the hearing, while the house below struggled with the proposition of giving Foxboro an appropriation of $79,100 for the year.

Detective Scott of the state police was the principal witness during the hearing. Following are extracts from his testimony:

In reference to the "prison ward" inmates, those who are put there are confined only for punishment. They are left with no clothing but their undergarments and perhaps a nightshirt.

I found 11 horses in the stables and asked the hostler for what they were used. The reply was that four of them were used on the farm and that the other seven were used only by the family of Dr. Woodbury for driving purposes.

Haggerty was strapped to the bed so that he could move no part of his body except his head. After he was strapped down in this fashion the doctors and attendants went off to the ball field for a game of ball. Finally one of the inmates discovered that the man was dying and word was sent to Dr. Coffin and he returned to the institution, but Haggerty died in an hour.

Vinal told me of having been kicked and pounded by an attendant named Berry, a fellow six feet tall and weighing nearly 200 pounds. He showed a black and blue spot on his breast about three inches in diameter.

I can find a man of 65 who was compelled to run about the gymnasium until his heart failed and he fell to the floor, after which he was punished for not being able to go on with his work.

Sanders Seeks Reinstatement

Washington, Jan. 25.—The first step toward re-enlisting members of the Twenty-fifth infantry, discharged without honor as the result of the Brownsville affair, were taken by Secretary Taft when, by his direction, First Sergeant Sanders of the dismissed battalion appeared before Judge Advocate General Davis to make his statement as to his innocence of any complicity in the affair. Davis called upon Sanders for certain evidence in support of his statement, which the latter undertook to furnish, and there the matter remains for the present.

Murdered Priest's Housekeeper

Hopewell Cape, N. B., Jan. 25.—Thomas Collins was found guilty of the murder on Aug. 19, 1906, of Miss Mary A. McAuley at the home of her cousin in New Ireland, Rev. Fr. McAuley, the Roman Catholic priest of that parish, for whom she was housekeeper. The jury reported a verdict in less than two hours. Judge Gregory sentenced Collins to be hanged April 25.

Pension Agencies to Be Abolished

Washington, Jan. 25.—The house voted to abolish all the pension agencies throughout the country, 18 in number, and centralize the payment of pensions in the city of Washington. This action was taken after spirited opposition on the part of those having pension agencies in their states. The pension appropriation bill, carrying $138,000,000 in round numbers, was passed.

Field Estate Valued a $75,000,000

Chicago, Jan. 25.—The executors of the estate of Marshall Field have filed in the probate court their inventory of the estate. Counsel for the executors place the total value of the property described at $75,000,000. The exact value of the estate will not be known until the official report of the appraisers has been completed.

Giving Old Young Men a Chance

Philadelphia, Jan. 25.—The Pennsylvania railroad management has decided to change the age limit at which men may enter the employ of the company from 35 to 40 years. The Pennsylvania company has had difficulty in securing competent men under the age limit in all branches, and capable men have been barred because of it.

Died at Favorite Pastime

Lexington, Ky., Jan. 25.—Mrs. William Allen, aged 60 years, died suddenly on a street car here. She was a member of a widely known family. She had a hobby of riding on street cars and every morning, immediately after rising, she boarded a car and rode all day, leaving only for meals.

Disturbance In Mount Etna

Rome, Jan. 25.—The activity of Mt. Etna, in Sicily, is increasing. That there is an eruption inside the crater is proved by the thick column of smoke and the dark rain of ashes which are being thrown out. This activity is accompanied by slight earth shocks.

King Alfonso's Cabinet Quits

THEY FIND IN URIC-O A PERMANENT CURE

Rheumatic Sufferers Rejoice in Receiving such Splendid Results from Uric-O.

If a convention could be held of all the Rheumatic sufferers who have been cured completely by the use of Uric-O, there would be such a rejoicing as to convince every skeptic that there at last been found the true "Fountain" of health, and yet this would be a decided error, for Uric-O is not a "cure all," but simply a cure for Rheumatism and Rheumatism only.

Every sufferer of Rheumatism who wants to be rid of the sleepless nights, the nerve binding, muscle twisting hours of pain, should lay aside all other forms of treatment, get a bottle of Uric-O and start rejoicing on his way to health. It matters little how long one has suffered from the trouble nor how intense the suffering, Uric-O will cure it. Cure it completely, cure it permanently and cure it to stay cured. Muscular, Articular and Inflamatory Rhematism yield at once to this mighty healing agent. Druggists and physicians everywhere are gladly recommending Uric-O for Rheumatism because they know its wonderful curative propertives cannot be exaggerated.

Uric-O acts directly upon the blood, muscles and kidneys. It neutralizes the uric and rheumatic acid poison, and drives it from the blood.

The story of E. J. Murphy is the "Home of Uric-O" in Quincy and he sells and guarantees it for 75 cents and $1.00 a bottle. We know you can be cured by Uric-O and if you only try one bottle you will thank us from the bottom of your heart for having made you acquainted with this marvelous remedy. Don't delay. Don't put it off. Try it and try it today. Ask Mr. Murphy about it and learn from him the many cures Uric-O has effected right here in your own town. If you desire, you can test and try it free of charge by sending your name and address to the Smith Drug Co., Syracuse, N. Y., and asking for a sample free.

President McKinley, Accused of Lacking Backbone, Was "Embarrassed" Because of Alger's Alliance With Pingree

Milwaukee, Jan. 25.—The Milwaukee Journal prints an interview with Russell A. Alger, obtained March 4, 1900, and not to be used until his death, in which he said he three times offered to resign as secretary of war in President McKinley's cabinet because of criticisms, but that McKinley replied each time that he would quit the presidency first.

After telling of the arrangement with Pingree and other Michigan politicians that he run for the senate to succeed McMillan, who agreed to withdraw in Alger's favor at the end of his term, Alger continues that on his return to Washington he was informed by a newspaper man that McKinley was annoyed because he (Alger) had formed with a man hostile to the president (meaning Pingree) an alliance against a firm supporter of the administration (McMillan).

General Alger placed no credence in the report. Later, however, when in New York, he received a telegram from Vice President Hobart asking him to run down to Long Branch. There he was informed by Hobart that the president was embarrassed because Alger had formed an alliance with Pingree.

Continuing, Alger said: "Hobart and I said little or nothing more about the matter, but when I returned to Washington I went to the president and asked him why, inasmuch as I had always dealt frankly and directly with him, he had not spoken to me instead of troubling poor Hobart about the matter. I asked the president if I had really embarrassed him.

"'Yes,' he said, 'you have embarrassed me and I am annoyed.'

"I told him that I could readily relieve his embarrassment by resigning from his cabinet. 'I have not asked you to resign,' he said; 'I shall never ask you to resign.'

"But I wrote out my resignation and sent it to the president. In the meantime, McMillan had announced his candidacy for re-election to the senate, a most dishonorable thing to do, in view of his promise to me and many others. Before I had resigned as secretary of war, even before I had seen the president regarding Hobart's message to me, I had decided, in order to prevent a fight among the Republicans of Michican (a fight I should have won, however,) to withdraw as a candidate for the senate. But I did not tell the president so. The option he meant to give me, you see, was to abandon the fight against McMillan, in order to save my place in the cabinet. I resigned as secretary of war and in a few days I received from the president his written acceptance of my resignation. Then I went to the president and I told him that when I had accepted a place in his cabinet I had not surrendered my citizenship."

General Alger said he told the president that McMillan was strongly in favor of Reed for president when McKinley was seeking the nomination.

The Journal correspondent asked for an estimate of McKinley's character. "I cannot give that to you," Alger replied. Then he added: "He has many lovable qualities, but he lacks backbone and nothing can make up for the lack of backbone."

Alger's Death Was Sudden

Washington, Jan. 25.—Senator Russell A. Alger's death was sudden and unexpected. It was due to heart failure. Mr. Alger was born in Medina county, O., in 1836. At the age of 11 years his parents died. For seven years he worked on a farm, later studying law, and being admitted to practice law in Ohio in 1859. Later in that year he removed to Grand Rapids, Mich.

He engaged extensively in the lumber and other industries. He served in the Civil war and had prominent part in many battles. In 1889 he was elected commander-in-chief of the Grand Army.

Mr. Alger was elected governor of Michigan in 1884, was appointed by President McKinley secretary of war in March, 1897, resigning on Aug. 1, 1899. On Sept. 27, 1902, he was appointed United States senator by the governor of Michigan, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of James McMillan, and took his seat Dec. 1, 1902, and was elected by the legislature of Michigan in January, 1903

MONOTONOUS TASK

Seven Jurors Yet to Be Chosen For Trial of Thaw

TALESMEN HANGING BACK

Reluctant to Face Possibility of Being Locked Up For Two Months--Those Selected Are Heads of Families

New York, Jan. 25.—After trying in vain for more than four hours of the morning and afternoon session to secure an additional juror to try Harry K. Thaw for killing Standford White and just when counsel and spectators, and even the defendant himself, were drowsy from the monotony of the proceedings, there came a sudden change in the tide and within the last three-quarters of an hour three jurors were sworn in. When court adjourned for the day five jurors had been accepted, leaving seven men yet to be chosen.

Twenty-three talesmen had been examined without success when the unexpected happened and two talesmen in succession proved acceptable to both District Attorney Jerome and the defendant's attorney. Then followed the drawing of five more talesmen, who were quickly excused for one thing or another. Henry C. Harney, a piano dealer, about 55 years of age, was the 31st talesman to be called, and as he had never formed an opinion in the case and had read but little about it in the papers, he was quickly seated.

The other jurors chosen were George Pfaff, 34 years old, a dealer in machinists' supplies, and Arthur S. Campbell, 42 years old, a superintendent of telegraph and telephone construction. The two jurors selected the first day of the trial were Deming B. Smith, a retired manufacturer, who will serve as foreman, and Charles H. Fecke, a shipping agent. Each of the jurors is married and has a family.

The tedious manner in which the selection of jurors proceeds makes it difficult to predict just when the trial panel of 12 will finally be filled. The order of the court that the jury must be kept together under the care of bailiffs had the apparent affect of making many of the talesmen reluctant to serve. Various excuses were offered, one man declaring that to be locked up for two months would so wreck his nerves as to make a calm consideration of the case an impossibility. He was excused.

The 19 talesmen examined Wednesday and the 31 yesterday brings the total thus far called for examination up to 50. If the ratio continues it will require two or three days yet to complete the jury. There was a feeling after adjournment of court, however, that both sides would try to facilitate the matter as much as possible. Of the 30 peremptory challenges each allowed the prosecution and the defense the former has used eight and the latter six. The defense seemed willing to accept any talesmen who made reasonable answers to the questions propounded by the district attorney.

The fact that Thaw's attorney asked several of the talesmen if they had any prejudice against any particular line or character of defense was taken by many to indicate that the defense may be either the so-called "unwritten law" or emotional insanity, or a combination of both.

Thaw's attorneys again yesterday offered no objection, however, to the district attorney's questions as to whether or not the proposed jurors would be guided by the actual law as laid down by the court to the exclusion of any fanciful law they might themselves import into the case. Each of the accepted jurors promised to abide by the interpretation of the court.

Mrs. William Thaw, mother of the defendant, was not in court. She was greatly fatigued by the long sessions of Wednesday and was on the verge of a collapse at one time Wednesday night. She remained in her apartments, where she was attended by her daughter, the Countess of Yarmouth.

The other members of the family were in their accustomed seats in court behind the defendant. Howard Nesbit, a brother of Mrs. Harry Thaw, also was in court, sitting well in the rear with the man who was Stanford White's secretary. Neither he nor his sister glanced at the other.

A Lower Mississippi Flood

New Orleans, Jan. 25.—A phenomenal rise has occurred in the Mississippi river 75 miles below here, where for three days the levees have been breaking. The river stands within about an inch of the highest rise on record in that district. Notwithstanding this unusual stage near its mouth, the river at New Orleans and for hundreds of miles northward is three feet and more under previous high records. It is thought that changes in the bed of the stream may account for the estuary.

Carnegie University at Chicago

Chicago, Jan. 25.—Andrew Carnegie is to have his name perpetuated in Chicago by a university bearing his name, articles of incorporation having been filed in the county recorder's office. The object is "to establish and conduct a university for the teaching of medicine, dentistry, pharmacy, science and arts, law, theology, and all kindred branches of learning. The corporation shall not be conducted for profit, but solely as an educational institution."

COLD WAVE PASSING

Much Suffering and Inconvenience in New England

Boston, Jan. 25.—The crest of the severest cold wave that has been experienced in the central part of the North American continent this season is passing off the New England coast. From dark Wednesday night until nearly noon yesterday the temperature sank to depths unusual for even this time of the year, and all points north of the southern New England coast reported thermometer readings of many degrees below zero.

Northfield, Vt. nestled among the Green mountains, had the lowest government record of 26 below at dawn yesterday morning, while at 8 o'clock last night it was only 16 below the zero mark. The bright sunshine during the day brought a slight moderation in the temperature, but as soon as the sun had set the mercury began to fall again and for a few hours last evening minus zero readings were reported from many points. Just before midnight, however, the sky became overcast and the approach of a storm from the west was heralded by a break in the cold.

The day in New England was one of suffering and inconvenience. Frost bites were prevalent, at least two persons were frozen to death, while delays on steam railroads due to poor steaming abilities of locomotives were frequent.

Found Frozen to Death

West Medway, Mass., Jan. 25.—Arthur Kingston, who has been missing since last Monday from his home here, was found last night frozen to death in a snowbank in a field not far from this village. Kingston was 38 years old and lived with his parents. Since his disappearance search has been made for him, but no trace of his whereabouts was learned until a boy discovered the body by accident. Medical Examiner Quint found that death was due to alcoholism and exposure.

Kittery, Me., Jan. 25.—Noah Kimball, who had been missing from home for the past 10 days, was found in a swamp on the outskirts of the town, frozen to death. He was 45 years old.

Killed In Gas Conduit

Burlington, Vt., Jan. 25.—Leakage of gas from conduits, which is supposed to have caused the death of a family of six persons by asphyxiation a few weeks ago, is responsible indirectly for another death. In descending a ladder in a manhole Michael Alborey was partly overcome by gas, and in attempting to escape up the ladder missed his footing and fell to the bottom of the manhole, breaking his neck. Another workman who attempted to go to Alborey's assistance was partly overcome by the gas, but was rescued before the effect was fatal. Workmen have been endeavoring to locate the leaks in the mains, but thus far unsuccessfully.

Firemen Had Severe Task

Ellsworth, Me., Jan. 25.—Hampered by frozen hydrants, and in a temperature of 25 degrees below zero, the volunteer firemen of Ellsworth battled with a fire which consumed the Masonic block, a three-story brick structure, and threatened to wipe out other buildings in the business section. It is supposed that defective insulation of electric light wires in the basement of the building, occupied by the Hancock County Democrat, started the blaze. The building was valued at $20,000, and the loss on the newspaper plant is estimated at $5000.

Battleship Not Injured

Willimantic, Conn., Jan. 25.—Charles R. Utley of this city, brother-in-law of Captain Smith, commander of the battleship Connecticut, has received word from Smith regarding the accident to the Connecticut in the harbor at Culebra island. The message states that the battleship merely touched bottom and was not injured in any way.

Old Man Killed by Train

South Manchester, Conn., Jan. 25.—Milo Loomis, aged 91, and who served in the state legislature during the Civil war, was struck by a freight train in the Manchester yards and died shortly afterwards, probably of internal injuries, as there were no serious wounds visible. He was reputed to be quite wealthy.

Rabies Outbreak Not Unusual

Boston, Jan. 25.—At the annual meeting of the Massachusetts Association of Boards of Health, Dr. Peters of the state cattle bureau stated that the present outbreak of rabies appears to be simply a case of history repeating itself. Similar epizootics occur every 18 or 20 years.

Boston, Jan. 25.—It is announced that the Empress Dowager of China is sending 20 or more Chinese girls to this country for educational purposes. It is expected that they will receive their teaching at some of the local schools or women's colleges.

Went Through Soft Ice

Trenton, Jan. 25.—John Johnson and George Lovett were drowned here through the breaking of the ice in the Delaware and Raritan canal. The accident resulted from the softening of the ice through an exhaust pipe running from a factory into the canal. Altogether about 10 persons broke through the ice.

Indictment of Strothers Brothers

Culpepper, Va., Jan. 25.—Philip J. and James A. Strothers, brothers, were indicted by the grand jury for the killing of William F. Bywaters recently, within an hour after he had married their sister. Mrs. Bywaters was too ill to appear before the grand jury.

A DRAMATIC TRAGEDY

William Whiteley, Department Store Pioneer, Is Assassinated

London, Jan. 25.—William Whiteley, one of the most unique and at the same time one of the most prominent figures in the business world, was shot dead in his store by a youth claiming to be his son. The assassin then attempted to blow out his own brains.

The name of Whiteley has become a household word in England, owing to the enormous department store in London run by a company of which Whiteley was president, and which was the pioneer of such enterprises.

An unknown young man was accorded an interview with Whiteley in the latter's private office, where the two men remained closeted for a few minutes. As Whiteley emerged from his office it was observed that the young man was following and importuning him, while Whiteley was waving his visitor off and threatening to call the police. Suddenly the stranger whipped out a revolver and fired two shots point blank at Whiteley. The bullets lodged in Whiteley's head and he fell dead. Before the assassin could be secured he turned his weapon upon himself and inflicted what is believed to be a mortal wound.

The personality of the assassin and the motives for his crime are enveloped in much mystery. He gave the name of Cecil Whiteley, but relatives of William Whiteley disclaim all knowledge of him. The police found no papers or other written matter on his person to lead to the establishment of his identity, but they discovered his place of residence and learned that he never had called himself Whiteley there.

Irregularities by Old Officials

New York, Jan. 25.—Samuel B. Terry, paying teller at the United States sub-treasury, and Edgar F. Lee, the assistant paying teller, handed their resignations to Assistant Treasurer Fish at the latter's request and they were at once accepted. Fish declined to make public the reason for his action beyond saying that both Terry and Lee had been guilty of irregularities which would not be permitted in any private banking institution and which could not be overlooked. Terry had been connected with the subtreasury in this city for more than 30 years, and Lee had been in the service almost as long as his superior.

Mexicans and Yaquis In Conflict

El Paso, Tex., Jan. 25.—Reports have been received of a desperate fight between Yaqui Indians and Mexican troops in the mountainous region southeast of Guaymas, Sonora, in which is the station of Lencho, which was destroyed by the Yaquis in December. The Mexican troops have been hunting the Yaquis since the Lencho incident. Twenty Mexicans were killed and a number were wounded. The Yaquis were defeated with considerable loss, but as they took both their dead and wounded with them, when retreating, it is not known how many were killed.

Pope to Abolish Old Custom

Rome, Jan. 25.—The preparations for the transportation of the remains of Leo XIII from St. Peter's to the church of St. John Lateran are going on, but the actual date for the removing of the body has not been fixed. It is reported that Pope Pius will put an end to the traditional custom of extracting the entrails of the deceased pontiffs and preserving them in the parish church of the Quirinal, consequently Leo XIII will be the last pope to be thus mutilated.

Legislatio Against Asiatics

Sacramento, Cal., Jan. 25.—A concurrent resolution strongly protesting against the naturalization of any Asiatic race was adopted by the Republican senators in caucus and later was introduced in the senate. The Democratic senators adopted in caucus a resolution declaring that the president's interference in the Japanese school question was a violation of state rights.

European Weather Softening

London, Jan. 25.—The extreme cold weather which has prevailed over Europe for the last few days shows signs of moderating, but heavy snowfalls continue in Turkey, Greece, Crete and Asia Minor. In St. Petersburg and northern Russia the change to milder weather conditions has been accompanied by a fierce gale, which has wrought considerable damage.

Would Tax Unmarried Men

Indianapolis, Jan. 25.—A bill to tax bachelors was introduced in the state legislature. The scale proposed is as follows: Between the ages of 25 and 30 years, $5 annually; between 30 and 40 years, $7.50, and over 40 years of age, $10. Bachelors supporting their mothers are exempted. The money raised would be devoted to the school fund.

The Tick of a Watch

[Original.]

When the engagement between Julian Reid and Corinne Phelps was broken, it was given out, as usual in such cases, that it was by mutual consent. But appearances led their friends to believe that Reid had been dismissed by the lady. He was very much cast down, while she did not appear to be a whit troubled. However, it was not six months after his supposed dismissal that Reid became engaged to Suzanne Terry.

The trio were all in the same set and soon after Reid's engagement with Miss Terry met at a house party assembled in midwinter at the country place of Mr. Ludlow Taylor. Reid was devoted to his fiancee, while Miss Phelps was receiving marked attention from a young man named Adams. There was universal remark on the fact that Mr. Reid and Miss Phelps, having been apparently bound up in each other, could now each be interested in another person.

The house party was composed of a dozen guests. One evening when they had been frolicking together in the same room a Miss Twitchell suddenly remarked that she must have dropped her watch. Search was made, but the watch was not found. It was proposed to search elsewhere, but Miss Twitchell declared that she had looked at her watch on coming into the room and noted that the hands stood at twenty minutes after 10. It was now twelve minutes later, and during the interval she had not left the room. Again the apartment was searched, but with no better result. Then Mr. Taylor, looking very grave, said:

"This is the most unpleasant episode that has ever occurred to me. Miss Twitchell's watch has been stolen. To think that one of my guests should be a thief! I cannot but assume that the theft must have been committed under a kleptomaniac impulse. I shall therefore give the thief a chance to return the watch without being known. I shall turn out the lights for five minutes, during which interval he or she may lay the watch in any place where it will be noticed.

He stepped to the electric switch and turned off every light at once, the room remaining darkened for five minutes, when the lights were turned on again. Every one looked about for the watch, but it was not visible. But one of the men called the attention of the host to a bulging pocket in the coat of Reid. Taylor approached him and took from the pocket a solid silver inkstand that had stood on an antique desk.

Reid turned pale. Every eye was upon him, and every one expected that if he were searched the missing watch would be found. Reid demanded to be searched, but Taylor would not consent, saying that no such indignity should be offered to a guest in his house. He himself would indemnify Miss Twitchell for the loss of her watch. "Besides, Julian," he said, "if you were guilty you might have got rid of the watch. No, there is some mystery in this matter. I believe every guest to be innocent. I am good for the loss. Let the matter be dropped."

This was easier said than done. There were various opinions as to Reid's guilt or innocence, but of course he was a suspected man despite the fact that Taylor averred that the affair was an attempt to throw suspicion on him and was very clumsy. Suzanne Terry drew away from her fiance coldly, while Corinne Phelps was outspoken in his defense. Irene Taylor, a sister of the host, from the moment of Reid's trouble devoted herself to him.

The morning after the loss of the watch a maid went to Miss Taylor and said she had heard a singular ticking in the room of one of the guests which she could not place. Miss Taylor went to the room and listened. She heard the ticking, but could not tell where it was. It was loudest near a mantel over a fireplace, but there was neither clock nor watch on the mantel.

Listening attentively, Miss Taylor located the ticking in the fireplace, then in the chimney. In the flue was a sheet iron plate with a trapdoor in it to prevent a draft through the chimney when there was no fire on the hearth. Miss Taylor put her hand through the trapdoor, felt about on the plate and withdrew her hand, grasping a watch. It was the watch Miss Twitchell had lost.

Corinne Phelps was the occupant of the room.

Miss Taylor took the watch to Reid and told him where she had found it. Reid was not so surprised as she supposed he would be. Miss Taylor then sent for her brother, and Reid was asked to give a reason for Miss Phelps desiring to injure him. He declined to do so, and Taylor told him that it must be assumed that he had placed the watch in her room for the purpose of injuring her. Reid neither denied nor assented to the allegation. The party broke up, one half believing that Reid was the thief, the other half in Miss Phelps' guilt.

Miss Taylor was one who believed implicitely in Reid's innocence and his former fiancee's guilt. Miss Terry pretended to have the same opinion, but in her heart was uncertain. Reid at once asked to be released of his engagement with her on account of her lack of confidence in him and was relieved. A year later Reid married Miss Taylor and immediately after the wedding took up a package of returned letters he had written Miss Phelps and selecting one gave it to her to read. In it he broke his engagement on the ground that he had discovered in her traits that would send a woman of a lower class to prison.

DECORATING CLOSETS.

A closet door is apt to be a glaring thing and sometimes spoils the harmony of an otherwise attractive room. In this day, when everything is made to tell in the furnishing of a house, women are racking their brains to devise some method of improving these necessary but by no means ornamental parts of almost every room.

When the closet is in the dining room and is to be used for china the way is easy. If your china is all pretty and you do not think the glass too expensive take the wooden door away and replace it with a glass one, or, what is much cheaper and almost as effective in its way, get a curtain of flowered cretonne and suspend it from the second shelf of the closet. The top shelf is left open, and upon it may be shown the finer pieces of china, while the more ordinary ware is hidden from view by the curtain.

Curtains, if they agree with the other furnishings of the rooms, may be employed in every part of the house, but you will show your wisdom if you use cotton material—cretonnes, pretty madras and the like—in the bedrooms rather than woolen materials, which won't wash and encourage stiffness.

A mirror sunk into a closet door is one of the most satisfactory decorations on record, for what woman has not pined for a full length mirror? It is also one of the most expensive ways of decorating, but then expensive things are apt to be dear to the feminine heart.

Schoolgirls are fond of covering their doors with wire frames filled with photographs and souvenir postal cards. This is rather a pretty idea, but is objectionable because of the amount of dust that will collect upon things of this sort.

THE BEDSTEAD.

Metal the Most Sanitary, Mahogany the Most Beautiful.

The time has gone by when the bedstead was a simple framework. It has developed from a skeleton of plain wood or iron into a magnificent and expensive piece of furniture, and nowadays people choose their bedsteads with care. The nickel sort has never proved popular on account of its cold appearance. As the bedstead is the largest piece of furniture, it naturally has the most to do in giving the room a furnished appearance. Nickel bedsteads are only fit for a summer home, where everything should look cool and refreshing.

Brass is the best to get in a metal bedstead if one can afford it. It has a rich, warm look. The patterns differ little, but each season finds an improvement in the finish. The best bedsteads are not of solid brass. They have iron supporters running through each separate rod, and this gives the frame stability.

Although metal bedsteads are considered more sanitary by many, they can never be made so handsome as some of the wooden ones, nor can they give such an appearance of comfort. One of the handsomest bedsteads is of mahogany. It lends an air of solid comfort to a bedroom.

Twin bedsteads of metal or wood are the proper things now. It is healthier to sleep alone.—New York Post.

THE HOME DOCTOR.

Dried fig dipped in milk, toasted and then applied to a gumboil will bring quick relief.

There is nothing to beat rhubarb juice as a cure for gout or rheumatism except water from medicinal springs.

When food will not stay on the stomach put one teaspoonful of lime water in a glass of milk and sip it slowly.

A dressing made of powdered borax moistened with cold water will prevent pain or inflammation from a cut or wound.

Common mustard used as a plaster or poultice is the best cure for a cold on the chest, and the white of an egg with sugar is the finest medicine for hoarseness.

As soon as a cold sore appears, wet the spot with camphor and cover with powdered subnitrate of bismuth. Camphor by itself will also lessen the inflammation.

Dampening Clothes.

Clothes should be dampened in the evening, when all have been taken in from the line, if they are to be ironed the following morning. A hand brush with fairly fine bristles kept for the purpose makes a good sprinkler. Pull the seams of each garment straight, fold it and place in a clothes basket containing a white cloth. Handkerchiefs may be dampened and placed flat on the top of one another and then rolled together in bundles.

Cooking Eggs.

An excellent method of cooking eggs has been discovered by a practical housewife. She places a napkin ring in a saucepan partly full of hot water and sets the egg, small end up, in the ring. She then punches a hole in the top of the egg and allows the water to boil around it. The gas in the egg escapes while the egg is cooking, which makes it much better in flavor.

Bird Seed.

Bird seed is sure to attract mice. A deep ruffle tied tightly under the cage and held over the feed cups by an elastic will help appreciably. When a new box of seed is opened it should be emptied into a clean tin box and the seed poured into the cup through a large funnel. In this way none is wasted, and there is no invitation to four footed partakers.

"They won't hurt you!" she screamed, running to the rescue. "Stop it, Peter! Be quiet, Rags! Go home, Tuesday! Winfield, I'll give it to you!"

The dogs dodged the broom and retired to a safe distance, wagging their tails and doing their best to indicate that they were only making believe anyhow. Winfield, the small dog that had led the attack, was the most persistent, and he snapped at the broom in high glee, evidently considering that it was waved for his particular amusement.

"They got away before I could stop 'em," panted the girl. "Grandma's gone to the store, and I went out in the woodshed to play with 'em, and they bounced out of the door first thing. They don't mean anything; they're just full of it, that's all."

"I wasn't scared," said Bradley. "I didn't believe they'd bite. I like dogs."

"Do you?" said the girl eagerly. "So do I. Grandma says she does, too, in moderation. The old maids don't though. Oh, I forgot. You're the old maids' boy, ain't you? I saw you out in their yard with Miss Prissy this mornin'."

"Yes, I saw you too. You live in here, don't you?"

"Um-hum. Oh, my goodness! I haven't got any rubbers on, and grandma said if I got my feet wet today she didn't know but she'd skin me. I must go right back and dry 'em before she comes. I've had a cold; that's why I ain't to school. How'll I ever get these dogs in?"

"I'll help you if you want me to," volunteered Bradley.

"Will you? That's splendid. Come on!"

Bradley carried his bundle to the back steps of the little house and then returned to assist at the dog catching. It wasn't an easy operation, but a tin dish scientifically rattled by his new acquaintance tempted all but the wary Winfield, and a bone finally decoyed the latter inside the woodshed, and the door was slammed and bolted upon the humbugged pack.

"There," exclaimed the girl, "that's all right! I hope grandma won't notice the tracks in the snow. If she's only forgot her glasses it's all right. Now come into the kitchen till I put my feet in the oven. What's your name?"

"Bradley Nickerson. Most folks call me Brad."

"That's a good name. My last name's Baker. I hate my first one—it's Augusta. Ain't that the worst? Grandma calls me 'Gusty.' Ugh! You can call me 'Gus' if you want to. It sounds more like a boy's name. I wish I was a boy."

"Why?"

"Oh, because a boy can do things and doesn't have to be 'ladylike.' If I was a boy nobody would think it was funny for me to like dogs, and I could have as many as I wanted."

"I should think you had a good many now. Where did you get 'em all?"

"Oh, just found 'em. Rags came here one day himself. I call him Rags because he looks as if he was all ravelin's. And Peter, the blacksmith gave to me. Said I could have him if I'd get him out of his sight. He sort of named himself. And Tuesday was named that because I found him on Tuesday when I was on a picnic over to East Harniss. And Winfield—he's the newest one—came on Cap'n Burgess' fishing schooner and nobody wanted him, so they gave him to me. I named him Winfield because his face looks like our schoolteacher, Winfield Scott Daniels; hateful old thing! Wouldn't he be mad if he knew I named a dog after him! You're goin' to school, ain't you?"

"I s'pose so. They haven't said anything about it yet."

"I hope you will. You'll be upstairs, of course."

"Upstairs" means, in Orham, the grammar and higher grades. "Downstairs" is the primary department. Bradley answered that he supposed he should be "upstairs." He was just beginning to go "upstairs" in Wellmouth.

"How do you like the old maids—Miss Prissy and Tempy, I mean? Ain't they awful strict?"

"I don't know; I haven't been with 'em long enough to find out. They're mighty clean, ain't they?"

"Oh, dreadful! And they don't like a noise, and they don't like dogs, and they don't like me. They call me the 'dog girl;' I heard 'em. One time I went in there for grandma, and Tuesday and Peter followed me, and, first thing you know, they tracked mud all over the dinin' room. My, but wasn't Miss Prissy mad! But you just ought to have seen that floor," she chuckled.

Bradley thought of the spotless oilcloth and appreciated the situation. In the course of the conversation that followed he learned that Gus was an orphan, like himself, and that she lived there alone with her grandmother. Suddenly the girl snatched her steaming shoes out of the oven to run to the window.

"I thought I heard the gate shut," she exclaimed. "Yes, it's grandma. P'raps you'd better dodge out of the other door. She'll ask questions and find out about my feet if you don't. Goodby. P'raps I'll see you at school tomorrow."

Bradley picked up his bundle—he had brought it in with him—and slipped out of the side door, presenting himself a moment later in the glory of his new clothes to the critical gaze of the old maids.

When Bradley started for school the next day his head was ringing with instructions from the old maids concerning his behavior and attention to his studies.

"Now, be a good boy, Bradley," said Miss Prissy.

"Yes, Bradley," said Miss Tempy. "Remember, we expect a great deal of you. All our people have been smart scholars."

"Just as he turned into the main road he heard some one calling and turned to see his acquaintance of yesterday, the girl next door, running to catch up, her hood slipped back from her hair and a dented tin pail in her hand. Being a girl, Gus carried her noon luncheon during the winter months instead of coming home to eat it.

On the way to school they met another girl, whom Gus introduced as Clara Hopkins, a chum of hers. "She's tiptop. I sit with her. She's got most as many checks as I have," was her recommendation.

Upstairs at the schoolhouse was a large room, with rows of double desks on each side and a wide aisle in the center. One side of the aisle was the girls' side, and the other was for the boys. Mr. Daniels stiffly shook hands with the new scholar, asked him some questions concerning his progress in his studies and showed him where he should sit. The more advanced pupils occupied the desks at the rear of the room, and the younger ones—Bradley among them—sat in front. Bradley's seat mate was an older boy than he, rather good looking, with curly hair. His name, so he whispered before school began, was Sam Hammond.

At recess Bradley went out on the playground for a little while, but he felt rather lonesome among so many strangers and so returned to the schoolroom. It was empty, the teacher taking his customary "constitutional" in the yard. After a few minutes Gus came bounding in.

"Why, Brad," she exclaimed, "where've you been? I've been lookin' for you. Why didn't you come on out?"

"Oh, I don't know," replied the boy. "I don't know any of the fellers yet."

"Well, you're goin' to know 'em. Oh, my goodness! Winfield!"

The stub tailed dog sat panting at her feet, three inches of red tongue hanging from its mouth.

"You naughty, naughty dog!" cried Gus almost in tears. "How dare you! Go home this minute!"

"Go home, Winfield!" commanded Bradley, coming to the rescue.

Winfield had gone home by the shed route already that morning and didn't propose to do it again. When his mistress tried to catch him he retreated to a safe distance and wagged his tail.

"Oh, what shall we do?" wailed Gus. "Recess is 'most over, and if Mr. Daniels finds him here I don't know what'll happen!"

Bradley made a dash at the dog, and the latter started on the run about the room. At length they drove him out the "boys' door" at the other side. Finally, being penned in with both doors shut and thoroughly frightened, he dashed into the closet which was between the doors, and hid behind the wood box.

"Now," said Gus exultantly, "you watch that he don't get out, and I'll crawl in after him. Oh, my goodness, there's Mr. Daniels comin' now!"

The cowhide boots of the teacher were heard on the stairs. Bradley, in desperation, shut the closet door upon the imprisoned Winfield. Mr. Daniels stepped to the rope in the entry and gave it a pull. The bell above responded with a single note, and the scholars began to pour up the stairs.

"We will come to order," commanded the teacher. Bradley, glancing across the aisle at Gus, saw that she was as white as the whitewashed wall.

"First class in arithmetic," said Mr. Daniels, and then from the closet came a long, dismal whine. The first class in arithmetic stopped in its tracks and looked aghast. The whole school, with two exceptions, picked up its ears. The exceptions trembled.

"Ow-wow-wow!" came from the closet. Mr. Daniels strode across the floor and opened the door.

"Whose dog is this?" he demanded sternly.

No one answered.

"Come out of that!" commanded the teacher savagely. He reached behind the wood box and, seizing the cowering Winfield by the scruff of the neck, tossed him into the room. "Whose dog is this?" he repeated.

ANOTHER LETTER

Mr. Schenkelberger Writes on The Thompson Crane Controversy

Dear Emery:

In view of what has transpired, and in justice to you, I have written a statement of the facts to Mayor Thompson, and send you a copy herewith.

Sincerely,
A. F. Schenkelberger.

Emery L. Crane, Quincy.

Honorable James Thompson, Mayor of Quincy.

My dear Sir:—I have read Mr. Crane's letter to you in the Daily Ledger and have also read your reply. In view of the fact that my name has boen used in connection with what has transpired, I deem it only fair to all concerned that I should call your attention to certain facts connected with this unfortunate episode. For a proper understanding of the situation, it seems advisable that I should first state my own connection with the transaction.

During the campaign it became apparent to some of the business men in Quincy that a three-cornered fight would unquestionably result in the election of Mr. Shea. At that time it was firmly believed by those men with whom I had talked that Mr. Shea was so closely identified with the street railway company's interests that his election would be unfortunate for the best interests of the city. We also realized that the strongest objection to your re-election was due to certain appointments which you had made to fill responsible positions in your administration. It was believed, therefore, that if you were willing to make a change in the offices of the Commissioner of Public Works and City Solicitor, your administration otherwise would be acceptable to a large majority of the citizens.

I therefore called upon Mr. Crane, and suggested the advisability of his withdrawing in your favor, so as to avoid the inevitable election of Mr. Shea. Mr. Crane stated that he did not particularly care to be Mayor; that he had no personal feeling against you; that his entire interests in the matter and that of the friends back of him related to your appointments of inefficient men to important positions. He stated that he positively would not withdraw unless you agreed explicitly not to reappoint the present Commissoner of Public Works, the City Solicitor and possibly the Overseer of the Poor.

As a result of this interview and of conferences with several business men in town, Mr. Burgin called upon you and stated Mr. Crane's position as I have set forth. You took the matter under advisement and a further appointment was made with you for the afternoon of the day before nomination papers had to be filed.

This conference, between you, Mr. Burgin and myself, lasted from four o'clock in the afternoon until after six, and the objection to the efficiency of certain of your appointees were fully and freely discussed. It was made plain, and admitted by you, that if Mr. Crane remained in the fight it meant your defeat and the election of Mr. Shea. It was also agreed that while Mr. Shea's strength was underestimated, you would probably be elected if Mr. Crane could be induced to withdraw. You admitted that if you were elected under these conditions you would owe your election entirely to the withdrawal of Mr. Crane, and to the support that he and his friends would give you under these conditions; and if your election then resulted from this arrangement any reasonable request that Mr. Crane might make with reference to removal should receive very great consideration from you.

It was also pointed out to you that though you might have been under obligations to the Commissioner of Public Works and the Postmaster of Quincy for your original nomination and election, you were under no further obligations to them if the appointments which they had urged upon you had proved to be a failure, and Mr. Crane and his supporters should now request that you make certain changes in your new appointments.

After two hours discussion we all understood that we were in full agreement at these points:

1. That Mr. Crane would Not withdraw unless you agreed or gave proper assurances that certain changes in appointments should be made.
2. That if Mr. Crane did Not withdraw, you would be defeated.
3. That if Mr. Crane Did withdraw you would owe your election solely to him and that he would be entitled to great consideration in any suggestion that he might have to make about appointments.

When you were fianally asked what we should say to Mr. Crane you replied: "Many unkind things have been said about me, but no one has ever doubted my word. If I give my word of honor it is as good as my bond. If Mr. Crane withdraws and no other independent Republican is placed in nomination and I should be re-elected and Mr. Crane and a representative body of citizens should then request that certain changes in appointments be made, their request could but be acceded to."

Whereupon Mr. Burgin and I went directly to Mr. Crane's house told him the details of the interview and repeated your concluding words. Mr. Crane had already called a meeting of his friends for that evening to arrange the details of his campaign. In view of the "assurances" which we had carried from you to him his friends concluded that the object for which they were working had been accomplished, and he withdrew from the contest.

The letter which you quote, signed by Mr. Crane, was written by me at a time when you were losing votes right and left and it seemed that your defeat was imminent. I gave you a copy of the letter before it was printed. Of course I did not doubt that the "assurances" referred to in the letter would be fulfilled.

Very truly yours,
A. F. Schenkeberger.

P. S. I am sending a copy of thi letter to Mr. Crane.

Quincy, Jan. 25, 1907.

Galahad Brotherhood

The Relation of the Church and State in America will be the subject of the Rev. William E. Gardner's eighth address to the Galahad Brotherhood of Christ church on Sunday at 12.15 o'clock. Quite a few new faces were seen at the last meeting of Brotherhood and much regret was expressed by those who have been so unfortunate as to miss the previous addresses on such an interesting and instructive subject.

The Galahad Brotherhood invites all men to attend these meetings, especially as they are on a subject which will give the men of the future much thought.

New England Granite

It has been decided to use granite from New England quarries in the Provincetown monument to be erected on Cape Cod, which it is estimated will cost upwards of $100,000. The monument is be 250 feet tall and will be higher even than Bunker Hill monument. As Quincy granite was one of the first used for building and monumental work the larger part of the granite should be from Quincy quarries.

SHIRK JURY DUTY

Apparent Desire of Talesmen In the Thaw Case

BUT SEVEN ARE CHOSEN

But One Unmarried Man In a Panel Considered as Being of High Type of Citizens--Adjournment Over Saturday

New York, Jan. 26.—Fifty-one talesmen were examined in rapid fire order in the effort to complete the jury which is to try Harry K. Thaw for killing Stanford White, and at the end of yesterday's session two names had been added to the jury roll, making seven in all. One hundred and one talesmen have thus far been examined and five jurors remain to be chosen.

That there is increasing difficulty in finding men who are willing or competent to serve was evidenced by the fact that on the first day of the trial three jurors were sworn from among 19 talesmen, one of them being excused subsequently by the court. On the second day three jurors were secured from among 31 talesmen, while yesterday it required the winnowing of more than one-fourth of the entire special panel of 200 men to secure two members of the necessary 12.

One of the new jurors is Harold R. Faire, a printer and publisher, who is the only unmarried man thus far selected. Faire is not more than 30 years old. The second new juror is Malcolm S. Fraser, a dealer in underwear. He is about 40 years old and is married. Early in Fraser's examination it became apparent from the manner of his answers that he would make a juror satisfactory to both sides and there was no surprise when he was accepted.

Faire was registered as No. 6 and Fraser as No. 7 in the trial panel. This panel, as it grows, impresses the followers of the case more and more favorably and it is looked upon as being composed of as high a type of citizens as has ever been seen in a jury box in any court in this jurisdiction.

Excuses framed by the talesmen to avoid jury duty in the case are growing more varied each day. Man after man declared yesterday that his opinion as to the guilt or innocence of the accused was so firmly fixed as to admit of no change by reason of any testimony that might be adduced. District Attorney Jerome tried to convince the talesmen that newspaper stories were not the same as sworn testimony before a court, but his efforts were generally unsuccessful and challenges for cause were sustained by the court.

Of the 51 talesmen examined yesterday only three were peremptorily rejected. The state challenged a talesman named Nesbit, who stated, however, that he was in no way related to Mrs. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, wife of the defendant. The calling of Nesbit and his examination attracted much interest, the most eager listener being young Mrs. Thaw herself.

The defense used two peremptory challenges, one to relieve from duty Harris M. Fletcher, who declared that while he would carry an opinion into the jury box, he was sure he could lay it aside upon hearing the evidence and render a fair and impartial verdict. The defense challenged Fletcher in their own right only after Justice Fitzgerald had overruled a challenge for cause. The second peremptory challenge by the defense was directed against Sol N. Levy, a tobacco dealer.

Harry Thaw seemed much more accustomed to his surroundings yesterday and for the first time gazed interestedly at the crowd in the courtroom, which was limited, however, to talesmen and newspaper writers.

A feature of the day was the number of talesmen who had known Stanford White. At one time three men in succession asserted that they had been so well acquainted with the dead architect as to make them unsuitable as jurors.

There will be no session today, the court adjourning late yesterday until Monday morning. It is not customary for supreme court justices to sit on Saturday in this city. In the meantime the seven jurors will be in the custody of bailiffs.

Winter Stocks Reduced

New York, Jan. 26.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says that low temperature and snow at many points stimulated retail demand for seasonable merchandise, but retarded movement of freight, which was beginning to show noteworthy improvement. Distribution of heavyweight clothing, footwear and other winter goods was very large, reducing stocks that it was feared would be carried over on account of the mild season.

Noted In New Brunswick Politics

Fredericton, N. B., Jan. 26.—Andrew G. Blair, one of the best known public men in Canada, died suddenly of heart failure here last night. Blair had been residing in Ottawa for several years and came here on business. He was born in this city in 1844.

Authorities Got Worst of It

Grodno, Russia, Jan. 26.—As a result of a general exchange of shots between the authorities and a number of terrorists on the streets yesterday, five policemen, a prison warden and one terrorist were killed and a number of persons wounded.

SOCIALIST SETBACK

German Government Wins In Elections For the Reichstag

Berlin, Jan. 26.—The government has won a definite victory in the general elections held for a new reichstag. The Liberal, Radical and Conservative parties, supporting Prince Von Buelow's colonial policy, have won at least 20 seats, but more important for the government than the success of its colonial plans is the smashing defeat administered to the Socialists, who will lose a total of about 18 seats.

This is the first election since 1887 that the Socialists have not increased their representation in the reichstag by from five to 20 seats. They have lost especially in several large cities. The clerical centre holds almost all of its former 100 seats, having lost one or two to the Poles in Silesia. There is a possibility, however, that re-balloting in the undecided districts may lose one or two more seats to the centre party.

Reballoting probably will be necessary in 175 constituencies, so that complete returns will not be in before Feb. 5.

When it became evident at a late hour last night that the government had won immense crowds streamed from the neighborhood of the newspaper offices toward the palace of Chancellor Von Buelow. The people massed in front of the building and sang "Hail to Thee, With the Crown of Victory." Prince Von Buelow came out and addressed the crowd.

Railroad Crossties Are Expensive

Philadelphia, Jan. 26.—E. A. Sterling has been appointed forester of the Pennsylvania railroad. He will be the first forester of an American railroad. The action of the Pennsylvania railroad in taking up forestry is for the purpose of planting trees systematically to furnish a cross tie supply in future years. The railroads of the country are using about 110,000,000 crossties every year. This great demand for the best grades of ties is denuding the forests of the country so rapidly that ties have reached the price of 70 cents each.

Greger Chases Up Countess

Brest, Jan. 26.—Alexander Greger has entered a suit for damages against Countess de Rodellec du Porsiec, charging calumny and libel, in the matter of the charge made against him by the countess that he stole a valuable diamond from her while a guest of her husband and herself in Brittany. Greger already had brought suit against the countess for slander and defamation of character, and recently he horsewhipped the count in Paris.

Great Artists' Works "Indecent"

Omaha, Jan. 26.—The Omaha courts have decided that works of art by famous painters, including Van Dyke, Rubens and Vander Verff, are indecent and that reproductions of them cannot be sold in Omaha stores. For persisting in their sale, John Greenberg was fined and warned that on the next offense he would be sent to jail. A police sergeant confiscated certain reproductions on the ground that they were "indecent."

Sentiment as to Public Schools

Phoenix, Ariz., Jan. 26.—Both houses of the legislature passed a resolution viewing with "apprehension and regret the effort now being made to include within the scope of congressional legislation the matter of the management of public schools of the state of the Union" and extending to the state of California "sympathy and hope of success in the effort to maintain its constitutional rights."

An Expensive Undertaking

New York, Jan. 26.—The board of estimate and apportionment voted in favor of a four-track subway loop to connect the Manhattan terminals of the Brooklyn and Williamsburg bridges. It will be about a mile and a third in length and will cost the city $5,245,000. About 2½ years will be required for the construction.

Revenue From Gamblers

Sensitive Youngster a Suicide

Pottstown, Pa., Jan. 26.—John L. Hart, aged 13, was found hanging in the slaughter house of a relative at Stowe. His act of self-destruction is attributed to a playful remark made by a young girl companion, who said she did not like him. The boy was one of the brightest pupils in the local high school.

Relief Fund Not Yet Exhausted

NO CO-OPERATION

Kingston Affairs Appear to Be at Sixes and Sevens

SWETTENHAM IS BLAMED

Jamaicans Think Governor Has Completely "Lost His Head"--Exception Is Taken to Part of His Letter to Davis

Kingston, Jam., Jan. 26.—The lack of co-operation on the part of the central control here is greatly hampering the work of extending relief, providing shelter for the earthquake sufferers, pulling down the unsafe walls and repairing the damaged buildings, for which Governor Swettenham is severely condemned. The Daily Telegraph in an editorial says:

"His excellency is still careering round the city, poking his nose into various corners and attending to petty details which his subordinates ought to attend to. The result is that when prominent officials and other men in charge of important work call at headquarters house to consult him they cannot find the governor. The result is a total absence of a deliberate, organized movement. This is a state of affairs on which the British and colonial governments cannot congratulate themselves."

An instance of the governor's untimely, obstructive measures is the police enforcement of the regulation forbidding the re-erection of buildings, even wooden shacks, without the city surveyor's approval of the plans, which is causing great delay and dissatisfaction. The general opinion is that the governor has completely lost his head and is utterly unequal to the task of meeting the emergency.

Eugene Magnus, manager of the Crosswell store, which the governor in his letter to Admiral Davis said the Americans had cleaned up, denies the governor's version of the affair. He says the sailors merely assisted in getting out the safe, during which Swettenham arrived on the spot and angrily protested because the sailors were Americans.

A report issued by Health Officer Ogilvie warmly thanks the crew of the American battleship Missouri for their assistance in erecting tents and commends the services of Surgeon Norton of the Missouri in establishing the American hospital in Winchester park.

Earth tremors continue, but at long intervals and in decreased intensity.

Governor Swettenham has cabled to the secretary of state for the colonies that the provisions received are more than ample for the relief of the destitute and that no further funds are needed except for the rebuilding of the houses of the lower and middle classes.

Information Not Given Out

Washington, Jan. 26.—A cablegram was received last night by the state department from John R. Carter, American charge at London, regarding the Swettenham-Davis episode, and the message formed a theme of discussion at a conference held at the White House between the president and Secretary of State Root. Assistant Secretary of State Bacon also participated in the conference, which continued until midnight. It was admitted that the Kingston episode was discussed, but none of the persons present would give any information to newspaper men on the subject.

Fred Marriott's Close Call

Ormond-Daytona Beach, Fla., Jan. 26.—Fred A. Marriott, while driving the cigar-shaped steam racer at a rate of two miles a minute in an effort to break the world's mile record, struck a slight ridge of hardened sand in the beach. The force of the blow lifted the front wheels of the racer from the beach, rendered the steering gear useless and pitched the car, after a leap through space, on its side. Marriott was badly injured, but is believed to be out of danger.

Russians to Leave Manchuria

Rome, Jan. 26.—The foreign office has received an official communication from the Russian government saying that Russia has decided to begin the immediate withdrawal of her troops from Manchuria without waiting for April 25, the date fixed for this step in the Portsmouth treaty. This evacuation will be accomplished as quickly as possible.

Soldiers Pilfered at Fire

Toulon, France, Jan. 26.—The provision depots of the government here were destroyed by fire last night. The damage is placed at $200,000. A regiment of infantry was called out to assist in the work. Ten soldiers of this regiment were arrested for pilfering from the burned buildings.

"We're so glad you've come, cap'n," said Miss Prissy, after the fans were laid on the table. "We've got so many things to talk to you about, and we want to ask your advice. Bradley, don't you think you'd like to go out into the dinin' room a little while?"

The boy, acting upon this decided hint, went into the dining room, and Miss Prissy shut the door after him.

"Now, Cap'n Titcomb," she began, "I s'pose you were awfully surprised to hear we'd took a boy to bring up? Well, you ain't any more surprised than we are to think we should do such a thing. But it seemed as if we jest had to or else give up bein' Christians altogether. I'll tell you how it was."

And she did tell him, beginning with the exact relationship between Bradley's mother and the Allens, expatiating upon the shiftlessness of the boy's father and how he "never saved a cent," nor even took out an insurance policy to provide for his son in case of his own death.

"But, mercy me," she exclaimed, lifting her hands, "what on earth we'll do with a boy is more'n I know. What shall we do?"

"Bring him up in the way he ought to go, I guess," replied the captain calmly. "Send him to school first thing. How is he off for clothes?"

"Hasn't got any that are fit for anything but the rag bag," replied Miss Prissy with decision. "And that's another thing. Who's goin' to buy 'em for him? I'm sure I don't know what a boy needs to wear any more than a cat."

"Here's a little somethin' I brought for you, Tempy."

"I'll buy his fit out, if you want me to," said the captain. "Take him down to Weeks' store right now, if you say the word."

"Oh, I wish you would. You pay Mr. Weeks, and I'll pay you."

They pressed the captain to stay for dinner, or at least to return for that meal, but he declined, promising, however, to dine with them before he went back to his vessel.

"Come on, Brad," he said, entering the dining room; "you and me's goin' on a cruise downtown."

Bradley put on the shabby overcoat and cap for the last time and walked down to the back gate and along the sidewalk with the captain.

Meanwhile Miss Tempy, seated in the rocker by the window and holding a fan in each hand, was examining them with the greatest care.

"Prissy," she said at last in a solemn tone, "they're jest exactly alike."

"Yes," said her sister, with a stifled sigh, "they're jest alike."

CHAPTER III.

IN "Weeks' store" was to be found an assortment of wares ranging from potatoes and razors to molasses and ladies' dress goods. Somewhere within this extensive range was a limited supply of what Mr. Weeks' advertisement in the item called "Youths', Men's and Children's Clothing In Latest Styles at Moderate Prices." The styles were "late"—about a year late—and the prices were moderate when the lengthy period of credit given to customers is taken into consideration.

Captain Titcomb, exchanging greetings with the half dozen loungers by the stove, whose business there was, as Mr. Weeks himself said, "to swap bad tobacco smoke for heat," passed to the rear of the store, followed by Bradley. There he proceeded to select an entire outfit for the boy calculated to clothe him in successive layers from the skin outward. When the pile of garments on the counter was complete the captain and Mr. Weeks entered into a lengthy argument concerning price. There was a "Sunday hat" involved in the transaction, and about this piece of headgear the battle waged fiercest.

"It's too much money, Caleb," said the captain finally. "I guess I'll try the New York store. Tom Emery's always treated me fair enough, and I'll give him a chance. Come on, Brad."

"I'll take off a quarter on the suit," conceded the storekeeper, who was loath to see so much custom go to a rival.

"No," was the reply, "that ain't enough to amount to anything. Tell you what I'll do, Caleb. Throw in that Sunday hat and I'll take the lot and pay you cash for it and run my risk of gittin' the money."

So the bargain was concluded on that basis. Bradley retired to the back room and emerged clothed in his new garments and tremendously conscious of the fact. The captain said he looked so fresh that you could "smell the paint on him."

"Say, Caleb," said "Squealer" Wixon after Captain Titcomb and his protege had left the premises, "did Ez tell you who that boy was?"

"No, he didn't. I hinted two or three times, but he wouldn't say."

"Well, I'll tell you. 'Twas the old maids' boy- Ben Nickerson's son. Barney said he brought him over in the coach last night."

"You don't mean it!" exclaimed the chopfallen Mr. Weeks. "Well, if that ain't enough to— Ez made me throw in a hat that was wuth a dollar 'n' a ha'f 'cause he said he'd pay cash for everything and take his chance of gittin' his money back. And Prissy and Tempy always pay cash for everything. Reg'lar Titcomb trick!"

The loafers about the store roared with delight.

"Oh, I tell you," remarked "Squealer," "you've got to keep your weather eye peeled when you're dealin' with Cap'n Ez. He'll have you, head and scales, if you ain't careful."

"That's all right," grumbled "Bluey" Bacheldor, "but he'll git fetched up all standin' some of these days. You can call him smart if you want to, but it's pretty risky smartness, most folks think. You notice his schooner's always makin' record trips, and he's always havin' presents give him and all that. How many presents did you have give to you, Cap'n Jabez, when you was runnin' a coaster?"

"Not a one," indignantly replied the person addressed, Captain Jabez Bailey. "Not a one. What I got I had to work for."

It may be that Captain Jabez overworked during his sea experiences. Certainly no one in Orham had known him to do a stroke of work since he retired to live on his wife's earnings as a dressmaker.

"Well," commented Captain Eri Hedge, who was not a member of the circle, but had dropped in to buy some tobacco, "I like Cap'n Ez. He does love to git the best of a bargain, and he's a 'driver' on a vessel, and perhaps he likes to shave the law pretty close sometimes. Ez is a reg'lar born gambler for takin' chances, but I never knew him to do a mean trick."

"What do you call that game he put up on the old maids?" asked "Squealer." "You knew 'bout that, didn't you, Jabez? Seems Prissy and Tempy wanted to sell that little piece of cran-b'ry swamp of theirs 'cause it didn't pay them to take care of it and keep it in shape. Prissy told Seth Wingate about it, and Seth said he didn't want it, but that he'd give them so and so—a fair price, consid'rin'. Well, they was goin' to sell it to Seth, but Ez comes home 'bout that time, hears of the deal and goes to Prissy and buys it for $50 mor'n Seth offered. And inside of three months along comes that Ostable company and buys all that land for their big swamp. They say Titcomb made more'n a hundred dollars out of that deal. If you don't think that's a mean trick, Cap'n Eri, you ask Seth Wingate what he thinks of it."

"I know about that," said Captain Eri calmly, "and I think it was jest another case of Ez's takin' chances, that's all. Seth's growlin' is only sour grapes. Ez knew the Ostable folks was talkin' 'bout layin' out a big swamp over here some time or other. He jest bought the Allen piece and run his risk. You notice Prissy and Tempy ain't findin' no fault. They think he's the only man in town. Fact is, he is the only man, outside of the minister, that they'll have any dealin's with. Queer pairin' off that is—Ez and the minister!" he chuckled.

"Oh, women's fools, anyhow," snorted Captain Jabez savagely. "Ez Titcomb always could wind 'em' 'round his fingers. He's been next door to keepin' comp'ny with more girls'n a few in this town sence he was old enough to leave school, but he don't go fur enough to git engaged or nothin' like that. Minute there's any talk that he's likely to git married to one of 'em away goes Ez, and that's the end of that courtin'. And yet, spite of their talk 'bout his bein' slick and hints that he's tricky they're always heavin' up to a feller, 'How smart Cap'n Titcomb is,' and 'Why don't you make money same as Cap'n Ezry?' 'Nough to make an honest man sick."

Captain Eri made his purchases and went home, but the others continued to dissect Ezra Titcomb's character, and the general opinion seemed to be that he would "bear watchin'."

Meanwhile the captain, unconscious of all this, piloted Bradley to the corner of the road upon which the Allen sisters lived, and there left him with a message to the effect that he (the captain) would call next day. Then he sought his room at the "Traveler's Rest," there to read the paper of the day before, while the boy, with his big bundle of old clothes and new "extras," walked homeward alone.

The Allen house was on the "lower road," and to reach it you turned the corner just above "Web" Saunders' billiard room and went on past "Lem" Mullett's stable, and the Methodist "buryin' ground"—the sects in Orham cannot, apparently, agree even after they are dead, for each denomination has its separate cemetery—past the late Captain Saunders' estate and on up the hill overlooking the bay. Bradley had just reached the little house next door to the Allens, when, through the side gate of its yard, there darted a small, ragged looking dog, barking as if it went by steam. It was followed by a big dog, also barking, and this in turn was followed by another and still another. None of the animals was handsome and none looked as if it was good for much except to bark, but each seemed to feel that it was its special duty to devour the boy before the others got a chance at him. On they came, a noisy procession, growling and snapping.

Bradley put down his bundle and looked about for a stone, but the snow covered the road, and there were no stones in sight. He poised himself, on one foot and held the other ready for a kick. The dogs formed a circle about him and the racket was blood curdling.

Out of the gate darted a slim girl in a red dress, brandishing a broom.

"They won't hurt you!" she screamed, running to the rescue. "Stop it, Peter! Be quiet, Rags! Go home, Tuesday! Winfield, I'll give it to you!"

The dogs dodged the broom and retired to a safe distance, wagging their tails and doing their best to indicate that they were only making believe anyhow. Winfield, the small dog that had led the attack, was the most persistent, and he snapped at the broom in high glee, evidently considering that it was waved for his particular amusement.

"They got away before I could stop 'em," panted the girl. "Grandma's gone to the store, and I went out in the woodshed to play with 'em, and they bounced out of the door first thing. They don't mean anything; they're just full of it, that's all."

"I wasn't scared," said Bradley. "I didn't believe they'd bite. I like dogs."

"Do you?" said the girl eagerly. "So do I. Grandma says she does, too, in moderation. The old maids don't though. Oh, I forgot. You're the old maids' boy, ain't you? I saw you out in their yard with Miss Prissy this mornin'."

"Yes, I saw you too. You live in here, don't you?"

"Um-hum. Oh, my goodness! I haven't got any rubbers on, and grandma said if I got my feet wet today she didn't know but she'd skin me. I must go right back and dry 'em before she comes. I've had a cold; that's why I ain't to school. How'll I ever get these dogs in?"

"I'll help you if you want me to," volunteered Bradley.

"Will you? That's splendid. Come on!"

Bradley carried his bundle to the back steps of the little house and then returned to assist at the dog catching. It wasn't an easy operation, but a tin dish scientifically rattled by his new acquaintance tempted all but the wary Winfield, and a bone finally decoyed the latter inside the woodshed, and the door was slammed and bolted upon the humbugged pack.

"There," exclaimed the girl, "that's all right! I hope grandma won't notice the tracks in the snow. If she's only forgot her glasses it's all right. Now come into the kitchen till I put my feet in the oven. What's your name?"

"Bradley Nickerson. Most folks call me Brad."

"That's a good name. My last name's Baker. I hate my first one—it's Augusta. Ain't that the worst? Grandma calls me 'Gusty.' Ugh! You can call me 'Gus' if you want to. It sounds more like a boy's name. I wish I was a boy."

"Why?"

"Oh, because a boy can do things and doesn't have to be 'ladylike.' If I was a boy nobody would think it was funny for me to like dogs, and I could have as many as I wanted."

"I should think you had a good many now. Where did you get 'em all?"

"Oh, just found 'em. Rags came here one day himself. I call him Rags because he looks as if he was all ravelin's. And Peter, the blacksmith gave to me. Said I could have him if I'd get him out of his sight. He sort of named himself. And Tuesday was named that because I found him on Tuesday when I was on a picnic over to East Harniss. And Winfield—he's the newest one—came on Cap'n Burgess' fishing schooner and nobody wanted him, so they gave him to me. I named him Winfield because his face looks like our schoolteacher, Winfield Scott Daniels; hateful old thing! Wouldn't he be mad if he knew I named a dog after him! You're goin' to school, ain't you?"

"I s'pose so. They haven't said anything about it yet."

"I hope you will. You'll be upstairs, of course."

"Upstairs" means, in Orham, the grammar and higher grades. "Downstairs" is the primary department. Bradley answered that he supposed he should be "upstairs." He was just beginning to go "upstairs" in Wellmouth.

"How do you like the old maids—Miss Prissy and Tempy, I mean? Ain't they awful strict?"

"I don't know; I hayen't been with 'em long enough to find out. They're mighty clean, ain't they?"

"Oh, dreadful! And they don't like a noise, and they don't like dogs, and they don't like me. They call me the 'dog girl;' I heard 'em. One time I went in there for grandma, and Tuesday and Peter followed me, and, first thing you know, they tracked mud all over the dinin' room. My, but wasn't Miss Prissy mad! But you just ought to have seen that floor," she chuckled.

Bradley thought of the spotless oilcloth and appreciated the situation. In the course of the conversation that followed he learned that Gus was an orphan, like himself, and that she lived there alone with her grandmother. Suddenly the girl snatched her steaming shoes out of the oven to run to the window.

"I thought I heard the gate shut," she exclaimed. "Yes, it's grandma. P'raps you'd better dodge out of the other door. She'll ask questions and find out about my feet if you don't. Goodby. P'raps I'll see you at school tomorrow."

Bradley picked up his bundle—he had brought it in with him—and slipped out of the side door, presenting himself a moment later in the glory of his new clothes to the critical gaze of the old maids.

When Bradley started for school the next day his head was ringing with instructions from the old maids concerning his behavior and attention to his studies.

"Now, be a good boy, Bradley," said Miss Prissy.

"Yes, Bradley," said Miss Tempy. "Remember, we expect a great deal of you. All our people have been smart scholars."

"Just as he turned into the main road he heard some one calling and turned to see his acquaintance of yesterday, the girl next door, running to catch up, her hood slipped back from her hair and a dented tin pail in her hand. Being a girl, Gus carried her noon luncheon during the winter months instead of coming home to eat it.

On the way to school they met another girl, whom Gus introduced as Clara Hopkins, a chum of hers. "She's tiptop. I sit with her. She's got most as many checks as I have," was her recommendation.

Upstairs at the schoolhouse was a large room, with rows of double desks on each side and a wide aisle in the center. One side of the aisle was the girls' side, and the other was for the boys. Mr. Daniels stiffly shook hands with the new scholar, asked him some questions concerning his progress in his studies and showed him where he should sit. The more advanced pupils occupied the desks at the rear of the room, and the younger ones—Bradley among them—sat in front. Bradley's seat mate was an older boy than he, rather good looking, with curly hair. His name, so he whispered before school began, was Sam Hammond.

At recess Bradley went out on the playground for a little while, but he felt rather lonesome among so many strangers and so returned to the schoolroom. It was empty, the teacher taking his customary "constitutional" in the yard. After a few minutes Gus came bounding in.

"Why, Brad," she exclaimed, "where've you been? I've been lookin' for you. Why didn't you come on out?"

"Oh, I don't know," replied the boy. "I don't know any of the fellers yet."

"Well, you're goin' to know 'em. Oh, my goodness! Winfield!"

The stub tailed dog sat panting at her feet, three inches of red tongue hanging from its mouth.

"You naughty, naughty dog!" cried Gus almost in tears. "How dare you! Go home this minute!"

"Go home, Winfield!" commanded Bradley, coming to the rescue.

Winfield had gone home by the shed route already that morning and didn't propose to do it again. When his mistress tried to catch him he retreated to a safe distance and wagged his tail.

"Oh, what shall we do?" wailed Gus. "Recess is 'most over, and if Mr. Daniels finds him here I don't know what'll happen!"

Bradley made a dash at the dog, and the latter started on the run about the room. At length they drove him out the "boys' door" at the other side. Finally, being penned in with both doors shut and thoroughly frightened, he dashed into the closet which was between the doors, and hid behind the wood box.

"Now," said Gus exultantly, "you watch that he don't get out, and I'll crawl in after him. Oh, my goodness, there's Mr. Daniels comin' now!"

The cowhide boots of the teacher were heard on the stairs. Bradley, in desperation, shut the closet door upon the imprisoned Winfield. Mr. Daniels stepped to the rope in the entry and gave it a pull. The bell above responded with a single note, and the scholars began to pour up the stairs.

"We will come to order," commanded the teacher. Bradley, glancing across the aisle at Gus, saw that she was as white as the whitewashed wall.

"First class in arithmetic," said Mr. Daniels, and then from the closet came a long, dismal whine. The first class in arithmetic stopped in its tracks and looked aghast. The whole school, with two exceptions, picked up its ears. The exceptions trembled.

"Ow-wow-wow!" came from the closet. Mr. Daniels strode across the floor and opened the door.

"Whose dog is this?" he demanded sternly.

No one answered.

"Come out of that!" commanded the teacher savagely. He reached behind the wood box and, seizing the cowering Winfield by the scruff of the neck, tossed him into the room. "Whose dog is this?" he repeated.

Most of the scholars knew whose dog it was, but none of them told.

"I asked a question!" thundered the master. "Who put that—that creature in the closet?"

Bradley looked at his fellow conspirator. Then he held up his hand. "I did," he said.

Mr. Daniels' mouth opened in surprise. New pupils did not usually begin in this way.

"You did?" he gasped.

"Yes, sir. He fol— I mean he came into the room when 'twas recess, and we—I tried to put him out, and he wouldn't go."

"So you shut him in the closet. Brilliant youth! As this is your first day here, I suppose I must stretch a point and believe it was not done on purpose. If it had been any other of the scholars I should have made an example of 'em. I am surprised that you should treat your little brother" (appreciative titter from the school) "in such a manner. You may put him out."

It was easy enough to command, but not so easy to do. The dog, frightened at the crowd, backed away when Bradley approached.

"Come here, Winfield," said the boy, his face a bright crimson. The school giggled at the name.

"Winfield?" repeated Mr. Daniels. "Why that name, if you please?"

"I—I don't know, sir."

"You don't know?"

"No, sir." And then the boy had a happy thought. "He's named after Gen'ral Hancock, I guess."

General Winfield Scott Hancock, in his role of statesman, was very much in the public eye just at this time.

Mr. Daniels hesitated. He more than suspected the dog's real namesake, but he wasn't sure and, being a weak man, was afraid of making a mistake.

"Well, put the creature out!" he snarled, and then, losing his temper and aiming a kick at the dog, he commanded, "Git out, you brute!"

That kick was a mistake. Winfield wasn't used to kicks, and this one scattered his doggish senses completely. He started on a panicky, yelping flight, hotly pursued by Bradley. Down the aisle by the "boys' side," across the back of the room among the feet of the "first class in arithmetic" and up the aisle by the "girls' side" sped the chase. At the end of the second lap the entire school was in an uproar. Mr. Daniels, white with rage, took a hand in the pursuit, and his efforts and those of two or three more volunteers only made matters worse.

At length the dog, hemmed in on both sides, hesitated in the middle of the broad aisle. Suddenly he darted toward the closet once more. Mr. Daniels leaped to intercept him, tripped, struck the stool upon which the bucket of drinking water was placed and sprawled upon the floor in the center of a miniature flood, while Winfield, leaping over him, darted through the entry and down the stairs, a shrieking maniac.

The dripping Mr. Daniels was physically cool, but mentally very warm indeed. "Checks" were distributed with liberality and two boys were "ferruled" before 12 o'clock came. One of these sufferers was Bradley's seat mate, Sam Hammond.

Bradley went home alone. When the old maids asked him innumerable questions concerning how he "got along" at school he simply answered, "All right," and gave no details. Miss Tempy was somewhat worried at his silence and confided to her sister the fear that he had been "studyin' too hard." "All our people have been dreadful keen students," she said.

It was nearly 1 o'clock when the boy re-entered the school yard. As he did so a shout went up from a group near the fence.

"Here he is!" yelled one of the older boys. "Here's your beau, Gus. He won't let 'em plague his girl, you bet!"

"No," shouted Sam Hammond, "Gusty's all right now, ain't she? He'll take care of her.

"Gusty had a little dog;
Its fleece was black's a crow"—

"You shut up!" screamed Gus, breaking from the circle and stamping her foot savagely. Her face was red, and there were tears in her eyes.

"It followed her to school one day,"

"What's the matter, Gus?" asked Bradley, coming up.

"Haw, haw!" laughed Sam gleefully. "I told you so. Bradley 'll take care of her.

"Bradley Nickerson, so they say,
Goes a-courtin' night and day;
Sword and pistol by his side,
And Gusty Baker 'll be his bride.

"What's the matter, Gus?" he added mockingly.

"What is the matter?" repeated Bradley.

"None of your bus'ness!" snapped Gus, who was in no mood to be friendly with any one. "You jest wait, Sam Hammond! I'll fix you! Got whipped in school! Ha, ha! Cry baby!" And she gave an exaggerated imitation of her enemy's facial contortions during the "feruling" that morning.

"Come on, Gus," interposed Clara Hopkins. "He isn't worth talkin' to. Come on, I've got somethin' to show you."

Gus reluctantly suffered herself to be led away amid the derisive hootings of Sam and his friends.

"Ain't you goin' with her?" asked Sam provokingly. "She wants her Braddy, so's to take care of her if Winfield comes to school again."

Mr. Daniels tripped.

Bradley's temper was slow to rise, but it was rising now.

"Who are you talkin' to?" he demanded.

"You. Who do you s'pose?"

"Well, you'd better shut up."

"I had? S'pose I don't want to?"

"Then I'll make you—that's what!"

"You will?"

"Yes, I will."

"You ain't the size. Takes a man, not a monkey."

"I'll show you whether I'm the size or not."

"You will?"

"Aw, gee!" said one of the bigger boys. "I wouldn't take that from no Wellmouth kid, if I was you, Sam."

"Nor I, neither," said another.

Thus encouraged, Sam bristled up to his opponent and looked down at him sneeringly. Bradley didn't give way an inch, and the two boys rubbed jackets as they moved slowly about each other. The surrounding group looked delightedly expectant.

"Stop your shovin'!" commanded Sam, giving his enemy a push with his shoulder.

"Stop yourself," said Bradley, pushing back.

"I'll put a head on you so's the old maids won't know you."

"I'll make you snivel worse 'n you did in school this mornin'."

"Well, Sam," exclaimed a spectator in huge disgust, "'fore I'd take that!"

The Hammond boy did not really want to fight, but, thus goaded, he suddenly gave Bradley a violent push with both hands. The next instant both youngsters were clasped tightly together, gripping each other about the neck and wrestling savagely. In a moment they fell with a thump and rolled over and over, pounding, kicking and scratching. The snow flew, and the crowd whooped and pushed and strained to see better.

Then there was a rush, a frightened scurry, and both combatants were pulled apart and jerked to their feet, while Mr. Daniels, holding each by the coat collar, glared down upon them.

"You may come with me," he said, with chilling calmness.

The scene in the schoolroom that followed was brief, but exciting. Bradley held out his hand and bit his lip stubbornly while the ferule descended—once, twice, twelve times.

"There!" said the teacher. "Now, you may take your seat. For a new scholar you begin extremely well. Now, Samuel!"

The Hammond hand having received its share of beating and its owner also sent to his seat, Mr. Daniels said: "Both of you will lose your afternoon recess. I shall also give each of you a note, telling of your punishment, to take home."

At half past 4 that afternoon Bradley, with the note tightly clasped in his hand, walked dismally up the walk to the Allen back door. The thought that he had disgraced himself forever in the eyes of his protectors burned like a fire under his new cap; also there was a bitter feeling that Gus, the cause of all his trouble, had not been near him to console or ask pardon.

It was typical of the boy that he had not thought of destroying the note. He handed it to Miss Prissy the moment he opened the door. She read it and sat heavily down in the chintz rocker.

"My soul and body!" she wailed. "Tempy Allen, come here this minute! Here, for mercy's sake, read this!"

Miss Tempy's agitation was even more marked than that of her sister.

"Oh, oh, oh!" she cried, waving the condemning sheet of paper like a distress signal. "How could you? How could you? I don't b'lieve a relation of the Allens was ever whipped in school before. What shall we do, Prissy? And his first day too!"

Bradley, with direful thoughts of self destruction in his mind, twisted his new cap into a ball, but said nothing.

"He says you were fightin' and there was somethin' else," said Miss Prissy. "Tell the whole story now—every word."

The boy began slowly. He told of shutting the dog in the closet, but was interrupted by the older sister, who demanded to know whose dog it was.

"Whose was it?" she asked. "Why don't you answer? Don't you know?"

"Yes'm."

"Then whose was it?"

Bradley shifted his feet uneasily on the mat.

"I ain't goin' to tell," he muttered sullenly.

"Ain't goin' to tell? Why, I nev"—

She was interrupted. The door behind Bradley flew open, and Gus appeared, tearful, but determined.

"Miss Prissy and Miss Tempy," she began, "don't you scold Bradley—don't you, now, a bit! It was all my fault, every mite of it. Oh, dear, dear!"

And, with sobs and amid the ejaculations of the astonished sisters, she told the whole story, omitting nothing and sparing herself not the least. When the recital was finished Miss Prissy was the first to comment upon it.

"Well," she exclaimed, "this is the most—I never did— There, Tempy, if this ain't a lesson in keepin' bad comp'ny, then I don't know. Augusty, you'd better go home, I think."

Gus looked at Bradley appealingly, then at the sisters, and, with another burst of sobs, flung herself out of the door and slammed it behind her.

"That awful dog girl!" sputtered Miss Tempy. "I knew what she was from the time she spoiled this very floor with her dreadful critters. Bradley Nickerson, don't you ever speak to her again. Now promise."

But that promise the boy would not make, although the argument lasted for an hour and ended in his being sent to his room without his supper.

"It looks to me," said Miss Prissy that night, "as if we'd got about as much on our hands as you and me could handle, Tempy."

"It certainly does," agreed her sister nervously. "I think it's our duty to ask Cap'n Titcomb's advice right off."

NEW CODDINGTON

GOOD AFTERNOON.

The letter of A. F. Schenkelberge, will be found almost as interesting as "Partners of the Tide." These continued stories have created a great demand for the Daily Ledger.

President Roosevelt has been dubbed with more titles than any president of the United States. Some of these are satirical, while some convey the honest admiration of the christeners. He has been called "Roosevelt the Resolute" by his admirers, and by those who are not so friendly he has been dubbed with the title of "Roosevelt, Rex" because of his alleged imperialistic leanings, and "Roosevelt the Meddlesome." It has remained for a foreign potentate, however, to throw over Mr. Roosevelt the glamor of the highest flown title of all. In a letter just received from the Sultan of Morocco, in which that monarch's gratitude was expressed for the appointment of Samuel R. Gummiere as American Minister, the President was addressed as "The Beloved, The Most Cherished, The Exalted, The Most Gracious Friend, Most Honored and Excellent President of the Republic of the United States of America, who is the Pillar of its Great Influence and the Director of its Most Important Affairs, the Most Celebrated Preserver of the Ties and True Friendship, the Faithful, Theodore Roosevelt." The President it is said to have resembled the advertisements for a popular dentrifice when he read this florid message. It is not likely that the title will be used in future in any of the state documents.

Heaviest Snowfall Of the Winter

The snow storm which commenced yesterday morning continued through the night and at noon was snowing hard. There is but little wind so that the snow has fallen level and some good sleighing should follow when the storm abates.

The temperature has risen several degrees so that it is not so disagreeable to be out as if the mercury was flirting about the zero mark.

The street railway company had its big snow plows running all night, so that all lines are open and cars are running practically on time.

The storm, however, interferes somewhat with the ice men, who are housing ice as it takes considerable time to keep the ponds free from snow.

New Tracks And More Cars

The Railroad Commissioner issued their decision this morning on the complaints of the Weymouth committee relative to service on the Old Colony street railway.

The complainants called attention to the tracks on Pleasant street, and claimed they should be reconstructed. The complaint is clearly sustained and the commissioners say the tracks ought to be constructed as soon as weather will permit.

The committee also presented complaint of certain patrons with reference of overcrowding of cars. The commissioners say the railway can fairly be required to provide standing room for passengers who are unable to secure seats.

It is expected this rule will be enforced, and that if a large number are crowded, larger cars or more cars should be provided.

Turn About Is Fair Play.

Last Christmas a middle aged tin plate worker married a widow whose acquaintance he had made but a few weeks before while working some little distance away from home.

"Sarrah," he said nervously after the guests had departed, "I've a weddin' present for ye."

"What is it, John?" said Sarrah, with a smirk.

"I 'ope ye won't be 'fended, Sarrah," said John, more agitated than ever, "but it is—er—er—it is five of 'em."

"Five of w'at?" asked Sarrah.

"Five children!" blurted out John desperately, anticipating a scene. "I didn't tell ye I 'ad children—five of 'em."

Sarrah took the news quite calmly. In fact, she appeared relieved.

"Oh, well, John," she said, "that do make it easier for me to tell ye. Five is not so bad as me, whatever. Seven I 'ave got!"

"W'at?" howled John.

"Seven," repeated Sarrah composedly. "That is my weddin' present to ye, John."—Ladies' Home Journal.

Grandfather's Likeness So Natural.

At a gathering of artists once several of the older ones got together and began telling of the marvelous masterpieces they had produced in their days. When everything had quieted down a bit an old man over in the corner was heard to remark:

Quincy Largest In Point of Attendance

The First Annual Ball Of Police Association Attended by Fully Fifteen Hundred

The first annual ball of the Quincy Police Relief Association has passed into history, but it will be many days before it is gone from memory. In point of attendance it was a record breaker. Never has there been a larger party at Quincy Music hall than on this occasion.

It seemed as though everybody was there, and it would be much easier to tell who were not there, than to tell who was present. It was thought that the storm would keep some away, but apparently it did not. The guests of the evening began to arrive early, but the great crush did not come until between 8 and 9 o'clock. Then they came by carloads.

The entrance and stairway leading to the hall above were packed with people, and it was slow work getting into the hall for everybody had to pass through a small gate, on each side of which stood an officer collecting tickets. Many who came to look on made their way toward the balcony only to find that others were there before them, and that all seats had been taken early.

Two places were provided for checking clothing, as the main check room near the entrance was entirely inadequate.

The officers comprising the several committees were on hand early and did everything possible for the comfort of the party. They were accustomed to handling large crowds, and they proved that they were masters of the art even if full evening dress had taken place of the coats with two rows of brass buttons.

The decorations were confined to the platform and consisted of a row of potted plants across the front. In the center on a background of green was a large Quincy police shield worked out in flowers. It was a handsome piece of work and was a credit to Derringer, the florist who furnished it.

Music for the occasion was furnished by Cuff's orchestra which in itself was a sufficient guarantee that no fault could be found on this score. From 8 to 9 o'clock, while the guests were assembling, they gave an excellent concert, the program of which was as follows:

March—New Colonial	Hall
Overture—Remick's Hits	Lampe
Concert Waltz—Amour Eternal	Mittenhall
Xylophone Solo—Dixie Blossoms	Henrich

It was but a few minutes past 9 o'clock when the grand march which opened the ball was inaugurated. Several tried to count the number in line but gave it up. Chief Frank E. Burrell led the march with Miss Ethel M. Blair and was followed by Lieut. Daniel R. McKay and Mrs. McKay, ex-Chief Walter H. Ripley and Mrs. Ripley, Officer Alfred H. Goodhue and Mrs. Goodhue, and other members of the force and guests with their ladies. On account of the large number participating, and the crowd that stood at the entrance to the hall, it was impossible to execute other than plain marching movements.

First they came down the hall by couples, then by fours, eights and then sixteen front. The sixteen line front was indeed a pretty sight. They came with slow measured steps and with the front line as true as any body of soldiers could execute it. In this front line were Chief Burrell, Lieut. McKay, ex-Chief Ripley and Officers, Goodhue, Kellier, Larkin, Milford and Cahill with ladies.

As they reached the end of the hall there was a spontaneous outburst of applause. Then the line came down into couples and formed for the Cecilian circle and the ball was on. There were nineteen numbers on the program, and included the well known modern dances with a sprinkling of the square dances.

The several numbers on the program were dedicated including one to the Mayor, one to Chief, one to Judge and Court officials, one to the City Council, one to "Old Harry" etc. It waa not until 2 A. M, that the ball came to an end with a waltz "When the Evening Breeze is Sighing" "Home, Sweet Home."

The list of invited guests included Mayor Thompson and all of the ex-Mayors, all of the department officials, ex-police chiefs, members of the City Council of 1907 and 1906, the officials of the district court, Representatives Hultman and Sandberg, police chiefs of departments in surrounding cities and towns and representatives of the press.

Mayor Thompson was unable to be present on account of a severe cold. Many of the other City officials and Councilmen were present, however, as well as the chiefs of out-of-town departments. An effort was made to tabulate a list of the invited guests present, but owing to the crush it was impossible to get a complete list.

Some of those noticed however were: Chief Fitzgerald of Weymouth, Representative Sandberg, City Solicitor Thomas, Chairman Teasdale of the Board of Health, Engineer Nyhan, Postmaster Hammond, Registrar of Voters, McKeon, Lieut. Corcoran of the Central fire station, Supt. Gleason of the Water department, Principal Assessor Johnson, and Councilmen Stone, Coombs, Curtin add Deacon.

A continuous lunch was served throughout the entire evening in the banquet hall by Thompson.

Everything about the ball was carried out as per program, and taken as a whole it was a decided social and financial success.

Base Ball Letter

Referring to the article in The Ledger recently on the proposed scheme of forming a baseball league in this city and surrounding towns, composed of teams representing the different churches, I would advise the parties connected with this project to note the outcome of a simular experiment in this city two years ago.

Although similar organizations have met with much success in other cities, Quincy seems unable to afford the necessary patronage to make the scheme a success. This was conclusively shown in 1905, when the Granite City League, although in its infancy, made a strong effort to establish in the minds of the citizens, the benefit of such an organization. The teams were unsupported in their task; consequently the scheme was a complete failure.

As in the majority of such schemes, there are many difficulties with which to contend, and the Granite City League certainly had its share; despite the fact that nothing was left undone to make it a success.

The idea at that time was to form a league composed of four teams of strictly amateur standing, to promote among the followers of the game the need of cleaner baseball; and give the players the opportunity to enter into the ranks of professionalism; and if such proved a success; make an addition of two or four teams the following year; as the case might warrant.

A schedule was arranged and the league started with four of the best amateur teams in this city. I mean amateur in the true sense of the word, every players record being fully investigated before allowing him to represent his team.

Everything went smooth for awhile, and what looked to be a decided success ended in complete failure.

There was a misunderstanding with the semi-professionals, on the matter of playgrounds, the attendance at the games diminished to practically nothing; showing most decisively that the enthusiasts did not approve of such organization; and of course causing no end of financial difficulties. The players lost interest, and the consequence was, that before the season had terminated, the teams disbanded, leaving no doubt in the minds of the officials and players, that an amateur league in this city was a failure.

No, Quincy, is not yet ready for a league being well cared for by the numerous professional teams. Let the followers of the game increase the population a few thousand, then go ahead,—what say you Makaria?

The Control of Tuberculosis

On Wednesday, Feburary 6, Dr. John B. Hawes, 2d, of Boston will give an address in the rectory of Christ church describing the methods of the Society for the Relief and Control of Tuberculosis, and will also speak of the work done by the Social Service Department of the Massachusetts General Hospital, with which he is actively identified.

This noble enterprise is doing much to prevent the spread of tuberculosis by holding classes for patients in the early and hopeful stages, teaching them how to use the fresh-air treatment, with proper food, etc., at their own homes, and also how to protect their families and prevent the spread of the disease.

Dr. Hawes' address, while given under the auspices of the Woman's Guild of Christ church, will be open to all and it is hoped that the physicians and charitable workers of Quincy may find it possible to be present.

☞ Don't stay at home from church tomorrow to read the two-page instalment of "Partners of the Tide" but you will miss a good story if you fail to read it.

CHAPTER I.

"WAS you cal'latin' to buy one of them turnovers, bub?" casually inquired Mr. Clark, ceasing to gaze at his steaming boots, which were planted against the bulging center of the station stove, and turning toward the boy at the lunch counter.

"Yes, sir," said the boy. He had taken off one worsted mitten and held a five-cent piece clutched tightly in his red fist.

The station agent wrapped the pastry in a piece of newspaper and handed it to his customer.

The boy, a youngster of about twelve years of age, with a freckled face and a pair of bright gray eyes, took his "turnover" to the settee in the corner of the waiting room and began to eat. He had on a worn cloth cap with an attachment that could be pulled down to cover the ears and a shabby overcoat of man's size, very much too large for him. As he munched the greasy crust and the thin layer of "evaporated" apple he looked around him with interest.

The station itself was like the average railway building on Cape Cod. Except for the sign "Harniss" that hung outside it might have been the station at Wellmouth, which he had been so often. Battered settees around the walls; lithographs of steamers, time tables and year old announcements of excursions and county fairs hung above them; big stove set in a box of sawdust—all these were the regulation fixtures. Regulation also were the "refreshments" on the counter at the side—"turnovers" arranged cobhouse fashion under a glass cover, with a dingy "Washington" pie under another cover and jars of striped stick candy, with boxes of "jawbreakers" and similar sweetmeats between.

It was snowing hard, and in the dusk of the winter evening the flakes rustled against the windows as if unseen old ladies in starched summer gowns were shivering in the storm and crowding to get a peep within. The air in the shut waiting room smelled of hot stove, sawdust, wet clothing and Mr. Clark's cigar. To this collection of perfumes was presently added the odor of kerosene as the station agent lit the big lamps in their brackets on the wall.

From outside came the sounds of creaking wheels and stamping horses, the stamping muffled by the snow which covered the ground.

The door opened, and a big man with a face of which gray whiskers and red nose were the most prominent features came stamping and puffing into the room. He jerked off a pair of leather gloves, playfully shook the congealed moisture from them down Mr. Clark's neck inside his collar, tossed a long whip into the corner and, holding his spread fingers over the stove, began to sing "Whoa, Emma!" with enthusiasm.

Mr. Clark, being too busy clawing the melting snow from his neck to open a conversation, Mr. Bodkin observed: "Hello, Barney Small! How's the trav'lin'? Have a rough time drivin' over?"

"Oh, middlin', middlin'," replied the driver of the Orham stage, unbuttoning his overcoat and reaching for his pipe, "but this earth's a vale of tears anyhow, so what's the odds so long's you're happy. Hello, Dan!" The last a shouted greeting to the station agent in the little room, whose answer was a wave of the hand and a sidelong nod across the telegraph instrument.

"What's doin' over in Orham, Barney?" inquired Mr. Clark.

"Prissy and Tempy's adopted a boy." The agent evidently was interested.

"The old maids?"

"Yup, the old maids. I s'pose they came to realize that they needed a man 'round the house, but as there wa'n't no bids in that line they sort of compromised on a boy."

"You don't mean the Allen old maids that live down on the 'lower road,' do you?" asked Mr. Bodkin.

"Sartin. I said the old maids, didn't I? There's plenty of single women in Orham, but when you say 'the old maids' in our town everybody knows you mean Prissy and Tempy."

"What about the boy, Barney?" said the station agent, coming into the waiting room.

"Why," said Mr. Small, "it's this way: Seems that Prissy and Tempy's father, old Cap'n D'rius Allen—he's been dead six years or more now—had a niece name of Sophia, that married Cap'n Ben Nickerson over to Wellmouth. Cap'n Ben and his wife had one son. I think the boy's name's Bradley. Anyhow Cap'n Ben and his wife was drowned off the Portuguese coast two year ago when Ben's bark was lost. Maybe you remember? Well, the boy was left at home that voyage with Ben's ha'f brother, Solon Nickerson's, so the youngester could go to school. When his folks was drownded that way the boy kept on livin' with Solon till 'bout three weeks ago Solon was took with pneumony and up and died. Prissy and Tempy's the only relations there was, you see, so it was left to them to say what should be done with the boy. I cal'late ther must have been some high old pow wowin' in the old house, but the old maids are pretty conscientious spite of their bein' so everlastin' 'old maidy,' and they fin'lly decided 'twas their duty so take the little feller to bring up. That's the way I heard the yarn. They kept it a secret until yesterday, but now the whole town's talkin' 'bout it. You see, it's such a good joke for them two to have a boy in the house. Why, Prissy's been used to shooin' every stray boy off the place as if he was a hen."

Mr. Small laughed so heartily at this that the others joined in. When the hilarity had subsided the station agent asked:

"When's the Nickerson boy comin' over from Wellmouth?"

"Why, today, come to think of it. He was to come up on the afternoon train from Wellmouth and go to Orham with me tonight. You ain't seen nothin'."—

The station agent interrupted him with a sidelong movement of the head.

"Huh?" queried Mr. Small. Then he, in company with Mr. Clark and Mr. Bodkin, turned toward the corner of the waiting room.

The boy who had bought the apple "turnover," having finished the last crumb of that viand, had turned to the window and was looking out through a hole he had scraped in the frost on the pane. He had shaded his face with his hands to shut out the lamplight, and, though he must have heard the conversation, his manner betrayed no interest in it.

Mr. Small interrogated the station agent by raising his eyebrows. The agent whispered, "Shouldn't wonder," and added, "He came on the up train this afternoon."

"Hey, boy," said Mr. Clark, who never let consideration for other people interfere with his own curiosity, "what's your name?"

The boy turned from the window and, blinking a little as the light struck his eyes, faced the group by the stove. His freckled cheeks glistened as the light shone upon them; but, as if he knew this, he pulled the big sleeve of the overcoat across his face and rubbed them dry.

"What's your name, sonny?" said the stage driver kindly.

"Nickerson," said the boy in a low tone.

"I want to know. Your fust name aint Bradley, is it?"

"Yes, sir."

"Sho, well, there now! Guess you're goin' to ride over with me then. I drive the Orham coach. Hum, well, I declare!" And Mr. Small pulled his beard in an embarrassed fashon.

"Come over to the stove and get warm, won't you?" asked the station agent.

"I ain't cold," was the reply.

The trio by the stove fidgeted in silence for a few moments, and then Mr. Small said uneasily; "Ain't it 'most time for that train to be in? She's a ha'f hour late now."

"She was twenty-five minutes late at Sandwich," said the station agent, "and she's prob'ly lost ten minutes o so since. She'll be along in a little while now."

But in spite of this cheerful prophecy a full fifteen minutes passed before the train, which had been started from Boston with the vague idea that some time or other it might get to Provincetown, came coughing and panting round the curve and drew up at the station platform. Only one passenger got out at the Harniss station, and he, stopping for a moment to hand his trunk check to the station agent, walked briskly into the waiting room and slammed the door behind him.

"Hello!" he hailed, pulling off a buckskin glove and holding out a big hand to the stage driver. "Barney, how's she headin'?"

Mr. Small grinned and took the proffered hand.

"Well, for the land's sake, Ez Titcomb!" he exclaimed. "Where'd you drop from? Thought you was somewheres off the coast between New York and Portland jest 'bout now."

"Got shore leave for a fortni't or so," said the newcomer, unbuttoning his overcoat with a smart jerk and throwing it wide open. "Schooner sprung a leak off Gay head last trip, and she's hauled up at East Boston for repairs. Dirty weather, ain't it? Hello, Lon! How are you, Ike?"

Mr. Clark and his friend grinned and responded, "How are you, Cap'n Ez?" in unison.

The arrival was a short, thickset man with a sunburned face, sharp eyes, hair that was a reddish brown sprinkled with gray and a close clipped mustache of the same color. He wore a blue overcoat over a blue suit and held a cigar firmly in one corner of his mouth. His movements were quick and sharp and he snapped out his sentences with vigor.

"Full cargo tonight?" he asked of Mr. Small, who was buttoning his overcoat and pulling on his gloves.

"Pretty nigh an empty hold," was the reply. "Only 'bout one and a ha'f goin' over. You're the one, and the boy here's the ha'f. All aboard! Come on, Brad. You and the cap'n git inside, while me and Dan git the dunnage on the rack."

The boy picked up the carpet bag and followed Mr. Small out to the rear platform of the station, where the coach, an old fashioned, dingy vehicle, drawn by four sleepy horses, stood waiting.

Captain Titcomb followed, his overcoat flapping in the wind.

"Here, Barney," he observed, "have a cigar to smoke on the road. Have one, Dan? Here, Lon; here's a couple for you and Ike. Who's the little feller?" he added in a whisper to the station agent.

"Ben Nickerson's boy from Wellmouth. He's comin' down to Orham to live with the old maids. They've adopted him."

"The old maids? Not the old maids? Not Prissy and Tempy?"

"Yup. All right, Barney; I'm comin'."

The station agent hurried away to help the driver with the captain's sea chest, and its owner, apparently overcome with astonishment, climbed mutely into the coach, where his fellow passenger had preceded him.

The old vehicle rocked and groaned as the heavy chest was strapped on the racks behind. Then it tipped again as Mr. Small climbed clumsily to the driver's seat.

"All ashore that's goin' shore!" shouted Mr. Small. "So long, Dan. Git dap, Two-forty!"

The whip cracked, the coach reeled on its springs, and the whole equipage disappeared in the snow and blackness.

* * * * * * *

The boy, Bradley Nickerson, had never ridden in a stagecoach before, and after ten or fifteen minutes of jolt and roll he decided that he never wanted to ride in one again.

Suddenly Captain Titcomb, who had been silent so far, spoke.

"Heavy sea on tonight," he observed. "'Pears to me Barney'd better take a reef. She's rollin' consider'ble."

The boy laughed and said, "Yes, sir."

"Goin' all the way to Orham?" asked the captain.

"Yes, sir."

"Got folks over there, I presume likely. Friends or nothin' but jest relations?"

"Relations, I—I guess."

"So! Well, I've got a good many relations over there myself. Fact is, I've got relations, seems to me, 'most everywheres. Father used to have so many of 'em that when he went visitin' he used to call it 'goin' cousinin'.' My name's Titcomb. What do they call you when your back ain't turned?"

The boy laughed again in a puzzled way—he scarcely knew what to make of his questioner—and said that his name was Bradley Nickerson.

"Nickerson, hey? That settles it; you're a Cape Codder. Minute I meet anybody named Nickerson I always know they've got the same kind of sand in their boots that I have. Is it Obed Nickerson's folks you're goin' to see?"

"No, sir. I'm goin' to live with Miss Priscilla Allen. Her and her sister. They was some of mother's people."

"Sho, well I swan!" muttered the captain. "Prissy and Tempy, hey? Then Dan wa'n't foolin'. And you're goin' to live with 'em?"

"Yes, sir. Do you know 'em?"

"Who—me? Oh, yes! I know 'em. I'm a partic'lar friend of theirs—that is," he added cautiously, "I call on 'em once in awhile jest to say 'How are you?' Why? You didn't hear any of them fellers at the depot say anything 'bout me and them did you? No! Well, all right, I jest thought— Oh, yes! I know 'em. Nice folks as ever was, but what you might call a little mite 'sot in their ways.' Do you always wipe your feet when you come into the house?"

"Why—why—yes, sir, if I don't forget it."

"All right. It's a good habit to git into, 'specially if you're goin' to walk on Prissy's floors. Sometimes I've wished I could manage to put my feet in my pocket when I've been there. I wonder if I know your father? What was his name?"

Bradley told his father's name and in response to the captain's tactful questioning a good deal more besides. In fact, before long Captain Titcomb knew all about the boy, where he came from, how he happened to come and all the rest. And Bradley for his part learned that his companion commanded the coasting schooner Thomas Doane, that he had been a sailor ever since he was fourteen, that he had a marvelous fund of sea yarns and knew how to spin them and that he (Bradley) liked him.

By and by the captain noticed that the boy's replies to his cheerful observations were growing rather incoherent, and, suspecting the reason, he ceased to talk. A few minutes later he leaned forward and smiled to find his fellow traveler, who had slipped down upon the cushion, fast asleep.

When Bradley awoke Captain Titcomb was standing on the ground by the open door of the coach.

"Good night, Brad," he said. "Here where I'm bound for. You've got a five minute ride or so more 'fore you git the old mai—that is, to Prissy and Tempy's. I'll see you tomorrer. You and me's goin' to be chums, you know."

The door was shut. Mr. Small struck up "Camptown Races," and the stage bumped on again. This time the boy did not sleep, but, holding on to the strap, tried to peer through the snow crusted window. He saw a light here and there, but little else. After a short interval the coach turned a sharp corner, rolled on for perhaps twice its length and then stopped.

Mr. Small opened the door, and Bradley, looking past him, saw the side of a large house and a lighted doorway with two female figures, one plump and the other slender, standing in it. From behind them the lamplight streamed warm and bright and set their shadows almost to his feet.

"Come on, bub," said the stage driver. "Here's where you git out. Miss Prissy," he shouted, "here's your new boarder."

CHAPTER II.

THE plump woman, whom Mr. Small had addressed as "Miss Prissy," was counting into the stage driver's palm a sum in small change from a portentous black wallet that fastened with a strap.

"Good night," said the driver, pocketing the money, with a grunt and a jingle. Like the boy, he had been very careful not to step off the mat. "Good night, Miss Tempy. Snow's lettin' up a little mite. Guess 'twill be clear by mornin'. Good night, Brad."

The plump lady closed the door behind him just in time to shut out the opening notes of the "Sweet By and By." Then she dropped the hook into the staple, wound the leather strap carefully about the wallet, placed the latter in a compartment of a tall chest of drawers in the corner, turned the key upon it and put the key under the alabaster candlestick on the mantel. Then she turned to the boy, who, holding his carpet bag with both hands, still stood uneasily on the mat, while the slim lady fidgeted in front of him.

"Bradley," said the plump lady—she was dressed in some sort of black material that rustled and wore a lace collar, jet earrings and a breastpin with a braided lock of hair in the center of it—"Bradley, we're real glad to see you. I'm Miss Priscilla; this is my sister, Miss Temperance."

"Yes, Bradley," coincided "Miss Tempy," "we're real glad to see you." She was the younger of the two and was gowned in what the boy learned later was her "brown poplin." Her hair was not worn plain, like her sister's, but had a little bunch of curls over each ear. She also wore a hair breastpin, but her earrings were gold.

Bradley shook the extended hands, Miss Prissy's red and dimpled and Miss Tempy's thin and white, with two old fashioned rings on the fingers.

"Won't you—won't you set down?" ventered Miss Tempy after a rather awkward pause.

"Why, yes, of course," said Miss Prissy, "and take your things right off—do."

Bradley placed the carpetbag on the corner of the mat and pulled off the shabby overcoat. The jacket and trousers beneath were also shabby, but it was at his shoes that Miss Prissy glanced, and, oddly enough, their condition served to break the formality.

"My goodness me!" she ejaculated. "Jest look at his poor feet, Tempy Allen! Come right over to the stove this minute and take off those shoes. They're soppin' wet through."

"No, ma'am," protested the boy "They ain't, honest. They only look so."

"Don't tell me!" commanded Miss Prissy. "Go right over to the stove this minute."

Bradley reluctantly obeyed, stepping gingerly across the spotless oilcloth and taking as long strides as possible. It did not add to his comfort to see Miss Tempy shake the melting snow into the center of the rope mat, fold the latter carefully together and disappear with it into the kitchen.

Miss Prissy piloted him to the chintz covered rocker by the big "airtight" stove. Then she proceeded to unlace the patched brogans, commenting in an undertone upon the condition of the stockings beneath.

"I'm 'fraid," said Bradley fearfully, "that I've got some snow water on your floor, ma'am."

"Don't say a word. Thank goodness your feet ain't so wet as I thought they was. Put 'em right on the rail of the stove there while I go up to the garret and get those slippers of father's. I'll be right back."

She hurried out of the room just as her sister entered it by the other door.

"Now, set right still," said Miss Tempy, bustling about, with the steaming teakettle in her hand. "I'm goin' to make you some pepper tea. There's nothin' in the world like pepper tea when you're likely to catch cold."

"Pepper tea" was a new prescription for the boy, and he watched with interest while Miss Tempy turned some milk into a bowl, flooded it with boiling water, added a spoonful of sugar and vigorously shook the pepper box over the mess.

"There!" she said. "Now, drink that, every drop. Ain't you hungry?"

Bradley, with tears in his eyes, the result of the first swallow of pepper tea, gaspingly protested that he wasn't hungry, not very. The sight and smell of the loaded supper table were so tempting that the denial was rather half hearted.

"Not very! When did you have anything to eat last?"

"Mr. Bartlett—he's the s'lectman at Wellmouth—gave me a sandwich at the depot 'fore I started, ma'am, and I bought a turnover at Harniss."

"My sakes! Prissy"—to her sister, who came rustling in—"he hasn't et a thing but a sandwich and a turnover since morning. Now, come right over to the table, Bradley, and set down."

As the boy ate he looked about the room. It was a big room, with a low ceiling spotlessly whitewashed. The oilcloth on the floor was partially covered with braided rag mats with carpet centers. On the window shades were wonderful tinted pictures of castles and mountains. The table was black walnut, and there were five rush seated chairs, each in its place against the wall and looking as if it were glued there. The sixth of the set he occupied. Then there was the chintz covered rocker and another rocker painted black, with a worn picture of a ship at sea on the back. There was another ship over the face of the tall wooden clock in the corner. This craft was evidently the Flying Dutchman, for every time the clock ticked it rolled heavily behind a fence of tin waves, but didn't advance an inch. On the walls were several works of art, including a spatter work motto, a wreath made of seashells under a glass and an engraving showing a boat filled with men, women and children rowed by a solemn individual in his shirt sleeves, moving over a placid sheet of water toward an unseen port.

"Cap'n Titcomb," remarked Bradley, whose bashfulness was wearing off, "came over in the coach with me tonight."

The effect of this announcement was remarkable. Miss Prissy looked at

Bradley shook the extended hands.

Miss Tempy, and the latter returned the look. Strange to say, both colored.

"Cap'n Titcomb?" faltered Miss Prissy. "Cap'n Ezra Titcomb?"

"Yes, ma'am. He talked to me 'most all the way. I liked him first rate."

"Why—why, I do declare! I didn't know the cap'n was expected, did you, Tempy?"

"No, I'm sure I didn't!" exclaimed the flustered younger sister. "Did he—did he tell you why he was comin', Bradley?"

"No, ma'am, but I heard him tell the man that drove the coach that he had shore leave for a week 'cause his schooner was laid up for repairs. He said he knew you, though, and that he was comin' round to see me tomorrer."

This remark caused quite as much embarrassment and agitation as that concerning the captain's presence in the coach. The two ladies again glanced hurriedly at each other.

"Goodness gracious!" exclaimed Miss Prissy. "And the settin' room not swept and the windows not washed! I'll have to get up early tomorrer mornin'. I'm so glad I fixed that ruffle on my alpaca," she added in an absentminded soliloquy.

"And I must finish that tidy for the sofy," said Miss Tempy nervously. "I've only got a little more to do on it, thank goodness! Prissy, I'm goin' to put an iron on. I want to press my other collar. Did—did the cap'n say anything more about me—us, I mean?" she added, looking at the stove.

"No, ma'am, he didn't," replied the boy. "He jest asked about me and told stories and talked."

Miss Tempy seemed a little disappointed and made no comment. Her sister, too, was silent. Presently Bradley yawned. He tried to hide it, but Miss Prissy, coming out of her trance, saw him.

"My sakes," she exclaimed, "what are we thinkin' of, keepin' you up this way? It's after 9 o'clock. Let me get the lamp. Tempy, you do up that soapstone for his feet."

Bradley was up early the next morning, and his dressing was a sort of jig, for it was freezing cold. When he went downstairs it was evident that things had been going on. Miss Prissy came out of the sitting room, bearing a broom and with her "alpaca" gown covered with an apron. Miss Tempy, her curls done up in papers, was busy with the "tidy" for the sofa. Each of the sisters was nervous and excited.

Miss Prissy said a stiff little grace at the breakfast table. Miss Tempy had a large cup of "pepper tea" for herself and urged Bradley to partake, but the elder sister came to the rescue and gave him hot milk and water instead. After the meal was over and the dishes washed Miss Prissy went out to feed the hens, and Bradley went with her. The house, seen by day, was a big, square building, badly in need of paint. The roof was four sided and sloped upward to a cupola in the center. From its closely shut front door snow covered box hedges in parallel lines defined the path to the front gate, also locked and fastened and, like the front door, only used on occasions. There was a large tumbledown barn, with an empty pigpen back of the house and a henhouse and yard in the rear of the barn.

Next door to the left—on the right was a vacant field—was a small story and a half cottage, separated from the Allen household by a board fence. One of the boards in this fence had fallen down, and as Bradley, wading in Miss Prissy's wake, passed this opening he saw a girl, apparently about his own age open the back door of the house next door and look out at him. He wanted to ask who she was, but didn't feel well enough acquainted with his guide to do so just yet.

Just as the dozen hens and lonesome looking rooster were fed—Miss Prissy informed him that by and by looking after the poultry would be one of his duties—Miss Tempy's voice was heard calling excitedly from the kitchen door.

"Prissy," she screamed—"Prissy, come in the house quick! He's comin'! The cap'n's comin'!"

"My land!" exclaimed the elder sister wildly, and, her dignity forgotten, she almost ran to the house, followed by Bradley, who didn't understand the cause of the excitement.

"Oh, my sakes," ejaculated Miss Tempy as they entered the kitchen, "what made him come so early? You'll have to see him first, Prissy. I've got to fix my hair."

Miss Prissy rushed into the sitting room, wheeled a chair into place, set a tidy straight, laid the photograph album exactly in the center of the table instead of two inches from the edge and patted her own hair with her hands, dodging in front of the big gilt framed mirror as she did so. Then, as a smart knock sounded on the dining room door, she assumed her "company" smile and marched sedately to receive the visitor.

It was Captain Titcomb who had knocked, and after cleaning the snow from his boots on the "scraper" he entered the house, bearing two packages wrapped in brown paper.

"Well, Prissy," said the captain, laying down the packages to shake hands, "how d'you do? Didn't expect to see me in this port jest now, did you?"

"No, indeed, Cap'n Titcomb," was the reply. "But we're real glad to see you all the same. Come right in. Take your things off. Bradley said he rode down with you in the coach last night. Dreadful storm we had, wasn't it? How's your health nowadays? Walk right into the sittin' room. You must excuse the looks of things. I've been sweepin'."

There was a good deal more, but when Miss Prissy stopped for breath the captain, who had thrown his cap and overcoat on a chair, replied that the storm was bad, that his health was good and that the room looked "first rate," so far as he could see. Then he held out his hand to the boy, who had seated himself on a chair close to the door, and said cheerily:

"Mornin', Brad. Well, how are you after your shake up last night? Wan't seasick after I got out, was you?"

Bradley grinned bashfully and stammered that he was "all right."

"Good! We had a rugged trip comin' over, Prissy. The old coach rolled so I felt like goin' on deck and shortenin' sail. Your new boy here's goin' to make a good sailor, I can see that. Where's Tempy?"

"Oh, she's upstairs for a minute. She'll be right down," answered Miss Prissy carelessly. "Tell me what brought you home so unexpected."

"Sprung a leak and had to lay the old hooker up for repairs. That's a specialty of my owners—repairs. They'd rather patch up for a hundred years than build new vessels. I—I—Brad, fetch me them bundles out of the dinin' room."

Bradley obediently brought the brown paper parcels, and the captain handed one of them to Miss Prissy, saying: "Here's a little somethin' I picked up over to New York, Prissy. I thought you might like it. I ain't got much use for such things myself."

The lady took the package and began to untie the string in a nervous manner, blushing a little as she did so.

"I know it's somethin' nice, Cap'n Ezra. You do buy the nicest things. It's real kind of you to remember me this way. Oh, ain't that pretty!"

The package contained a Japanese silk fan, with ivory sticks and a red tassel. Miss Prissy opened it and spread it out in her lap, exclaiming over its beauty, her face the color of the tassel.

"Oh, it ain't nothin'," said the captain. "I did a favor for a friend of mine that's skipper of a barkentine jest home from Hongkong, and he gave it to me. He had some stuff he'd brought for his daughter, and the duty on it would have been pretty expensive, so I fixed—but never mind that. I thought maybe you'd like it to carry to church in the summer time or somethin'. Why, hello, Tempy! How d'you do?"

The younger sister entered the room, her poplin rustling and every curl in place. She gushingly shook the captain's hand and said she was so glad to see him.

"Oh, Tempy," cried Miss Prissy, "jest look at this lovely fan Cap'n Titcomb brought me! Did you ever see anything so pretty?"

Miss Tempy exclaimed over the fan, but somehow her enthusiasm seemed a little forced. It may be the captain noticed this; at any rate, he picked up the second parcel and handed it to her, saying:

"Here's a little somethin' I brought for you, Tempy. I don't know's you'll like it, but"—

Miss Tempy's present also was a fan precisely like the other except that the tassel was pink. Miss Prissy's interest in her sister's gift was intense, but when it was discovered that in no important point were the fans dissimilar and that neither was better than its mate both of the ladies appeared to be a trifle disappointed, although they tried not to show it.

WORK ON ISTHMUS

Bids For Its Completion Considered at White House

OLIVER-BANGS PROPOSAL

Contract Will Be Awarded to Oliver Under Certain Conditions, but Bangs' Credentials Do Not Prove to Be Satisfactory

Washington, Jan. 26.—As a result of an extended conference at the White House last night it was decided to reject the bid of Oliver and Bangs, who proposed to complete the construction of the Panama canal for 6.75 percent of the total estimated cost, insofar as Anson M. Bangs of New York city is concerned.

While no official statement was given out at the White House it can be authoritatively stated that if William J. Oliver of Knoxville can enter into a satisfactory arrangement with some other contractor, who is financially responsible, he will be given the contract for the construction of the canal.

The fact that the MacArthur-Gillespie company of New York, whose bid for the construction of the canal was 12.5 percent, were represented at the conference, leads many of the interested parties to believe that a combination may be formed between that firm and Oliver. It is known that the MacArthur-Gillespie syndicate has convinced President Roosevelt and Secretary Taft of its financial responsibility, and after a most thorough investigation the canal commission officials have expressed satisfaction that Oliver is able to carry out his end of the agreement. There would have been no question as to awarding the contract to Oliver and Bangs had the credentials presented by Bangs proved as satisfactory to the officials here as those furnished by Oliver.

The decision reached at the White House, however, means that Oliver will be given a chance to take some other contractor into partnership with him, whose financial responsibility meets the satisfaction of the government. The canal commission, with this requirement met, will not undertake to dictate to him who this contractor shall be.

The question of rejecting all bids was discussed at the cabinet meeting yesterday and this decision had been practically agreed upon before the conference last night. Secretary Taft will make known to Oliver the decision that has been reached and if the arrangement is satisfactory to Oliver he probably will be given several days in which to arrange a satisfactory agreement with some contracting firm who can deposit the required cash security. On the other hand, if Oliver refuses to consider the contract, after the rejection of Bangs, the canal commission will immediately issue a call for new bids.

Anson M. Bangs of New York, Oliver's associate in the canal proposal, who was rejected by the canal commission, was the contractor for the Soo canal locks. He is president of the Federal construction company of New York, which is capitalized at $2,000,000. Mr. Bangs is a brother-in-law of John F. Gaynor of the firm of Greene & Gaynor, who were implicated with Captain Carter in the Savannah (Ga.) harbor engineer fraud case. This fact, however, it is stated, had no influence with the canal commission in rejecting Bangs as joint contractor with Oliver.

Fight For Key to Traffic

Thermopolis, Wyo., Jan. 26.—Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroad contractors are building a line of railroad through the famous Big Horn canon, in order to forestall the Chicago and Northwestern, which was to be built through the same canon next spring. For 12 miles there is room for only one road through the cleft and it has been a race between the two roads as to which could first reach the canon and procure the right of way. The Big Horn canon is the only route through the Owl Creek mountains.

Meteor Perhaps Caused Disaster

Terre Haute, Ind., Jan. 26.—That a meteor set off the car of powder and caused the disaster to a Big Four accommodation train at Sandford, Ind., is the belief of R. E. Brown, who lives near Paris, Ills. He says that on the night of the disaster and just before the explosion a large meteor passed over his place. It appeared like a great ball of fire, he said, and made a noise like a rocket. The meteor was moving in the direction of Sandford and left a trail of sparks. Other people say that they saw the meteor also.

TWO MEN KILLED

Locomotives and Cars Wrecked In Collision In Maine

Presque Isle, Me., Jan. 26.—Two men were killed, many cars of potatoes smashed, two locomotives badly wrecked, and a freight house partly demolished by the collision of a fast special freight with a shifting engine in the yard of the Bangor and Aroostook railroad here.

The special freight, consisting of 18 cars loaded with potatoes, was passing through the yard when it struck a shifting engine which was just backing off the main track and "sideswiped" it with such force that both engines were thrown from the rails and completely demolished, the engine of the special freight plunging into a freight house and tearing away 50 feet of the side of the building. About half the cars of the freight were piled up in a mass of broken timbers and twisted iron, and their contents strewn about the yard.

William Stewart and Cornelius Maguire, stove tenders in the heated potato cars, were caught in the wreckage when the freight engine struck the shed and were instantly killed. Engineer Jacobs of the shifting engine suffered a leg fracture and was also severely bruised. Clarence Young, engineer of the special, escaped by jumping just before the engines met.

Probation Instead of Jail

Middletown, Conn., Jan. 26.—John Boylan, local agent for the Standard Oil company, convicted of selling oil of inferior quality and of a flash test below that required by law, will not have to serve his sentence of 40 days in jail, this being made possible by an order issued by Judge Case which places Boylan in the care of a probation officer for 40 days. Case's order is the first granted under the bill passed by the general assembly last week.

Legislature Cuts Appropriation

Boston, Jan. 26.—The governor's council spent another long day hearing fresh stories about the Foxboro hospital for dipsomaniacs and inebriates, now under the investigation ordered by Governor Guild. While the stories and charges multiplied in the hearing room, the lower branch of the state legislature clipped $57,000 from the Foxboro appropriation, leaving a small appropriation of $21,000.

The cause of the duel is not known, but according to the witnesses both men used their revolvers. It is said that the wounded man has previously participated in similar encounters.

No Profit In Convict Labor

Boston, Jan. 26.—In his January bulletin Chief Pidgin of the bureau of statistics of labor discusses the value of convict labor in Massachusetts. Of 5916 convicts in 19 penal and correctionary institutions only 2494 were engaged in productive labor. Commenting on the question of convict labor, Pidgin says the prisoner does not produce enough value to maintain himself.

Jail Guard to Be Tried Again

Boston, Jan. 26.—After wrangling nearly 14 hours a jury that heard the evidence in the case of John F. Morrison, a former guard at the county jail, who was charged with having permitted the escape of John H. Glover on Jan. 9, failed to reach an agreement, and so reported to Judge Stevens of the superior court. The case will be tried again, but when is not known.

Chatham, Mass., Jan. 26.—Four tugs hauling on the stranded Clyde line steamer Onondaga at high tide succeeded in swinging her bow around 40 feet from her former position and two of the tugs have kept their hawsers to the vessel in order to prevent her from swinging back. More of the cargo has been removed.

Several other cases treated by Duque are in various stages of improvement.

3500 FEET IN AIR

Balloonists Struck a Temperature of 25 Below Zero

Pittsfield, Mass., Jan. 26.—Leo Stevens and T. T. Lovelace made the first winter balloon flight ever undertaken in this country yesterday afternoon, and came back with an interesting story of being nearly frozen to death at an altitude of 3500 feet.

The trip was made for the purpose of familiarizing Lovelace with the details of making ascensions and landings. He is soon to start on a yachting trip around the world in command of a yacht, and the balloon Eagle, which was used yesterday, is to be taken along for the purpose of making ascensions.

The mercury registered 14 above zero at the balloon field and a snowstorm prevailed. These conditions made the work of inflation difficult, and it was 3:10 o'clock when the car was released.

The balloon went almost straight up and reached an altitude of 3500 feet. Here the aeronauts found a temperature of 25 below zero and were almost overcome by the cold. Lovelace took off his glove to write a note which was to be sent back by a carrier pigeon, and his hand stiffened and became useless.

The bird was dropped over the side and found its way back to its home at Hotel Wendell, reaching there about dark, but died soon after.

Stevens realized that there was great danger from the cold in the higher altitude and dropped the balloon into warmer currents.

It sailed to the northeast and a safe landing was made near the government mill not far from the Dalton line. Stevens says that the view of the snow-covered earth was one of the grandest he ever saw.

As to the Price of Coal

Washington, Jan. 26.—That carriers engaged in interstate commerce be forbidden, directly or indirectly, to own coal properties—except exclusively for their own fuel supply—is the sweeping recommendation of the interstate commerce commission. The report says the ownership or interest in coal properties or coal traffic by carriers or their officers or employes has brought about discriminations, injustice and inequalities in the service of independent operators. It is further asserted that the combinations or contracts of the several carriers have had the effect of increasing freight rates and also the price of coal to the consumers.

Hearing In Peonage Case

Roanoke, Va., Jan. 26.—John Saloney, the railroad contractor, charged with peonage, was given a hearing before Commissioner White. Several laborers from Philadelphia testified that they had been promised $1.50 a day and free transportation to Virginia; that on their first pay day they were forced at the points of revolvers to sign receipts for the full amount claimed by them, while they only received about one-third the money due them; that they were warned if they tried to leave the camp they would be shot; that they escaped in the night, and some went back to Philadelphia.

Ireland to Have National University

Dublin, Jan. 26.—Replying at Dublin castle to deputations representing Presbyterian and Catholic interests, James Bryce outlined the intention of the government to create a national university for Ireland. He said the government had decided to create a new college in Dublin entirely free from any theological test. When this new college is established the Royal university of Dublin is to be dissolved and converted into a national university for Ireland, comprising Trinity college, Dublin, the new college and the existing colleges at Belfast and Cork.

Suspension of Customs Officer

New York, Jan. 26.—Edward S. Fowler, the appraiser of merchandise at this port, has suspended upon charges Benjamin J. Levy, an examiner of glass and manufactured leather at the public stores. Fowler declined to make the charges public, saying that they would be submitted to the treasury department.

Policeman and Soldiers Killed

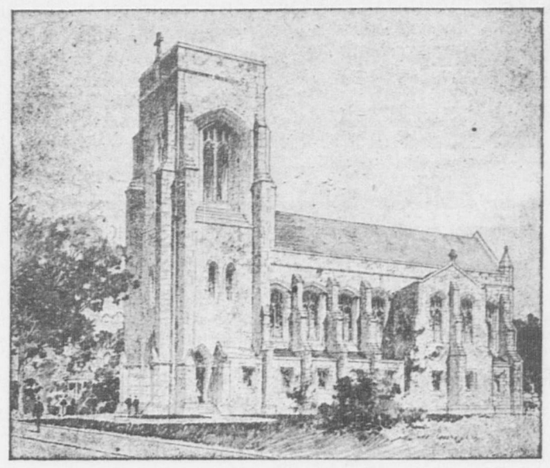
If YOU are a young man, and not associated with any other Quincy church, YOU are most cordially invited to come to our meeting.

A warm welcome—Hearty singing—A helpful hour together.

—Word has been received at Halifax, N. S., that the pick of the channel and first cruiser squadron fleets will arrive there about May, on their way to Hampton Roads, to take part in an international demonstration on the occasion of the opening by President Roosevelt of the exhibition at Jameston. The ships chosen will be in command of Rear Admiral George Neville, C. V. O., whose flagship is the armored cruiser Good Hope.

FOURTH ANNUAL REUNION AND COFFEE PARTY.



St. Francis Church, South Braintree.

The fourth annual reunion and coffee party of the St. Francis society was held at Braintree on Tuesday evening and surpassed in numbers most former ones. Over three hundred assembled. A short, vocal concert by members of the St. Francis choir under the direction of Miss May F. Shay, organist was followed by dancing to the entrancing music of Cuff's orchestra, five pieces.

Daintily gotten up orders of dances, the work of our local printer, Eben Prescott, contained a cut of the proposed new church of the society. The floor was in charge of Thomas McOsker, Leo Dennehy, J. Edward Shay, James G. Cuff, Edward P. Cuff, John F. Kelley, John King, James P. Lyons, Edmond Walsh, William E. Dailey, Philip J. Krohn, J. LaBreck, James Levangie and John Gallivan, acting as aids. Dr. C. A. Sullivan was chairman of committee.

Rev. John J. Coan, pastor of St John's church and Rev. John P. Cuffe, pastor of the Sacred Heart church, Atlantic were guests of Rev. M. F. McDonnell, pastor.

A bountiful supper, daintily and tastily served was in charge of a committee of ladies of the parish.

One of the most pleasing features of the occasion was the children's dance, in which Miss Sara Abell and Miss Gertrude Kelley displayed wonderful grace and facility.

Continued co-operation of people with pastor can alone secure the much needed and anxiously desired new place of worship.

A universal membership with the Building Fund society, at the low price of two cents a day, its real cost, is one of the surest and easiest means of seeing our hopes realized. Reader is your name on the list of members? If not why not? Now is the acceptable time. Veritas.

Sudden Death Henry R. Smith

Henry R. Smith passed away Wednesday evening, in his seventy-fourth year, at his home 820 Washington street, South Braintree. He had been confined to the house only three or four days and previously had been feeling a little better than usual. His many friends had noticed his failing health during the past two years, since a severe attack of typhoid fever, but hoped for a complete recovery.

Mr. Smith was born in Worcester, in March 1834. At the age of nine years, his parents moved to Lynn. After completing his studies in the public schools of Lynn, Mr. Smith became a machinist and later entered the employ of leather merchants.

By his first wife four children were born, two of whom survive, Mrs. R. E. Roberts and Henry R. Smith, Jr., both of Lynn. Mrs. Smith also leaves six grandchildren, Mrs. W. R. Levers of Chicago, Mrs. N. S. Richardson, Frank J. Pie, George Smith, Fred O. Robinson and Mrs. George Brown all of Lynn.

Mr. Smith married in 1875 Miss Mary C. Richardson of Woburn and for some fifteen years they have lived in South Braintree. They have had the respect of a large circle of friends who extend their sympathy to the widow.

Mr. Smith was a veteran Odd Fellow, a member of Bunker Hill lodge although closely in touch with Puritan lodge of Braintree. He has been active in many other secret orders among them being the Masons and Knights of Pythias.

Mrs. Smith is a member of the Rebekahs and an interested member.

Mr. Smith will be buried in Lynn the funeral service to be held Sunday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock, that friends from far and near may attend. It is expected that Rev. W. O. Ayer of the Braintree Baptist church will officiate.

Now that the police ball is over, the next event on the social calendar is the grand ball of Quincy lodge of Elks to be held Monday evening, Feb. 11.

CARD OF THANKS.

The committee in charge of the first annual concert and ball of the Quincy Police Relief Association desire to express their thanks to the general public for the hearty support given them which served to make the affair an unqualified success. They also desire to thank Mr. Derringer, the florist, for the decorations donated and the representatives of the press who contributed largely to the success of the evening.

For the committee,

Frank E. Burrell,
Chief of Police.

Jewel Presented To Past Master

A pleasant incident at the regular communication of Delta lodge, Tuesday evening, was the presentation of a past master's jewel to William S. Stone, who has just completed his first year as master. The jewel is a very handsome one of gold suitably engraved and ornamented with an amethyst and turquoise set in the masonic emblems.

The presentation was made by William S. Wallace, the oldest living past master, whose term of office was from 1874 to 1877 and who succeeded E. Atherton Hunt, Esq., father of Atherton N. Hunt, one of the present officers of the lodge.

The attendance was large in spite of the storm, and a delightful social hour was spent at the close of the evenings work.

The Massachusetts Humane society has awarded to Charles D. Warburton of Randolph, a sterling silver medal, for bravery in rescuing two lads from drowning last August. The medal will be presented at an entertainment at Mayflower Park chapel, Wednesday night, January 30th, when an address on bravery will be made by Rev. Mr. Kirk. Also Morris Kraneman will receive a bronze medal from the Massachusetts Humane society who made an attempt to rescue John Himmilfarb.

THE Young Men's Christian Association OF QUINCY, MASS.

(Legal Title – Incorporated 1892.)

The Directors of the YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION of Quincy, with a firm faith in the great value of the work which is being done for the young men and boys of our city, make their appeal for donations and bequests toward paying the mortgage indebtedness on the new Association Building. When the building is free from debt it will serve as an Endowment, as there is a goodly income from the dormitories.

Should the Donor prefer, such sum as might be given could be used as an Endowment for an educational class or classes, the Boys Department, or as a special fund in other ways, and could be designated with the name of the Donor.

The Treasurer, WILLIAM F. CUMMINGS, 7 Clive Street, Quincy, or the General Secretary, ERNEST G. GAY, will be happy to answer inquiries.

OUR HOSPITAL

(Legal Title: City Hospital of Quincy)

INCORPORATED 1889

The Trustees of the City Hospital of Quincy earnestly appeal for donations and bequests for the Endowment fund. This now amounts to over $60,000, but a fund of at least $100,000 is urgently needed.

Five Thousand Dollars ($5,000) will endow a Free Bed to which such name may be given as the Donor may desire, but any sum for this noble institution which stands ready to serve us all in the hour of need, will be most gratefully received.

The Secretary, TIMOTHY REED, Adams St., Quincy, or the Treasurer, RICHARD D. CHASE, Savings Bank Building, Quincy, will be very glad to confer with any one or to answer any inquiries.

BOSTON AMUSEMENTS.

KEITH'S THEATRE.

Volta, the electrical wizard, and Ethel Levey (Mrs. George M. Cohan), are to be leading cards at Keith's next week. Volta is the man who created a sensation in New York by offering to sit in the electric chair at Sing Sing and have the full voltage turned on him. He does many very wonderful feats, some that baffle the greatest scientists to explain. A brand new specialty will be presented by Ethel Levey, one of the cleverest comediennes ever in vaudeville. Sprightly songs and dances make up her offering. "Skinny's Return," the latest member of the "Skinny" family, will be played by Eva Williams, "the Duse of vaudeville," and Jac Tucker, old favorites with Keith audiences; Juliette Pierrepon, a former soloist at the Queen's Hall Concerts, London, who is to make her American debut; George Wilson, the famous old-time minstrel with new-time jokes and songs; Wm. Inman and company in a character sketch that is true to life; and the Garelle Brothers, skatorial comedians, will all be among the leaders. The bill will also include the Craigs, versatile instrumentalists; the Pelots in a comic juggling turn; the Wood Brothers, acrobats whose best work is done on Roman rings; Wise and Milton in a novel skit called "Old Songs Made New," and the Kinetograph, showing new pictures.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

The famous military drama, "Taps," will offer genuine novelty and sensation at the Castle Square next week. It has never before been given in Boston, but the reputation of its performances in Berlin, in London, in Paris, and in New York has preceded it. Producee a little over a year ago in the German capital, and so stirred up was the Emperor over what he considered its attack upon military discipline that by royal command he forbade any soldier in the German army to witness its performance. The plot of "Taps" is strongly dramatic but curiosity over it need be satisfied only by actual view of the play itself on the Castle Square stage next week. It is sufficient to say that all its scenes are laid in German military barracks, its one heroine is beloved by two men, and that great and disastrous trouble arises over that fact.

THE BIJOU.

The play for next week at the Bijou Theatre will be "A Brass Monkey," by Charles H. Hoyt. The piece is one of those clever satires which the author knew so well how to give expression to. He always was quick to see the humorous side of almost any condition in life and noting the extent to which superstition had gained ground even with intelligent persons he seized upon this as the basic element for a play. It is superstition, then, which is satirized "In a Brass Monkey" and the principal character of the play is lead to believe that such an article as the title suggests is the cause of any amount of imagined misery in the household. The play offers unusual good opportunites for Mr. Craig's company and the principal members will be cast for excellent parts.

JORDAN HALL.

The second of the series of Jordan hall orchestral concerts given by the new orchestra of 55 professional musicians under the direction of Wallace Goodrich, will be given at Jordan hall, Boston, Thursday evening, January 31, at 8.15. So much has already been printed regarding the aims of the new organization that it is hardly necessary to repeat them. Suffice to say that it is intended to fill the void which has always existed between the Boston Symphony orchestra and the innumerable clubs playing "chamber music." It is a sort of intermediate orchestra calculated to tempt the appetite of music-lovers who are not quite educated to the symphony programs. Seats are now on sale at the Jordan hall box office, prices $1.50, $1 and 50 cents.

THE ORPHEUM.

The season of vaudeville performances at Percy Williams' Orpheum continues at the high tide of prosperity and the enterprise shown by this manager in securing all the latest and best attractions appears to be fully appreciated. Next week will be the first appearance in Boston of the character actor Henri de Vries. He will be seen in the one act play "A Case of Arson" in which he will assume seven distinct characters widely contrasted in their peculiarities and well calculated to show his dramatic versatility. The Mason-Keeler Co. are to present their comedy skit "Hooked by Crook," the Kinsons will appear in their musical oddity "Going It Blind," Herbert Brooks "The King's Magician" will give many novel exhibitions. The matinees at the Orpheum are widely patronized by residents of the suburbs and the subscription lists show that the towns surrounding Boston contribute largely to the patronage of this theatre.

The 24th Milestone.

SOME THINGS B. F. KEITH HAS DONE SINCE 1883.

January 8, 1883—A "store show on Washington street, where the new part of the Adams House now stands, with "Baby Alice" as the principal attraction.

January 8, 1907—The finest theatre in the world devoted to continuous performance, of which he was the originator, with Houdini, the greatest drawing card of the day, as the leading feature of a vaudeville program of sixteen acts.

These facts tell in brief B. F. Keith's history in Boston during the last twenty-four years. And they only tell a small portion of his achievements during that time, for he is today the sole proprietor of half a dozen theatres, two of which those in Philadelphia and Boston, represent an outlay of more than a million of dollars each; part proprietor in the seven Keith and Proctor theatres in New York and Jersey City, to say nothing of controlling the Keith Booking Agency in New York, which engages all the performers who appear in more than fifty vaudeville theatres in this country and in Canada.

It is a matter of history that Mr. Keith is responsible in a greater measure than any other manager for the "cleaning-up" of the old time form of variety, and putting it in such shape that it became possible for ladies and children to witness such stage entertainments without fear of being shocked or having their sense of modesty outraged. His theatres and methods of conducting them have become models, and are copied and imitated the country over. In the uplifting of vaudeville Mr. Keith found it necessary to invade the precincts of drama, opera and the lyceum platform. He has imported novelties from Europe that were beyond the reach of other American managers and he has "productions" that are far in advance of anything dreamed of by a variety manager in the old days.

In Boston his home city, Mr. Keith has made himself a host of friends. He is prominently identified with many organizations that are looking for the future beauty and greatness of Boston rather than to the immediate present.

Mr. Keith is a very busy man nowadays and spends a portion of every week in New York.

His principal lieutenents are E. F. Albee, who has been general manager of his attractions for years and his only son, A. Paul Keith, who acts as the assistant general manager for the Keith enterprises.

Mayor Thompson Says He Forbade Anyone to Quote Him to Mr. Crane

Editors of the Quincy Daily Ledger:

The letter of Mr. Schenkelberger addressed to me in your issue of January 26, with reference to certain correspondence in the press between Mr. Crane and myself, contains some curious admissions, denials and ex-parte statements. Take that part of his letter in which he says "The letter which you quote, signed by Mr. Crane, was written by me at a time when you was losing votes right and left and your defeat was imminent. I gave you a copy of the letter before it was printed, etc., etc."

Mr. Schenkelberger now claims that he wrote the letter of December 1, which I quoted in my communication of Wednesday last, entitled "Why Mr. Crane is satisfied," and signed by Mr. Crane. That may be reliable, for I have no means of knowing the authenticity of its authorship other than to assume it was written by the gentleman who signed it, no denial ever having been made before.

However, as that phase of the question alone concerns the two gentlemen named I have nothing to say. But if written by one of them, and signed by the other, whose views and recollections were expressed therein, if not both jointly? If written by Mr. Schenkelberger and signed by the name of Mr. Crane without his knowledge and consent, which is almost too serious for me to believe, then why at that early date do his views conflict with this later understanding which he repeats took place at a conference to which he was not invited with any knowledge of mine.

I have accused Mr. Crane, who signed the letter and which Mr. Schenkelberger now claims is his, with a lapse of memory. If it can be proven to me that I have done so unjustly, I will withdraw on the part of Mr. Crane, but must charge it to Mr. Schenkelberger instead.

Mr. Schenkelberger states that he gave me a copy of the letter before it was printed. I will say I never received a copy of that or any other letter, or any intimation whatsoever from Mr. Schenkelberger or Mr. Crane, in writing or otherwise, of the letter printed December 1, 1906; and my first and only knowledge of such a letter was through the public press.

I stated in my communication of Wednesday last, that no person or persons were authorized by me, excepting an unnamed gentleman to see Mr. Crane and speak for me, and I will again emphasize that such was the fact.

Regarding the conference, so-called. One morning a gentleman came into my office and talked briefly on the political aspect of Mr. Crane's entry into the field, and suggested that to keep him out I should agree, in the event of my re-election, not to appoint certain persons to office. I positively stated that I could make no such promise. He requested that I should think the matter over and meet him later in the day, which out of politeness I agreed to do.

I met him in the afternoon; after being in the office a short time he left the room and upon returning said Mr. Schenkelberger was outside, and would I have any objection to his coming in. I replied,—not the least objection to he or any other person, as anything I had to say could be said publicly.

A long disquisition followed, principally affecting certain city officials, and pessimistical prophecies of impending doom to me at election unless I should agree not to reappoint these men to whom they objected, for it would mean the success of my political opponent.

I absolutely refused regardless of consequences, and stated that if I had a positive knowledge of defeat I would make no promise or pledge, or bind myself in any way whatever. I did say if any citizen or body of citizens, irrespective of who they might be, could present good and sufficient reasons in the best public interest—not from any selfish motives—why any official or board under me should not be reappointed that I, as a public servant, was bound to give the matter due and careful consideration.

Later, when informed they were going to Mr. Crane's house that evening, I positively forbade them to represent or quote me in any way to influence his decision one way or the other. I made an appointment to meet one person that afternoon. To my knowledge no conference was arranged as stated. I neither knew then nor do I now if they represented Mr. Crane; and on the other hand they were forbidden to represent me to Mr. Crane.

In view of the contradictions eminating from the pen of Mr. Schenkleberger in the two articles he furnished to the press, I leave it to a discriminating public to judge.

James Thompson.

Nip and Tuck In Six Day Race

Those two red-hot roller skating rivals, Frank Tully and William Maloney were again nip and tuck Saturday night at the coliseum. Many times these young men have met in races at this rink the past month, and up to date nobody can tell who is the better man. Poor conditions and accidents have cost each of them races. The rivalry between the pair will do more to make a faster race tonight and tomorrow night, than anything else. Maloney tried hard to get a lap on Tully but was not successful, for Tully is showing the same remarkable speed here now that Clarence Hamilton did last winter. Tully is still one lap ahead of Maloney.

The standing today is:

Tully,	508 laps
Maloney,	507 laps
Fontoni	492 laps
Burns,	486 laps
Schofield,	484 laps
Grant,	481 laps

HOW LONG TO COURT

Rev. Dr. Perkins Says Never Less Than Three Months Or Over Three Years

The last of a series of four lectures on the family was delivered by Rev. W. S. Perkins, D. D., of the Universalist church Sunday evening.

The subject was, "Courtship and marriage," and this quotation was used from Longfellow.

"If I am not worth the wooing,
I am surely not worth the winning."

These services have been very interesting to all who have attended them, and that of Sunday evening was no exception.

In substance Dr. Perkins remarks were along the following lines. The quotations used was from the "Courtship of Myles Standish," and the point brought out was that the wooing was of necessity a personal matter and not a thing to be delegated to our friends.

There might be some differences of opinion as to whether courtship and marriage was a proper subject for lecture platform or from the pulpit,—but attention was called to the pages, chapters and even books in the Bible devoted to this subject.

The quotation, "Always courted never wed, the happiest life ever was led, meant that expectation almost always meant more than fulfillment in all matters, as well as in the matter of courtship.

The length of courtship should last long enough for both parties to become acquainted, though it as some claim they wait until they know each other thoroughly they would never marry. Not less than three months or more than three years, should be sufficient in the majority of cases.

Instances were quoted where parties had never seen each other many times and yet the union proved successful.

The question of where the courting should be done was brought up and decided to be the home of the young lady, though substitutes were at times necessary. The father who does not allow the calling of young men are short-sighted for as long as there continues to be young men and young women there will be courting, and his opposition in the home will not place a stop but only a hindrance that will drive the young people to other places where they will not be under his eye or knowledge.

Every man has his vision of a queen of all women, and every woman has her ideal of a man whether they have found them or not. One must not expect that the love of old age will be the same as that during courtship, but on the other hand, where the union was a true union the loved changed to one more holy and more beautiful as they travel life's pathway together, welding their lives more closely as time goes on.

The music was furnished by Mr. C. A. Hobart.

This will be the last of the evening services for the present, but it is to be hoped that another series will soon be started.

The regular afternoon services at 2.30 will be continued and Mrs. Grace Condon will have charge of the music next Sunday.

Savings Bank Insurance.

Two of the leading advocates of the proposed legislation to give savings bank the right to form industrial insurance departments, Mr. Louis D. Brandeis of Boston and Representative Norman H. White of Brookline, will address the Citizens' Association on Monday evening, Feb. 4. Mr. Brandeis who is one of the prominent Boston lawyers, has made a special study of insurance matters. The plan now before the Legislature, and which will be discussed on this occasion, is one which he himself originated as a result of his discovery that the industrial classes pay extraordinarily high premiums on their small policies, and that under a different system they would get the same results at much cheaper rates. Hence the idea of having savings banks, which have been the workingman's friend for more than a century, establish separate insurance departments under State supervision. The plan has been approved by industrial and commercial organizations throughout the Commonwealth.

Owing to the storm on Friday night only a few ventured out to enjoy two hours of whist at Polands hall. Souvenirs were awarded to Miss L. Thornley, Miss Mabel Cody, Mrs. J. E. Poland, Percy Hall, Ed. M. Dunn and Wm. G. Woodward.

Owing to the storm of Saturday the Arts and Crafts committee of the Quincy Women's club are to continue their cake and candy sale at the club house, Presidents hill on Tuesday afternoon from two until five. A club whist party will also be held the same afternoon.

The second of the social whist parties being given by the Quincy Women's club at the club house, will be held Tuesday afternoon from half past two until five. As these parties are arranged to give members a few social hours together it is hoped they will avail themselves of the opportunity, also bring their friends.

After the experience of the last few days, many house owners are tempted to take all gutters from their houses. The heavy fall of snow on the roofs, and the continued cold weather has allowed the snow next to the roof to melt, and when it reached the gutter to freeze, and some water has worked into the houses.

More than usual interest is being taken in the annual meeting of the Quincy Yacht club next week on account of the contest that is for vice commodore. Both Mr. Robbins and Joseph W. Johnson are popular members of the club, and each has worked hard for its success. Certain residents of Houghs Neck, however are seeking to oust Mr. Robbins and induced Mr. Johnson to allow his name to be used.

On exhibition in the files of the Civil Service Commission is a letter just received from a New Yorker who recently took an examination for a government position and who failed to pass. The circular letter of commiseration that accompanied the report showing his sorry rating evidently impressed the recipient with the idea that the Commissioners were worrying over his lack of luck. In a somewhat lengthy note in reply he urged the Commissioners not to be down-hearted, but to look on the bright side of things. In closing, he said:

"Be a perennial optimist. Who knows, even a civil service commissioner may be ambassador extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary to the Isle of Bong-bong, and be served up, rare, with hair-oil sauce, for the enlightenment of the heathen. Think it over and join the 'Don't Worry' Club."

The Civil Service Commission has filed the good advice away in its curio cupboard.

BURDEN TOO HEAVY

Governor Swettenham of Jamaica Said to Have Resigned

CITIZENS' TAXES ABATED

Municipal Council Said to Be Unable to Cope With Present Emergency--Money Needed to Rebuild the City

Kingston, Jam., Jan. 28.—It is understood that Governor Swettenham tendered his resignation to Lord Elgin, secretary for the colonies, a few days ago, in consequence of the Admiral Davis incident and his inability to solve the problem created by the earthquake.

The governor has visited the temporary offices of the municipal council and informed the vice chairman, who is acting in the absence of Mayor Tait, who is injured, that the government has decided to relieve the people of Kingston from all rates and taxes for a period of 15 months, beginning the first of January. This announcement has been received with pleasure by the residents of the city, who will be encouraged to start the work of rebuilding as early as possible.

Most Rev. Enos Nuttall, archbishop of the West Indies, in an interview, said that the municipal council was unable to deal with the present extraordinary emergency and should be abolished and one commissioner with full powers should be appointed to govern the city during the period of reconstruction.

He also declared that in addition to the generous contributions from the United States, Canada and elsewhere, it was absolutely necessary to obtain an imperial grant and a large imperial loan to rebuild Kingston, more particularly in view of the attitude of the English fire insurance companies, which have disclaimed all liability for losses sustained during the earthquake and fire.

A Roman Catholic Protest

New York, Jan. 28.—The Hippodrome was filled last night when Catholics, lay and clerical, of the archdiocese of New York met to publicly protest against the new French church law. The action of the government of France in divorcing church and state was sharply attacked by several speakers, while some 7000 listeners voiced their approval. At the conclusion of the speaking the audience voted to send to the pope a cablegram of greeting and sympathy.

Starter of Boodle Crusade

St. Louis, Jan. 28.—John F. Magner, associate editor of The Star-Chronicle, died suddenly of hemorrhage of the stomach. He was born in this city in 1855. Magner is credited with giving the first intimation to Circuit Attorney (now governor) Folk that the members of the house of delegates were bribed in connection with certain traction franchise measures, and the famous boodle crusade followed.

Robbed Insurance Company

New York, Jan. 28.—George A. Burnham, Jr., who was convicted of grand larceny from the Mutual Reserve Life Insurance company, of which he was counsel and a vice president and sentenced to two years imprisonment, has been taken to Sing Sing. Before leaving the Tombs he was permitted to see his wife and four other members of the family.

Buffalo Overcame Bull

El Paso, Tex., Jan. 28.—Ten thousand persons gathered at the Juarez Plaza de Toros to witness a fight between a buffalo and a bull, in which the buffalo was the victor. During the preliminary bull fights. Compico, a matador, was tossed over the fence by a bull, which then jumped the fence, landing on the matador, who was seriously injured.

Insanity on the Increase

Albany, Jan. 28.—A steady increase of insanity in this state is reported by the state commission in lunacy in its 18th annual report. The net increase for the past year of cases in all institutions was 895. The whole number of new cases developed during the year was 5761. The total of insane in all institutions at the close of the year was 28,302.

Socialists' Loss of Prestige

Brussels, Jan. 28.—The popular press, notably People, the organ of the Socialists, considers the Socialist check in Germany as due to a coalition of the bourgeois parties and as a triumph of "the alliance of strong boxes." The paper, however, finds some consolation in the growth of Socialist ideas in the Catholic region of Rhenish Prussia.

Automobile Struck a Tree

New York, Jan. 28.—Mrs. Ralph Foreman and Mrs. Frank Foreman, sisters-in-law, were badly injured in an automobile accident. The former sustained severe injuries about the chest and a broken hip, the latter chest injuries. Their husbands and a boy were slightly hurt. They were speeding and the car hit a tree.

BACTERIA IN MILK

Diseases Which Cows Never Have May Be Transmitted

Boston, Jan. 28.—During a lecture on "Public Milk Supplies" in the Harvard Medical school, Dr. Harrington of the Massachusetts state board of health declared that 90 to 95 percent of the victims of the recent scarlet fever epidemic in Boston were customers of one milk dealer. He showed that a large percentage of the mortality among infants during the summer months is also due to the milk supply. He advocated the greatest care in sterilizing or otherwise purifying milk. Dr. Harrington said:

"The only disease that is common to cows and human beings is tuberculosis. On the whole, the danger of transmitting tuberculosis is much less than of transmitting such diseases as typhoid fever, scarlet fever or diphtheria, diseases which cows never have.

"The disease may come from a person who has what is known as 'walking typhoid,' or from one who is nursing a case. In this way their hands become infected with germs. No matter how careful a dealer may be a few bacteria are bound to find their way into milk, and there they multiply enormously in a very short time."

Women Victims of Explosion

Newburyport, Mass., Jan. 28.—A hot water heater in the laundry of the Dummer academy at South Byfield exploded, severely and perhaps fatally injuring the matron, Miss Clara Dawson, aged 61, and a colored maid, Martha Anderson, 20 years old. Each woman had a leg so badly fractured that amputation was necessary. The explosion shattered all the windows in the laundry and the adjoining kitchen, shook the building and caused nearly a panic among the 40 students. Both women were somewhat burned, in addition to having their legs fractured.

May Not Save the Onondaga

Chatham, Mass., Jan. 28.—For the second time in 10 days the wreckers engaged in saving the steamer Onondaga, which went ashore on Orleans beach two weeks ago yesterday, were defeated in their efforts to float the vessel. A sudden increase of the surf broke the line to the wrecking tugs, twisted the steamer round and, after imperilling the lives of those on board, drove her far up again on the strand. It is feared that the vessel will not be able to withstand another hauling by the tugs.

Possessed a "Secret Code"

Saybrook, Conn., Jan. 28.—Patrick Ward, 45 years old, was arrested here, charged with an attempt on the life of Mrs. Tony Appo of Black Hall. Mrs. Appo was taken to a hospital in a dying condition, a bullet having pierced the abdomen. Ward is said to be demented. He admitted shooting a woman, but when asked the reason said that when a boy he learned the "secret code of women and their thoughts." He later told how he had shot at Mrs. Appo through a window.

Schoolhouse Destroyed by Fire

Boston, Jan. 28.—The Pauline street grammar school at Winthrop was destroyed by fire and three firemen were injured by falling timbers. The loss is about $40,000. PRICE OF COPPER

Charge That It Is Held at an Artificial Height

SUPPLY NOT EXHAUSTED

Small Dealers Say That Thousands of Tons of Copper Is In Storage, Some Even Being Used as Ballast on Steamer

New York, Jan. 28.—President Noroton of the Northeastern Metal Dealers' association last night made public the following letter, which, upon instructions from the association, he sent on Friday to Attorney General Bonaparte at Washington:

"Referring to our telegram to you of this date respecting the combination of copper interests in this country, I beg to lay before you the following facts which we are prepared to prove:

"That the copper trust, so-called, has created an artificial scarcity of copper by storing it in large quantities at Butte, Mont.; Hoboken, N. J.; Perth Amboy, N. J.; Bayonne, N. J.; Bisbee, Ariz.; Canannea, Mex.; Houghton, Mich., and other places known to our association, and refusing to sell it except in small quantities.

"That there is now stored at Perth Amboy 8000 tons of refined copper and that all intending purchasers are told that the supply has been exhausted.

"That there is 1700 tons of copper at Hoboken and that seals were placed on the storehouse there on Oct. 18 last and have not since been broken.

"That there are stored in similar manner at Butte, Mont., 9000 tons; at Bisbee, 3000 tons, and 7500 tons at Cananea and Houghton, Mich.

"That the steamer Hindustan, Captain Rallton, on Oct. 20 last sailed for South Africa with 1000 tons of copper ballast with no orders for its delivery in any port of South Africa, and that the Hindustan returned to the port of New York on or about Dec 29, still carrying the 1000 tons of copper as ballast, and that Captain Rallton, on seeking orders for the delivery of the copper, received orders the next day to continue the 1000 tons of copper as ballast. The Hindustan sailed subsequently for a South American port, still without orders for the delivery of the copper. His affidavit reciting the above facts is enclosed.

"We submit that the present danger to the trade is not so much the high price of copper as is the fear that the price, being held at an artificial height, may be lowered suddenly should the copper combination succeed in selling its stored up product at the present quotations."

President Noroton said that he would go to Washington to see the president and Attorney General Bonaparte.

The Northeastern Metal Dealers' association was organized at a meeting here Friday of the representatives of the small metal dealers of New York, New Jersey and New England. At that meeting it was decided to ask the United States attorney general to take steps to prevent the formation of a combination of copper mining companies.

Fatalities In Oil Field

Butler, Pa., Jan. 28.—Judd Steele, 19 years old, was killed, and Richard Campbell, 25 years old, is fatally injured as the result of a boiler explosion in an oil pumping house. A defective regulator caused the explosion. In a somewhat similar accident James Byers, an oil operator, was fatally injured. Byers was found unconscious in an oil pumping shanty with his clothing burned off, the flesh of his arms burned to a crisp and his legs frozen.

Must Pay $25,000 Damages

Detroit, Jan. 28.—H. C. Millen was awarded a verdict of $25,000 in the long fought damage suit against W. J. White, a Cleveland capitalist. The case hinged upon an encounter between Mr. and Mrs. Millen and White. The Millens charged White with attacking Mrs. Millen, while White claimed he was acting only in self-defense. The quarrel arose from a dispute connected with property Millen was occupying as a residence.

Financial Aid Not Needed

Washington, Jan. 28.—Representative Marshall (N. D.) declares that, while there is a shortage of fuel at some points in North Dakota and danger of shortage at others, growing primarily out of the so-called car shortage and later out of the unusual snowstorms, North Dakota is in no need of financial assistance whatever.

Boy of Twelve Murdered

Chicago, Jan. 28.—The body of Walter Kurpa, 12 years old, was found in a swamp on the outskirts of the city, frozen in a mass of ice. The coroner's inquest showed that the boy had been viciously maltreated and then murdered. There were fingermarks on the throat and the skull showed evidence of heavy blows.

Fire on German Steamer

Colombo, Jan. 28.—Steamer Seydlitz, of Hamburg, homeward bound from Japan and China with passengers, mails and merchandise, has arrived at Point de Galle, Ceylon, with her cargo on fire. She is burned out forward. The passengers and mails were rescued by the British cruiser Diadem and brought to Colombo.

FOUR BOYS CREMATED

Result of Fire Which Destroyed Mill of Cocheco Company

Dover, N. H., Jan. 28.—That only four lives were lost in the fire which destroyed No. 1 mill of the Cocheco Manufacturing company's plant here was established when it was learned that all of the employes of the mill except four had been accounted for. Four charred bodies were taken from the ruins and it is believed that these were the bodies of the four missing employes, all of whom were boys.

The fire broke out afresh Saturday night and burned throughout yesterday. From midnight until 7 o'clock Sunday morning the firemen worked in a temperature varying from 2 to 14 degrees below zero, and cases of frostbite and frozen extremities were numerous.

Medical Examiner Neal of Rochester came here and viewed the bodies of the victims. One of the bodies was identified as that of John Coskeren, aged 15, who was employed as a filling carrier in the weave room of the mill. It was impossible to identify the other bodies, but they are believed to be those of Alfred Barron, Constantine Gleopuplos and John Nicolopulos.

The injured are reported as out of danger and on the road to recovery. The fire yesterday burned down through the third, second and first floors into the basement.

Mill No. 1 of the Cocheco plant, which manufactures cotton goods, was erected in 1877. It was the largest of several mills constituting the company's plant here. The mill and contents were insured for between $500,000 and $600,000. Charles H. Fish, the local agent for the company, says that the work of rebuilding the mill will start at once.

Sensational Double Suicide

Camden, N. J., Jan. 28.—With arms entwined, an unknown young man and young woman stood on the tracks of the Pennsylvania electric railroad over Newton creek and calmly waited until an electric train ran them down. Both were killed and their bodies were hurled into the water. The motorman of the train saw the pair, but not until he was close upon them. The body of the young woman was recovered. Her clothing was of fine texture and she was of refined appearance. The letters "W. C." were on a gold watch found on the body. The body of the man has not been recovered.

Argument For the Canteen

Washington, Jan. 28.—The necessity for the restoration of the canteen in the American army is strongly set forth in a letter from Dr. Anita N. McGee to Captain Mitchell of the Spanish-American War Veterans' association. Dr. McGee, who was formerly assistant surgeon in the army and later organized a corps of nurses under the auspices of the Red Cross society for work among the Japanese soldiers in the Russo-Japanese war, tells of the evil results following the abolishment of the canteen in the United States army.

Record Exportations to Cuba

Washington, Jan. 28.—The total exports from this country to Cuba during the past calendar year were valued at $46,491,944, which is more than $2,000,000 over the exportations for 1905. The importations from Cuba were valued at $85,055,295, showing a falling off of $10,000,000 as compared with 1905. The marked decline in American importations from the island is accounted for because of the reduction in the price of sugar.

Thaw Won't See Newspaper Men

New York, Jan. 28.—Harry K. Thaw was in good spirits yesterday until he had read the Sunday newspapers. The contents of these, insofar as they indicated that there was dissension among members of his family or counsel, displeased him greatly. A note of inquiry was torn to bits unread and the messenger was instructed to say that the prisoner desired neither to see nor to hear from newspaper men.

Killed Father In Woods

Delaware, O., Jan. 28.—Mont Runyon, 40 years old, has confessed that he shot and killed his father two weeks ago during a quarrel while they were at work in a logging camp. The son fled, leaving the father's body in the woods, where, he says, it probably still remains, as there was no one within several miles.

TO DIG BIG DITCH

Contract Is Practically Awarded to Oliver of Nashville

HE MUST FIND PARTNERS

Roosevelt Stuck by Him In His Bid of 6.75 Percent For Construction of Isthmian Waterway, Despite Opposition

Washington, Jan. 28.—Following a conference at the White House last night, it was officially announced that the contract for building the Panama canal would be awarded to William J. Oliver, who, with Anson E. Bangs, was the lowest bidder in the recent competition, provided that within the next 10 days he associates himself with at least two independent contractors whose skill and experience, combined with his own, shall cover the entire field of the work to be performed under the contract.

The official announcement confirms the press statement of last Friday night. President Roosevelt then took the position that since Oliver had met all the requirements of the government it would be unjust to reject his bid of 6.75 percent for the construction of the canal or even to require him to submit a new bid for the contract.

Powerful influences were brought to bear on the president and Secretary Taft to reject all bids and advertise for new proposals, but the president insisted that Oliver should be given a reasonable time in which to make a satisfactory arrangement to substitute some other contractor or group of contractors to take the place of Bangs.

At a White House conference Saturday night the friends of the MacArthur-Gillespie syndicate argued that the contract figure should be increased to 9 percent of the total cost of the construction and that the contract be awarded to Oliver, MacArthur and Gillespie. This suggestion, however, did not meet with the approval of the New York firm, who insisted that they could not undertake the work for less than 12.50 percent of the total cost, the figure mentioned in the original bid. The president, Taft and the canal commission officials then decided to award the contract to Oliver, provided he could make satisfactory arrangements with at least two other financially responsible contractors.

Secretary Taft and R. R. Rogers, general counsel to the canal commission, were in conference with the president for two hours last night and the whole matter was gone over again. At the direction of the president, Rogers prepared the official statement for the press.

The official statement given out last night follows:

"As a result of conferences at the White House, it was today announced by the isthmian canal commission that, in view of assurances that had been received from Mr. Oliver and capitalists associated with him that Oliver was prepared to make good his bid to complete the construction of the isthmian canal at a percentage of 6.75, with an organization of contractors and with financial resources in full compliance with the requirements of the invitation for bids, he will be given an opportunity to do so.

"Mr. Oliver has been notified that within 10 days he will be required to associate with himself at least two independent contractors whose skill and experience, combined with his own, shall cover the entire field of work to be performed under the contract, and to organize a corporation for the express purpose of carrying out the proposed contract, with a capital of $5,000,000, of which not less than $1,500,000 paid in cash, and $1,500,000 in the form of solvent subscriptions, shall be available for the purpose of carrying out the contract, and of which the remaining $2,000,000 may be devoted to the purpose of procuring a bond, as required by the contract, or of substituting in lieu thereof, in whole, or in part, and subject to the conditions of the bond, cash or current securities satisfactory to the commission. Satisfactory assurances not having been received that the financial standing of Anson M. Bangs met the requirements of invitation, by direction of the president he has been rejected as a participant in the bid filed by Oliver and Bangs.

"The privilege has been extended to MacArthur & Gillespie, the one remaining bidder whose bid had been deemed worthy of consideration, to either withdraw their pending bid or to allow it to abide by the result of Oliver's efforts to make good his bid as herein outlined, then to be considered upon its merits. The other bids have been rejected because informal, and in the case of the highest bid, excessive as well.

"The foregoing action is taken in conformity with the expressed wish of both Oliver and the MacArthur-Gillespie syndicate that the contract should be let without a rebidding, and in view of the further statements of the spokesmen of the MacArthur-Gillespie company to the president that if the commission could close the contract with a satisfactory and responsible association or contractor at a rate as low as that proposed by Oliver it should feel at liberty, so far as they were concerned, to do so. Oliver resides at Knoxville, Tenn."

BRANDED WITH HOT IRON

How Woman Punished Stepchildren Who Annoyed Her

New York, Jan. 28.—Nellie, aged 7 years, and Jennie, 2 years younger, told Magistrate House in Harlem police court how their stepmother, Mrs. Kate Gravius, had branded them with a red hot stovelid lifter when in play they had made too much noise. Twice during the recital the prisoner, a woman of intelligent and pleasing appearance, not more than 20 years of age, fainted.

When restored she admitted that she had burned the children, but said that at the time she was possessed by an unaccountable mania. The two girls, she said, had been playing with their dolls until the noise and confusion robbed her of her reason and left a resistless impulse to punish the little ones. Seizing the stovelid lifter, she pressed the glowing end upon the back of the right hand of each child, causing scars that the little ones will carry to their graves.

A peculiar feature of the case was the apparent affection for the children felt by the prisoner, and that the attachment was reciprocated was repeatedly demonstrated in court. When Mrs. Gravius lost consciousness the children wailed in unison.

The prisoner was paroled in custody of her counsel, pending a further hearing.

Great Ranch Changes Hands

Salt Lake City, Jan. 28.—The Herald says that the Wood-Hagenbarth ranch in the states of Sonora and Chihuhua, Mex., has been purchased by John D. Ryan, Thomas F. Cole and W. C. Greene, copper mine owners, from the owners in Salt Lake City. The consideration for the ranch alone is approximately $1,000,000, and the transfer of 25,000 cattle at from $12.50 to $35 a head, brings the sum involved far above the million mark. The ranch contains 4000 square miles, is almost as large as Connecticut, and is under 500 miles of fence.

Kicked on Weather Forecast

Washington, Jan. 28.—Representative Campbell (Kan.) sought to do away with the government weather bureau by striking from the agricultural appropriation bill all appropriations for the support of the bureau. He spoke against the appropriation on the ground that the forecasts of weather conditions have been inaccurate. He was subjected to raillery on account of Kansas cyclones and winds and after several humorous speeches the appropriation was agreed to and predictions concerning climatical conditions will continue.

Tribute to Alger's Memory

Detroit, Jan. 28.—Nearly 30,000 people paid tribute to the memory of Senator Alger as his body lay in state in the main corridor of the city hall. Guarded by a company of infantry, the body lay on a bier under a canopy of American flags. A silk flag was draped over the casket and upon this lay several magnificent wreaths. The long corridor was hung with black draperies from floor to ceiling. Old soldiers who had served in the Civil war with him saluted as they slowly marched by the body of their old commander.

IMPULSE

[Original.]

With the abolition of slavery the cavalier type of the higher classes in the south has passed away. It is impossible for us who live in this commercial age to understand how much of the cavalier spirit at that time remained, though it flickered like a candle before going out.

It was in the fifties that Heloise Thibadeaux, a young creole of Louisiana, while attending a garden party in New Orleans lost a fan that some one of her ancestors had received as a mark of favor from the king of France. A diligent search was made, but the fan was not recovered. Miss Thibadeaux was very much exercised over the loss and in a moment of impulse said to several gentlemen who stood about her discussing the probable whereabouts of the fan, "I will give to whoever finds it—I will give"— "Yourself?" asked one of the men.

"Yes, and my fortune."

The words were no sooner uttered than the lady regretted them as foolish. Besides, in those times they were more liable to be taken seriously than they would now be, and a lady would feel it to be more incumbent upon her to stand by them. The man who had made the suggestion, Albert Mason, was a suitor of hers—a suitor she had no intention of accepting—and among the men in the group was Henry Du Pont, whom she felt very much inclined to accept. The reason she had not done so was because he had not asked her, and the reason he had not asked her was because she owned by inheritance several sugar plantations, while he was poor. Possibly she had fallen in with Mason's suggestion in order to give Du Pont a chance to win her by finding her fan. There would at least be an exciting rival search between him and Mason.

When the next evening Du Pont called on Miss Thibadeaux, she, supposing he had come to bring her fan, met him with a throbbing heart. When he failed to speak of the matter, she said impatiently:

"My fan—has it been found?"

"It will be found," he replied sententiously.

A servant entered with the fan and a note from Mason saying: "I claim the first part of the reward. The second, your fortune, I do not claim."

Miss Thibadeaux was vexed. Having done one foolish thing, she proceeded to re-enforce it by doing another.

"I will give myself," she said excitedly, "to the man who will prevent my having to break and yet not keep my promise."

"And then," said Du Pont, "you will give yourself to the man who will enable you to break honorably with the new winner."

"The next winner shall receive the reward, and it shall be given willingly."

It was the averted face rather than the words that gave him her meaning. He understood it perfectly, but without a word of reply left her and went to the rooms of Albert Mason.

"Mason," he said, "you certainly are not going to take an advantage of Miss Thibadeaux in the matter of her fan?"

Mason looked surprised. "What is that to you?" he asked.

"This: I saw Miss Thibadeaux drop her fan and saw you pick it up. You had it when you suggested the reward."

Mason paled. "I certainly shall not—cannot—force Miss Thibadeaux to keep her promise," he said.

"You should release her from it."

"That suggestion should come from her."

"She is just the person it should not come from."

"And suppose I refuse?"

"I shall make known the fact that you have taken an unfair advantage of a lady."

"Have you witnesses?"

"None that I know of."

"Then it is your word against mine. But it is not necessary that the lady should be brought into the affair. You have accused me of a dishonorable act. I suppose you will not refuse me satisfaction."

"Certainly not."

"Very well, after we have settled the matter between ourselves you are at liberty to go to Miss Thibadeaux with your accusation against me."

This was equivalent to saying that Du Pont would be prevented, for Mason had been out several times and had always killed his man. The accusation would die with the accuser.

The next morning at sunrise the two principals were being placed at a point a short distance up the Mississippi under the levee when a clatter of hoofs was heard, and Miss Thibadeaux, mounted, dashed in between them.

"Gentlemen," she said, "I know something as to the cause of this affair; I can infer something, and of the rest I am ignorant. Last night a lady came to me and said that she had seen you, Mr. Mason, pick up my fan soon after I had dropped it."

There was silence for a moment. Then she continued:

"If this affair has to do with the finding of my fan I beg that it be discontinued."

Mason handed his pistol to a second and, making a low bow to the lady, went to his carriage. Then the party separated, returning to the city, Du Pont walking beside Miss Thibadeaux, who in the nick of time had saved him from almost certain death.

Mason left New Orleans never to return. He was killed on the Confederate side during the civil war. Du Pont received the promised reward, the hand of Miss Thibadeaux.

Local and City Brevities

A party of young people of Bethany church go on a sleigh party tonight.

The next meeting of the City Council will be held next Monday evening.

Mrs. James H. Stetson is confined to the house and under the doctors care, has a severe grip cold.

Club members and friends are to enjoy another card party tomorrow afternoon at the clubhouse.

At basket ball on Saturday the girls team of Thayer Academy defeated Randolph high 18 to 0. Medford High defeated the boys of Thayer Academy 21 to 16.

The Owls social club was to have played a game of hockey Saturday afternoon with the Wollaston social club, but during the heavy fall of snow the game was postponed.

Representative Sandberg is to take a party of Quincy friends through the States prison at Charlestown next Tuesday. The party will leave Quincy on the 1 o'clock train.

Rev. William R. Lord formerly of Wollaston, preached his farewell sermon on Sunday at the Unitarian church at Rockland. With Mrs. Lord he will leave Rockland tomorrow, and Feb. 2 they will sail from New York to Italy for a six months' trip.

Much damage was done by snow left on the roof over Sunday in Adams building. It melted and penetrated through the ceiling and caused about $200 damage in the Quincy Fair store. Fortunately the other tenants did not suffer any loss.

Another rehearsal will be held in the chapel of First church tonight of the musicale and readings to be given by the Quincy Historical society on February sixth. Our musical people are greatly enjoying the rehearsals, which insures still greater pleasure for those who are privileged to enjoy the final presentation.

Music lovers in Wollaston are going to have rather more to be thankful for than usual in the near future. Without going to Boston, one can hear some of the best music in our own churches. The benefit concert for the Free Kindergarten, directed and arranged by Mrs. Follett, who will also sing the soprano, is one of these.

The young people of Wollaston and the Downs seem to be making the most of the snow, while it lasts, by forming sleigh parties. A party of fourteen started off Saturday evening mid songs and cheers for a fine ride. After a long enjoyable drive the party was served with refreshments at the home of Mr. Flahive, a member of the Oule Social club. It was an ideal evening for a sleigh ride.

Fred J. Gross of 96 West Elm avenue, active member of the firm of Field Brothers & Gross, shoe manufacturers of Auburn, Maine, gave a grand ball to his employees on Wednesday evening, January 23. There were about 1,500 present, including several of Mr. Gross' Wollaston friends. With its orchestra of twenty-five pieces, and ample refreshments, it was unanimously pronounced the most enjoyable party of the season.

Good sleighing.

Are you reading "Partners of the Tide."

The snow melted a little in the sun this noon.

The U. S. S. Des Moines is now at Key West.

Officer Murray, who has been laid up with rheumatism since December, is on duty today.

For six successive days the mercury has not risen above 28. The noon temperatures beginning last Wednesday have been 18, 10, 18, 22, 18 and 28.

Mrs. Abigail, widow of William Davenport, and mother of Thomas B. Davenport of Woodward avenue passed away this morning.

James Melville had charge of the song services at the Point church Sunday Evening. He was assisted by Albion Bonney and Roy Sidelinger, violinist.

The Wollaston Unitarian Young People's Religious Union met Sunday as usual. Peris Thompson was the leader of the evening. Mr. Parlin gave a very interesting talk.

The Theta Sigma club are planning to have a sleigh ride tomorrow evening. The moon will then be full and if the snow keeps on the ground they cannot help but have a good time.

Adventures of Shipyard Man

George Smith, an employee at the Fore River shipyard, went to Fields Corner on Saturday night and purchased some clothing. He then visited a bar room and drank two beers and two whiskeys. He also purchased two bottles of liquor, so as to have some to last over Sunday. He came to Quincy and boarded an electric car for home. On the car Smith became lost to the world. Later he was found in the snow nearly frozen and unconscious by John J. McAuliff. He was taken to the boarding house of Mrs. Jones on South street, when efforts were made to thaw him out. The police were then notified and Smith was taken to the police station about 1 A. M.

When Smith came to in the morning he claimed that his bundles and liquid refreshments were gone and he was also $3.25 short in funds.

Smith had a warrant issued against McAuliff for larceny of his money. In court McAuliff was found not guilty and discharged.

Some Good Ice Being Housed

The cold weather for the past ten days has been just what the ice men have been looking for, as it has enabled them to house some of their winter's crop.

The Meadow Brook Co. commenced cutting at their South Quincy pond last week, when the ice was seven inches thick and it got to be over ten inches before the first cutting of the pond was completed today. One cutting however is not sufficient to fill their houses and it is hoped to be able to cut again next week.

This morning the company started in at their pond, at Quincy Neck. The snow is being scraped off and tomorrow they will commence to house ice. The ice on this pond is fully ten inches thick and as clear as a crystal.

Sheppard & Sons are cutting at their pond in Braintree and have nearly ten inches. They will probably fill their houses at this cutting as they housed considerable nine inch ice early in January.

The Eaton Ice Company began to cut last week, and have a good part of their first crop housed.

Basket Ball At the Y. M. C. A.

The Intermediate team of the Quincy Y. M. C. A. won two well played games on Saturday. In the afternoon the Ameek club of Cambridge was taken into camp by the score of 30 to 8. Gourlie was the star of this game, caging the ball seven times, thus scoring fourteen points for his team.

In the evening the Round Table club of Lexington was defeated by the score of 20 to 18.

The Senior team of the Somerville and Quincy Y. M. C. A. met in the evening, and Quincy was defeated 41 to 16.

This evening the Quincy bowling team will meet Brockton on the local alleys, and the basket ball team goes to North Abington to meet the latter association.

Next Thursday evening Everett Y. M. C. A. plays Quincy in the local gymnasium. Saturday afternoon the 2d Intermediates will meet Plymouth at Quincy.

Keikichi Aoki is a ten-year-old Japanese boy who figures in an international episode in that he has been selected as the complaining witness in the suit brought by the United States government in the supreme court on behalf of the emperor of Japan to settle the controversy over the segregation of Japanese children in the San Francisco schools. The case is likely to become historic, and little Keikichi therefore is a character of no ordinary

WHITMAN'S BIRTHPLACE.

Effort to Preserve Old Home of "the Good Gray Poet."

Walt Whitman, "the good gray poet," was born at West Hills, in the township of Huntington, on the north shore of Long Island, N. Y. The genius of the poet is being better appreciated with the passing years, and his admirers think that means should be taken to preserve his birthplace, which is falling into decay. It is an old homestead of a type familiar on Long Island, with a well in front possessing one of those curbs only less ancient in date than the "old oaken bucket" with its sweep. Whitman's ancestors came to this country from England and settled in Connecticut in 1635. Before the Revolution broke out the family lived on a farm at West Hills. Whitman's father married Louisa Van Velsor, the daughter of a Dutch farmer, in 1816, and the poet, who was the second of their nine children, was born in the now venerable farmhouse in 1819. During his childhood his parents removed to Brooklyn. His career was associated with Huntington at a later period when he edited the Long Islander, still published in this historic village. His works contain many references to the scenes of his childhood. The old Whitman homestead is now the property of Franklin F. Rogers of Brooklyn borough, New York city, and an effort is being made by the Whitman Fellowship to purchase and preserve it. The Colonial society of Huntington has placed a tablet in memory of Whitman on a bowlder near his birthplace.

CHAPTER IV.

WHEN the captain called, which he did the next forenoon, the tale of Bradley's eventful first day at school was told him in all its harrowing completeness. Miss Prissy, by previous agreement, acted as story teller, and Miss Tempy was a sort of chorus, breaking in every few moments to supply a neglected detail or comment on a particular feature.

"And we didn't know what to do," concluded Miss Prissy. "He wan't goin' to tell us whose dog it was, and"—

"I don't b'lieve he ever would have told," broke in Miss Tempy, "if that 'dog girl' herself hadn't come bouncin' in, and"—

"And he won't promise not to speak to her again, neither," continued the older sister. "We sent him to bed without any supper"—

"That is, any real supper," interrupted the chorus. "Of course we took up some cookies and things when we found he wouldn't come down, but"—

"And he won't promise this mornin', and he went to school without promisin'. What do you think we ought to do, Cap'n Titcomb?"

"She's noisy and a tomboy," said Miss Prissy decidedly.

"Yes," said Miss Tempy; "and she likes those dreadful dogs."

"Um—hum," answered their visitor, with unimpeachable seriousness. "Of course that's a terrible drag, but maybe she'll cut 'em adrift when she gits older."

"Well, we don't like her," said Miss Prissy, with decision. "And we wish you'd speak to Bradley about it. You know," she added, looking down, "I put a lot of dependence in your judgment, Cap'n Titcomb."

"So do I," said Miss Tempy quickly; "jest as much as Prissy does. I b'lieve in you absolutely, Cap'n Ezra."

"Yes, yes, of course," hurriedly replied the captain. "Well, I'll speak to the boy by and by and see what I can do."

"Brad," he said, as they came out of the Allen gate after dinner, "what's this I hear 'bout you gittin' the rope's end yesterday? Never mind spinnin' the whole yarn. I cal'late I've heard the most of it. You and the Hammond boy had a scrimmage, too, didn't you?"

"Yes, sir," said Bradley doggedly.

"Hum! Think you'd have licked him if the skipper hadn't took a hand?"

Bradley looked up at his questioner, saw the twinkle in his eye and answered with a sheepish grin: "Don't know. Guess I'd have tried mighty hard."

"Think you'd have licked him?"

The captain roared. "I presume likely you would," he chuckled. "I understand you've sort of took that little Baker craft next door in tow. She seems like a smart girl. Do you like her?"

"Yes, sir."

"I jedge Prissy and Tempy wouldn't enter her for the cup. Now, Brad, mind I ain't coaxin' you to go back on a friend, but the old mai—that is, your ladies at home, have set out to make a man of you. They're your owners, and you're expected to sail 'cordin' to their orders. If there's one thing that I've always stuck to it's 'Obey orders or break owners.' Sometimes owners' orders don't jibe exactly with your own ideas, but never mind—they pay the wages, see?"

"She's a good girl," said the boy stoutly. "She came in and took my part when she didn't have to, and I like her. And I won't promise not to speak to her, neither."

The captain looked down at the lad's square jaw and whistled.

"Well," he said, "I don't b'lieve you need to promise, but don't whoop too loud about it. Run as close to the wind as you can, and don't carry all sail in a two reef breeze jest to show you ain't afraid to. Catch my drift?"

"Yes, sir," answered Bradley, rather doubtfully. "You mean be chums with the girl, but don't tell Miss Prissy and Miss Tempy about it."

"No-o." Captain Ezra looked somewhat put out by the literal interpretation. "That ain't jest it. Be—well, be easy, and— Oh, thunder! Let it go at that. I guess you know what I mean. How do you think you're goin' to like your school?"

Bradley answered, "Pretty well, I guess, when I get more used to it;" but, although he did not say so, he was certain that it would take some time to get used to it. As a matter of fact, however, that very lively first day was the only serious trouble for him during the entire term. He was quick to learn and so found little difficulty with his studies and advanced as rapidly as other boys of his age. As for his behavior, it was no worse than that of any other healthy youngster. At the end of the year he was "promoted"—that is, he was no longer a member of the fourth class, but instead proudly left his seat when the third was called.

Gus was "promoted" also, much to the surprise of the "old maids," who could not believe there was any good in the "dog girl." They gradually ceased to urge the boy not to have anything to do with her, for the very good reason that in this matter their urging was of no avail. They grew to understand their colt better as the months passed, and they learned just how tight a rein it was advisable to draw.

Bradley also grew to understand the sisters. He discovered that Miss Prissy was the business woman and that she paid all the bills, bought all the household supplies and did it without consulting Miss Tempy, whom she treated as a sort of doll with a mechanism that must not be jarred.

Bradley made friends among the village boys and did not make any virulent enemies. He had his interrupted fight "out" with Sam Hammond and emerged a conqueror with a black eye and a swollen nose, which were the cause of his being in disgrace at home for a week. Also he joined the "Jolly club," a secret society that met on Saturday afternoons in "Snuppy" Black's barn.

During the long summer vacation there were chores to do, but there was also all sorts of fun along shore, digging clams on the flats, spearing flatfish along the edge of the channels or rare and much prized trips to the fish weirs where the nets were hauled. Captain Titcomb came home in August for an intended stay of two weeks, and he made the boy happy by taking him for an all day sail and blue fishing excursion off Setuckit Point.

A CUP OF TEA.

Troubles That May Follow a Too Free Use of the Beverage.

One hears a great deal about the alcohol and opium habits and various other drug addictions, but rarely does one hear a word concerning a very common and in many cases very injurious habit—namely, the tea habit.

This habit is much more common in England, Russia and China than in the United States, but one would hardly say that it is uncommon here.

The stimulating effect of tea is due to an alkaloid identical with the caffeine found in coffee. This principle is a valuable medicinal agent; but taken habitually, exerting as it does a powerful stimulating effect upon the heart and nervous system, it is a very serious matter. Some persons drink tea a long time without suffering any inconvenience; others gradually develop a train of symptoms which begin with loss of appetite, dyspepsia and various stomach derangements, followed by nervous palpitation of the heart, insomnia, dreams, broken sleep, incapacity for mental work, neuralgia and various organic ailments. Fatigue follows the slightest effort. The complexion assumes a pasty gray color, the body becomes thin and emaciated, and approaching decrepitude is suggested by the appearance and every action of the victim.

Of course it does not follow that every one who drinks tea, even liberally, will suffer like this, but it is well for every one to know what may happen.—A Physician in New York World.

DIET FOR BABIES.

How Mothers Should Prepare For the Weaning Period.

"A child should not be nursed beyond the twelfth month unless there is some unusually good reason for so doing, as in these days of high pressure living it is doubtful if it is good for the mother or child," says Marianna Wheeler in Harper's Bazar. "Few women are able to prolong successfully the nursing period beyond the eighth month, and usually they must give it up even a month or two earlier. I would advise every nursing mother to start the very first month or even the first week giving her baby one bottle feeding a day in view of the fact that the weaning period is sure to come sooner or later, often from some unforeseen happening instead of in the ordinary course of events. It is well to accustom the stomach at an early age to two kinds of food. Then if it becomes necessary to force the weaning suddenly it is not such a difficult undertaking. Sudden changes from one food to another are not desirable for an infant, especially for a very young one with his delicate and undeveloped organs of digestion."

DRESS HINTS.

Shoes that have become hardened by dampness or mud if rubbed with a little glycerin and wiped off well before applying blacking will not crack.

In making a shirt waist with tucked fronts an easy way to get both sides the same is to measure the length desired for both fronts, leaving it in one piece, and then tuck it, which saves the bother of measuring and is done more quickly.

Mantles, bodices and waistcoats should never be hung. They should be neatly folded, so as to keep them as straight and even as may be, and laid flat on a shelf. A piece of paper or muslin should be tucked over them to preserve them from dust.

Go over silk drop skirts and silk petticoats every now and then with a clean cloth, wrung so hard out of water that it is barely moist. It is surprising how much dust the cloth will take up and how much it adds to the life of the skirt.

Baby's Bedroom Slippers.

When making children's little bedroom slippers it is very often difficult to buy the ordinary lamb's wool soles in the small sizes. Here is the best way for making them at home: First procure a piece of thin, soft leather, which may be bought from most shoe repairers for a few cents; then cut a pattern of the sole of baby's ordinary shoe the size you require. Afterward cut out in leather, taking care to get the rights and lefts. Next take a piece of tape half an inch wide, double it and machine round edge of sole, leaving the double edge to form a welt to sew the woolwork to. Now get a piece of cotton wool and lay on sole perfectly even, cover with a piece of tissue paper to prevent wool catching and machine altogether, leather upward, nearly half an inch from the edge so as not to interfere with the welt. Machine down center of sole, also across, tear off the paper, and you will have a pair of the nicest and warmest little soles for bedroom slippers.—New York American.

Mending Tinware.

A unique method of mending tinware is practiced by a clever housekeeper. After trying to solder a leaky pan with poor satisfaction, one day in desperation she caught up a paper bag—the kind made of tough brown paper—and tore off a piece, which she pasted across the hole on the outside, using cold water paste. Hot water was then turned into the pan and left to stand for a few minutes, when she found her makeshift patch was on so tight that scraping with a knife would not remove it. This patch remained in place for three weeks or until the dishwasher set the pan on the stove to dry and burned off the paper. However, it was very easily replaced and is now my friend's regular method of mending certain pieces of tinware. In these days of poor tin used for cooking utensils this is a cheap and quick method worth passing on.

Trade Schools.

Quincy was represented on Sunday an Worcester at the annual convention of the State association of journeymen plumbers, steam fitters and gas fitters.

The proposed establishment of industrial trade schools by the state was discussed at considerable length, but no definite action was taken other than to refer it to the legislative committee. The larger part of the time was given over to trade reports from all parts of the state.

SLEICH PARTIES

Streets of City Lively Last Night With Young People On a Good Time

Sleigh parties were thick about Quincy last night, and City Square was alive with large party sleighs heavily laden with happy young people. Many were armed with tin horns and their tooting, cheers and shouts of laughter filled the air.

At the Greenleaf hotel things were lively all the evening. Shortly after 9 o'clock a party of 52 from Rockland arrived at the hotel, where they were served with dinner. After dinner they gathered in the parlors and sung for an hour or more, takjng their departure shortly before 11 o'clock.

Hardly had they departed when a party of 26 from Roslindale drove up to the hotel. They were served with a lunch, afterward going to the parlors where they made merry until midnight. Tonight another party from Roslindale is expected at the Greenleaf.

A larger part of them did not stop anywhere for lunch, but drove about the square, throwing good natured remarks at each other. Some parties stopped long enough near the fountain to enable some of them to purchase sandwiches at the restaurants.

About twenty-five young people from South Quincy enjoyed a sleigh ride Monday night. Starting from the President's houses about seven o'clock, the "Four Horse Snow King" headed its way for Milton via Adams street. The beautiful moonlight night and the good sleighing added much to the pleasure of the ride. It was by no means a quiet crowd(although reserved enough,) and it did seem that the more noise that could be made with horns, and the more heartily they joined in the singing of the songs the more fun was had, and the warmer all kept.

Arriving at the East Milton depot about half past nine, they rushed into a drug store, where a very accommodating young clerk served all with hot drinks and other goodies. From there they passed along through Milton, around the Braintrees, arriving home about midnight. All declared that they had had a grand old time, and are ready for another such ride in the near future.

In the party were: Misses Edith Elrick, Maude Dyer, Georgiana Michael, Helen C. Troupe, Maisie Hill, Emily Josephine, Bessie Bigelow, Sadie Johnson, Isabelle Park, Mary Morrison, Annie Mitchell, Louisa Driscoll, Isabella Mithell, Elizabeth Boutiellier, Margaret J. Michael, Alice Joss, Margaret Mackey, Josephine O'Brien.

Messrs. Robert Mitchell, Frank Boutiellier, Walter Troupe, Wallace Troupe, Harold McDowall, Charles Troupe, Charles Hart.

—With arms entwined, an unknown young man and young woman stood on the tracks of the Pennsylvania Electric railroad over Newton creek, New Jersey, Sunday, and calmly waited until an electric train ran them down. Both were killed and their bodies hurled into the water.

Found Unconscious Nearly Frozen

About 3 o'clock this morning Officer Reily found an unconscious man lying in the snow between the Tubular Rivet works and the railroad track. The police ambulance was called and the man removed to the City Hospital, where he was attended by City Physician Hallowell.

Whether the man fell from a late train, or whether while under the influence of liquor he wandered to the place where he was found, is not known. He was thoroughly chilled through however, and nearly frozen. It was late this morning before he came to, and it was learned that his name was James Miller aged 42 years of Bryantville.

The man is still in a precarious condition and unable to tell much about himself.

Finish Tonight Big Six Day Race

The fifth night in the six-day race took place at the Coliseum last night. Tully and Maloney came in a tie once more. Fontoni who is considered the fastest man Quincy ever had was again lapped twice, which makes 18 laps that Tully has over him and Maloney has 17.

This was too much for Fontoni friends, and after a consultation it was agreed by them to have Fontoni drop out and try to stop the race, but this was futile.

For tonight a surprise is in store, for a bunch of New England's champions will be there to finish the six-day race with Maloney and Tully.

ANOTHER LAUNCHING

The Ocmulgee Of Brunswick Steamship Co. Takes Her Dip

The Ocmulgee, the last of the four steamships built by the Fore River Shipbuilding Co. for the Brunswick, (Ga.) Steamship Company was successfully launched at the Fore River plant this morning.

There was no demonstration at the launch, and it was witnessed by but few outside of the workmen and officials of the Fore River Co. The steamship company was represented by C. L. Dimond, its general manager; and A. Joy, president of the Joy line of steamers, was also present.

The launch, which was successful in every way, took place at 11 o'clock. As she started gracefully down the ways, Miss A. M. Hill of New York smashed a bottle of Mumm's extra dry over the steel bow, and said "I christen thee, Ocmulgee." As soon as the steamship was in the water she was taken around to the fitting out dock.

Inauguration Day Department Officials

Next Monday will be the second inauguration day at City Hall, as the first Monday in February is the day when the terms of the present department officials expire, and that of the new officials begins. This year, however, there will be but very few changes.

James H. Cunningham will occupy the chair in the Tax Collector's office, which he has already filled for nearly two years previous to being County Treasurer; and J. Winthrop Pratt enters upon his duties as assistant assessor.

There will also be a new officer this year in the person of an Inspector of Buildings.

Mayor Thompson has not appointed that officer as yet, but will probably do so some day this week. There have been a number of persons seeking the job, but although the Mayor has probably made up his mind who that official will be, he has not made it public.

☞ Secretaries of women's clubs are requested to send notices of coming events and reports of the meetings of their various clubs directed to the Club Editor, Quincy Daily Ledger, in time to reach the office on or before Wednesday morning of each week.

The Wollaston Unitarian Church Is Adding Many New Members

The annual parish meeting of the Wollaston Unitarian church was held Monday evening. An informal reception took place in the audience room at six to meet the pastor and parish committee and their wives.

At six thirty dinner was served in the vestry. It was in charged of Mrs. W. E. Rowe, and was a great success. The color scheme was pink and as the parish were seated at the table the pink candles sent a ruddy cheer over the pleasant gathering. Much credit is due Frank Bishop for the arrangement of the tables. Formerly it has been possible to seat only 120 but under Frank Bishop's management 200 were seated comfortably. The young men of the parish served.

At a quarter before eight the business meeting was called to order by the president, Frederick H. Bishop. After the reports had been made by the various committees, the officers for the present year were elected. Charles T. Baker was chosen president, Nathaniel S. Robinson clerk, and Walter J. Wellington treasurer. Mr. Wellington has been treasurer from the beginning of the Wollaston Unitarian church and has served most faithfully.

The parish committee is W. E. Simmons, Frank A. Page, E. A. Beane, Dr. Charles Adams and Frank White.

The Sunday School has been made a regular branch of the church. One member of the executive committee is chosen by the Sunday school, a second member by the parish meeting and the third from the floor at the annual parish meeting. Fred M. Rollins was elected.

A vote of thanks was given Rev. E. W. Hunt, the minister, for the work he has been doing so well for the growth of the church. Fifty new members were voted in, and sixty-five at the last parish meeting, making a total of 115 new members the past year.

The meeting was most successful and pleasant all the speakers being much enjoyed.

Mr. Emery L. Crane is not the only one who desires to be set aright on the election controversy. There were probably 500 Republicans who voted for Mayor Thompson, who intended to bolt but for the assurance that there would be some change in department officials. Several of these were in the list who publicly endorsed Mr. Thompson after it was understood that their wishes would be respected.

The young people were pleased with the lecture of Rev. Dr. Perkins on "Courtship and Marriage." He said courtship should not be less than three months or more than three years. Some are troubled because it sometimes extends beyond three years but more find it difficult to keep the young man for three months. But then there are young fellows that are not wanted at all.

This is a good year to resolve to boom Quincy. The shipyard is prospering, the granite firms are booking many orders, the Tubular Rivet Company is busy, the Boston Gear Works are putting on more men, and so in other industries. A school-house is building at Atlantic, the Thomas Crane Public Library and the City Hospital will be enlarged, a Federal building may be started, and 100 to 200 houses should be erected. All together, boom Quincy.

MILLIONS HUNGRY

Chinese Famine Perhaps Worse Than That of 1878

American Officials Say Ten Million People Are Facing Death --Foreign Political and Commercial Interests Threatened

Washington, Jan. 29.—Mail reports from American consular officers in China, which have just reached the state department, regarding the famine and the resulting conditions, still further confirm the stories of suffering and hardship among the people in the districts affected.

In fact, Consul Haynes, at Nanking, says that the famine is ten times worse than anything known in that part of the empire for the past 40 years. The Chinese officials, he says, admit their inability to cope with the situation. The government is trying to help the starving people to keep their cattle, and to this end is taking their oxen and buffaloes in pawn for two taels each, keeping them thus until next spring, when it will return them. Consul Haynes declares that whatever aid may be extended by this government in the present crisis will certainly do much to dispel the ill-feeling recently aroused by the boycott, the exclusion act, etc.

Consul General Rodgers, at Shanghai, advises the department that the reports as to the conditions appearing in the newspapers, both foreign and Chinese, are for the most part sustained by the investigations made by American naval officers. An inquiry which he has made through entirely private sources gives the general conclusion that the famine will by March 1 be regarded as severe, and perhaps more so, than that of 1878, by which it is thought 10,000,000 lives were lost.

The report of Rodgers is accompanied by a statement by Dr. Henry M. Woods of the Southern Presbyterian mission at Hwai An Fu, who estimates that 10,000,000 people are affected by the famine, 4,000,000 of whom are starving. He says there are at present more than 500,000 refugees at Tsing Kiangpu huddled in mat sheds and that the pitiful sight is daily witnessed of parents offering their children for sale at from $2 to $4 each. Brigandage and robbery are everywhere rife.

"The subject of this famine," says Rodgers, "is now being made the basis of proclamations from all classes of Chinese officials, and if there has ever been good ground for any skepticism as to the severity of the affliction or the danger of the condition it has now vanished."

He declares that the influence of the famine conditions upon current affairs can now plainly be seen in the unrest and discontent of the people. From many places, he says, comes news of riots of greater or less degree, while in Ksangsi a state bordering on actual rebellion is on. So serious has the situation become that a goodly portion of the available military force of the Liang Kiang Yamen is now in the field. Rodgers concludes:

"My deliberate opinion is that the next few months will see the development of dangerous things in this part of China and that such conditions and circumstances will have a great effect upon foreign interests, political as well as commercial. China's New Years, which luckily falls late this year, being in the second week of February, is watched with no small degree of uneasiness."

Sprinkler System Was Crippled

Boston, Jan. 29.—The fire which destroyed Cocheco mill No. 1 at Dover might have been averted, according to President Gray of the Boston Manufacturers' Mutual Fire Insurance company, had not the water supply for the sprinkler system been turned off temporarily. The watchman, Gray claims, was unable to turn it on when the fire broke out, owing to the panic. The valve of the sprinkler system showed signs of leakage, and the water was turned off to repair it.

Oliver Sure of Canal Contract

Washington, Jan. 29.—William J. Oliver of Knoxville, who was the lowest bidder in connection with the contract for the completion of the Panama canal, has notified Secretary Taft that he will complete his contract within the 10 days allowed him. He is about to associate with him one or more responsible contractors whom he is satisfied beforehand will be satisfactory to the secretary and the president.

Corruption Hints Resented

Austin, Jan. 29.—The actions of newspaper men in attendance upon the Texas legislature are to be investigated by that body. This is due to a telegram alleged to have been sent from here to certain papers charging that Senator Bailey corrupted the morals and secured the voting strength of the legislature in his race for re-election as United States senator "by the use of wine, women and money."

Failure of Store Syndicate

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 29.—The affairs of the Pacific Syndicate Stores company, which had planned to open 50 stores, are in the hands of the Merchants' Trust company. It is said that a failure that involves about $100,000 will entail no loss upon creditors. Most of the stockholders are eastern persons.

STANDARD OIL PROFITS

Report to Congress Says That They Are Due to Monopoly

Washington, Jan. 29.—That ruin of its competitors has been a distinct part of the policy of the Standard Oil company, and that monopoly accounts for its large profits, not economy, is the government verdict on Standard Oil.

The interstate commerce commission sent to congress a report of the investigations made by it under the Tillman-Gillespie resolution concerning the relations of common carriers by rail to the production and distribution of oil. The findings in brief are:

"The ruin of its competitors has been a distinct part of the policy of the Standard Oil company in the past, systematically and persistently pursued. Its margin of profit is very large; the evidence shows little basis for the contention that the enormous dividends are the legitimate result of its economies. The possession of the pipe lines enables the Standard to absolutely control the price of crude petroleum and the price which its competitors shall pay. It can speedily drive its competitors out of existence. It has enjoyed secret rates possessing all of the elements of illegal rates. It has independently organized companies to kill off competitors. It has sold different grades of oil at different prices from the same barrel. It has tampered with oil inspectors in different states. Its motto has been to kill off competition at any cost. This policy has been pursued without decency or conscience. In no other important traffic is there an approach to the monopoly of Standard Oil. It may become necessary to the uprooting of established wrongs that the government shall fix rates and regulations for this traffic."

Shortage In Telephone Funds

Fredericton, N. B., Jan. 29.—It has developed that Andrew G. Blair, formerly minister of railways and canals, who died suddenly of heart failure in this city last Friday, came here to investigate a reported shortage of $26,000 in the funds of the New Brunswick Telephone company, of which he was president. Secretary-Treasurer Smith of the company has transferred his property to the corporation. Smith is also treasurer of the Anglican diocese of Fredericton. An investigation of the church accounts has begun. An expert accountant has been examining the books of the telephone company and is said to have found irregularities covering five years. No arrest has been made.

Ex-Prisoners In Hard Luck

Leavenworth, Kan., Jan. 29.—Eighty-four inmates of the military prison at Fort Leavenworth, most of them men who had been punished for deserting from the army, were released yesterday on an order from the secretary of war because of their good behavior. The government has made no appropriation for giving the men transportation to their homes and they have been turned adrift without a cent. Most of them came to Leavenworth and begged for food and shelter for the night.

Hotel For Women Only

New York, Jan. 29.—The Martha Washington hotel for women, which has not proved a success on its original plan as a first-class house at moderate rates, was yesterday rented for a period of 10 years at $51,000 annually. An experienced hotel man has taken the place and agrees to serve no wines and allow no man to go above the second floor without a written permit. It will be run on the original system.

Decreased Trade Not Due to Boycot

Washington, Jan. 29.—In a special report to the state department on the subject of the trade relations between the United States and China, Consul General Rodgers, at Shanghai, states that the boycott has had nothing to do with the falling off of trade. In proof of his assertion he states that trade with other nations where no boycott was involved shows a corresponding shrinkage.

Beveridge's Long Argument

Washington, Jan. 29.—Senator Beveridge occupied the attention of the senate throughout yesterday with a continuation of his argument in behalf of his child labor bill. He had but reached the legal and constitutional phase of the question after speaking for more than four hours and arrangement was made whereby he will conclude today.

DUE TO FIREDAMP

Explosian In Prussian Coal Mine Kills Two Hundred Men

RESCUE WORKERS CAUGHT

Report That Second Explosion May Bring Death List Up to Three Hundred--Sad Scenes About Mouth of the Shaft

Saarbrucken, Rhenish Prussia, Jan. 29.—A firedamp explosion occurred in the Reden coal mine at St. Johann-on-Saar, opposite this town, and caused the loss of from 150 to 200 lives. The Reden mine is owned by the Prussian government.

Seventy-seven bodies have been brought to the surface and 56 corpses are known to be still under ground. Only 50 live men, up to the present time, have been brought out, and of these the doctors say at least 35 surely will die, as they are frightfully injured through having been hurled against the walls of the galleries by the force of the explosion.

Immediately after the explosion rescue workers were hurried from all the adjacent mines and boldly entered the Reden shaft in great numbers. The work of rescue has been greatly hampered by the poisonous gases resulting from the explosion and by a fierce fire that broke out immediately afterwards. During the afternoon the efforts at rescue had to be suspended for these reasons, and the rescue workers were ordered out of the mine. After all the rescuers had reached daylight, according to one version, a second terrific detonation was heard under ground. But according to another report many of the rescuers were still below when the second explosion occurred, and it is estimated that the casualty list from the two explosions reached a total of 300 men.

It is regarded as certain that the lowest levels of the mines are completely wrecked, and the inspectors are deliberating upon further measures to get control of the fire. The managers are discussing the advisability of flooding these levels as the only means of extinguishing the flames. It is believed that all the men who were in the lower levels assuredly are dead. It will take a full week to enter and explore the mine.

The disaster occurred 2300 feet under ground and the scene is one and one-quarter miles from the floor of the shaft. It is the greatest mining catastrophe ever known in the Saar region.

About 600 men entered the mine for the day shift, but 400 of them escaped through the Bildstock shaft, which communicates with the Reden underground. The entrance to the galleries underground is blocked with dead horses.

Heartrending scenes are witnessed among the thousands of persons, mostly members of the families of the entombed miners, who are gathered about the mouth of the shaft. Most of the bodies brought to the surface are mangled beyond recognition, but as they are carried out moans and sobs from the assembled relatives rend the air.

The mine inspectors last evening ordered the rescuers to return to their homes, but to hold themselves in readiness for further orders. Emperor William has ordered that a full report of the disaster be sent him.

Little Light on Sensation

Camden, N. J., Jan. 29.—The body of the young woman who is believed to have entered into a suicide pact, and who with a male companion was killed by an electric train here on Sunday, has been identified as that of Wilhelmina Lacey of Iona. She alighted from a train at Gloucester Friday evening. The girl was accompanied by three men whose identity has not yet been established. Neither has the identity of the man who was killed on the railroad with the young woman been discovered.

Over a Million In Re-discounts

Pittsburg, Jan. 29.—Receiver Cutts of the closed Farmers and Drovers' National bank of Waynesburg has completed his investigation of the alleged irregularities in the institution. It is said his report will state that the re-discounted paper from the Farmers and Drovers' bank amounts to about $1,125,000 and will recommend that the government, in settling up the bank's affairs, disregard these re-discounts.

Denial from Copper Producers

New York, Jan. 29.—Representatives of some of the large copper producing companies having offices in this city declare that there is no truth in the allegation made to Attorney General Bonaparte by the Northeastern Metal Dealers' association to the effect that copper is being withheld from the market by a combination of the producers.

Larceny Charge Against Lawyer

Boston, Jan. 29.—Lewis W. Kelley, a lawyer and secretary and treasurer of the Diamond Envelope company of this city, was arrested on an indictment warrant charging him with the larceny of $2800 from the organization. It is said that the complaint to the grand jury was made by certain stockholders.

Tidbits from All Wards of City

The Commissioner of State Aid is at City Hall today examining persons who receive aid.

The George A. Avery estate at Squantum has been sold to Mary Ayer of Jamaica Plain, who will occupy.

Isaac McNeal of Upland road, who has been ill with the grip and was thought to be improving, has had a relapse and is now quite seriously ill.

The granite manufacture report that orders for spring delivery have begun to come in well, and indication are that the coming season will be a busy one.

The Electric Light and Power Company move into their new office on Granite street this week. They will occupy No. 9 in the Post Office block.

The work of trimming the trees throughout the city is being done under the direction of a State inspector.

There are more all-the-year residents at Houghs Neck this winter than ever before. They enjoy the long winter evenings in social neighborly gatherings and hardly a night passes but what one or two are held and general gatherings are the rule weekly.

A pleasant surprise party was tendered to Richard Collins at his home at 16 Robert street one evening recently, when about fifty of his friends gathered. He was presented a handsome signet ring. Games were played and refreshments were served.

The new fire alarm boxes numbers 35, 23, 26 and 126 will probally be put into service this week. The old boxes taken out will be fitted with new recording wheels and placed at Houghs Neck, so that all parts of that section will have a box that can be reached without traveling a mile or more.

There is some excellent skating on the meadow in the rear of the street railway car barn. The pond has been cleared of snow and the ice is thick so that there is no danger of skaters breaking through and getting wet. Butler's pond is also in good condition although it is covered with considerable snow.

John R. Graham, formerly of Quincy, who heads a syndicate which has obtained control of street railways in and about Augusta, Me., is proving to the people of that section that he is a hustler. It is his purpose to cover the state of Maine with a net work of street railway and he already has the material in hand to build a line between Augusta and Waterville.

NINE MEN CHOSEN

Additional Hundred Summoned For the Thaw Panel

BELIEF OF PROSECUTION

"Emotional Insanity" and "Unwritten Law" to Be Offered In Defense--Whole Thaw Family Appears In Court

New York, Jan. 29.—The jury which will try Harry K. Thaw for the killing of Stanford White is rapidly nearing completion. When court adjourned last evening nine men had been chosen, one having been added during the morning session and a second just before the hour of adjournment at 5 o'clock. It is expected that the taking of testimony will be begun late Wednesday.

Fifty talesmen were examined and so rapidly were the remaining members of the special panel disposed of at the morning session that at the noon recess orders were hurried from the court for the summoning of an additional 100 men who will report before Justice Fitzgerald today. This will make a total of 300 men thus far summoned. Of the original panel there remained last night but 35, and it was not considered that this number would be sufficient out of which to select the three jurymen necessary to make up the trial complement of 12.

Of the 50 men examined yesterday 43 were excused upon doctors' certificates, upon the ground that they had formed opinions which were too strong to be shaken by the testimony, because they knew Stanford White or some important witness in the case, and for various other reasons sufficient to incapacitate a man for service in cases where the penalty may be death. Five talesmen were challenged peremptorily, the state leading in the exercise of this privilege with three challenges, the defense exercising its rights in two instances.

The two men of the 50 who proved acceptable were Charles D. Newton, a retired railroad official, who is perhaps 65 years of age, and Louis Haas, the New York representative of a Philadelphia wholesale candy concern, who is not more than 30 years of age. In accepting the latter Mr. Jerome dwelt for some time upon the question of reasonable doubt, questioning the talesman searchingly as to his ideas of the difference between a reasonable doubt and a possible doubt.

Mr. Haas seemed to incline to the idea that a conviction for murder in the first degree should be voted only when such doubt as a man might feel in regard to some vital issue in his own life had been removed by the evidence. This seemed to satisfy the district attorney. The defense readily accepted the juror and, facing Harry Thaw, he was sworn. Mr. Newton became juror No. 8 and Haas No. 9.

District Attorney Jerome continued to base his examinations of the talesmen upon the belief that Thaw's lawyers may offer two defenses, one of emotional insanity at the time of the shooting, and the other the "unwritten law." He asked the accepted talesmen if in the event two defenses were offered and they were not consistent with each other, which they would accept. Both of the new jurors declared they would be guided by the court's instructions when it came to questions of law.

All of the defendant's family were in court Monday. Mrs. Harry Thaw and her companion, Miss May McKenzie, were the first to arrive for the morning session. Then came Mrs. William Thaw, mother of the prisoner, accompanied by her two daughters, the Countess of Yarmouth and Mrs. George L. Carnegie. Edward and Josiah Thaw and Mr. Carnegie also were present.

The family sat closely grouped in two rows of chairs just back of the prisoner. As usual, they seldom spoke to each other. Mrs. William Thaw had a gracious bow and a smile for the prisoner's wife when they first met, and the latter was quick to return the greeting. Thaw seemed delighted when he saw all of his family in court and appeared to be in high spirits throughout the day.

The morning session of the court was cut short by an hour because of a break in the heating apparatus in the criminal courts building. The courtroom was very cold and the women of the Thaw party kept on their heavy wraps and furs. Several of the attorneys wore their overcoats and Justice Fitzgerald paced up and down in the effort to keep warm.

Suit Against the Thaws

New York, Jan. 29.—Suit has been begun by Dr. Charles L. Dana, one of the alienists called into the Thaw case when the defense was in the hands of W. M. K. Olcott, against Harry Thaw and his mother for $1000 for professional services, which, he says, he has been unable to collect. His lawyer says the services consisted of consultation as an expert for the defense and an examination of Thaw in the Tombs. Thaw's present lawyers contest the claim.

Expected to Help Thaw

Pittsburg, Jan. 29.—Detective Roger O'Mara, formerly superintendent of police, who was engaged by Harry K. Thaw immediately following the murder of Stanford White, has left for New York to attend the Thaw trial. O'Mara refuses to discuss the purpose of his trip or confirm the report that he will take with him eight witnesses of importance to the defense.

ROBBED EMPLOYES

Clubman Who Married Rich Woman Is Sent to Prison

Boston, Jan. 29.—Herbert D. White, scion of a well-to-do family of this city, college graduate and well known clubman, was sentenced to a term of 2½ years at the house of correction in the superior criminal court yesterday.

White was employed by the Bird Dyestuffs and Chemical company of this city as an invoice clerk. A part of his duty as invoice clerk was to estimate the duty on imports for the concern, t draw vouchers for the amount estimated and to pay the duties to the custom house officials. For the past year and a half he has been cheating the company by over-estimating the imports 50 percent, drawing vouchers for the amount levied by himself, and after paying the actual amount of the duties pocketing the balance, it was charged. It is alleged that in this manner he has taken during the past year and a half over $5000.

Last May he was married to a wealthy young woman in the west and has lived in princely style since that time. Yesterday it was stated that his salary with the Bird company was but $11 a week.

Lowell Man Burned to Death

Lowell, Mass., Jan. 29.—Kirkley Hyde, a machinist, lost his life and 125 others had a narrow escape from a similar fate in the partial destruction of a four-story structure known as the Card building and occupied by nearly a dozen small firms. Several persons were taken from the third story windows by the firemen, and two were rescued while hanging from the coping of the building. Leroy S. Kimball, in running down the stairs, had his back badly burned, but will recover. The fire originated, it is said, from an overturned lamp on the third floor.

Live Coals Set Clothing Afire

Keene, N. H., Jan. 29.—Miss Mary Foster, aged 55, a prominent member of women's clubs in this city, died last night of burns received while she was attending to the furnace at her home. Some live coals which fell from the furnace as Miss Foster opened the door ignited her dress and she was immediately enveloped in flames. In running from the cellar Miss Foster's flaming clothing came in contact with a can of kerosene which was ignited and set fire to the house. The damage to the building was slight, however.

$1,000,000 Fire at Springfield

Springfield, Mass., Jan. 29.—A loss of $1,000,000 was caused by a fire this morning that destroyed the four buildings of the big plant of the Phelps company, one of the largest publishing concerns in the country. No one was injured. The fire started in a pile of benzine soaked rags in a sub-cellar of the main office building. The automatic sprinklers with which the buildings were equipped failed to work properly, and by the time the firemen arrived the flames were raging fiercely.

Got Their Pay Raised

Stamford, Conn., Jan. 29.—For the purpose of securing the increase in salary allowed by the board of appropriation, Chief of Police Brennan and 16 patrolmen and Fire Chief Parker and 16 firemen, comprising the paid department, resigned last night and were immediately reappointed at the meeting of the common council. This action was necessary, as the charter provides that the salaries cannot be raised during a term of office.

Granite State's Summer Homes

Concord, N. H., Jan. 29.—More abandoned farms and building lots were purchased for summer homes in 1906 than in any previous year, according to "New Hampshire Farms for Summer Homes," the fifth annual edition of which has been issued by the state board of agriculture. Secretary Bachelder, in reviewing the "summer business" of 1906 in New Hampshire, says that it showed an unexpectedly marked increase over that of 1905.

Failed Bank Has Few Dollars Left

Boston, Jan. 29.—Receiver Barton of the Hanover bank, which closed its doors about a year ago, has filed another report with the supreme court, stating that he has on hand $757 to pay claims which have been proved against the bank amounting to $13,757. The first report showed liabilities amounting to $322,282, but many of the creditors have not proved their claims, evidently believing the institution to be hopelessly insolvent.

Cannot Account For Shooting

Lyme, Conn., Jan. 29.—Patrick Ward, who shot Mrs. Marie Octavio at her home, was held without bonds to await the result of the injury to the woman. The charge was that of attempted murder, and Ward entered a plea of not guilty. He said that he could give no reason for his shooting Mrs. Octavio, who is in a serious condition.

Portland May Become a Capital

Portland, Me., Jan. 29.—At a special meeting of the city government last night it was voted to appropriate $500,000 toward the building of a new state house, should it be decided to transfer the capital from Augusta to Portland. During the present session of the legislature a movement was set on foot to make Portland the capital.

Spotted Fever Attacks Children

Milford, Conn., Jan. 29.—Dennis Moore of this place, 3 years old, died yesterday of spotted fever. A sister of the child, 7 years old, is suffering with the fever and is not expected to recover. RESULT OF A FALL

Man Totally Blind For Years Has Sight Restored

Baltimore, Jan. 29.—Rev. Samuel H. Cummings, a Methodist minister of Baltimore and totally blind for 25 years, has had his sight partly restored by a blow. Last Saturday he slipped on the icy pavement and fell face downward. A bit of projecting ice struck his eye with painful force, but when he got up he found he could see indistinctly with one eye.

Mr. Cummings is now able to read the title on a magazine cover. He says he can distinguish persons, but that they are out of proportion and strangely confused. He says he believes that the veil which obscured his eye was shattered by the fall and that he is seeing through little rifts in it, which reflects objects abnormally and curiously. He lost one eye in an accident while a boy and the other became blind in sympathy.

Fatalities at Buffalo Fire

Buffalo, Jan. 29.—Buried under tons of ice-coated debris of the eight-story Seneca building, destroyed by fire yesterday, three firemen probably are dead or so badly injured that they will die before aid can reach them. About 20 firemen, including the three missing men, were on the roof of the Heywood building, adjoining the Seneca, fighting a spread of the flames, when two walls of the Seneca building collapsed. Tons of bricks crashed down upon the roof of the Heywood structure, carrying floor after floor into the basement. Not one of the 20 men escaped without some injury. The property loss is $500,000.

Funeral of General Alger

Detroit, Jan. 29.—It was distinctly a soldier's funeral that was held over the body of the late Senator Alger. Delegations were present from the national congress, the state legislature and from the city government of Detroit. Upon the flag which covered the casket was laid the little, worn Bible that Alger had carried through the Civil war. At the mausoleum senators, clergy and friends stepped aside to accord to the deceased soldier's comrades of the Civil war the honor of saying the last words of respect and affection in the ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic.

Swettenham Glad to Get Tents

Kingston, Jam., Jan. 29.—The heaviest earthquake shock since the one that devastated Kingston on Jan. 14 occurred here yesterday. No particular damage is reported as the result. Acting upon instructions from the Washington government, Captain Battle of the Eleventh infantry arrived here yesterday on the steamer Oteri with more than 100 army tents from Guantanamo. Governor Swettenham, who refused Rear Admiral Davis' offer of the same tents a few days after the earthquake and fire, has now gratefully accepted the loan of them.

Former Congressman In Contempt

Omaha, Jan. 29.—W. J. Connell was adjudged guilty of contempt by Judge Sutton of the district court, after a trial lasting several days. Sentence was reserved. The acts of contempt were committed by Connell as an attorney in the so-called "coal trust" trial. Sutton accused Connell of trying to bulldoze the court. Connell was elected to congress over J. Sterling Morton in 1888. Two years later he was defeated by W. J. Bryan.

Heavy Losses by Cattlemen

Minneapolis, Jan. 29.—J. H. Howells of Minot, N. D., one of the leading buyers of cattle and sheep in the west, who is in Minneapolis, says that cattlemen of the west will lose more than $1,000,000 because of the severe winter. He says that in the Alberta (Canada) country dead cattle are to be seen for 100 miles or more, lying 20 deep in some places. The same conditions, he says, prevail in Montana.

Sub-Treasury Is Short $61,000

Washington, Jan. 29.—The house committee on claims has decided to postpone action on a bill for the relief of T. J. Aiken, assistant treasurer at the subtreasury in St. Louis, who lost $61,000 through the disappearance of this amount from the office of D. H. Dyer, the paying teller. Action was delayed pending suit by the government against Dyer's bondsmen. Dyer was tried and acquitted on the charge of defalcation.

Missouri Congressman Criticised

Jefferson City, Mo., Jan. 29.—The house adopted a resolution severely censuring Chairman Burton of the congressional rivers and harbors committee on the ground that he virtually ignored the Mississippi river in recommending appropriations for harbors in his district, declaring that his action was "unfair to the four million people of Missouri."

Disappearance of Army Officer

Havana, Jan. 29.—Lieutenant C. E. McCullough of the Fifteenth cavalry, who is reported missing, had recently given signs of mental trouble. The belief is current here that he either committed suicide or has gone to South America.

To Retire From the Bench

Boise, Ida., Jan. 29.—James H. Beatty, for 16 years judge of the United States district court of Idaho, has tendered his resignation to President Roosevelt. He has reached the age permitting his retirement with a pension.

"We are at Titchfields botel. Tremors are still felt but we are getting used to the excitement of earthquakes. We are being entertained by English friends who are very hospitable. "The mails are closed and I am sending this by a friend who is sailing on the steamer who will mail upon his arrival at Philadelphia. We expect to leave Cuba Feb. 5 for New Orleans."

☞ The President wants to come over to Massachusetts as a private citizen Father Roosevelt wants to drop into Teddy's in Cambridge and spend a day with his son, just as any other father likes to be with his boy who is going over the course once followed by the parent. And Roosevelt '80 wishes to meet the students at Harvard Union as a graduate and not in any other character than an American citizen proud of his Alma Mater. He should be accorded these privileges as no doubt he will be. The President is entitled to his relaxations, and his proposed visit to Massachusetts will be a short relief from the cares and labors of official life at Washington.—Lynn Item.

—With a heroism that even the men of ancient Sparta never surpassed, William Cushman, a 12-year-old boy, Jan. 25, jumped into the icy waters of Dorchester bay, a mile and a half from the nearest shore, to save the life of his friend, Albert LeMay. The latter was almost exhausted when Cushman courted death to come to him, but the latter, after a terrific struggle, managed to push the drowning boy upon the ice and crawling out himself, the two were obliged to crawl on their hands and knees the entire distance back to land.

...By... JOSEPH C. LINCOLN, Author of "Cap'n Eri"

Copyright, 1905, by A. S. Barnes & Co.

That fishing trip had unexpected and fateful results. The captain had called on Miss Prissy and her sister the morning of his arrival in Orham and, as was his custom, had brought each of them a present—exactly alike, of course. He had promised to dine at the Allen house the following Sunday. But it happened that Peleg Myrick wanted to make one of his infrequent visits to the mainland that week, and he seized the opportunity to hail the catboat containing Bradley and Captain Ezra as it passed his quahaug dory and beg for a passage up.

Mr. Peleg Myrick was a hermit. He lived alone in a little two room shanty on the beach about half a mile from Setuckit Point. He owned a concertina that squeaked and wailed and a Mexican dog—gift of a wrecked skipper—that shivered all the time and howled when the concertina was played. Peleg was certain that the howling was an attempt at singing and boasted that Skeezicks—that was the dog's name—had an "ear for music jest like a human."

Among his other accomplishments Mr. Myrick numbered that of weather prophet. He boasted that he could "smell a storm further 'n a cat can smell fish." It was odd, but he really did seem able to foretell or guess what the weather would be along the Orham coast, and the longshoremen swore by his prophecies.

He was a great talker when he had any one to talk to and was a gossip whose news items were usually about three months old. Captain Ezra appreciated odd characters, and he welcomed the chance to get a little fun out of Peleg.

"Well, Peleg," said the captain as the catboat stood about on the first leg of the homeward stretch, "what's the news down the beach? Any of the sand fleas got married lately?"

"Don't ask me for no news, Cap'n Ez!" replied Mr. Myrick. "You're the feller to have news. You ain't married yit, be you?"

"No; not yet. I'm waitin' to see which girl you pick out; then I'll see what's left."

"Well, I ain't foolin'. I thought you might be married by now. Last time I was up to the village—'long in June, 'twas—I see M'lissy Busteed, and she said 'twas common talk that you was courtin' one of the old maids."

Captain Titcomb scowled and looked uneasily at his passenger.

"She did, hey?" he grunted.

"Yes. I told her I didn't take no stock in that. 'Cap'n Ez,' I says, 'has been courtin' too many times sence I can remember,' I says. 'One time 'twas Mary Emma Cahoon, 'nother time 'twas Seth Wingate's sister's gal, then ag'in 'twas' "—

"All right! All right!" broke in the captain, glancing hurriedly at Bradley. "Never mind that. How's the quahaugin' nowadays? Gittin' a fair price?"

"Pretty fair," replied Peleg. Then, with the persistency of the born gossip, not to be so easily diverted from his subject, he went on: "I told M'lissy that, but she said there wan't scarcely a doubt that you meant bus'ness this time. Said you fetched presents every time you come home. Said the only doubt in folks' minds was whether 'twas Prissy or Tempy you was after. Said she was sure you was after one on 'em, 'cause she as much as asked 'em one time when she was at their house, and they didn't deny it."

Mr. Myrick talked steadily on this and other subjects all the way to the wharf, but Captain Ezra was silent and thoughtful. He shook hands with Bradley at the gate of the Traveler's Rest and said goodby in an absent-minded way.

"I s'pose you'll be 'round to dinner Sunday, Cap'n Ez?" said the boy.

"Hey? Sunday? Well, I don't know. It might be that I shall be called back to the schooner sooner than I expect. Can't tell."

Sure enough, the next day the sisters received a note from their expected guest saying that he was obliged to leave at once for Portland and could not, therefore, be with them on Sunday. The ladies were disappointed, but thought nothing more of the matter at the time. It was nearly six months before the captain visited Orham again, and during this visit he did not come near the big house. He waylaid Bradley, however, asked him all about himself, how he was getting on at school and the like, but when the boy asked if he, the captain, wasn't "comin' round to see the folks pretty soon" the answer was vague and unsatisfactory.

"Why, I—I don't know's I'll have time," was the reply. "I'm pretty busy, and— Give 'em my regards, will you, Brad? I've got to be runnin' on now. So long."

It was the same during the next "shore leave," the following November. Captain Titcomb saw Bradley several times, gave him a six bladed jackknife and took him for a drive over to the big cranberry swamp owned by the Ostable company, but he did not call on the old maids.

Three more years of school and vacations, with "chores" and sailing and cranberry picking, followed. Bradley was sixteen. His voice, having passed through the squeaky "changing" period, now gave evidence of becoming what Miss Tempy called a "beautiful double bass, jest like father's." He was large for his age, and his shoulders were square. He was more particular about his clothes now, and his neckties were no longer selected by Miss Tempy. To be seen with girls was not so "sissified" in his mind as it used to be, but he still stuck to Gus, and she was his "first choice" at parties, and he saw her home from prayer meeting occasionally.

As for the "dog girl" herself, she, too, paid more attention to clothes, and her pets—though still numerous and just as disreputable in appearance—were made to behave with more decorum. Her hair was carefully braided now, her dresses came down to her boot tops, and Miss Tempy grudgingly admitted that "if 'twas anybody else, I should say she was likely to be good lookin' when she grows up."

The "last day" came, and Bradley and Gus were to graduate. In Orham there is no graduation day. The eventful ending of the winter term is the "last day," and all the parents and relatives, together with the school committee and the clergymen, visit the school to sit stiffly on the settees and witness the ceremonies.

That evening after the "last day" exercises at school Bradley sat at home reading in the dining room. Miss Tempy, in the sitting room, was going over, for the fortieth time since it was written, the wonderful argument in favor of a "republican form of government," which Bradley had composed and had read at the school that day. As her sister entered the room she dropped the roll of paper in her lap and said solemnly:

"Prissy Allen, it's my belief that when that boy first came here and I said that I wanted him to go to college and be a minister I was inspired. I declare I do! I've jest been readin' that piece of his again, and it beats any sermon I ever heard."

Miss Prissy seated herself in a rocker and looked solemnly at her sister. For a minute she gazed without speaking. Then suddenly, as if she had made up her mind, she rose, gave the dining room door a swing that would have shut it completely had not the corner of a mat interfered, and, coming back to her chair, said slowly, "Tempy, I'm afraid we'll never be able to send Bradley to college."

"Tempy, we've hardly got any money, left!"

The precious manuscript fell from Miss Tempy's lap to the floor.

"Why—why, Prissy Allen!" she exclaimed. "What do you mean?"

"I mean we can't do what we've hoped to do. Oh, dear! I—I don't know what we'll do. Tempy, we've hardly got any money left!"

A SENSE OF DIRECTION.

The Prime Requisite For Making a True Woodsman.

A sense of direction I should name as the prime requisite for him who would become a true woodsman, depending on himself rather than on guides. The faculty is largely developed of course by much practice, but it must be inborn. Some men possess it; others do not—just as some men have a mathematical bent, while to others figures are always a despair. It is a sort of extra, having nothing to do with criterions of intelligence or mental development, like the repeater movement in a watch. A highly educated, cultured man may lack it; the roughest possess it. Some who have never been in the woods or mountains acquire in the space of a vacation a fair facility at picking a way, and I have met a few who have spent their lives on the prospect trail and who were still and always would be as helpless as the newest city dweller. It is a gift, a talent. If you have its tiniest germ you can become a traveler of the wide and lonely places. If you have it not you may as well resign yourself to guides.—Stewart Edward White in Outing Magazine.

Science and Morality.

The true student of the professional or technical school becomes heir to a comprehensive and clear understanding of his duties and responsibilities in his relations to his fellow men and to the community. Those duties and responsibilities present themselves to his trained mind in their real proportion. He is neither nondeveloped nor maldeveloped in his judgment of affairs. His university training, especially in the technical school, has taught him accuracy and penetration in the analysis of any proposition confronting him and that truth and knowledge must be sought with the directness of a plumb line. Science yields nothing but confusion to the shifty, devious and dishonest inquirer. The fundamentals of morality are the very stepping stones to technical success or professional attainment.—Scientific American.

The Hellbender.

"There's no reason why the hellbender shouldn't be good to eat," said a scientist. "Its principal food is the crayfish, the same as the principal food for bass. The hellbinder belongs to the same family of amphibians as the frog and is very closely related. Both are hatched from the egg, and both pass through the tadpole stage before reaching maturity. The hellbender is a mighty fine fish, as any one can prove to himself if he will conquer his natural aversion." The hellbender is found principally in streams about the foothills of the Alleghany mountains.

—The Senate of North Carolina has received a letter from the widow of General "Stonewall" Jackson, declining to accept a pension of $100 a month provided under a resolution introduced a few days ago. "I am informed," she says, "that the laws of North Carolina limit all pensions to those who have not $500 of personal property, and as I do not come under this law I respectfully request that the bill be withdrawn."

The Public Not Yet Satisfied

The Mayor has not yet been vindicated on the charges of Emery L. Crane, for no one comes forward to corroborate his stand. On the other hand Mr. Crane names two gentlemen as his authority and one has confirmed his charges in public print. We quote his charges:

Accordingly Mr. Burgin and Mr. Schenkelberger came to my house and informed me that they had been in consultation with the Mayor and brought this proposition from him. That owing to the corrupt practices act the Mayor could make no promise in writing but had given them this "assurance."

I quote the exact words: "In the event of Mr. Crane withdrawing, and no other independent Republican being placed in nomination, if after the election, Mr. Crane with a delegation of citizens should call on him and request that a change be made in the office of Commissioner of Public Works and City Solicitor, his request could but be acceded to."

On the Mayor telling them this, Messrs. Burgin and Schenkelberger informed me that they said to him—"What assurances can we give Mr. Crane that you will carry out this agreement?" and the Mayor replied to them in a very dignified way: "Gentlemen, they have said many unkind things about me, but no one has ever yet doubted my word."

I then said to these gentlemen: "Do you feel sure that the Mayor will keep his work in this matter?" And both gentlemen replied that they did not see how he could honorably do otherwise.

The chapters in this controversy have appeared on the following dates:

Jan. 21,
Mayor's appointments.

Jan. 22,
E. L. Crane's charges.

Jan. 23,
Mayor Thompson replies.

Jan. 26,

Jan. 28,

Who Next?

What has Mr. Burgin to say relative to this controversy which concerns the purity of our elections.

Scarcely anyone will question the honesty of Mr. Crane in his candidacy or withdrawal, and the letter of Mr. Schenkelberger shows conclusively that Mr. Crane's mind was not disordered. It is plain, however, that Mr. Crane was fooled and also about 500 voters. Such is politics.

Was Well Known Point Resident

James M. Cleverly, a well known resident of Quincy Point, died at the residence of his daughter on North street this morning.

Mr. Cleverly has long been a resident of Quincy. During the days of the old volunteer fire department he was a member of the Vulture company of Quincy Point, and later a member of Hose 4.

He was a member of Paul Revere Post 88, G. A. R., having served during the Civil war in Co. G., 4th Mass. Heavy Artillery.

He also served the town as a constable and was at one time prominently identified with the Democratic party. He was a shoemaker by trade, which he followed for many years. His last occupation, however, was as a shipper, being employed by a Boston firm. He leaves two sons and two daughters. One of his sons is ex-Councilman James F. Cleverly.

Sleigh Parties About the City

Tuesday night was another ideal night for sleigh parties, and many young young people took advantage of it to enjoy a sleigh ride in the bright moonlight. Between 8 and 10 o'clock City Square was alive with sleigh parties passing along shouting, singing, blowing tin horns and burning red fire.

The larger part of the parties were from out of town, one from Roslindale stopping at The Greenleaf for lunch, afterward going to the parlor where music was enjoyed.

A party of fourteen young people took a ride through Quincy and surrounding towns returning about 10 o'clock. In this party were the following: Mollie McKay, Gertrude McKay, Alice Galvin, Carl Johnson, Howard Olson, George Starr, Charles Dahl and friend, Mary A'Hearn and sister, Ellen Luidquist, Arthur Wentworth, Amel Lawson and Marie Coughlin.

Several other sleigh parties will probably be held tonight, and every night until the sleighing is gone. Parties will kindly report their enjoyable times promptly to the Daily Ledger.

A sleigh party numbering about forty-five jolly South Quincy people left Trafford street Monday evening at 7.30. After a light supper in Dorchester they returned home, making good use of the forty-five horns on the way. "Good nights" were said about 11.30.

Among those in the party were: Nellie Souter, Jennie Grassick, Anna Giles, Bessie Miller, Margaret Miller, Norah Carroll, Annie Hanson, Mary Dunbar, Annie Norrie, Sarah Summers, Mary McVay, Katherine McVay, Ethel Booth, Lillian McIntosh, Margaret Hall, Mary Crammond, Jennie Hall, Molly Leslie, Alice Findlay, Elizabeth Dickie, Rose Robb and Annie Robb.

Leo Favero, George Howie, Weston Stone, Wallace Wilson, Joseph Tinney, John Esson, John Souter, Ray Findlay, Ernest Robertson, James Stewart, John Ide, Thomas Cole, John Findlay, Hugh Oprey, Ernest Warmington, William Barren, Irving Kemp, Charles Stewart, Rio Albernetti, Donald Grassick, Charles Dunbar, Joseph Brunett and William Reynolds.

Fifty Visit State Prison

Upward of fifty accepted the invitation of Representative Sandberg on Tuesday to visit the State prison at Charlestown. The party left Quincy on the 1 o'clock train. They were escorted through the prison and saw everything worth seeing including the death chamber and chair. Some of the prisoners were known to the party and they conversed with them.

A DUST EXPLOSION

Cause of Disaster In a West Virginia Coal Mine

NINETY MEN ENTOMBED

Were at Work More Than Five Hundred Feet Underground and Have Probably Perished --Nearly All Americans

Charleston, W. Va., Jan. 30.—With a detonation heard for miles around, dust in the Stuart mine, near Fayetteville, exploded yesterday afternoon, bringing a terrible death to about 90 men who were at work more than 500 feet below the surface.

There is no chance that any of the men will be taken out alive, for it is thought that the terrific force of the explosion snuffed out their lives instantly. It will not be possible for the rescuers to reach the bottom of the shaft before tomorrow.

Most of the men were Americans and many of them were married and had large families. There were a dozen negroes and 15 or more foreigners.

The rescue work was begun as soon as the wrecked parts of the shafthouse could be repaired. About two hours after the explosion three men were lowered into the shaft. Before descending 60 feet two of the men were overcome with foul air and the third was barely able to give the signal to his comrades at the top. All further attempts were abandoned for the time. Air was supplied to the mine by several large fans, but the mechanism was damaged and the fans were idle for about two hours. If the men were not all killed by the explosion, it may be that they will have air enough to survive until the rescuers can reach them.

The Stuart mine has only one opening, although the entry has been driven to connect with a parallel mine a short distance away. This work has been about accomplished. The Stuart shaft has three compartments, two for the cages and one for an air shaft. One of the coal cages had been taken out for repairs, leaving the compartment clear, and it is not damaged. It was through this that the three men attempted to descend in an improvised bucket.

Smoke and dust poured into the air for hundreds of feet from the ventilating compartment. It was wrecked. It is stated that nearly all the men were at work in the entries near the bottom of the shaft.

The mine had been having a good run and in consequence most of the men were at work. That dust caused the explosion is the statement of persons at the scene, but investigation may prove otherwise.

The Stuart mine is owned by the White Oak Fuel company, a part of the New River Fuel company, and of which Samuel Dixon is president and J. W. Smiley secretary and treasurer. Secretary Smiley says that about 90 men were at work when the explosion occurred.

Killed In His Factory

New York, Jan. 30.—Joseph Coury, proprietor of a lace factory in West Hoboken, was mysteriously murdered in his factory. Three men have been arrested in this city, one of whom, Elias Orahya, a Syrian, is charged with the shooting. The killing resulted apparently from a quarrel over possession of the factory. Cour had lately got possession of it by foreclosure of a mortgage and threats had been made against his life by a man who formerly owned the factory.

Princes "Worked" the Shah

Teheran, Jan. 30.—The Persian parliament has determined to cancel all the gifts of land made by the late shah and to investigate the circumstances under which they occurred. This will affect several princes and many of the members of the entourage of the late shah, who took advantage of the dying monarch's illness to induce him to make enormous grants of crown lands.

Delayed Blast Kills Four

Bristol, Va., Jan. 30.—Four Italians were killed and several others injured by a delayed blast near Moccasin Gap. The force was working in a cut and had prepared three blasts in a massive rock. The fuses were lighted and the workmen retired to a safe distance until the explosion came. The men then returned to work, when one of the charges that had failed to explode let go.

Lovitt to Have New Trial

Yarmouth, N. S., Jan. 30.—The supreme court of Nova Scotia has ordered a new trial in the case of Senator John Lovitt, president of the defunct Bank of Yarmouth. Lovitt was convicted of signing of untrue statements of the bank's condition. When the bank failed it developed that the institution was insolvent for several months before its collapse.

AT A MILE A MINUTE

Express Train Appeared and Narrowly Missed Hitting Crowd

Boston, Jan. 30.—Several people who were alighting from a train at the Wellesley station were almost brushed from the tracks as a fast express train rushed past the station without the slightest wrning.

The passengers were leaving an outward-bound passenger train and crossing a pair of inward-bound tracks to the station platform, when the express suddenly appeared rounding the curve at a speed of a mile a minute. Several athletic college girls managed to leap from the tracks and one young woman was snatched onto the platform by a man scarcely a second before the express reached them.

A number of pieces of baggage were struck and hurled a long distance. A minute afterward the express was a mile down the tracks and the college girls were recovering from threatening hysterics.

More Postal Clerks Wanted

Washington, Jan. 30.—So rapid has been the increase in the postal business of the country that it has been found necessary to ask congress for an additional appropriation of $150,000 for the pay of postoffice clerks during the remainder of the fiscal year to cover the salaries of 600 additional clerks until the first of next July. Appeals for assistance are coming to the postoffice department from all parts of the country.

Plain Language In Court

River Head, L. I., Jan. 30.—So scathing was the opening address by District Attorney Furman at the beginning of the trial of Dr. James W. Simpson, a former New York dentist, for the murder of his father-in-law, Bartley T. Horner, that Judge Kelly had to interrupt several times and beg that the essential part of the indictment be adhered to. Simpson sat calmly throughout the ordeal.

Fire Damage of $1,000,000

Philadelphia, Jan. 30.—Fire which started with an explosion in the paint shop destroyed one entire section of the big Baldwin Locomotive works last night, entailing a loss of $1,000,000. About 1000 men were employed in the burned building, which was five stories high. The fire will not greatly hinder work, as the departments destroyed are duplicated in other parts of the plant.

Ballots Must Be Preserved

New York, Jan. 30.—Permission to appeal from the decision of the appellate division of the supreme court preventing the destruction of the ballots cast in the last city election has been denied to Mayor McClellan by the appellate division, which had previously affirmed the decision of a lower court in refusing to allow the ballots to be destroyed.

TWO ARE EXCUSED

Mystery In Regard to Jurors In the Thaw Trial

REASON NOT MADE PUBLIC

Jerome Says It Is of a "Business Nature," but One of Dismissed Men Makes Denial--The Thaw Family on Good Terms

New York, Jan. 30.—The first big surprise of the trial of Harry K. Thaw came when Justice Fitzgerald, on the motion of District Attorney Jerome, and with the consent of the attorneys for the man accused of the murder of Stanford White, announced that two of the jurors selected in the early days of the proceedings would be excused.

"Without any reflection on the jurymen whatsoever," said the presiding judge, "jurors Nos. 4 and 6 will be excused."

The men in question were Arthur S. Campbell, a superintendent of telephone construction, and Harold R. Faire, printer and publisher of a pamphlet circulated in Wall street. The courtroom was crowded for the opening of the afternoon session when the announcement was made.

"By agreement," said Jerome, "the reasons for this action will not be made public, but they are of a business nature. Counsel representing the people and the defendant have conferred with the court in regard to the matter and a unanimous decision was arrived at."

When the excused jurymen left the courtroom they were besieged by questioners. Faire created a mild sensation in the corridors when he asserted with positiveness that he was utterly in ignorance of any reason why he should be asked to step down. He said:

"The announcement in court was the first knowledge I had of the intended action. In passing through the courthouse corridor this morning I heard a man remark that two of the Thaw jurors were to be excused today. I had no idea that the remark could include me. About three years ago when I was connected with a brokerage concern two detectives from the district attorney's office, who said they visited the places which sell unlisted securities, dropped in on me, asked some impertinent questions and wanted to know if I would be willing to go up to the district attorney's office any time I might be wanted. I said 'yes,' but that was the last I ever heard of the matter."

Mr. Campbell, the second of the excused jurors, declared he "had too much respect for the court to give an interview." It was generally reported that Campbell had asked to be relieved. He asked to be excused when first placed on the jury.

One new juror had been added to the trial panel when the excuse of Faire and Campbell was announced and a second one was subsequently secured, thus offsetting the loss of the two previously sworn jurors. When court adjourned there were nine men in the jury box. Forty-six talesmen were called before the two satisfactory jurors were obtained. This exhausted the original panel of 200 men and used up 18 of the new panel of 100, summoned Monday and in court yesterday for the first time.

The two new jurors sworn in yesterday were: No. 1—John S. Dennee, traveling freight agent, 38 years old, and unmarried. Dennee is a native of New Orleans. No. 4—David S. Walker, real estate broker, 34 years of age, and unmarried. Walker is a son of John Brisben Walker. He was chosen during the afternoon session and replaced Juror Campbell as No. 4.

Thaw seemed to be particularly well pleased with the selection of both Dennee and Walker and smiled when the prosecution withdrew all pending challenges against the talesmen. As soon as Dennee said he was a Louisianian Thaw was seen in earnest consultation with his lawyers. Walker was accepted by the defense in spite of the fact that he said he knew Stanford White and many of the dead architect's friends. He also had formed an opinion in the case and expressed it many times. These facts, Walker declared, however, would not prevent his rendering an entirely fair and impartial verdict. He had not seen White for a year before his death.

Thaw's attorneys set a high water mark for peremptory challenges yesterday when they summarily excused from service seven talesmen who had been declared legally competent by the court. The state challenged peremptorily but once. The defense now has 13 of its peremptory challenges left and the state 17.

The members of the Thaw family were all in court yesterday and for once disarmed those who had circulated reports of a serious break in the family relations. Mrs. William Thaw, mother of the prisoner, conversed and chatted with Mrs. Harry Thaw constantly. The Countess of Yarmouth also talked freely with young Mrs. Thaw at intervals during the day. Miss May MacKenzie was a participant in several of the family chats, notably during the luncheon recess, when the party sat for a time in a circular group and carried on general conversation.

The prisoner seemed to be in high spirits and the fact that the actual hearing of the case had been put back a full day or more by the court's action in excusing two of the sworn jurors did not seem to have the least effect upon him.

GUARDING THAW JURYMEN.

Even Their Food Will Be Protected to Avoid Possible Illness.

Extraordinary precautions are being taken to guard the Thaw jurors who will try Harry K. Thaw for the murder of Stanford White from outside influence or suggestion, says the New York American. With the determination to keep their minds free and clear from any biased judgment from the time of their selection these jurymen are enduring an incarceration practically equivalent to imprisonment. It is now generally believed that the case will of a certainty consume thirty days before it goes to the jury. That means just that length of time away from their homes and business to the twelve good men and true who will decide Thaw's fate.

The Broadway Central hotel, in New York, has been selected as the abode of the jurymen during the hours prior to the opening and subsequent to the closing of court for the day. A suit of handsome, high ceilinged, well ventilated rooms was engaged for the jury by Sheriff Hayes. The suit is on the third floor and extends from the northwest frontage on Broadway to the rear. There are at least fifteen rooms in the suit, and elaborate plans have been perfected by the deputy sheriffs whereby every juryman is perfectly guarded, both while awake and sleeping.

Between the criminal courts building and their hotel prison the jurymen will use the Broadway surface cars and will also walk a part of the distance in good weather. The jurymen may talk to one another, but the case itself cannot be discussed in any manner. Those who desire will be permitted to attend church on Sunday in company with a deputy sheriff. If any logical excuse is offered a juryman will also be allowed to go to his home, with an attendant, but he cannot remain there.

The chief amusement supplied jurymen during the long grind of a big trial is the playing of cards or other games. They cannot read the newspapers or magazines save after they have been censored and everything relating to the case eliminated.

The jurors eat all three daily meals at the Broadway Central hotel. Breakfast is served at 8:30 o'clock, luncheon at 1:15 p. m. and dinner at 6:30 in the evening. A special chef has been assigned by the hotel management to cook the meals of the jurors, and extreme care is taken in the preparation of the menus in order to guard against the possibility of illness. Should the weather be too stormy at the noon recess it is probable that the jury will be served their luncheon in the criminal courts building.

The jurors who will try Thaw leave the criminal court with the deputy sheriffs by the White street entrance. They proceed to Broadway and there board surface cars which land them at the entrance to the hotel. The women's entrance will probably be used in order to prevent crowds from gathering in the lobby of the hotel. Through this entrance the jury proceed to the elevator and are taken to their section of the third floor. A special private dining room has been engaged for them, and they will there eat their meals until the trial comes to its end.

AUTO BOUDOIRETTE.

Luxurious Feature of a Motor Car to Be Given a Bride.

Luxury crowds luxury in the auto line these days, and the newest of all is an attachment to a magnificent limousine car which Miss Beatrice Morgan will receive as a wedding present when she becomes the bride of Frederick S. Pruyn in February, says the New York Press. Apartment would be a better word than attachment, for the novelty is a tiny boudoir, a boudoirette, as the makers call it, built into the body of the car. The little apartment really is a dressing room. It can be shut off from the rest of the tonneau by sliding panels, and it has barely space for the fair owner and her maid to squeeze inside. Small as the room is, wonders can be accomplished therein.

The future Mrs. Pruyn when touring with her husband can be refreshed quickly from the effects of a long spin by retiring to her boudoirette and submitting herself to the skillful hands of her maid. A beautiful dressing case swings from the wall, a miniature lavatory occupies a corner, mirrors line the whole interior, and the boudoirette is lighted with softly shaded incandescent bulbs. Within that lavish nook gowns may be changed, coiffures built—in fact, almost everything is possible short of a bath, and doubtless a bathroom will be next in the line of novelties.

The handsome car has all the other conveniences known to the wildest flight of the auto maker's art—a buffet, a kitchenette and even—by drawing curtains about the man—a smoking room. Well may Mrs. Grundy cry "What next?" as she gazes awestruck at the swift development of luxuriousness in the horseless carriage field.

Stamps For Charity.

Three new stamps were recently produced in Holland. Those who stick them on their letters pay double postage, half the value going to the state and half to antituberculous works, says the Paris Figaro. An easy way of performing a benevolent act.

Pipe Smoking More Popular.

Pipe smoking is on the increase in the United States, says a Washington special to the New York World. This is shown by the increase in the briarwood imported from Italy. During the last year these imports almost doubled.

WILEY'S OPINIONS

Most Foods Improve by Short Term In Cold Storage

WARNING AS TO OYSTERS

Are Not Good an Hour After Opening--Trimmings of Hides "That Smell to Heaven" Used to Make Gelatine

Washington, Jan. 30.—Dr. Wiley, chief of the chemistry bureau of the department of agriculture and the pure food expert, gave much interesting testimony concerning the deterioration of foodstuffs in cold storage before the house committee on agriculture, whose hearings on the agricultural appropriation bill have just been made public.

Two cold storage warehouses are at Wiley's disposal in Washington and he gave the results he has attained by experiments with all sorts of foodstuffs. "Milk begins to deteriorate right away and so does cream," said Wiley. "Eggs also begin to deteriorate immediately. Fruit is improved and sometimes continues to improve for three months. Meat improves up to about six or eight weeks, but after three months for meat you can see that it has reached the maximum and then it begins to go down. I do not care how hard it is frozen."

Dr. Wiley stated he is a thorough believer in cold storage and believes that most foods improve when properly kept for a short time. He said that as yet he has not been able to determine whether drawn or undrawn poultry keeps better.

Dr. Wiley was asked many questions about oysters and said that the oysters opened and shipped in buckets should be prevented from entering into interstate commerce, as they are dead. "An oyster is dead an hour after it is opened," said Wiley, "and is not good. It loses its flavor."

In response to inquiries as to the advisability of freezing oysters to preserve them for shipment, Wiley said: "They ought not to be frozen. That ruins them and as soon as they thaw they are dangerous." He then urged that oysters should be shipped alive and in the shell and said that the greatest outrage of the oyster trade is to soak oysters with fresh water and swell them up, making them look fat.

Dr. Wiley said the oysters sent out in tin cans are all right, but in further denunciation of bulk oysters shipped in tubs and buckets said: "They are either preserved with some preservative, or are dangerously near the ptomaine line, one of the two."

Gelatine was denounced by Wiley, who said of it: "It is made out of hides, of the scrapings from hides. These hides go into the tanners' vats and these hides that smell to heaven are treated and trimmed, and these trimmings are used to make gelatine."

Dr. Wiley said the gelatine factories are the dirtiest in the world; that the hides used are treated with alkali which is rubbed into them for shipment. The hides are scraped and trimmed and are then put into the tanners' vats and the residue used for gelatine. He said that gelatine is sometimes made in glue factories and that what is not fit for glue is made into gelatine.

In reply to a question as to the uses of this gelatine, Wiley said: "It is used for putting into ice cream and putting into candies and for making capsules that you take your medicine in." He added that there is no objection to gelatine if properly made, and that there is plenty of wholesome raw material to make it of.

As to the gelatine made from material containing live germs, Wiley said: "No one wants to run the risk of getting lockjaw by taking a powder or a pill or eating ice cream."

Many Dead Bodies In Mine

Frankfort, Germany, Jan. 30.—A dispatch from Saarbruecken says there are still 72 bodies underground in the Reden mine. Of the bodies brought out only 24 have been recognized. The others are so burned that their identity cannot be established. One woman became demented when she was confronted by her husband alive, she having believed him to be among the dead. The cause of the explosion still remains a mystery.

A BELATED APOLOGY

Swettenham Regrets Having Offended Rear Admiral Davis

London, Jan. 30.—There is very little comment in the newspapers on the apology made by Governor Swettenham of Jamaica for his letter to Rear Admiral Davis. The affair is without great interest to the British public because, as far as the two governments are concerned, no diplomatic difficulty ever has existed and the personal side of the matter has become of secondary importance.

Great satisfaction is felt, nevertheless, that Swettenham has withdrawn the offensive letter and expressed regret for having written it, and thus closing the incident from the personal side as well.

Swettenham's withdrawal of his letter and his apology followed voluminous telegraphic communications to him from the colonial office. The dispatch which has now closed the incident was sent by the governor to the colonial office, whence it reached the American state department, through the foreign office and Charge Howard, in the usual course.

Queer Doings at Kingston

New York, Jan. 30.—Steamer Advance has arrived from Colon, after landing supplies at Kingston for the earthquake sufferers. Officers of the Advance say the vessel was rather curtly received at Kingston. Efforts were made to charge port dues and no official appeared to exert himself to accept the offerings brought by the steamer. The Advance, on sailing, left tons of provisions on the dock.

General Booth Will Be Busy

London, Jan. 30.—General William Booth, founder and head of the Salvation Army, left here last night for Denmark, Norway and Sweden, where for two weeks he will address two or three meetings a day. On Feb. 23 he will leave London for New York, where he will spend two weeks before proceeding by way of Canada to take a steamer on April 1 for Japan. From there Booth will go on to Pekin. He will be back in London by July to commence a campaign through the British Isles. In October he will again cross the Atlantic for a two months' tour of the United States.

An Unexpected Find

New York, Jan. 30.—Jewels valued at $3500 were found hidden in an old trunk in the home of the late Charles Tripler of Manhasset, L. I., discoverer of liquid air. The find was made by Tripler's son, L. B. Tripler, who is heir to all of the elder Tripler's estate. The son knew nothing of the presence of these valuables until he broke into the trunk in order to make an inventory of the estate of the dead scientist.

Burglars Assaulted Woman

New Cumberland, W. Va., Jan. 30.—Unconscious, bound, gagged and tied to a chair, Nellie Campbell was found nearly dead at her home. It is still doubtful whether she will recover. Miss Campbell was alone in the house. Apparently the girl's assailants were burglars, who, after assaulting her, tied and gagged her and then ransacked the house, taking several articles of value.

Federal Interference Resented

Sacramento, Cal., Jan. 30.—The senate adopted the majority resolution on the Japanese school question without debate. It "strenuously protests against the unwarranted interference with the constitutional rights of the state" and requests the governor and attorney general "to do all things necessary to protect and save the rights of the state of California"

Fuel Situation Getting Desperate

Washington, Jan. 30.—A telegram received at the interstate commerce commission from New Rockford, N. D., says that the situation there is so desperate that the people will burn railroad ties, fences and other timber in less than 48 hours for fuel. The dispatch says they have had no freight this year and no mail for 12 days.

Men Blown Up With Powder Mill

Fontana, Ind., Jan. 30.—The powder mill of the Laflin & Rand Powder company was destroyed by an explosion and Jake Carner and Max Kurndt, the only employes in the mill at the time, were blown to pieces.

Against Capital Punishment

Topeka, Jan. 30.—The Wheeler-Simon bill to abolish capital punishment has passed the senate and now goes to the governor for his signature. No governor of Kansas has ever signed a death sentence.

NEWS IN BRIEF

The anniversary of the birth of William McKinley was celebrated at the Metropolitan Methodist Episcopal church, Washington, where McKinley worshipped while serving in congress and later when he was elevated to the presidency. A large and representative audience attended.

The stockholders of the Chace cotton mills of Fall River, Mass., and Burlington, Vt., will meet Feb. 6 to consider a proposition to increase the capital stock from $900,000 to $1,200,000 by a stock dividend of 33 1-3 percent.

John A. Britton, son of "Harley Merry" Britton, the scenic artist, committed suicide at his Brooklyn home by shooting. Continued grief over the death of his wife is said to have made him mentally irresponsible.

There is now one telephone station to every 19 persons in Connecticut, according to the report presented by President Tyler of the Southern New England Telephone company to the annual meeting of the stockholders.

ROASTED IN WRECK

Six Men Killed In Collision of Freight and Express Trains

Greenfield, Mass., Jan. 30.—The engine of a special freight telescoped the rear car of a Troy express from Boston near South River station. Six persons were killed, and perhaps a seventh, as there are rumors that an unknown young woman perished. The others were all railroad employes.

The Troy express was made up of a combination smoker, passenger coach, Pullman sleeper and national express cars. In the town of Shelburne the "three whistle stop signal" was sounded.

The train came to a stop on the curve and Louis W. Piper, rear brakeman, was sent back with his lantern to stop any other train that might be following.

Extra freight No. 1165, which had a short time before been made up at Greenfield, came thundering down the track so close upon the express that Piper could not stop it in time to prevent a wreck. He waved his lantern wildly, but in another moment the collision took place.

The men pinned beneath the wreckage of the last car of the train ahead, the combination, were not all killed outright, for their screams were heard by the passengers who escaped.

They were roasted slowly until one by one they died. Hours later when the wrecking train had lifted what remained of the car, only charred, unrecognizable bodies remained. The crew of the engine that did the damage escaped.

Important Witness Located

Boston, Jan. 30.—Mrs. J. J. Caine, who is said to be wanted in New York as a witness in the Thaw murder trial, was located late last night in this city by detectives from New York and will accompany them back to that city voluntarily. Mrs. Caine declined to talk regarding her testimony in the case.

The Post says that it is declared that she can tell of the motive which impelled Harry Thaw to kill Stanford White and that she can tell of the whole life story of Evelyn Thaw; that she knows of her first meeting White and of her first affair with Thaw.

Steamer Line May Shift

Boston, Jan. 30.—Shipping interests in this city are considerably agitated over the report that the International Mercantile Marine company has decided to withdraw its fleet of steamers from the service between this city and Liverpool, London and Manchester, for the reason, it is said, that the New York Central railroad is delaying and diverting freight shipments from the west.

Embezzlement Charged

New Haven, Jan. 30.—F. E. Lewis, confidential man for the Benton-Armstrong Box company, and M. E. Smith, a former bookeeper for the same concern, were arrested on the charge of embezzlement of $3000 from the company. The police state that the men admit a shortage, but the exact amount is not known.

Three-Day Speech Ended

Washington, Jan. 30.—Senator Beveridge has concluded his speech in advocacy of his child labor bill, which occupied three days. His argument yesterday was devoted to the constitutional power of congress to prohibit interstate commerce in child-made goods. He took the broad ground that the power of congress over interstate and foreign commerce is absolute; that such commerce could be prohibited altogether, and that in all cases the question of policy and not of power was the point to be considered.

Train Wreck In Nova Scotia

Halifax, Jan. 30.—The Maritime express from Montreal to this city was wrecked near Windsor junction last night. Five persons were injured, but nobody was fatally hurt. The Maritime express is the fastest train on the government railroad system and was running at its usual speed of 40 miles an hour when the accident occurred.

Made Eighty-Six Shots a Minute

Rochester, Jan. 30.—A. F. Laudensack of the Winchester Rod and Gun club, New Haven, established a new record in the rapid-fire contest at the third annual tournament of the in-door 22-calibre Rifle League of the United States by making a string of 86 shots in a minute. He was the holder of the previous record of 78 shots.

Consular Clerks' Pay Raised

Washington, Jan. 30.—The senate passed the diplomatic and consular appropriation bill, carrying $3,085,477. An amendment providing that the salaries of all consular clerks be $1000 a year for the first three years of their service, after which $200 a year is to be added, until a maximum of $1800 is reached, was agreed to.

Tolstoi Not Dangerously Sick

Moscow, Jan. 30.—A son of Count Leo Tolstoi says that his father had had an attack of influenza last December, but that he had recovered by Christmas. Since then he contracted a bronchial trouble, but this illness is taking its normal course and the patient is not in danger.

Russian Official's Queer Order

AMONG THE CLUBS.

The Shakespeare club including several friends making a party of fifty attended Marshall Darrach's last Shakespearian recital given in Jordan hall Monday evening.

The Current Events club had an interesting meeting at the home of Mrs. Jewell of Squantum street Friday evening, Jan. 25. Mrs. Babcock is a delightful speaker.

The Friday club had an unusually pleasant meeting last week with Mrs. George W. Morton, it being a musical afternoon in charge of Mrs. Chandler W. Smith.

The adjourned annual meeting of the Hospital Aid association will be held Thursday afternoon at three o'clock at the Women's club house and it is hoped all the members will try and be present.

The Quincy Day Nursery association will meet at the Women's clubhouse on Tuesday afternoon Feb. 5th at three o'clock. A large attendance is desired as there will be important business to discuss.

Mrs. Walter E. Burke, president of the Junior Friday club is to be the hostess of the club on Monday afternoon, Feb. 4th, with Mrs. Arthur W. Hall in charge of the program, which will study Walt Whitman and Sidney Lanier.

Adams Chapter Daughters of the Revolution meet on Monday afternoon, Feb. 4th, at the home of Miss Annie L. Prescott, Spear street. The meeting is called for half past two and Miss Prescott will be assisted in her duties as hostess by Mrs. Frank F. Prescott, Mrs. Francis Guild Mayo and Miss Harriet B. Pierce.

Mr. George Aldrich former superintendent of schools in this city is to lecture at the meeting of the Wollaston Unitarian Alliance in the church on Wednesday afternoon Feb. 6th taking as a subject; "Moral Training of Children. He will doubtless have a large audience as the meeting is public and an invitation is extended to all women's clubs or church societies to attend.

The Alliance of First church had a large and interesting meeting in the parish parlor Monday afternoon. The president Mrs. F. S. Davis was in the chair and conducted the devotional and business meeting. Mrs. Wilson Marsh had charge of the afternoon's program which was on: "Liberal Religion in Germany." The speaker was Rev. Mr. Myer of Natick and he spoke for nearly an hour most entertainingly, giving a clear insight into the religion of Germany. During the social hour the members enjoyed meeting Mr. Myer and also a social chat over the cups of hot cocoa.

Mrs. William E. Alden of Chestnut street, secretary of the Quincy Historical society is receiving a number of applications for membership in the society, which is now a large and representative body of men and women.

QUINCY WOMEN'S CLUB.

The second social whist party was held Tuesday afternoon at the club house and proved very enjoyable for those attending. Mrs. Benjamin Johnson had the highest score and there were several other very good scores made. Owing to the Day Nursery meeting at the club house next Tuesday and to it being almost impossible to heat the house comfortably these cold days, it has been decided to give up the whist parties for the present.

Mrs. Gurney's literature class will meet Thursday morning as usual at half past ten at the clubhouse.

The February meeting of the executive board will be held on Thursday morning, Feb. 7, at ten o'clock at the club house.

Arrangements are going forward for gentlemen's night on Feb. 18th also for reciprocity afternoon on Feb. 26th.

The club will have the pleasure of listening to the Mendelssohn trio at some future meeting being deprived of that pleasure at the musicale owing to Mrs. Moore, the soprano, having a cold and being unable to sing.

Some interest is being taken by members in the proposed millinery classes.

The Arts and Crafts Committee had a very successful cake and candy sale on Saturday and Tuesday afternoons.

The exchange department was reopened at the last club meeting and proved popular and will hereafter be a regular feature at club meetings.

CLUB NOTES.

The Worcester Woman's club is discussing important things just now. A recent lecture on the "Greatest Need of American Children" was timely. The speaker deplored the rush and hurry of American civilization and urged a more simple life. A meeting has been held to consider the establishment in Worcester of an industrial school. The club appointed a committee to confer with other committees and organizations and to make provision for the admission of girls as well as boys.

The Monday club of Weymouth will have a Scotch afternoon on Feb. 4th, when there will be readings and music by club members.

The art exhibit to be held by the arts and crafts department of the Brockton Woman's club in February is much more ambitious than that held a year ago. Some of the best artists in the country are to be represented, and upward of a hundred pictures will be hung, the degree of merit to be established by a jury of Boston artists. Among those to exhibit are Mr. W. J. Bixbee, Mr. Scott Carbee, president of the Odd Brushes, Mr. and Mrs. Jean Paul Selinger and others.

"Civic Betterment" and the "Billboard Nuisance" is the subject of the second of the course of lectures, illustrated by the stereopticon, which is being given by the Women's Educational and Industrial Union at 264 Boylston street. Henry Lewis Johnson will speak on this practical theme this evening, Jan. 30, at 8 P. M. The public are cordially invited.

The annual meeting of the Massachusetts State Society, D. R., will be held March 17. The following ladies will prepare the ballot for officers: Mrs. Clinton Viles, Mrs. Mabel Priest, Mrs. Henry Weston, Mrs. John Clapp, Mrs. Susan Plummer. The state regent, Mrs. Adeline F. Fitz, will return from Ormond in time to preside at the meeting.

Last week at the Hyde Park Current Events club, Mrs. Edgerly, a club member who was at Kingston, Jamaica, at the time of the earthquake, gave an account of her experiences during and immediately after the shock.

☞ Secretaries of women's clubs are requested to send notices of coming events and reports of the meetings of their various clubs, directed to the Club Editor, Quincy Daily Ledger, in time to reach the office on or before Wednesday morning of each week.

Tully Wins the Six Day Race

The finish of the six day race at the Coliseum was witness by 1300 people on Tuesday evening. Tully and Maloney came in a tie for the evening. The race was exciting from the start to finish. On the start Maloney took the lead with Tully second. This continued until about the first mile. Then Burns tripped Tully and he fell, Mahoney gaining three quarter of a lap. Tully seeing his position quickly let out speed and caught Maloney. Tully is the winner of the race, beating Maloney a lap.

There was quite a little excitement at the rink caused by the floor settling. The six days race had just been finished and the crowd that was on the floor had separated when there was a crackling noise, and the floor settled in the centre several inches. Had there been a crowd on the floor at the time the chances are that it would have collapsed.

The final summary:

Tully,	644 laps
Maloney,	643 laps
Burns,	618 laps
Schofield,	615 laps
Grant,	613 laps

CHAPTER V.

FOR a moment Miss Tempy made no reply to her sister's speech. Instead she sat there with her eyes fixed upon Miss Prissy's face and her thin fingers picking nervously at her dress.

"Haven't got any money?" she repeated after a pause. "Haven't got any money left? Why, then—why, then, we'll have to take it out of the savin's bank up to Boston. Of course, Bradley must go to college. You know he must, Prissy."

But Miss Prissy shook her head.

"You don't understand, Tempy," she said. "I ought to have talked with you about it long ago. I can see now that I ought to; but, oh, dear, father always said you was too delicate to bother with money matters, and I've been used to takin' all the care myself, and so I've jest gone on and on, worryin' and plannin' and layin' awake nights until I can't go on any further. Oh, Tempy," she cried, and the tears rolled down her cheeks, "you don't understand. The money in the Boston bank has all gone too. We haven't got more than $500 left in the world, and when that's gone"— She waved her hands despairingly.

But still Miss Tempy did not comprehend.

"Why, all of it can't be gone!" she said. "All of the insurance money and everything! Why, it was $5,000!" She mentioned the sum reverently and in an awestruck whisper.

"Yes," said Miss Prissy, trying hard not to be impatient; "yes, 'twas $5,000, and father died over ten years ago, and we've been livin' on it ever since."

"But $5,000, Prissy! Five thousand"—

"Oh, my soul and body! Anybody'd think 'twas a million. Jest think, now; jest think! We've lived on it for pretty nigh eleven years; paid for our clothes and livin' and havin' the house painted six years ago, and"—

"But it needed paintin'."

"Needed it! I should think it did! But it cost more'n we'd ought to spend, jest the same. Oh, it's more my fault than anybody's. Long's father lived the place was kept up, and you and me was used to havin' things as good as our neighbors, and I went on and on, never thinkin' we was too extravagant until all at once the money that we first put in the Harniss bank was used up. And then it come home to me, as you might say, and I realized what we'd been doin'. Oh, I've tried and tried; scrimped here and pinched there. What do you s'pose I sold the wood lot for? And then the cran'by swamp?"

"Why, you said we didn't need 'em, and it was too much trouble to run 'em."

"Said! Oh, I don't doubt I said all sorts of things to keep you from knowin'. But I sold 'em to help pay the bills. And then you was took down with the typhoid, and there was that big doctor's bill, and then Bradley came, and he had to have clothes and a little money to spend, like the other boys. And now!"

Miss Prissy choked, tried to go on, and then broke down and cried heartily and without restraint.

In all the years since the death of Captain Allen Miss Tempy had never seen her common sense, practical sister give way like this. The sight alarmed her much more than the story of the financial situation had so far done. She didn't fully understand the latter yet, but every one of Miss Prissy's sobs was to her a call for help that needed an immediate answer.

"There, there, there, dear!" she said, running to the other rocker and putting her arm around her sister's neck. "You poor thing! You mustn't cry like that. You've jest worried yourself sick. You're all worn out. I shouldn't be surprised if you've got a little cold, too, in that drafty schoolhouse. Let me make you a good, big cup of pepper tea right away; now do."

Miss Prissy turned a sob into a feeble laugh.

"Oh, dear me, Tempy," she said, laying her hand on the other's arm, "I b'lieve you think pepper tea'll cure anything, even an empty pocketbook. I wish 'twould pay bills; then, I don't know but I'd drink a hogshead. But it won't, nor cryin' won't, either. Set down, and I'll tell you jest how things are."

So Miss Tempy, reluctantly giving up the "pepper tea" idea for the present, went back to her chair, and Miss Prissy continued.

"The money in the Boston savin's bank is gone," she said, "and a year or more ago I wrote to the broker folks that bought the bond for us when father died, and they sold it for me and got a little less than a thousand dollars for it. I put the money into the bank at Harniss, and, though I've tried my best to be economical, there ain't but five hundred and eighty left. That and the place here is all we've got."

In a bewildered fashion Miss Tempy strove to grasp the situation.

"Then we're poor," she said, "real poor, and I thought we was rich. Well, I shall give up that new bonnet I was goin' to have next spring, and I s'pose I hadn't ought to subscribe to the Comforter either. I did think so much of it."

"I'm afraid we'll have to give up more than the Comforter, Tempy. I've thought and thought till my poor head is nearly worn through. We might sell the place here, but 'twould be like sellin' our everlastin' souls—if 'tain't unreligious to say it—and, besides, property at Orham is so low now that we'd only get ha'f what it's worth, and when that money's spent there wouldn't be anything left."

"Sell the place! Father's place! Why, Prissy Allen, how can you talk so! Where would we live?"

"Well, we might hire a little house down at South Orham or somewheres."

"South Orham! Where all those Portuguese and things live? I'd rather die!" And it was Miss Tempy's turn to cry.

"You needn't cry for that, Tempy. We won't sell yet awhile. Not till there's nothin' left. But we can't have the barn shingled, and as for Bradley's goin' to college, that, I'm afraid, is out of the question."

"Oh, dear, dear! And the barn looks awful. Melissy Busteed was sayin' only last week that folks was wond'rin' when we was goin' to have it fixed. And poor Bradley! My heart was set on his bein' a minister. I don't know but I'd live in the poorhouse to make him one. They say Mr. Otis keeps a real nice poorhouse, too," she added.

Miss Prissy smiled dolefully. "It hasn't got to the poorhouse yet," she said, "and I hope we can send Bradley through high school anyhow. But we'll have to scrimp awful, and we must try to earn some money. I was talkin' to Abigail Mullett at the church fair last August, and she spoke about those aprons and one thing another that I made and said she never saw such hemmin' and tuckin'. She said she'd give anything if she could get somebody to do such work for her in the dressmakin' season. I've been thinkin' maybe she'd put out some of her work to me if I asked her to. She does more dressmakin' than anybody around; has customers 'way over to Ostable and keeps three girls sometimes. And you know how the summer folks bought those knit shawls of yours, Tempy. Well, I don't doubt you could get orders for lots more. We'll try, and we'll let Bradley start at high school and see how we make it go."

A Little Advertising By Daily Ledger

Monday evening a large number of the Saturday issue of the Daily Ledger were distributed free gratis at the several railroad stations in the city, at the shipyard and elsewhere. The issue contained the opening chapters of the romantic story, "Partners of the Tide," now running in the Daily Ledger. It was to interest the public in this story that the paper was given away, and was planned two weeks in advance.

Certain busy bodies, however, are seeking to make political capital because the issue of the Daily Ledger happened to contain the letter of A. F. Schenkelberger in relation to the controversy between Mayor Thompson and Mr. Crane. They allege falsely that the paper was circulated to injure the Mayor, when the papers were circulated solely in the interest of the story, "Partners of the Tide."

Millions for Almhouses

The London Globe reports that William Whiteley, the "Universal Provider," who was murdered in his department store in Westbourne Grove last Thursday by Howard George Rayner, bequeathed $5,000,000 for the purpose of providing almshouses for the aged and deserving poor. These houses are to be known as the "Whiteley homes for the aged poor." He leaves $250,000 to each of his two sons, and his sister and her two daughters are given annuities of $5,000 each. His wife, from whom he has been separated, was "provided for during life." In addition to several other family and household bequests, the dead millionaire leaves sums varying from $2,500 to $10,000 to a number of hospitals, while two sums of $25,000 each are left in trust, one to be applied to the giving annually through a certain clergyman of "Whiteley Christmas 'gifts." The income of the second sum is to be devoted to the promotion of cricket, football, rowing, and swimming. Any residue is to be divided between Mr. Whiteley's two sons.

Would Rent Plants.

Representative Stone of Worcester introduced a bill in the Legislature on Wednesday directing the Governor, the gas and electric light commissioners and the harbor and land commisssoners to make use of the idle water power of the state, to purchase lands and to construct buildings and equipping the same with machinery for the production of gas and electricity for light, heat and power purposes. The plants are to be rented to persons or corporations upon such terms as determined by the above commissions. The bill was referred to the committee on rules on the question of suspending the 12th joint rule.

Newspapers Helped

The spontaneous combination of the newspapers, tradesmen and consumers has killed the British soap trust, which was launched so recently as Oct. 5, with a capital of $60,000,000. Since then an unrelenting war was waged against the soapmakers forming the trust, which however the manufacturers declared was not a trust. A section of the London and provincial press gave up its most prominent columns to pillorying the methods of the manufacturers and urging a boycott. They drew lessons from the American trusts and gratuitously advertised makers outside the trust. The retailers filled their shop windows with advertisements of non-trust soaps and antitrust cartoons. The "working arrangement" between the soapmakers was dissolved Nov. 23.

Boston Yacht Club

The Boston Yacht club elected these officers at its annual meeting on Wednesday evening: Commodore, Edward P. Boynton, the schooner Magnolia; vice-commodore, Alfred Douglass the schooner Shiyessa; rear commodore J. Fred Brown, the schooner Mariette; secretary-treasurer, Walter Burgess. The club has a membership of 717. The receipts of the year were $33,934.78, and there was a surplus of $1,222.34.

—Rear Admiral Bobley D. Evans, Commander-in-Chief of the Atlantic fleet, has recently told intimate friends that he thinks of retiring from active serice on account of ill health. He is afflicted with gout to an extent which is extremely painful. Thus far Rear Admiral Evans has not applied for transfer to the retire list. President Roosevelt is anxious that he should remain in command of the Atlantic fleet, although his cruise of two years will expire this spring. He will not reach the statutory retirement age for two yearr.

A Kick from Dorchester

Trouble has developed over the plan of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad company to connect the Shawmut and the Granite branches. It grew out of the conditional opposition which was suggested at the hearing by ex-Representative Thayer of Boston.

There was so much plausibility in what he said that a sub-committee of the railroad committee was appointed to look into the case and report back to the full committee. The matter was conducted very quietly, but a meeting was held Monday forenoon in the room of the railroad committee and there was a large attendance of the interested parties in Dorchester.

They protested strongly against any use of the land in their neighborhood which would lead to the passing of freight trains at night, with their whistling and ringing of bells, making the neighborhood much less desirable for private residences.

One of the railroad committee says that this opens up a serious obstacle for the granting of the petition of the railroad company. Col. Benton, counsel for the railroad, said that they wanted this extension so that the trains should not be bottled up when there is a congestion, but that the road may have a better outlet.

But the fact on the other hand is, that if the petition is once granted, it does not make any difference what the previous reason was, the road can be used for any purpose the company desires, and it is not possible to fix up the matter by legislation in such a way as to prevent the company from sending freight trains over the line by night, if it felt so disposed. This puts a wholly new aspect upon the matter and it will all be re-opened by the full committee.

—Senator Burnham has introduced a bill providing that Sept. 23 shall be set aside as "Paul Jones Day," and that on that day all United States vessels in port shall "dress ship." It is said the bill is approved by Admiral Dewey, Gen. Horace Porter, Rear Admiral Baird and other distinguished men.

—The Citizens' League of Randolph elected these officers on Tuesday evening. Henry A. Belcher, president; W. B. Atherton, vice-president; Fred M. French, secretary; D. J. Brennan, treasurer; James A. Brennan, W. B. Atherton, Timothy Lyons, Peter Casey, C. D. Hill, executive board.

Original Comedy Presented

St. Mary's hall was filled Wednesday night by an appreciative audience, the occasion being the presentation of a three act comedy entitled "An Unconditional Surrender," written by Miss Susie McGlone, a member of the Thalian club, a dramatic organization composed of well known young ladies of East Milton and Quincy.

The play treats of life during the Civil war and the various characters were admirably taken by the ladies, all of whom showed exceptional histrionic ability. Miss McGlone deserves great credit for the decided artistic success of her first attempt at play writing, and it is hoped that the enthusiastic reception given to her first essay in dramatic literature will encourage her to continue in the field where she has such undoubted talent.

The cast of characters included: Susie A. Pickering, Genevieve W. White, Alice G. Gunning, Mary Howley, Mary E. J. Bannin, Helen H. Gavin, Helen G. Pickering, Grace L. Barry, Mary Howley, May E. Lawrence and Susie G. McGlone.

The program also included solos by Masters Danny O'Connell and Richard Hussey, piano selections by James White, and violin solos by Paul Morrissette.

—Why should milk that contains much cream be accounted the best? Cream is only fat, and we do not rate the food-value of meats solely by the amount of fat that they include, says Literary Digest. In our earnest search after a fat milk, he says, we have probably gone too far.

The Home Newspaper

The home newspaper is in no sense a child of charity. It earns twice over every dollar it receives, and it is second to no enterprise in contributing to the upbuilding of a community. Its patrons reap far more benefits from its pages than its publishers, and in calling for the support of the community in which it is published it asks for no more than in all fairness belong to it, though generally it receives less. Patronize and help your paper as you would any other enterprise because it helps you and not as an act of charity.—Ashland (Pa) Advocate.

☞It may be that before long the snow white sugar that now is used by practically all American families will be a thing of the past. This will all depend upon the opinion of the department of agriculture. Southern sugar refiners are very desirous of having the department make a ruling as to the manufacture of sugars under the new pure food law, and a delegation is now in Washington for that purpose. For a hundred years it has been the practice to bleach sugar with blueing. Years ago indigo was used to give the sugar brilliancy, but of recent years aniline dyes have been employed. Another method of refining sugar is by the use of sulphur fumes. It is said that under the pure food law, unless the department of agriculture makes a ruling to the contrary, to use of aniline dyes and sulphur fumes will both be prohibited, and probably the use of indigo, so that the refiners will have to return to primitive methods. In fact it is said by the sugar refiners that there is a chance that white sugar will be eliminated altogether. The refiners and producers of sugar want a ruling before the appropriation is made for enforcing the law.—Gloucester Times.

Sleigh Parties Increase Daily

The girls employed in the Bostonian wrapper factory enjoyed a sleigh ride last Tuesday night, starting from Mrs. Alexandra's residence about 6.30. The four horses headed its way to Hingham, stopping at the Cushing house where they were served with a turkey dinner. After dinner they gathered in the parlor and sang and danced. Miss Esther Brooks played the piano which they enjoyed for an hour, then they took their departure at 11 o'clock. All declared they had a good time.

The Christian Endeavor society of Memorial church, Atlantic, had a delightful sleighride Wednesday evening, for the moon was perfect and the crowd a jolly one. After the ride they returned to the church and enjoyed a hot oyster supper. They were chaperoned by Mrs. Harry Wells.

Fifteen pupils of the Washington school enjoyed a long and pleasant sleigh ride on Wednesday evening. The party was chaproned by Miss Chatler, teacher of the fifth grade.

A sleigh party of 35 from Hyde Park drove into Quincy Wednesday evening shortly after 9 o'clock, and stopped at the Greenleaf. They spent an hour or more in the parlor in singing, and then repaired to the dinning room where lunch was served. They departed for home at 11.30 with cheers for the landlord.

Granite Breakwater.

Proposals have been asked by the Harbor and Land Commissioners for the building of a breakwater about 1,000 feet long, with a shore arm about 400 feet long, at Cherry Island Bar, in the town of Revere, to be constructed of granite quarry grout in large blocks. It is estimated that about 50,000 tons of stone will be required.

Mr. Freeman Ousted.

The Ward Five Republican Committee of 1907 organized on Wednesday evening with H. Y. Follett as chairman and Eben Hardy as secretary. Thus R. R. Freeman, the chairman for nearly 20 years, was deposed. He continues a member of the committee.

The Ward Four Republican committee has organized with J. Leonard Ferguson as chairman and James Walker as secretary and treasurer. A committee consisting of Edward J. Sandberg, J. Leonard Ferguson, W. H. Teasdale and Thomas F. Burke was appointed to look after the interest of West Quincy in regard to street railroad service.

WANTED.

AN APPROPRIATION

in 1907 for a

NEW CODDINGTON

GOOD AFTERNOON.

The newspaper man who discovered that "Senator-elect Guggenheim began life barefooted," might find on further investigation, that he also began it bald-headed.

Gov. Hughes of New York is said to leave the door of his office wide open with his desk in plain view while he is working. It must be quite a treat for the visitors to see a real live Governor earning his salary.

For a board of nine men it would be difficult to find one with more committees than the Quincy School Committee. There are twenty standing committees of three each and often special committees.

Senator Tillman, having described Senator Foraker as "a bifurcated volcano in perennial eruption," it is now up to the Ohican to say a few pleasant things about the South Carolinian. Call him an elongated pitchfork just off the heap," or something like that.

Now they've dug up "naosaurus, the monster fin-backed armoured boat lizard with a hundred teeth set in a jaw curved like a bread knife who died 20,000,000 years ago in Texas." Well, what of it? Senator Bailey is still doing business at the old stand.

The efforts of the Woman's Relief Corps along the lines of patriotism are to be commended. Their devotion to the flag, the Civil war veterans, and the American patriots like Washington, Lincoln. Garfield and McKinley are worthy of imitation by other organizations. Paul Revere W. R. C. has a patriotic instructor, who is ever alert.

There will probably be a pretty row in the meeting of the Senate and House conferees on the immigration bills, which were passed at the last session under the same title, but with totally different texts. The bone of contention is the educational tests which Senator Lodge had inserted in the Senate measure, but which the House promptly sat upon. The house is anxious to go to the seat of the trouble in the immigration question by the appointment of inspectors and physicians with police powers at foreign ports, thus decreasing greatly the deportation of unwelcome aliens who seek to land. Apart from the educational clause, the differences undoubtedly can be adjusted, but there will be a bitter fight on that score.

BRAYTON'S POWER

New Issue Raised Over Rhode Island's Noted "Boss"

HE SITS IN STATE HOUSE

Occupies a Chair as Private Citizen and Effort to Remove Him Brings Up Fine Question For the Legislature to Settle

Providence, Jan. 31.—The introduction in the legislature of a bill ordering George N. Kingsbury, Rhode Island commissioner to the Jamestown Exposition, to "avoid all further public association with so notorious a character as Boss Brayton," has raised the question of the right of a citizen of the state to visit the state house.

The resolution, which was introduced by Representative George F. Green of this city, sets forth that "for the maintenance of the dignity and honor of the state in connection with its participation in the Jamestown Exposition, the state's executive commissioner is requested to cease the carrying of messages from Mr. Brayton to members of the general assembly."

General Charles R. Brayton, at whom the resolution is aimed, is a veteran of the Civil war and for many years has been one of the most prominent figures in the legislative halls of Rhode Island. He has now become an issue in which Governor Higgins, the house of representatives and the board of state house commissioners are involved.

Brayton's presence at the state house was made an issue in the last campaign which resulted in the defeat of Governor Utter by Governor Higgins. Brayton, who is blind, and unable to move about without the guidance of his attendants, is not a member of the legislature, but he has for many years occupied a chair in the office of the county sheriff in the state house. Higgins, charging that Brayton is a paid lobbyist and that he controls votes in the legislature, has demanded that the state house commissioners eject Brayton from the capitol, but the commissioners, while admitting that they are in charge of the building, assert that they are without authority to keep the aged general from his customary place.

The legislature is now called upon to act in the matter in two ways for, in addition to the bill introduced, there is another, presented earlier in the season, ordering that the county sheriff refuse to admit Brayton to the sheriff's office. Both these bills have been tabled and it is not probable that they will be taken up again, but Governor Higgins intimates that he purposes to take steps which will result in Brayton's removal from the capitol. The governor says that he intends to wage a war against every lobbyist who visits the state house. There is no law governing the subject in Rhode Island.

Close Watch on Japanese Immigrants

Washington, Jan. 31.—The immigration bureau has received a long report from Commissioner North at San Francisco, reciting the circumstances attending the landing of about 800 Japanese immigrants last week. He believes that practically all of them were recruited in Japan by the so-called immigration societies. Strict surveillance will be had over those believed to be contract laborers and if evidence can be found substantiating this belief, they will be deported.

To Study Birds' Food Habits

Washington, Jan. 31.—Representative Lacey (Ia.), who has been a persistent champion of wild birds, led a winning fight in restoring to the agricultural appropriation bill a section relating to biological institutions and appropriating $44,420 for the purpose of making a scientific study of the food habits of North American birds and mammals in relation to agriculture, horticulture and forestry.

Military Order Causes Strife

Columbus, O., Jan. 31.—Considerable feeling has been caused at the United States army barracks here by an order issued by Colonel Glenn, commandant at the barracks, requiring the Catholic soldiers to attend religious services. Some of the men declare that they will mutiny and it is probable that the matter will be taken up by the war department.

Pittsburg Negro Almost Lynched

Pittsburg, Jan. 31.—C. A. Jackson, a negro, was attacked by a crowd on Fifth avenue last night and roughly used before he was rescued by the police. He and a newsboy had an altercation and the crowd took the boy's part. Jackson was locked up, bleeding from many flesh wounds and with his clothing torn to shreds.

Dickering For Indian Lands

Norfolk, Neb., Jan. 31.—The Daily News says that Indian Inspector McLaughlin has just procured an agreement with the Rosebud Sioux Indians for the throwing open by the federal government of nearly a million acres of land in Tripp county, S. D., just as soon as details can be attended to.

Gave Sunday Vaudeville Shows

New York, Jan. 31.—A court order was served on Oscar Hammerstein, manager of the Victoria theatre, to show why the theatre's license should not be revoked because of the giving of vaudeville performances on Sunday. The order was issued at the request of Corporation Counsel Ellison.

SHAW FOR BONDED ZONE

No Duty on Materials to Be Made Into Export Articles

Concord, N. H., Jan. 31.—Secretary of the Treasury Shaw made an address last night before the New Hampshire Board of Trade. In addition to making a plea for a merchant marine, he advocated a plan whereby manufacturers might, under certain conditions, import raw material for their factories without the payment of duty.

Mr. Shaw suggested that it would be well to do away with the bonded factory and to substitute for it a bonded zone of large area, within which a large number of factories would be built. Into this zone, in which articles for export only would be manufactured, he would allow free coal and every other element of manufacture, except labor, to be entered free. Should, however, the product of these zone factories be removed for the purpose of domestic consumption, Shaw said that it should pay the same duty as if imported from abroad. He said that there should be such a zone on the north Atlantic coast, one at Norfolk and another at the gulf.

Secretary Shaw pointed out in this connection that, under the present system of drawback to the American exporters of merchandise made wholly or in part from imported material, it is sometimes impossible to identify the imported material in a manufactured article. Under the present law there must be proof of the existence of such imported material before the manufacturer can secure a drawback on the duty paid by him.

Secretary Shaw, speaking of the merchant marine, said that unless this country finds a market for its surplus of manufactured articles it will wait in vain for subsidized foreign ships to come to our ports after them.

City Finances to Be Investigated

Boston, Jan. 31.—Mayor Fitzgerald has sent a request to a number of business organizations and improvement societies asking for the appointment of representatives for membership of the committee which will investigate the financial condition of the city. It is expected that the committee will be ready for organization within a week. The legislature has before it two bills for the appointment of a similar committee by the governor.

Highwayman Assaults Woman

Boston, Jan. 31.—Miss Gertrude Schworm, 18 years old, was attacked by a highwayman when not far from her home in Roslindale last evening, her assailant knocking her insensible and then robbing her of a small sum of money. She was found unconscious about an hour later by her sister, who had gone in search of her. She recovered after being taken home, but could give no description of the person who attacked her.

Sunday Law Interpretations

Boston, Jan. 31.—A number of cases for alleged violations of the Sunday laws, which were appealed from the municipal court, were placed on file or nol prossed by District Attorney Moran, who construes the law as not applying to the delivery of ice cream or the transfer of theatrical or other baggage. The making of bread on Sunday the district attorney also considered a necessity.

Sturgis Commission's Expenses

Augusta, Me., Jan. 31.—The biennial report of the Sturgis commission, provided for by the last legislature for the better enforcement of laws against the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors, shows that the total expense was $41,185. There were 23 deputies appointed. The commission did not undertake to interfere in 11 counties. The legislative appropriation was $7000 a year.

Wanted In Philadelphia

Danbury, Conn., Jan. 31.—John M. Murphy, promoter of a filtration company, was arrested here at the request of Philadelphia authorities. Murphy is accused of being a fugitive from justice. It is alleged that he was indicted in Philadelphia on the charge of obtaining money under false pretenses. He was taken to Philadelphia.

Railroad Men Pensioned

New Haven, Jan. 31.—About 40 employes of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad yesterday were retired on pensions. The men so retired have been in the employ of the company from 35 to 40 years and will now receive from $6 to $7 a week for the remainder of their lives.

ONE MORE WANTED

Eleven Jurors Secured Thus Far In the Thaw Trial

JEROME'S OPENING WORDS

Intimation That Direct Evidence of Prosecution Will Be Very Brief--Defense Will Probably Enter Temporary Insanity Plea

New York, Jan. 31.—There was but a single vacant chair in the Thaw jury box when court adjourned yesterday and it is expected that this afternoon at the latest District Attorney Jerome will begin his opening address to a completed jury.

The length and breadth of the ground the district attorney will cover has not been disclosed. Just how far back he will delve into the history of the principals in the famous case no one but Jerome knows. He has not related the plan of his opening address to any one, though it has been intimated authoritatively that the direct evidence of the prosecution will be of the briefest possible character, dealing only with the incidents leading up to the killing and the story of the tragedy itself as seen by eye-witnesses.

It remains for the defense to open the way to testimony which has to do with any relations which may have existed between Stanford White and Evelyn Nesbit prior to the slaying of the architect. Thaw's attorneys probably will not reply to Jerome today, reserving their opening until the state has finished its case.

Two jurors were added to the trial panel yesterday, making 11 in all. In an effort to complete the jury the attorneys exhausted the second special panel of talesmen summoned for the trial. A new panel of 100 was ordered. The 12th juror will be chosen from the new list. Sixty-five talesmen were examined yesterday, breaking all records of the trial. The highest number on any previous day was 51. Following the precedent of the last four days one juror was secured during the morning session and one near the close of the afternoon sitting of the court.

Harry C. Brearley, an advertising agent, 35 years of age, and married, was the first talesman to qualify. He took his place as juror No. 6, the chair made vacant by the dropping of Harold R. Faire from the jury panel Tuesday afternoon. Brearley told the attorneys for the defense that he had no prejudice whatsoever against a plea of insanity and that in judging such a plea he would be guided by the principle of allowing the defendant the advantage of every reasonable doubt.

The afternoon juror, Henry I. Kleinberger, a silk merchant, 42 years old and married, said he knew very little about the subject of insanity and would have to be guided by the instructions of the court in arriving at a conclusion on such a plea. His weighing of the facts in the case would be an intellectual process, he told Jerome, and he did not think his judgment would be unduly swayed by sympathy or emotion.

Thaw appeared confident as he arose to face each of the two jurors while they were being sworn. The manner in which his attorneys continued to dwell upon the subject of insanity in their examination of various talesmen seemed to indicate beyond all reasonable doubt that a plea of temporary insanity, which would be a legal defense, will eventually be entered. In developing this claim that Thaw was insane at the time of the tragedy, the defendant's attorneys may bring in such details as they and their prisoner believe will influence the sympathy of the men who may have an undefined belief in the so-called "unwritten law."

There is much speculation as to what course Jerome will pursue when Thaw's counsel begin to develop their plea of temporary insanity. He is prepared to combat their alienists, but there is a possibility that he may bring the proceedings to an abrupt halt and apply for the appointment of a commission to decide whether or not the defendant is insane at the present time. Or he may let the matter be fought out in open court, expert for expert. In that event the trial will drag out to a great length.

Mrs Caine In New York

Boston, Jan. 31.—A Post special from New York says: Mrs. J. J. Caine of Boston arrived here under escort and is at the Lorraine with May MacKenzie, the Boston chorus girl, who, with her, is apt to give the combination of testimony that shall save Harry Thaw from the death chair for the killing of Stanford White. "I am Evelyn's friend," declared Mrs. Caine to a Post reporter, "and if I am called to the witness stand it certainly will be on behalf of Mrs. Thaw. I know her story fully and shall do all in my power to aid her with the truth."

Death In Collision of Bobsleds

Peekskill, N. Y., Jan. 31.—Two bobsleds collided at the foot of opposite hills here last night. Of the 13 coasters Lester Barrett, aged 13, was killed and George Toubengeier, 13 years old, seriously injured. The others escaped with cuts and bruises.

John D. Rockefeller Killed

Chicago, Jan. 31.—John D. Rockefeller of New York, an actor, was killed on the stage of a theatre by a gatling gun which fell on his skull. Rockefeller was helping remove the gun from a temporary platform on the stage.

Tidbits from All Wards of City

Tomorrow will be the first day of February.

Milton High defeated the Weymouth High at basket ball at the Cunningham gym.

A new engine house is being erected at the O. T. Rogers quarry on Willard street.

Division 22 and Ladies' Auxiliary 23, A. O. H., are to hold a concert and dance at St. Mary's hall.

Crowds of young people gather every evening on the pond in the rear of the street railway car barn to enjoy the skating.

The Alpha Club had a repetition of its "Japanese Evening" at the West Quincy Methodist Church on Wednesday evening.

The building of Charles Le Clare, at the corner of Copeland and Willard streets, which was partly destroyed by fire last Thursday night, is being rebuilt.

Apparatus for the new telephone exchange is arriving every day. It will take some time, however, to get it into place and connect up so that it will be the first of March if not later before the new exchange is in operation.

Mary E. Leatherbee of Braintree obtained a verdict of $5,000 against the Hotel and Railroad News Co., of Boston, on Wednesday in the Norfolk Superior civil court, for personal injuries received in Boston.

A gang of young men has been at work for several days thawing out the gutters on the Hancock House block with steam pipes. Some damage, however has been done to the stores by water leaking through. It is a good house that has not leaked during the past week.

The funeral of Daniel O'Connell was held Wednesday morning from St. Mary's church. The services were very largely attended. A requiem mass was celebrated with Rev. A. F. Roche as celebrant with Rev. Fr. Lyons as deacon, and Rev. J. P. Cuffe as sub-deacon. The burial was at St. Mary's cemetery.

The main business at the annual meeting of the Quincy Yacht club next Thursday evening outside hearing reports of officers and the election of officers is to see if the club will vote to withdraw from the Boston Bay Association. This question comes up annually, and is sure to result in more or less oratory.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ A Western paper says that it may be questioned if out of ten thousand average citizens of the country over one hundred could correctly write three stanzas of the "Star Spangled Banner." It may be doubted if of the number mentioned two could correctly write one stanza of that hymn.—Providence Tribune.

☞ It is perhaps appropriate that the formal opening of the Tehuantepec ship-railroad across the Isthmus of the same name, should have taken place at about the same time that saw the presentation of the greatest appropriation bill ever offered in Congress for the development of water transportation in the United States. This ship-railway, while it will be a rival of the Panama Canal when the big ditch becomes a reality, is backed by the Mexican government, and is expected to work wonders in the way of developing the commerce between the Pacific and Atlantic coasts of this country. Incidentally, the creation of this new trade route has stimulated the whole scheme of rivers and harbors development—a policy to which the United States now seems pledged, in an effort to care for the rapidly growing commerce of the country.—Milford Journal.

☞ Dr. Harrington of the State board of health has found most evil conditions surrounding Boston's milk supply in many places. He has found dirt, carelessness, and a reckless trifling with the health and even the lives of the buyers of the supply. A good many of the people who handle milk are, for one thing underpaid. Also they do much of their work very early in the morning, at a time when mankind sees no reason to excuse anyone else for living anyway. Much of the time there is cold and extreme discomfort connected with the work, and the underpaid, half-asleep, stumbling, chilled boys and men don't care much what may happen as long as they get along some way through the morning. Yet, despite these facts, the work should be done better; it should be compulsory to have it done better in many places. The "boss" himself should be around, and should take a pride in having everything as clean as it well can be in his place. If he takes no such pride, and if he will not compel his men to do the work right, there should be quick and severe punishment for him. Chicago methods with Massachusetts food supplies are not to be allowed to pass unchallenged in this State.—Brockton Enterprise.

UP TO PRESIDENT

Governor Guild Asks For Immediate Tariff Revision

SENTIMENT OF BAY STATE

Leaders in Ten Different Industries Commend Principle of Maximum and Minimum Tariff --Tariff Commission Wanted

Boston, Jan. 31.—Governor Guild has prepared an address to the president and congress urging immediate and favorable consideration of the action of the recent business men's conference in Washington, which recommended changes in the tariff. The governor states that it is inexpedient to ask for the adoption of a tariff resolution by the legislature, but he hopes that members of that body will sign the address that the state may act on the matter without regard to political parties.

The Massachusets delegates to the Washington conference, appointed by the governor, represented 10 different industries, and Charles H. Jones, president of the Commonwealth Shoe and Leather company of Boston, was selected to report the result of the conference to the governor. In his report Jones says that the most satisfactory features of the entire proceedings were the disclosure of an overwhelming sentiment in favor of immediate tariff revision and the evident determination of the committee to see that the resolutions adopted were so conservative and so unanimous that they could not fail to have a perceptible effect on the doings of congress.

The governor in his reply expresses gratification in learning that the sentiment at the conference favored immediate tariff revision. The governor says: "As a protectionist I believe that all duties needed for the maintenance of important American industries should be retained, but that the test should not be is a duty demanded but is a duty needed."

In another letter to the governor, in response to a request by him for information regarding the resolutions adopted, Jones says: "They commended the principle of maximum and minimum tariff and urged the adoption of tariff schedules based upon that principle, giving the president power to proclaim the minimum scale in force for such countries as make concessions to us from established rates. This proposition is based on section 4 of the McKinley tariff, which is no longer in force. The resolutions also urged the appointment of a tariff commission that shall report from time to time necessary and desirable changes.

In another letter to Jones, the governor outlines his ideas of the methods to be pursued in bringing the state into line in favor of the resolutions. He points out that the powers of the president not only permit him to summon a special session of congress in his discretion, but would allow him to set the department of commerce and labor at work at once on an investigation into the operation of tariff schedules.

Secretary Hitchcock Criticised

Washington, Jan. 31.—The senate listened to an extended speech by Senator Carter in criticism of the secretary of the interior, and another by Senator Heyburn to the same end. Hitchcock's recent order preventing the issuance of patents to the public lands until after an examination on the ground by a special agent was the subject of the criticism, and many senators from western states showed their approval of the sentiments expressed.

Lived Under Assumed Name

New York, Jan. 31.—The man supposed to be Charles Cannon, who was found asphyxiated by illuminating gas, with his wife, in their home in Brooklyn Tuesday night, was Charles E. Wallack, son of Lester Wallack, the famous actor who died years ago. Wallack was employed as a clerk by a firm of stock brokers for 25 years. He was known there as Wallack, and no one at that office knew that he went by the name of Cannon in Brooklyn.

"Unwritten Agreement" Is Binding

San Francisco, Jan. 31.—At the hearing of the Harriman merger case before Interstate Commerce Commissioner Lane, W. A. Bissell conceded under oath that the Santa Fe and the Southern Pacific managements are observing an unwritten agreement whereby they share about equally the citrus fruit traffic of Southern California, each scrupulously avoiding any intrusion into the other's territory after the fruit has been packed.

Father Exonerates Son For Shooting

New York, Jan. 31.—Alfred Llewellyn, 46 years old, is dying from a bullet wound received last night while he was attacking his wife. Their son, Alfred, 19 years of age, is charged with the shooting, which the mother told the police was done in her defense. In an ante-mortem statement, the elder Llewellyn declared that the shooting was accidental.

Revolutionists Regain Liberty

El Paso, Tex., Jan. 31.—Twenty-three Mexican revolutionists, under sentence of imprisonment for five to eight years, were released from jail at Monterey, Mex., by sympathizers. The jail was dynamited, tearing away a portion of the wall, and through the opening the prisoners escaped. They were about to be taken to Mexico City.

SIXTY COFFINS ORDERED

Pitiful Scenes at Mouth of Shaft of Stuart Collieries

Charleston, W. Va., Jan. 31.—Late advices received from the scene of the disaster at the Stuart Collieries company's mine at Stuart is that the death list is about 60, which is expected to be increased to 75 or more. The list of those known positively to have been in the mine at the time of the explosion includes 38 white miners and 10 negro miners. Besides these there were a number of foreigners whose names are not known.

Officers of the company have made no statement of their theory as to the cause of the disaster. An investigation will be made. Sixty coffins have been ordered from Hinton.

Three bodies, mutilated beyond recognition, have been recovered from the mine. The rescuers are now within a few feet of the bottom of the mine, but it is very probable that every one of the men in the mine at the time of the explosion has been killed and that the mine was completely wrecked.

The scenes at the mouth of the shaft are pitiful. Wives, mothers and children are standing about and some of them have not left since the explosion occurred. They are urging the rescuers forward, hoping against hope that their loved ones may be still alive.

Corporation Sues Labor Unions

Hartford City, Ind., Jan. 31.—Alleging that the Amalgamated Window Glass Workers' Association of America has entered into a conspiracy to prevent the operation of its two factories in this city, the Johnston Window Glass company has filed a suit against the executive board of the labor organization, asking judgment for $27,000 damages. The company alleges that because of continued attempts of the defendants to force it either to adopt the amalgamated wage scale or close down its plant it has been unable to fulfill its contracts, thereby suffering enormous losses.

Epidemic Feared Among Refugees

Washington, Jan. 31.—The appalling conditions in China, where 4,000,000 are starving, as told in Chinese newspapers and other mail advices reaching the state department, coupled with the warning given by Consul General Rodgers of the possible effects of the daily outbreaks in the famine districts, have attracted the attention of the government authorities. One of the greatest dangers which the relief workers confront is an epidemic. In the great concentration camps which have been formed by refugees a violent outbreak of the sufferers is momentarily expected.

Hughes Wants Charges Investigated

Albany, Jan. 31.—Governor Hughes created a military sensation by requesting Adjutant General Henry to revoke the special orders which would have permitted Captain Wendel of the First battery, N. Y. N. G., to leave the military service of the state by the acceptance of his resignation without further investigation of the charges against him of irregularities in the management of the armory under his charge.

Colossal Sum For Education

New York, Jan. 31.—It is estimated that the total expenditure for all forms of education in this country, public and private, in the year 1905 reached the sum of $376,996,475. This amount equals 6 percent of the expenditures for governmental purposes in this country—national, state and local. This statement was made by Elmer E. Brown, United States commissioner of education, in an address here last night.

Fire Drill Proved Valuable

New York, Jan. 31.—Fire broke out in one of the buildings of the Long Island hospital at Kings Park, L. I., in which 200 insane women, all violent cases, were quartered, but through the efficiency of the fire drill all were gotten out of the burning building safely. The damage was small, the flames being confined to the first floor.

Thanks For $750,000 Donation

Washington, Jan. 31.—At a meeting of the governing board of the International Bureau of the American Republics a resolution was adopted accepting the offer of Andrew Carnegie to donate $750,000 for the erection of a permanent home for the bureau in this city. The board also extended a vote of thanks to Carnegie.

Demand of Telephone Operators

Toronto, Jan. 31.—At a meeting of the telephone operators of the city it was decided that, unless the company grant a five-hour, instead of an eight-hour day, as at present, the entire force of 600 will strike on Friday. A conference between the operators and the management of the telephone company has been arranged.

CIRCUS KING WAS SANE

But He Would Not Wear Clothing Hung on Wrong Hook

Yonkers, N. Y., Jan. 31.—Testimony was taken here in the contest of the will of James A. Bailey, the circus man. Several physicians testified that Bailey suffered from locomotor ataxia and nervousness, but that his mind was sound.

Ross Sarrar, a negro, who was a porter in Bailey's private car in 1894, testified that he bought antipyrine and phenacetine for his employer in five-grain capsules, six at a time. Bailey would take one capsule at a time. He would use them only when suffering from nervousness. Sometimes he would take two in a month, and at other times he would take one only every six weeks.

Sarrar said that Bailey was very peculiar about his clothes. The witness said that the famous circus man had one hook for his coat, a second for his vest and a third for his trousers. If he discovered that his vest had been hung on the trousers hook or that any of the three garments had been hung on the wrong hook, he would not wear the suit that day. If his breakfast was not ready exactly on time he would not wait for it. The witness said that Bailey always slept well at night.

William W. Cole, one of Bailey's associates in the circus business, said he knew Bailey for 35 years and had never known a man of stronger mentality.

A Stock Jobbing Fake

New York, Jan. 31.—The stories of an alleged meeting of the Northeastern Metal Dealers' association in New York and an appeal by that meeting to Attorney General Bonaparte, charging the larger copper interests with storing metal to force an increased price, prove to have been wholly untrue and seem to have been the result of a cleverly devised scheme for the purpose of affecting the stock market. No such organization as the Northeastern Metal Dealers' association exists and no such meeting was held. The story was sent out by the New York City News Association, which is accounted thoroughly reliable, and there was nothing about it to arouse any suspicion as to its accuracy.

Socialists Executed Bandit

Warsaw, Jan. 31.—A bandit entered the Commercial bank of Warsaw yesterday and asked the director to give him $500. His request was refused, whereupon the man announced his intention of remaining there until he received the money. The bank officials feared to ask the police for help, and a socialist member of the bank's staff called up socialist headquarters on the telephone and explained the situation. Two men from headquarters at once came over to the bank, quickly threw a sack over the bandit's head and then blew out his brains with a revolver. The police have not interfered with the men who did the killing.

Conference on Japanese Question

Washington, Jan. 31.—After two hours' conference at the White House last night regarding the Japanese question on the Pacific coast, the California delegation stated that they felt confident that a solution will be reached satisfactory to all concerned. The delegation telegraphed to the president of the San Francisco board of education and the superintendent of schools to come to Washington at once for a conference with the president and secretary of state.

Queer Results of Earthquakes

New Orleans, Jan. 31.—Captain Soley of the hydrographic office has discovered a sea of oil four feet deep and 400 miles in area opposite the mouth of the Atchafalaya river, off the Louisiana coast. A fresh water sea of 200 square miles and entirely surrounded by salt water was found off the Florida coast. These are believed to be the result of the recent earthquakes.

Drunken Man's Double Crime

Wacross, Va., Jan. 31.—H. E. Liles, a barber, last night shot and killed his wife, blowing the side of her head off as she held their 4-months-old baby in her arms. The baby fell to the floor and Liles aimed his gun at it and fired, the charge cutting off one of the baby's arms. The child probably will die. Liles was arrested. He had been drinking.

REAL FLATS AT SEA.

Atlantic Transport Line Installing Them on Ocean Liners.

EACH VESSEL TO HAVE TWO.

Just Like Homes In Harlem—Private Halls and Janitors, Called "Stewards," to Conform to the Rule of the Sea—Bells to Announce Callers.

Oh, Harlem's mad with joy
And exclaiming, "Ship ahoy!"
It's prepared to circumnavigate this planet or Go twice as far as that
In a stanch seagoing flat,
With a rusty, gusty, crusty ocean janitor.
—Song of the Up to Date Flatter.

When the a la carte restaurant, the Turkish bath, the elevators and the gymnasium were added to the list of seagoing luxuries it was thought that the limit had been reached, but the other day the Atlantic Transport line, whose steamers ply between New York and London, announced the very latest wrinkle for the ocean going public. It is the seagoing flat—apartments they call them above One Hundredth street, says the New York Times.

Heretofore there have been two or three connecting rooms on the big liners dignified on the official lists as "suits." The Atlantic Transport line has gone another step in advance, and now comes the real flat at sea. It will differ from the suit in that it will have a private hall, a person who will really be the janitor and "all the comforts of home."

Already workmen are constructing the new apartments on the steamer Minnetonka, now laid up in London. As soon as the Minneapolis and the Minnehaha arrive on the other side the changes will be made on them. Each vessel will stay two weeks in London, and if the work is not done then it will be completed at sea or while in port.

There will be two flats on each liner, one on the port and one on the starboard side. They will be built forward on the upper promenade deck in the space now occupied by the officers' quarters. The front windows—ports they will be called in the seagoing flat—will look out toward the bow, so that the tenant can sit at his front window and watch the seas breaking over the vessel.

The plans for the flats show that they will be thirty feet long. The parlor will have a width of fifteen feet. The hall will extend from the front door to the parlor entrance, and on one side of the hall, with windows looking out on deck, will be two bedrooms. On the opposite side will be the bathroom and the clothes closet. The temporary tenant's name will be on the front door, and a bell will announce callers. The officers' quarters will be moved to the deck above.

The parlor will be furnished "just like home," with easy chairs and pictures on the wall. Indeed, the homelike idea will be carried out throughout, from the brass bedstead to the writing desk. The only nautical thing about the flat will be its situation. It may rather startle the flat dweller ashore when he asks the purser which flat is occupied by a friend to have the terse direction, "In the starboard apartment, sir."

Of course it is not expected that the tenant will cook in his flat, but even that is not an impossibility, for each apartment will be furnished with an electric heater on which baby's milk can be heated or toast made after mother has finished her hair.

Just how the all important janitor question is to be settled has not been made quite clear. An official of the line declared that it was not attempting to deal with the janitor problem. It is certain, however, that the janitor in the seagoing flat will be a black coated person who will prefer to be called "steward." He will answer your front door bell, turn on the heat and do other work just like his brother ashore.

By engaging a seagoing flat it will be possible for a family to go aboard at one port and remain in the seclusion of the flat until the other side is reached. Meals can be served in each flat. The line, it is said, with that end in view, has arranged so that the parlor or the library, as soon as the officials are informed that you do not want to use it for sleeping purposes, can be converted at short notice into a dining room.

It is expected that the last of the new flats will be completed by early spring and that they will be in demand during the summer rush season.

Negro College For Servants.

A negro college which will turn out professional servant girls—domestics who can read Greek and play the piano—was recently established at Greenwood, Miss., with the laying of the cornerstone of the George F. Jones Institute and College For Negroes, founded by the supreme lodge of United Reformers, a negro organization with 100,000 members, says the New York Tribune. The Rev. E. P. Jones of Vicksburg, Miss., president of the college, said: "When we place a good girl in a white home we ask that she shall not be housed over a barn. Give her good quarters, where she will have a home protection."

Moving Pictures That Talk.

The "chronomegaphone" is the scientific name given to a new apparatus invented by M. Leon Gaumont of Paris, says the London Magazine of Commerce. A moving picture is thrown on a screen, and as the figures move the chronomegaphone gives them speech. We thus get a combination of cinematograph and phonograph.

So Miss Tempy brightened up, and in a few minutes she had in her mind sold so many shawls and Miss Prissy had done so well with her hemming and tucking that she saw them putting money in the bank instead of taking it out. In fact, she was getting rich so fast in her dreams that her sister didn't have the heart to throw more cold water at this time. And even Miss Prissy herself felt unwarrantably hopeful. She had borne the family burdens so long that to share the knowledge of them with another was a great relief. They discussed ways and means for a half hour longer, and then Miss Tempy insisted on getting that "pepper tea."

"I honestly believe," she said, "that if I hadn't took pepper tea steady for the last four or five years I shouldn't be here now. That and Blaisdell's emulsion has given me strength to bear most anything, even the prospects of the poorhouse. Thank goodness, I've got a new bottle of emulsion, and pepper tea's cheap, so I shan't have to give that up even if we are poorer'n Job's turkey."

"All right," sighed Miss Prissy., "If it'll make you feel any better to parboil my insides with hot water and pepper, fetch it along. Don't say anything to Bradley about what we've been sayin'. 'Twon't do any good and will only make the poor child feel bad."

But Bradley was not in the dining room. The book he had been reading was turned face downward on the table, but he was gone, and so was his hat.

"Why, I never!" exclaimed Miss Tempy. "He never went out an evenin' before without sayin' anything to me or you. What do you s'pose is the matter?"

"You don't think he heard what we said, do you?" anxiously asked her sister. "I thought I shut the door."

"You did shut it, but, now you speak of it, seems to me I remember it was not latched when I come out jest now. I hope he didn't hear. He's such a sensitive boy, jest like all the Allens."

The "pepper tea" was prepared—a double dose this time—and the sisters sat sipping it, Miss Prissy with many coughs and grimaces and Miss Tempy with the appreciation of a connoisseur. After a moment's silence she said:

"Prissy, do you know what I've been thinkin'? I've been thinkin' what a blessin' 'twould be if we had Cap'n Titcomb to go to for advice now."

"Humph! If I've thought that once I've thought it a million times in the last year," was the decided answer.

It was after 10 o'clock, and only Bradley's absence had prevented the ladies from going up to bed, when the outside door of the dining room opened, and the missing boy came in.

"Bradley Nickerson, where've you been?" exclaimed Miss Tempy, running to meet him. "We've been pretty nigh worried to death. Why don't you shut the door? Who's that out there? Why—why, Cap'n Titcomb!"

"What's that?" cried Miss Prissy, hurrying in. "You don't mean—Well! Good evenin', Cap'n Titcomb. Won't you step in?"

The captain accepted the invitation. He was as much embarrassed as the old maids, even more so than Miss Prissy, who immediately, after a swift sidelong glance of disapproval at her agitated sister, assumed an air of dignified calmness.

"How d'ye do, Prissy?" stammered the captain. "Tempy, I hope you're well. Yes, I'm feelin' fair to middlin'. No, thanks. I ain't goin' to stop long. It's pretty late for calls. Fact is, Brad here's got somethin' to say. Heave ahead, Brad."

The boy, too, was embarrassed, but as the two looked at him expectantly he fidgeted with a button on his jacket and said:

"Miss Prissy, I didn't mean to listen, but the door wasn't shut tight, and I couldn't help hearing what you and Miss Tempy were saying a little while ago."

"There!" exclaimed Miss Tempy. "I was afraid of that door. You remember I said so, Prissy."

But Miss Prissy didn't answer. She merely looked at Bradley.

"I heard what you said," nervously went on the boy, "and when you told about what you was going to do so's I could go to high school, I—I thought first I'd come right in and tell you you mustn't. But then I thought you wouldn't believe I meant it or wouldn't pay any attention to it if I did, so I went outside to think it over by myself. And then—then I went right up to see the cap'n."

"I hope," said Miss Prissy sternly, "that you didn't repeat our talk to Cap'n Titcomb without tellin' us you was goin' to."

"No, no; he didn't," hastily broke in the captain. "He didn't tell a word. You've got a pretty fair kind of boy here, if you want to know," he added, with more than his usual enthusiasm.

"Hum!" was Miss Prissy's only comment. "Go on, Bradley."

"All I told him was," said Bradley, "that I didn't think it was right for me to go to school and college when I ought to be earning some money. I'm going on seventeen now, and lots of fellows I know are going to work. I don't b'lieve I'd make a very good minister," with a look of appeal at Miss Tempy, "and I'd a good deal rather go to sea. All our folks have been to sea—my father and my grandfather. Yes, and your father, too, you know." The last as a happy inspiration.

"Don't you think that we know best what"— began Miss Prissy, but the captain again interrupted her.

"Let him spin his yarn, Prissy," he said. "Nothin' is settled yet, so don't worry."

"So I went to the cap'n," went on Bradley, "and asked him if he'd take me on board his schooner. I ain't a sailor, but I know a lot about boats, and I don't get seasick even when it's mighty rough. Do I, Cap'n Ezra?"

"No," replied Captain Titcomb gravely. "You manage to keep your cargo from shiftin' pretty well for a green hand."

"And he said he'd take me as a kind of cabin boy. Didn't you, cap'n? And learn me things and get me advanced as soon as I was fit for it. And he'll pay me wages, too, right away. There! And I won't cost you a cent more. Please let me go."

The captain did not again visit the Allen home, although next day Bradley called on him at his room in the hotel. They talked of the proposed plan, of course, but Captain Titcomb did not urge its acceptance. On the contrary, he spoke very plainly of the disagreeable features of a sailor's calling and hinted that being aboard a vessel was like being in jail. "Only," he said, "there's always a chance for a feller to break out of jail."

At the end of the interview he said: "Brad, I ain't askin' any questions 'bout what made you take this sudden fit, but I'd like to know this: Do the old maids know 'bout that Sampson fund for sailors' children? They could git over a hundred a year out of that if they applied for it, you understand?"

"I don't believe they'd take a cent if it was anything like charity," replied the boy. "Miss Prissy especial. She's awful down on folks that she says are living on charity."

"Um, hum! I see. Well, I know a feller that's one of the head cooks and bottle washers of the Sampson crew. Maybe I could rig it so's— Well, never mind. Don't say nothin' yet."

Three days later it was settled. Bradley was to go to Boston the following Monday with Captain Titcomb and ship with him as the combination "boy and roustabout" for a period of three months. Really, it was settled when the captain suggested it, but it took some time for the old maids to formally make up their minds to the decided change.

Monday morning Bradley's trunk was packed, and Barney Small called to take him and it to Harniss. The old maids wept over him, and Miss Prissy told him to be a good boy and write once a week at least. Miss Tempy said:

"Remember, Bradley, you're an Allen now, and you must live up to the family. Oh, Prissy, don't it seem jest like it used to when father was goin' on a voyage? Bradley's growin' to look so like him."

And the sisters went into the house to cry together.
